M-G-M PUTS THE JOY IN LIFE!

When you watch the crowds stay away in droves and you wonder what the future can possibly hold——And the folks ask you when you're going to have another big one like "Ben-Hur" and "The Big Parade"— —And you feel that a really Giant Picture would sure pep things up for you—

And then comes M-G-M's "THE TRAIL OF '98" with more spectacle in it than "Big Parade" and "Ben-Hur" combined—And you get behind it with smashing showmanship—And the folks come packing your Show Shop—And the money pours in—Hotsy! Totsy! Isn't it the truth that M-G-M always puts the Joy in Life!
A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE TO PRODUCERS AND DISTRIBUTORS:

For economical distribution, pictures must be at least two-thirds sold before the salesman calls at the theatre.

In advance of the salesman's call—for sound, wasteless and effective selling—there must be supplied a detailed and comprehensive campaign of information, facts and reasons for claims which will be asserted.

Every exhibitor has the right to demand that he shall be supplied in advance of the salesman's call with sufficient information about product, personalities and showmanship angles to enable him to deal knowingly and intelligently with the salesman.

Every exhibitor does demand this right and distributors who fail to recognize it pay the penalty in lower grosses and higher selling costs.

The HERALD-WORLD is the proven best medium for informing all of the exhibitors everywhere about product; its editorial pages acquaint the exhibitors with the latest news of the industry generally and its product, together with sound guidance on the latest and best in showmanship methods.

Its advertising pages afford specific information on specific product—to the end of more successful buying for the exhibitor and more successful selling—at lower costs—for the distributor.

"Christmas day was the anniversary day of the founding of Fox Films, and that hardy organization earned double felicitations by giving to the amusement world a remarkable proof of its high standing in the realm of picture drama. 'In Old Arizona' gives by far the best demonstration of the speaking screen ever put forth. Clear, vibrant, uninforced, the speech of the characters came startlingly close to that which had behind it the breath of life. 'In Old Arizona' is nothing short of triumphant. It advances the art of the talkies distinctly ahead of any rival attempt."

— Monroe Lathrop, Los Angeles Express

"'In Old Arizona' is not only infinitely better than the usual crop of films, but it is significant because it is the first outdoor talkie and really the first one to combine the technique of the screen and the stage, and the first one to make me forget the mechanical sound device. It has all the gentle satire and irony of that great short story writer, O. Henry, and the stretch of desert country is so gorgeous and the mountainous country so effective that you would be content just to look at some of the magnificent scenic effects. Warner Baxter as the bandit has never been seen in a portrayal that is presented with so much feeling. Edmund Lowe is again a hardboiled sergeant—the same kind that won him plaudits in 'What Price Glory.' Dorothy Burgess performance of Tonia Maris is a classic. There is credit enough for both Raou Walsh and Irving Cummings for the direction of..."

— Llewellyn Miller, Los Angeles Record that Wrecked Records and made the Critics Rave!

Louella Parsons, Los Angeles Examiner

“In Old Arizona” is the first big outdoor talkie and presents a sort of “What Price Glory” story with western trimmings. One thing that it absolutely assures is a different sort of show than has ever been seen at any time before. For his reason “In Old Arizona” will perhaps in days to come be reckoned as epochal. The voice of Warner Baxter registers notably well. Dorothy Burgess finds herself quite acclimated to this sirenic role. Edmund Lowe amuses with his portrayal of a hard-boiled soldier.

Edwin Schallert, Los Angeles Times

This production is of unusual merit. Expertly cast with the speaking principals all boasting of past stage experience has insured the talking perfection of the drama. The dialog has been well handled by the players. They have worked up a perfect climax which is guaranteed to hold the spectators’ interest.

Harry Mines, Los Angeles Daily News

“'In Old Arizona’ moves. It is exciting. Its dialog is well written. Its voices are well recorded and its players walk about in an unself-conscious way. It is destined to please many audiences and to win over converts for the talkies. Nor should its gorgeous backgrounds be forgotten.”

NOW OVER 200 PER MONTH!

That's the way theaters all over the country are installing Phototone Sight-Sound Policy

The seven hundred theaters now using Phototone are getting the crowds with "sight-sound" programs. And they didn't pay $11,000 for the equipment. It'll pay you to get on the "sight-sound" bandwagon with them—especially since you can do it for only $500.

That's all Phototone costs with baffle board and dynamic cone speaker. It is $575 with two baffle board speakers and with cue cabinet containing fifty records and fifty filing devices. All the sound effects and themes you can use for all the situations in your bookings. Music by the world's greatest orchestras.

Now's your chance to start packing the crowds in for real honest-to-goodness "sight-sound" programs. Beat your competitor to it.

For small annual cost you can equip your theater with Phototone's new cue and record service. This gives you a circulating library of sound records made exclusively for Phototone—also standard records for incidental use, and special noise records such as mob sounds, growls, shrieks, sirens, etc.

By means of this new sound service your Phototone disc library will be replenished with cue service made up by the Thematic Music Cue Service of New York, which is also writing original scores for Phototone.

Showmen Everywhere Report Huge Grosses and Satisfied Patrons Who Enthusiastically Spread Praise for "Uncle Tom"

The Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Tex., wires: "'Uncle Tom' good for ten days more. Expect to make up all Summer losses with it." From Charles F. Smith, of the Uptown Theatre, Kansas City, comes: "Just completed week of tremendous business on 'Uncle Tom.' All records smashed." Then R. D. Hutchinson wires from the Liberty Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.: "Very happy advise necessary hold over 'Uncle Tom' for second week. Did tremendous business." Vogel Gettier, of the Capitol Theatre, Grand Island, Neb., has this to say: "'Uncle Tom' has broken all records in its first three-day showing, topping year's best supers." From Kane, Pa.—the Chase Street Theatre—comes: "'Uncle Tom' is Universal's screen masterpiece. Opened to record-breaking business despite heavy opposition. "Had plenty of competition, but they couldn't lick 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,'" says L. S. Braun, of the New Square Theatre, Ottumwa, Ia., "Now we know Universal has the big ones." Frank C. Reinecke, of the Paramount Theatre, Akron, Ohio, declares: "I have seen a lot of big pictures and I have played a lot of big pictures, but beyond any question of doubt 'Uncle Tom' is the biggest and best box-office sensation that has ever been released by any distributor." From White, S. D., comes the message, signed by K. Cummings, of the Opera House: "Wonderful picture in every respect. Better than I thought it could be or would be. I wish all the so-called specials were as good." R. W. Musseleman, of the Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas, writes: "'Uncle Tom's Cabin' is a wonderful drawing card and a big picture. Drew in people that I had never seen in town before," while Harry Drew, of the Palm Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., says: "Just completed sensation week. 'Uncle Tom.' Business phenomenal. Biggest seven days ever done."

Keith Theatre, North Platte, Neb., writes: "I wish to say that 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' has elicited more comment from patrons than any picture ever played in this theater. I have never had an exhibitor anywhere that I believe 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' to all the so-called specials, and that their patrons all will be satisfied."

W. E. Trotter, of the Attorney's Theatre, Point Marron, Penn., says: "This my first time in seeing a picture with the box-office the same as for eight days and nights."

The real Australian miracle is shown at the real Universal Theatre, Wichita, Kansas, states: "Just closing week of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' All records smashed. Despite change of special performance at nine thirty, this morning..."

"Photoplays made where the story's laid"
IT IS THE purpose and ambition of the founders of this Company to make it the North American Clearing House for the representative films of other countries. We invite all overseas producers to investigate our distribution facilities.

The company is managed by American showmen whose knowledge of production progress abroad has convinced them that overseas producers are now making enough pictures which will pay in the United States and Canada to justify a nation-wide distributing organization devoted exclusively to their exploitation. It is the first and only national distributing company to specialize in imported pictures exclusively.

There is real box-office and entertainment value in “photoplays made where the story’s laid.” Good pictures from other countries, the romances of the peoples of distant lands, will afford an occasional welcome change from the usual domestic pictures.

We will import only those pictures which have quality, novelty, unusual stories and characters, authentic and beautiful locations and backgrounds—pictures which could not as well be made in America.

We will handle only those pictures which after screen examination are approved for this market by a selection committee composed of men and women both in and out of the picture business.

We will deal only in completed pictures. We will sell one or more pictures at a time. Exhibitors may see any picture before booking it.

Because we believe it will be more profitable to exhibitors and ourselves and in the long run to overseas producers of high-grade product, we prefer handling a limited number of good pictures annually to dealing in a larger number of cheaper but less attractive ones.

Aside from the commercial, we believe the entertainment, cultural and educational values of fine imported pictures will prove a worthy contribution to the screens of the new world. Those motion pictures, wherever made, which entertainingly mirror humanity’s progress will win their way everywhere.

Quality Test

THE exact status of the question of interchangeability among sound picture devices, from both a practicable and a permissible standpoint, is revealed in the following statement just issued by Mr. J. E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc.: “We have just reached an understanding with the producers licensed by us that they will play their productions on any equipment which in their judgment gives results of satisfactory quality. If they find, or we demonstrate, that the equipment is not up to standard, then they will cease to serve such equipment.”

Here, then, is the latest word, and it is a word of such definiteness that it admits of no misunderstanding. The Western Electric Company insists on equipment not standing in the way of the freest, fullest and earliest development in the use of sound pictures. The insistence upon quality reproduction is only the insistence that the industry unitedly must make. The present standards, and constantly bettering standards, obviously must be the common objective of both exhibitors and producers if the public’s present interest in sound pictures is to be developed into a substantial and lasting patronage.

The Name Hunt

THE merry discussion looking to the christening of the talking picture goes on. During the past week all branches of the industry, together with a large public representation, have banded themselves with thought and discussion about an appropriate name for the talking picture. There is no scarcity of suggestions. Words and combinations of words of many kinds and descriptions have been proposed. Unfortunately, too many of them are severely and forbiddingly Greek and Latin. These may be sound enough in their derivation but they simply will never fit into the popular tongue of the day.

Mr. Jack Warner offers a short-cut to a solution of the problem with the suggestion that the brand name, “Vitaphone,” be the elected term. Similarly, Mr. Louis B. Mayer advocates, “Movietone.” One thing that may be noted in connection with both of these suggestions is that Vitaphone and Movietone are words that already are deep in the language of the theatregoing public. The public is not using the terms exactly; in other words, they are not using them in a brand-name sense but are employing them to refer generally to talking pictures.

We do not know the precise origin of “Vitaphone.” It was offered by Warner Brothers at the birth of the synchronized picture to describe Warner Brothers’ sound and picture entertainments. It may have been suggested by “Vitagraph,” the name of the pioneer company absorbed several years ago by the Warner Brothers.

“Movietone” is a fine, upstanding term and it could very consistently—if brand name considerations would not prevent—become a creditable word for the public and the trade to use in referring to talking pictures.

We understand that “Movietone” is the personal invention of Mr. William Fox. It has been used from the start by the Fox company in connection with its synchronized and talking pictures. This word has already gone far with the public. The combination of “tone” with “movie” removes much of the objectionableness of the latter term when used alone. The coined term, “Movietone,” has much to recommend it. It rolls easily into the language of the day and, as is the case with “Vitaphone,” it is already in wide use by the public.

However, until the ballots are counted we continue to urge consideration of the term—AUDIEN.

“Allied States” Head

THE election of Mr. Abram F. Myers, now chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, as president and general counsel of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors is a development that may be regarded with widespread satisfaction. While it has not yet been made plain as to just how soon Mr. Myers may be released by the President from his official duties at Washington, it is to be hoped that his efforts in behalf of the exhibitors may be taken up at an early date so that the many immediate and pressing problems may have the benefit of his attention.

The election of Mr. Myers is really the outcome of several years’ agitation among exhibitors for the selection of a strong and experienced personality from outside the industry to head an association. There is regret that such an arrangement had not been made earlier but there is gratification in the fact that at least now it has been done.

It is not yet timely to comment generally on the plans of the Allied States Association under the leadership of Mr. Myers because thus far an official statement referring in any detail to the plans and purposes of the new arrangement has not been issued. But it is timely to congratulate Mr. Myers and the association jointly on the new arrangement.

Exhibitors certainly are entitled to, and certainly need, the benefits of a strong and active association. And such an association requires the full time and attention of a chief executive who is expert and experienced with respect to the problems and necessities involved.

Mr. Myers made an excellent impression upon the motion picture industry generally during the time of conducting a trade practice conference. This will be an advantage to him in setting out on his new duties. Also, he has behind him a creditable and convincing record generally and is plainly qualified to play an important part in extrenching and rendering more secure the business of exhibiting motion pictures.

The best wishes of the HERALD-WORLD are extended to Mr. Myers and to the Allied States Association.

—MARTIN J. QUIGLEY.
Audien Drive Is Creating Wide Public Interest in Talking Motion Pictures

An Entire Industry Must Decide

The campaign seeking a decent name for motion pictures that have found their voice, to supplant such unhappy designations as "talkies," "speakies," "soundies," and some even more undignified, has progressed far beyond expectations.

_not that the rose has found its name!_ True, there are some who like audien, suggested by the HERALD-WORLD, but there are others who believe it too obviously manufactured, not to say highbrow. There are others who like cineleg, the suggestion of a Greek purist at Columbia university. There are others who like dramaphone, pictovox, audifilm, just as there are some who root for "talkies" and "speakies!"

_and there are more names pouring in all the time, from many sections of the country._

Even though no name has won universal approval as yet, the campaign has had extraordinary success in interesting the public in the new pictures combining screen and sound. The leading critics of the country have taken up the cry and the HERALD-WORLD's campaign has been commented upon by Quinn Martin in the New York World, F. Mordaunt Hall in the New York Times, Robert Sherwood in the New York Evening Post, Ashton Stevens in the Chicago Herald and Examiner, and others too numerous to mention.

This enlisting of the public interest, through the important press, has provided exhibitors through the country with an entirely new and refreshing exploitation angle. Thus it may be said with truth that the campaign has been eminently successful, whether it ever succeeds in erasing "talkies" from the slanguage of the day or not.

Several new and highly promising suggestions have come forward.

Milton Silver, advertising manager of Universal, who knows the public mind, comes forth with the suggestion . . . Photovoice. As a standardized term to describe talking pictures, photovoice has the virtues of simplicity, ease, familiarity. Try it . . . Photovoice.

A whole series of promising suggestions comes from Richard L. Moss, assistant manager with the Loew organization. He makes one highly promising suggestion . . . Phonoplay. This close to a term already in good repute, phonoplay. Obviously, if a phonoplay is a play presented on the screen in motion pictures, then phonoplay is a play presented in sound, with every suggestion of the motion picture.

Quinn Martin, particularly good-natured on the eve of a six weeks' vacation in Europe, beginning in Berlin and the Ufa studios, is willing to try audien. This, from a critic, is quite a concession, though Martin will probably come back with something faintly resembling Sprachkino, or Schieferbilder. (Where's that German type anyway?)

Bob Sherwood, whose position anywhere would naturally be one of eminence, suggests in the New York Evening Post and 33 other newspapers through the country that the HERALD-WORLD's campaign would add considerable class to the language. "I have lately seen several delightful audiens," Sherwood imagines himself saying, "audiens including 'Sal of Singapore,' 'Noisy Neighbors,' and 'State Street Sadie.'"

Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of FBO Productions, finds a similar difficulty with audien. He considers this classy little designation a bit too highbrow.

_The motion picture fan does not want a word with which he is not familiar, and above all, he does not want a name for anything thrust down his throat," said Mr. Schnitzer, "any more than he wants a star forced on him. The fans want to coin their own names for their entertainment and make their own stars. Although 'talkie' is cheap and slangy, I am afraid it is here to stay, much like 'movie.' Personally, I don't like it, but I don't think there is anything we can do about it._

The returns are not yet all in. And just as Herbert Hoover managed to break the Solid South so may audien or cineleg or photovoice or phonoplay succeed in breaking the Solid Talkie. Ballots always welcome.
What Is Your Suggestion?

Should the talking picture be called a “talkie,” a “speakie,” a “squawkie,” or some more dignified name? Your opinion, please!

The Public and Industry Speak

Comments on and suggestions offered in the HERALD-WORLD's campaign to find a suitable name for talking pictures are coming from many sources—the public, dramatic critics, producers, exhibitors, publicists, directors and all others associated with the industry.

While I am naturally flattered by your letter of December 7, requesting me to assist you in finding a name for the "talking picture" accompanied by dialogue, I must respectfully decline to put my head on the matter. I do not feel cordial to the talking and moving picture. The results up to the present time seem to me peculiarly distressing, and while mechanical perfection will naturally improve the situation somewhat, the effect of the development of new technique for the silent drama, the artistic development of that with assistant manager has been greatly tarded—at present it seems to be checked altogether.

Nor do I see what will be gained when or if a name is coined for producing, talking and moving pictures. The personal connection between artists and audience will be lost, and the black and white are less interesting than the colored, living persons. The mechanical reproduction of plays in great number will lessen the effort, which is at present so whole some, in every town. I do not feel like having anything to do with what I regard as a retrograde movement in moving pictures.

—AMY L. REED
Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

What do you think of the coined word "phonovoice" as a standardized term to describe talking pictures?

MILTON SILVER
Advertising Manager, Universal Pictures Corporation.

Having an affiliation in the industry in the capacity of assistant manager with the Loew organization, I am naturally interested in your drive to find a new name for the sound picture.

It seems to me that most of the selectors are on the wrong track in trying to select a name that infers "the voice." It is not a readily established fact that talking pictures will be entirely successful; however, it is practically certain that the synchronized score capable fills the place of the orchestra and that added sound effects are very helpful in heightening the screen situations. In selecting a name I believe we should hold in mind the fact that this new phase of the motion picture is for certain as far as ever, and that not all sound pictures are talking pictures.

With this in mind, I have made the following selections:

Audio-Play—this very plainly refers to a plot that can be heard as well as seen.—Phono-Play, Audio Pictures, Andris on Oudisision, Phon-Art, Audifilm, Sonofilm and Pictophone.

It seems to me that the best of this selection is Audio Pictures. "Motion picture that can be heard as well as seen." The selection "Audien," that I saw in your magazine, is, very good, but it appears too much like a trade name. Audio is easily understood by all; it rolls off the tongue easily; and you can readily imagine one friend say to another, "If it's an Audio picture, I'll go.

—RICHARD L. MOSS
Loew Organization.

EUGENE ARNSTEIN
Milwaukee Theatre Circuit: "Talkie is the right title for dialogue movies. The public is used to it, and it gets the idea across."

STANLEY GROSS, Downer theatre, Milwaukee: "The average person doesn't know what Audien means. Talkie is o.k. When you say 'with sound,' people know that it's only sound effects; when you say 'talkie' they know it is with dialogue."

You certainly are to be congratulated on your movement to test the public's reaction for sound and talking pictures and I, for one, wish you every success in this endeavor.

At the inception of motion pictures, the public, accustomed to expressing itself in mono-syllables, and at the most in two-syllables, gave this then new form of entertainment the undignified name of "movies" and unfortunately the motion picture industry, or a portion hereof, took up that work and publicized it so much that it has become practically impossible to change it to something more worthy of the art. This situation is perpetuated by the producers who have producers themselves using such words as "movietalks," "movietone," etc., and advertising and publicizing the word "talkies" while some of our principal first run houses have adopted the slogan "The Home of the Talkies." When this is done within the industry, and when motion picture publications refer to the new audible productions as "soundies," "squeakers," "speakers," "speakies," etc., it is apparently going to be very difficult to educate the public as to what this so-called new noun, be it a coined word or a combination of technical or non-technical terms.

The tendency of the public to short-cut in everything has been evidenced by firstly the telephone, which is simplified to "phone," the automobile which was first "auto," but being of two syllables eventually became "car," and the telephone, "phone." Therefore, in my humble opinion, any word adopted for the new art of talking motion pictures should not contain more than two syllables.

Mr. George Eastman undoubtedly had this tendency on the part of the public to abbreviate everything in mind when he coined the two syllable coined word which today is almost synonymous with the word camera; namely "kodak." Likewise "laxy," a one syllable word, is today almost synonymous for powdered soap, and being a one syllable word is easily pronounced and easy to remember.

To choose a one or two syllable word which in itself will describe talking-sound pictures is going to be a difficult proposition. In your list of suggestions, in the December 22 edition of the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD only two are words of less than three syllables, namely "talkies" and "phonies," and God delive the public from the adoption of either of these.

The talking motion picture in Germany is known in the trade as "tonfilm." Translated into English it is naturally "tone-film," hence a two syllable word. "tonefilm" would give an expressive as well as descriptive name easy to remember and easy to pronounce, yet here, too, I would have to criticize my own suggestion because the word "film" is used. After all, the film is only the basis on which the art of motion pictures is perpetuated and the motion picture industry is not any longer a film business but a business in arts and sciences in a universal form of entertainment.

In groping for a name or two to offer to you I have taken the words "view" and "movie" and suggest combining the same to either "viewtone" or "vutone.

I also wish to offer the following "vucon" (combination of the words "view" and "conversation"); "kodo" (combination of the words "kodak" and "oral"); "koxov" (combination of the words "kodak" and "vox" meaning voice); "vocon" (combination of the words "vox" and "camera"); "movox" (combination of the words "moving" and "vox").

Personally I would prefer "vutone" as being done up in degenerate English and easy to pronounce, and if "vutone" is acceptable to you and to the industry, you can forward the gold medal, blue ribbon or "what have you" to suit your convention.

Woodhull Challenges Allied to Give Stand on Admitting Chains

Declares Progress of MPTOA Has Been “Satisfactory and Safe” in 1928—Calls Enemy from Without Greatest Danger to Exhbitors—Urges United Front

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—In an extended interview, issued on the threshold of the New Year, R. F. Woodhull issued a greeting to the members of the MPTOA, of which he is president.

Woodhull commended the record of his organization and commented rather caustically on the efforts of certain theatre owners to start a rival body, now accomplished under the leadership of Abram F. Myers with the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

"Progress for the last year has been satisfactory and safe," he declared.

"Notwithstanding differences of opinions, sparring for political position, energy from without, and a host of self-seeking and thoughtless activities, all common to every growing institution, its record of accomplishment is comparable to that of any similar endeavor."

He reviewed the decision at Columbus in 1927 to admit distributor-owned theatres and those of independent owners.

"The new structure started at Columbus is completed and is a splendid institution. It has accomplished much in protection for the theatre owners. In legislation, in solving hundreds of contractual difficulties, in the development of nationwide public goodwill, in the cooperation with governmental officials and many other constructive ways, the wisdom of adopting the new order of things becomes more and more evident. This organization now numbers within its membership over 7,000 theatres. Its direct point of contact with state associations and individual members, together with a contact man in each film zone, provides efficiency and quickness of action where speed is an essential."

Puts Question to Allied

Then he turned to the matter of the revival of Allied States.

"Pursuing into the future, we find a few theatre owners endeavoring to start another organization. Differences of opinion will always be with us. The fact, however, is that we have been able to lead and will urge the new organization to its own futility. There are more independent theatre owners in the MPTOA than there are ever likely to be drawn under the new banner. This is not a test for supremacy as a "czar" of independent theatres, but Mr. Myers and myself. I have never been able to visualize myself as a czar; neither can I Mr. Myers. I wonder also if Mr. Myers still believes in rubles and how many it would take to pay the rumored $100,000."

"I am afraid the travelling troupe will be dependent for continued support on keeping in the limelight, ignorance of the meaning of the word "cultural," and the absence of a phonograph. Let us redeem ourselves to every activity that will reflect credit on our business and watch with unceasing vigilance and strong underhanded forces, the slightest movement that will bring reproach upon it."

"With these as the realization of the responsibility that is mine as the representative of our large membership, I extend greetings and the sincere hope that the year 1929 will be filled with health, prosperity and their attendant contentment for all in the motion picture industry."

Problems of Sound Are Spur to Greater Efforts
In 1929, Declares Mayer

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—"The year 1928, which has brought to the screen industry some of the greatest and most sensational developments in its history, has also left a heritage for 1929, in the shape of many important problems that the united body of theatre owners must grapple with," declared Louis M. Mayer, vice-president, in charge of production of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in a New Year’s statement issued at the studio.

"The past year has seen what is almost a revolution in the art of the screen," he continued. "Stars and once silent now must talk; pictures that once appealed to the intelligence through a single sense now reach human consciousness through the whole brain."

"A new art form is being formed."

"Will it change the entire structure of screen drama? Some believe it will, others believe it won’t. Some believe it will, others that it will supplant even the speaking stage. Who knows?"

"But I am sure that the spirit in which the whole industry is approaching these problems means that they will only spur us on to greater achievement, and a higher development of the motion picture art to which all our efforts are dedicated."

Warner Brothers to Change Subtitle in “Singing Fool”

(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 2.—In answer to a protest made by several of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and auxiliary organizations that a subtitle in "The Singing Fool" reflected on the honor and glory of Robert E. Lee, and held the valiant Southern leader up to ridicule, Warner Brothers in a statement agreed to discontinue this title and substitute a similar one. The title that caused the kick read, "A l Jal Johnson has done more for Dixie than Robert E. Lee." The new title is to be the effect that Jalson has done more for Dixie than any other minister.

Franklin Raps Foes In Legal Fight Over Northwest Theatre
(Special to the Herald-World)

PORTLAND, ORE., Jan. 2.—Harold B. Franklin, president of Pacific Northwest Theatres and West Coast Theatres, answering the recent statements of J. C. Allen, attorney for Jensen & von Herberg interests in Seattle, regarding pending and threatened litigation claimed to affect Pacific Northwest Theatres, West Coast Theatres and other corporations, said:

"This is a picayunish attempt upon the part of Jensen & von Herberg interests to force a settlement of an action now pending against the Liberty Theatre Company for rent, based upon a lease of the Liberty Theatre in Seattle.

"It is interesting to note that the Liberty Theatre Company was organized by the Jensen & von Herberg interests. They find themselves in the position of being limited to redress under a lease of the theatre to a corporation which they themselves organized and controlled. It is this company that they are suing and because the company never was furnished with sufficient assets, they are endeavoring to bring into litigation Pacific Northwest Theatres and others under the claim that that company or some other company under some alleged arrangement assumes the obligation of the lease.

"The fact is that no company ever assumed any obligation of the Liberty Theatre Company. They themselves organized the Liberty Theatre Company. The Pacific Northwest Theatres does not own any of the stock of the Liberty Theatre Company."

Is the "Flu" Affecting Attendance? Joe Weil Suggests a Solution

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Joe Weil, director of advertising and exploitation of the Universal Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., gives the following methods to keep away the "flu."

"Pay more attention to air conditioning thoroughly daily. Instead of using dry mops for cleaning, dampen them a little so that only a minimum of dust is raised in the cleaning operation. Do not run 'flu' slides on your screen. Get wise to the fact that certain fruit dealers and drug stores are taking advantage of a slight spread to scare the people into buying their wares. Get rid of all smell mills in the theatre by using a disinfectant."

Theatre Operates Sunday Under "Contribution" Plan
(Special to the Herald-World)

HORTON, KAN., Jan. 2.—The theatre is operating successfully under the "contribution" plan. Although the contributions do not equal the week-day receipts the house has been filled each Sunday. The patron as he leaves the theatre leaves his contribution in a box. No violation of the law was found to be connected with this method.

First National
FIRST NATIONAL'S recent reorganization, far from upsetting this fine old-line company, seems to have fired it with amazing vitality and energy.

A visit to the First National offices shows a plant clearly going full-speed ahead. There is neither idleness nor indecision. Obviously, First National will continue to be a factor of first-rate importance in the film industry, an ambition entirely within reason when one considers the high quality of the product First National makes. (Note "The Barker," at the Central, one of the best pictures on Broadway in a long time.)

First National, under the leaders of its reorganization, is a young outfit and has the refreshing qualities of youth.

Herman Starr, the new president, is under thirty. But he has been in the film industry, with the Warners, for ten years and he knows just exactly what he wants. What he wants, I might add, is to make First National eminently successful, so much so that he is interested only in contributions toward that end.

For instance, and I trust I'm not revealing a secret, Starr declines and avoids personal publicity. He sees no reason why Herman Starr should be built up, sold and resold to the public or to the industry. First National is not engaged in putting over Starr, therefore it seems to him a waste of effort to publicize him. Now, if you want to give Richard Barthelmess publicity...

Ned Depinet, sales manager of First National, is well-known in the industry and well-liked. He has done a fine job of salesmanship for more than four years and his inclusion in the new scheme at First National is as much a tribute to the company's good sense as a tribute to his good work.

Depinet, too, is a young man.

Charlie Einfeld, newly appointed director of advertising and publicity for First National, has had an experience that fits him uniquely for his job. Not only has he held every subordinate position in his department before reaching the top, but he has been on the exhibitor's side of the fence.

Which is one reason why First National is going out of its way to help the exhibitor. For instance, with every First National picture will go a campaign of exploitation designed especially for the theatres which it is scheduled to go.

If you have a theatre in Duluth and are going to play "Synthetic Sin" or "Scarlet Sea" you will get from First National a number of suggestions designed to help put the picture over in your city. If you are at Forth Worth you will get similar aid, but not necessarily the same suggestions.

"We have no desire to tell an exhibitor how to play a picture," Einfeld told me, "but we want to do everything in our power to help him with suggestions if he wants them. Frequently an exhibitor shows a picture he hasn't seen and he's rather up against it to know what to emphasize, what to exploit. We want to give him all the information he can use to enable him to exploit his pictures intelligently and bring crowds into his theatres."

Both National's progress in the industry will be closely watched during the coming months.

High Record Set in Domestic Trade, Foreign Is Exceptional

Wages Continue at High Level and Unemployment at Minimum, Says Bureau of Commerce Director

The year 1929 opens with every prospect of a maintenance of the general prosperity of recent months which brought a new high record in domestic business and an exceptional volume of foreign trade, says Dr. Julius Klein, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, in a statement at Washington, January 2.

Farm products increased 3 per cent in output during 1928 while an even greater increase was registered in industrial production. Merchandise exports were the highest since 1920, passing the five billion dollar mark. Automotive and construction advanced, the former to its highest figure, the latter above its 1927 total.

Rates for call money and for stock-exchange time loans rose sharply, but credit for new construction continued in ample supply at only slightly higher rates, and open market rates for commercial paper have held at a somewhat higher advance, Klein reported.

Wage at High Level

There was little change in volume of wholesale distribution or in the general level of wholesale prices. Business efficiency increased.

"Wages continue at a high level," Klein announced, and the unemployment rates was noted in the early part of 1928 has been reduced to a minimum. Factory employment was increased for the first time in a number of years."

"Construction operations which declined slightly in 1927 showed another large expansion during the year just finished," Klein declared. "Contracts for new construction increased in value by almost 7 per cent, as large factories for residences, industrial buildings, public works and utilities, and educational buildings more than offset the decrease in other types of construction.

These expansion operations resulted in a larger output of structural steel, brick, cement, and many other building materials. Timber cut, on the other hand, decreased for the third successive year."

"Agricultural output has shown almost a 50 per cent increase as manufacturing during the past year," he stated. "The total land used for all crops harvested was larger by about 8,000,000 acres than in 1927 and the aggregate production increased approximately 5 per cent. The average of farm prices showed slight increases in the price of livestock, poultry products, and manufactured goods, and a continued rise in the prices of grains, fruits and vegetables.

No Steady expansion in export business of other nations were cited by Klein as pointing to worldwide improvement in business conditions in recent years. A five per cent increase in value of exports of 10 European nations in the first nine months of 1928 was recorded over the same period in 1924.

Outside of Europe the aggregate was about the same as in 1927."

Merchandise Exports Increase

The total value of our merchandise exports increased about 3 per cent in 1928 while average price was unchanged. Exports of finished manufactures were 70 per cent higher in 1922. Total imports of the United States were $1,410,000,000, or 2 per cent less than in 1927.

"In summing up conditions at the end of 1928," Klein concluded, "we may state that domestic production and trade are in record volume and that our foreign commerce continues to show steady growth as a result of an increasing foreign demand for American manufactures. The maintenance of our imports at about the same level as in the two preceding years indicates the large purchasing power and general prosperity of the United States."

Paramount Purchases 60,000 More B & K Shares; Holdings Now Over 87 Per Cent

(New York, Jan. 2.—Paramount has purchased privately approximately 60,000 additional voting trust certificates of Balaban & Katz Corporation, issuing 1.6 shares of Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation stock for each charge of Balaban & Katz. This additional purchase gives Paramount approximately 87 and one half per cent of the issued and outstanding voting trust certificates of Balaban & Katz, as compared with 65 per cent heretofore held.

It was also announced that Paramount has arranged to purchase approximately $2,000,000 worth of outstanding certificates of indebtedness of Guaranty Trust Company, which come due in October, 1929. These certificates were issued under the original purchase of Balaban & Katz stock by Paramount two years ago.

The purchase of these certificates on this basis relieves Paramount of making this cash payment in October, 1929, and changes this quick liability, with a 27 per cent interest rate, into common stock at $53.25 per share.

FN Announces Impressive Number Of Films All with Dialogue

Corinne Griffith Signed for Six Productions in Three Years—Barthelmess Contract Renewed for Two Seasons
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—An impressive number of First National-Vitaphone Productions, all with dialogue, was announced today for coming release by Ned. E. Depinet, First National’s general sales manager. This announcement was made concurrently with the fact that Corinne Griffith had been signed to a three-year contract to make six audials, the first to be “Prisoners.”

ALICE WHITE is signed to make four pictures next year, and Richard Barthelmess’ contract has been renewed for two years and will make three a year with Vitaphone synchronization.

First National also has purchased the right of “Rose of Killarney,” “When Irish Eyes Are Smiling,” “Riviera” and “The Queen of Jazz.” It is stated as probable that “When Irish Eyes Are Smiling” will star Colleen Moore on completion of “Why Be Good.”

Dialogue for Other Stars

The list announced by Depinet for dialogue includes the Corinne Griffith pictures under her new contract with two super-specials a year; also the remaining pictures to be made by the star under her former contract. Coming productions starring Richard Barthelmess, Billie Dove and Milton Sills also will be with dialogue.

Pictures to be completed for this year’s program are: “The Green Promise,” set for dialogue, “Weary River,” starring Richard Barthelmess; “His Captive Woman,” with Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill; “Saturday’s Children,” a special; “Love’s a Beautiful Thing,” with Corinne Griffith; “Hot Stuff,” starring Alice White; “Two Weeks Off” and “The Girl in the Glass Cage,” with Dorothy Mackaill; “Children of the Ritz,” with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhull; “The Man and the Moment,” with Billie Dove and Rod La Rocque; “Heart of a Princess,” “The Other Tomorrow,” with Billie Dove; “One Sullen Night,” with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhull; “Eagle’s Trail” and “The Spotter,” starring Milton Sills; “House of Horrors,” a mystery melodrama. A number of productions in this list are completed and others will be ready in time to meet the winter and spring releases when they will make six productions.

First New Stage in Use

The first of the eight soundproof stages being constructed at the First National Studios in Burbank is now in use and others are being rushed to completion. In addition to the stages on the First National lot, there are eleven Vitaphone soundproof stages in California and one in Brooklyn, all of which may be used if necessary.

First National Pictures enters upon the new year with stars and featured players who have proved themselves especially well adapted to talking pictures. Richard Barthelmess sings as well as talks in “Weary River.” The picture is finished.

Dorothy Dawson Signed New

Corinne Griffith has a voice of such fine quality for Vitaphone reproduction that she was signed exclusively for super-specials with dialogue. Her contract covers the next two years during which she will make six pictures.

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhull will be seen and heard in Vitaphone production where the contract players have shown themselves adapted to sound film. Doris Dawson has been given a new contract following the excellent showing she made in dialogue sequences.

Allen Named Assistant To Warners’ Sales Head
(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Jan. 2.—James V. Allan, manager of the Warner Brothers exchange there, has been appointed assistant general sales manager of the company.

Mr. Allan, who also is president of the Detroit Film Board of Trade, will go to New York to take up his new duties there on January 7. No announcement has been made as to who will be appointed to fill the vacancy.

“Faker” Role Results in New Columbia Contract For Jacqueline Logan
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Because, it is said, of her performance in “The Faker,” in which she portrays three roles, Columbia Pictures has renewed its contract with Jacqueline Logan for two additional productions on the current picture list. Her portrayal in “The Faker” of Miss Logan was also featured by Columbia in “Nothing New Year,”

Miss Logan, who includes in her many portrayals, that of Mary Magdalene in “King of Kings,” also has had several years of experience on the stage and it is not unlikely that she may appear in one of Columbia’s audials productions, it is stated. She has starred in several recent Columbia productions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—A citizens committee of the association opposed to Blue Laws has been organized here to fight the Lankford bill.

President Austin of the district A.O.B.L.-assaulted the claim that the bill would “protect labor,” and declared that, instead, it would rob labor of Sunday shows, baseball and other beneficial forms of recreation on its only day of leisure.

Attorney John J. McGinnis is chairman of the citizens’ committee.

Returns to Native
China to Make Films
(Special to the Herald-World)

PASCO, WASH., Jan. 2.—One of the most interesting projects in cinema history is about to be instituted in the opening of a studio in Shanghai, China, by James Wong Howe, cameraman for Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, successively. Nineteen years ago he was a pupil in the Pasco schools. He is a son of Wong How, Chinese merchant. In January he leaves for fact actually, where he goes to open a studio as the head of his own company, The Great Wall Corporation, which will produce some of his country’s legends, with Chinese actors. The first will be known as “The Soul of the Tiger.” Howe also exhibited to the schools of China industrial films depicting the great industries of the United States. Howe is backed by wealthy Chinese of San Francisco and New York.
Marcus Is FBO Vice President; Rosenzweig General Sales Head

Kahane Is Elected Treasurer and Secretary and Herman Zohbbl His Assistant—Scollard and Delehanty Voluntarily Resign

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Lee Marcus is now a vice president of FBO Productions, Inc., and Charles Rosenzweig is general sales manager. These elections, and others, were made at a meeting of the board of directors Friday. B. B. Kahane was elected treasurer and secretary, following the voluntary resignations of Clinton J. Scollard and Thomas Delehanty, former treasurer and secretary, respectively. Herman Zohbbl was elected assistant treasurer and secretary.

Lee Marcus has been associated with FBO since its inception seven years ago. He entered the organization as assistant to the late Harry Berman, general sales manager. Upon Berman's death, Marcus became general sales manager and has been serving FBO in that capacity for the last four years. Marcus started his film career in 1919 as salesman and booker for Realart Pictures Company in Buffalo. When a better opportunity presented itself, he joined Selznick Pictures Company in New York, and remained with that organization for one year. The Selznick bankruptcy sent him to the R-C Pictures Corporation. When R-C was merged into FBO Productions, Marcus was one of the few executives who remained with the organization as assistant to Mr. Berman.

Charles Rosenzweig is another veteran of the picture business. He has been in pictures for thirteen years, and like Marcus, has been associated with FBO since its inception seven years ago. He started his career as a salesman for Universal Pictures Company. In two years, he was made division manager for New York by Universal, and remained with that organization for four years, joining FBO in 1922 as sales manager for the New York office. He was promoted last year to Eastern sales manager.

B. B. Kahane, newly elected treasurer and secretary of FBO, is also treasurer and secretary of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation as well as Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation.

Herman Zohbbl, newly elected assistant treasurer and assistant secretary of FBO, has been connected with the United States Leather Company for the last 24 years as auditor and assistant controller.

(Staff to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—The Christie brothers have filed incorporation papers for an organization representing a million and a half dollars, to be known as Metropolitan Sound Studios, Inc. It has taken over the properties of the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood as well as the newly built and operating sound studios at the same location.

It is understood that several large outside interests besides the Christies are being pooled in the ownership of at least six different producing companies, which will have a combined film program for the coming year representing more than $20,000,000.

Officers of the new corporation are Charles H. Christie, president; Al E. Christie, vice-president; and William S. Holman, secretary and treasurer. Phil L. Ryan is general manager in charge of production.

Among the important film producing organizations now making pictures at Metropolitan are Harold Lloyd, Cudd, Columbia, British and Dominion Films, Ltd. The company's studios will be located at Chesterfield, Liberty, Cliff Broughton and the Christie auditorium companies.

Sono-Art Productions Headed By Weeks; Eddie Dowling Signs

New Company to Produce Sound Pictures Starts First Picture Early This Month—Backed by National Diversified Corporation—Uses W. E. Equipment

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—George W. Weeks is vice president of a new sound picture producing company named Sono-Art Productions, which in 1929 will make a number of full length auditions with silent versions, the first going into production early this month at the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood, controlled by the Christie Film Company.

Weeks, film pioneer, Paramount executive and formerly general manager of distribution, has represented the Christians in the East for the last year. Interested in Sono-Art and officers and directors are O. E. Goebel, Thomas A. Lynn, Charles H. Christie and Weeks. The company will have the financial backing of National Diversified Corporation, which comprises representatives of some of the biggest money interests in the country.

Dr. Conde Pallen and Messrs. Goebel and Lynn are respectively, president, vice president and secretary-treasurer of National Diversified. Goebel, president of Sono-Art, has confined the major portion of his time to motion pictures since 1915 when he left the practice of law and has written and produced a number of successful pictures since that time.

Lynn was long identified with one of the leading financial institutions of this country and served his company in many capacities, assisting in handling a field force of 20,000.

Selection of Weeks to head the active management of Sono-Art gives that company an executive leadership possessed by few motion picture organizations as his 15 years' experience in the business attests.

Weeks also announced that Eddie Dowling, actor-playwright-producer, had signed with Sono-Art to star in a production based on his own story, "Broadway Bound."

"The new medium of artistic expression has proved so absorbing that I have dropped my stage work to devote all my time to it," said Dowling.

Sono-Art talking pictures will be produced with the recording of the Western Electric Company devices.

Hanson Introduced To His Sales Staff At T-S Convention

Branch managers of Tiffany-Stahl met their new general sales manager, Oscar Hanson, at a convention held mainly for that purpose at the Stevens hotel in Chicago, December 28 and 29. President L. A. Young, Grant L. Cook, secretary and treasurer; A. L. Selig, advertising and publicity director; Hanson and his assistant, Carl Goe, were those from the home office to compose, with over 20 exchange heads and other executives, a total of 31 attending.

The company is now negotiating for sites in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia on which to build first-run theatres, according to Cook, who, however, declared that he could give out no further information on the project at this time.

The meetings, which were presided over by Cook and Hanson, included a showing of "Lucky Boy," regarded as "the big shot" in the lineup, "Lucky Boy," an audien with emphasis on the singing sequences, stars George Jessel, star of the original "Jazz Singer" on the stage.

Physically stocky and easy of manner, Hanson is typically the man of great energy calmly directed, and he impressed the members of his staff as such.

Also attending the convention were Abe Meyer, assistant to L. A. Young; Rudolph Flothow, manager of synchronization; Curtis Nagel of Nagel and Brown, producers of the Color Classics; Phil Hazza, Canadian general manager; A. H. McLaughlin and William D. Shapiro, division managers; and Mannie Brown, special representative. Exchange managers attending were:

A. H. McLaughlin (Chicago); Al Blonson, New York; E. A. Miller, Minneapolis; Charles Weiner, Cincinnati; Carl H. Shalti, Detroit; H. F. Leotholt, Omaha; S. A. Galanty, Indianapolis; Tom Colby, Atlanta; J. L. Francioni, Kansas City; R. A. Kelly, New Orleans; Sterling Wilson, Albany; Pete Dana, Buffalo; J. E. O'Toole, Milwaukee; H. I. Goldman, Boston; Allen Morris, Pittsburgh; Harry Brown, Washington; Al Blonson, Dallas; Roy Avery, Oklahoma City; Ed Heller, Charlotte; and J. Huse, Dallas.
Among filmdom’s newlyweds—Creed A. Neeper, general sales manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation, producer of Harold Lloyd feature comedies for Paramount release. Neeper was married to Miss Elizabeth Vesey in New York City.

Between scenes, which is to say, between hair-raising rides and hairbreadth escapes, since the big fellow at center is Ken Maynard, First National Western star. Harry J. Brown (left) is his supervising director; and Charles R. Rogers, his producer.

Virginia Bruce, late of Fargo, No. Dak. But now of Hollywood. For William Beaudine, the director, chancing to meet her, signed her to a five-year contract. Virginia is 18, blonde, and as you see, very pretty. And lucky, as well.

A glad time in store for them, as they await admittance to see and hear Al Jolson in “The Singing Fool.” The big party was a holiday gift of Judge Samuel D. Levey, Edwin M. Hydeman and Warner Brothers, to the children of non-sectarian institutions in New York City and environs.

A new MGM picture of the South Seas has taken W. S. Van Dyke (right), director of “White Shadows,” to Tahiti. This time he will make “The Pagan,” starring Ramon Navarro (left). Renee Adoree and Dorothy Janis have supporting roles. The party is shown taking ship from San Francisco.
Warner Brothers' new general sales manager, Claude C. Ezell, former division sales manager who has been appointed successor to Sam E. Morris upon the latter's elevation to vice president and general manager.

David Lee, the lad millions seeing Warner Brothers' "The Singing Fool" are weeping over. But was there more fortunate youngster than he shown among his Christmas toys? A few years old, and fame and fortune already his, thanks to Al Jolson—and to Master David himself.

Posed for the love of "mine." 'Tis fitting, for Anthony J. Xydias, president of Perfect Talking Pictures, and Ward King, director of Telefilm Pictures, expect much from the microphone, having begun a program of audience shorts and features at the Telefilm studio in Los Angeles.

Why not in the main show? For the present, however, all we can say is that Sally Eilers appears thus costumed in "The Side Show," Columbia production in which she is starred, with Jason Robarts opposite.

A scene from real life, despite its resemblance to the more familiar source, with the roles of Mr. and Mrs. James Murray being taken by the MGM featured player and his bride of a few weeks.
Larry Darmour, producer of short subjects for FBO, who this season has added the “Racing Blood” series of thrillers to the “Mickey McGuire,” “Toots and Caspar” and “Barney Google” comedies.

James Hall, Paramount featured player, and his dad, Clinton Brown, who recently visited his son in Hollywood. When James was 13, he ran away from home because his father opposed his theatrical ambitions. Now—well, this picture might be a final fade-out, mightn’t it?

Another conference broken up by the Herald-World photographer, whose audacity while scouting around the MGM studio resulted in this snapshot of Director George Hill (right) and his art director, Merrill Pye.

Varied are her new roles. Kathryn McGuire is featured by First National in Colleen Moore’s “Synthetic Sin” and Mulhall-Mackall’s “Children of the Ritz,” and by FBO in Tom Mix’s, “The Dude Ranch.”
First Seven World Wide Pictures Go to Exhibitor This Month

Come from Seven Foreign Nations and Were Made in Exact Locales Called for in Stories, Says Williams

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The first product imported by World Wide Pictures, Inc., a series of seven photoplays made overseas, will be distributed to the American market this month. Thus the new company organized by J. D. Williams, who enjoys an international reputation in the film industry, makes its bow to the American public.

THE first seven pictures to be released bear witness to the extraordinary versatility of the World Wide product. They come from England, France, Russia, Poland, Egypt and Italy. The pictures were made on the exact locations called for by the stories, directors and principals and engaged natives showing all scenes in their true atmosphere. Herein, Williams believes, lies the reason for the new company.

Only Organization of Kind

World Wide Pictures is the only organization of its kind in America specializing in imported photoplays. Leading officers besides Williams, organizer and for six years general manager of First National Pictures, who is executive vice president of World Wide, are Alexander S. Aronson, for five years general foreign representative of M.G.M., associate to Williams and general foreign representative with headquarters in Europe; Joseph S. Skirboll, formerly distribution executive in the United States and foreign representative for First National Pictures, sales manager.

The company will distribute physically through Educational Exchanges, but will maintain its own sales and advertising staff. Instead of selling in block, exhibitors can have each picture screened and buy one or all, as they like, it is announced.

Passed Upon by Board

All pictures selected by Aronson abroad are passed upon by a board of review in the New York office. This board consists of men and women both in and out of the industry. The company has made contracts with British International Pictures, Ltd., largest English producing company with studios at Elstree; U.F.A., the largest German company with studios in Berlin, and British Dominions, Ltd., whose studios are at Gricklewood, French, Austrian and Italian contracts are pending.

Active distribution will start January 15.

Addition of Leading Factors in Sound Picture Field Means Audiences Will Be Guided by Same Cooperative Policies as Silent Films, Says MPPDA Statement

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—A special meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., held here last Thursday, brought new and substantial figures into the organization. The event was signalized by gratifying remarks on the part of Will H. Hays, president of the organization, and those honored with election.

R.C.A. Photophone, Inc., and Electrical Research Products, Inc., sound apparatus manufacturer of Western Electric, became member units of the MPPDA.

The following statement regarding the election was made:

"R.C.A. Photophone, Inc., the subsidiary of the Radio Corporation of America engaged in the commercial development of devices for the recording and reproduction of sound pictures, and in the production of talking motion pictures with the view of developing the commercial and technical side of such pictures, joined the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president.

Otterson Elected Member

"John E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., which is the manufacturer of the synchronizing process of the Western Electric Company, was also elected a member.

"The two members were admitted at a special meeting of the board of directors. David Sarnoff, president of R.C.A. Photophone, Inc., was elected to the board.

Changes in the board were made by the election of Harry M. Warner, representing Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and Vitagraph, Inc., and Albert Warner, representing First National Pictures, Inc.; also Hiram S. Brown was elected a director, representing FBO Pictures Corp.

"The addition of these leading factors in the sound picture field, R.C.A. Photophone and the Western Electric subsidiary of the Radio Corporation of America, will be guided by the same cooperative policies that have accompanied the growth of silent pictures since the formation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

"David Sarnoff, president of R.C.A. Photophone, Inc., said: "After analyzing the great possibilities present and future, of the motion picture industry, I believe that the work of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., under the leadership of Mr. Will H. Hays, and their efforts to maintain and improve the standards of the business, have resulted in important contributions to the public, as well as to the industry itself. R.C.A. Photophone joins this association with the hope of being able to assist in the program of the latter for better pictures and a greater industry.'

Effective Work, Says Otterson

"John E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., said:

"I believe that an association with the organized industry. The association has been doing most effective and constructive work, and in this effort it is my pleasure to participate.'

"In referring to the matter, Will Hays said:

"The organized industry is pleased, of course, with the affiliation of these two new and strong units with our association efforts. They represent very large interests in the new phases of the motion picture industry and their ability and constructive advice and cooperation will be most helpful in solving the problems of the industry and in the further development of its largest usefulness.'

Bucher Sees Great Progress in 1929 with New Photophone Studios

pictures represents nine years of experimental and research work in the laboratories of the principal factors in the radio and electrical industries of the United States. The new technique of sound reproduction thus developed made possible a revolutionary system of recording and reproducing the world's sound on films as well as discs and reproducing therewith. This system is now available through RCA Photophone, Inc., to producers and exhibitors throughout the nation.

At the present time RCA Photophone is announcing the installation of many leading theatres in the United States as early as March 1929 to make 2,000 additional installations of the same character.

The same installations already made have been limited by production authority conditions, as well as by engineers and acoustical experts, as marking a new standard of reproduction in sound-motion pictures.

"Beyond the quality of reproduction striking advantages, perhaps, from the standpoint of the exhibitor, is the simplicity of operation. So thoroughly standardized is RCA Photophone equipment that it is possible to train in a period of six weeks new personnel to operate the system. Similarly in the recording of sound-motion pictures. Under all normal conditions of operation it is rarely necessary to retake a sound recording by the RCA Photophone system. Generally, single shots are satisfactory. To motion picture producers this means a saving of thousands of dollars in production expenses.

New 8 Radios Ready Soon

"In the sphere of sound-motion picture production, it is significant to note that some of the most successful pictures of the present season have been recorded by the RCA Photophone system. Contracts for the production of sound pictures already have been signed with various motion picture producers, and other contracts await the completion of new sound motion picture studios, which RCA Photophone expects to have ready for production early in 1929.

"The Gramercy Studio and the Gramercy Annex will be completed in New York by Photophone and they will have facilities second to none for the recording of ordinary films as well as of elaborate feature pictures. The new studio of RCA Photophone, Inc. is being built up on a scale large enough to record feature stage productions. It will be equipped with the latest technical devices for making of sound pictures. In addition, there will be facilities for research and experiment in the many new problems which the art of telling motion pictures constantly presents.

"With ample studio equipment reflecting the latest developments of the art, RCA Photophone, Inc. in 1929 will embark upon a forward-looking program in this field. This program will cover among other activities:

(1) The equipment of theatres throughout the country with the RCA Photophone system of sound reproduction;

(2) The maintenance of studio facilities for the recording of sound motion pictures, from newsreels and shorts to the most elaborate feature productions, to be made available to motion picture producers;

(3) The development of a series of important educational films of a new character through the RCA Photophone system of synchronizing sound and action on the film;

(4) The production of high-class sound pictures by RCA Photophone, Inc., with the view of introducing various new elements being developed in sound technique.

Briefly, RCA Photophone plans for 1929 call for steady progress in every phase of the sound-motion picture industry, in the development of which we believe the radio and electrical industries of the United States can contribute greatly."
New Xydias Sound Company Launches
Production in West
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Anthony J. Xydias, head of the newly organized Perfect Talking Pictures Corporation, has leased the Charles Ray studio on Sunset Drive and has started production of an announced series of 24 one-reel sound comedies and novelties, to be followed by two-reel and long features. The product, to be called Filmotone, will use a device which is said to be on a cost scale for the smallest theatres, and the productions can be played on other disc systems.

The first production unit was directed by Ward Wing under the title, “We’re in Vaudeville Now.” In the cast are Fred Warren, Harry Todd, Lori Bara, Hazel Howell and Jack Raymond.

“Within sixty days any and all exhibitors can get all the talking pictures—one-reelers, two-reelers and full-length features—they want from our company,” Xydias said, “and we will be able to supply them with a device any exhibitor can afford.”

Sol Lesser on West Coast
To Build $500,000 Studio
For New Producing Firm
(Special to the Herald-World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2—Sol Lesser is here to superintend construction of a $500,000 soundproof studio in the San Fernando Valley for the newly formed Lesser-Warner Producing Corporation, of which he is president. Franklyn Warner is vice president, Richard F. Bailey, secretary, and Mike Rosenberg, treasurer. The Sonora-Bristol soundophone recording and sound device will be used.

There will also be a studio in New York, supervised by Rosenberg, who will be chief of eastern operations. Offices are at 1776 Broadway in New York and in the Pacific Finance Building at 6th South Hope street, Los Angeles. A number of Broadway stage stars are to be signed, Lesser said, and the New York studio will save them the long trip to the West Coast while they are appearing in stage plays.

Lesser also plans to manufacture and market an audiophone for home use and to launch “picturized” religious entertainment for churches.

GUARANTEED PERFECT EQUIPMENT FOR TALKING PICTURES AT LOW COST

HERE ARE SOME FACTS

Dear Mr. Exhibitor:

HERE IS WHAT YOU’VE BEEN WAITING FOR—Reasonably priced high grade devices for your booth that will enable you to play genuine talking pictures—WE HAVE THEM and hundreds of wise exhibitors are already reaping profits—Our recent installations have included circuits who have previously installed high priced and elaborate equipment in other of their theatres and have now switched to ours—WHY? Because we guarantee and produce the same results at a fraction of the cost.

We guarantee that our machines do not infringe on the patents of any other machine, our equipments are licensed and covered by separate patents, and furthermore, do not develop the hundred and one troubles usually found in machines of more complicated design.

One operator can easily handle our units, can make his own adjustments and you don’t need to tear out booth walls to get our equipment into it.

And as to producers furnishing pictures, we are pleased to say that every exhibitor who has installed our machines is getting all the talking and synchronized pictures he desires—our machines are approved because they are RIGHT and deliver perfect synchronization and tone and we will back that statement up with results on your own screen.

You’ll be sorry if you don’t install MOVIE-PHONE, it’s positively the only LOW PRICED HIGH GRADE APPARATUS ON THE MARKET TODAY—THAT GIVES THE RESULTS DEMANDED BY THE PUBLIC AND PRODUCERS, and at the same time possesses every advantage that you require in the way of price, operation and ease of installation.

Complete installation for two machines in your booth for as low as $1,000.00. Results guaranteed to be the equal of any talking equipment on the market. And our equipment is sold at a fraction of the cost of any others. INVESTIGATE!

Five All-Audiens, Six Part Dialogue,
Seven with Sound Scheduled
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—Five all-audiens, six part-audiens and seven with sound but without dialogue are United Artists' answer to the call for the new type of picture to be released in 1929. For production of these pictures United Artists has built two of the best equipped sound stages in existence.

The five all-audiens are Mary Pickford's "Coquette," Roland West's "Nightstick," Herbert Brenon's "Lummox," Ronald Colman's "Bulldog Drummond" and Vilma Banky's "Childs, Fifth Avenue."

Four in Production
The six part-audiens, four of which are in production, are Douglas Fairbanks' "The Iron Mask," Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights," Gloria Swanson's "Queen Kelly," Henry King's "She Goes to War," and Harry Richman's "Say It with Music."

Voices that will be heard on the screen for the first time are those of Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Vilma Banky, Douglas Fairbanks, Ronald Colman, Lupe Velez, Alma Rubens, Walter Byron, Pat O'Malley, Eleanor Griffith and Mae Busch. Directors of audiens: Erich von Stroheim, D. W. Griffith, Herbert Brenon, Henry King, Charles Chaplin, Allan Dwan, Sam Taylor, Roland West, Alfred Santell, Alan Crosland and F. Richard Jones.

Others with Sound
Pictures that will be released with sound and without dialogue include the Max Reinhardt-Lillian Gish film written by Hugo von Hofmannsthal; Ronald Colman in "The Rescue," direction of Herbert Brenon; Dolores del Rio in "Evangeline," direction of Edwin Carewe; John Barrymore in "King of the Mountains," direction of Ernst Lubitsch; Norma Talmadge in a film based on an original by William J. Locke; Constance Talmadge in "Venus"; and Rex Ingram's "Three Passions."

"I would be foolish to fly in the face of public acceptance of sound pictures and we are setting about to supply this demand as rapidly and legitimately as possible," said President Joseph M. Schenck in the Los Angeles Examiner. "We have two of the finest equipped sound stages in the world now ready for talking picture production."

Huge Market for Silent
"I believe no mistake could be more serious than to ignore silent pictures with the huge market at home and particularly abroad for this type of picture. Fundamentally, the talking picture is mechanical in the same sense. The camera photographs with power, reality and penetration that are unsurpassed."

"A Sarah Bernhardt might fool the public with her makeup on the stage, but she could not fool the camera. The talkies do not achieve this reality, this truthfulness which the camera possesses. So far, the results have been quite opposite. Voices on the screen do not sound like voices in real life and it remains to be proven whether this mechanical artificiality can be overcome. A phonograph record is still a phonograph record. A good phonograph record may be better than a bad concert actually heard, but it cannot be the equal of a good concert actually heard."

"The motion picture, on the other hand, has given a reality to the public that is not possessed ever by the stage."
$10,000 Damage When Heater Ignites Film
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Damage estimated at more than $10,000 was caused by a fire breaking out in the cutting rooms of the Charles Rogers Productions unit at Universal City last week. It is believed the blaze started when a piece of film fell against an electric heater. The reels of Ken Maynard’s picture, “The California Mail,” on which they were working at the time, were destroyed, as well as the offices, cutting rooms and a paint shop. The negative of the Maynard picture was in the studio laboratory, saving a heavy loss.

Carl Laemmle Returns
For Daughter’s Wedding
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Carl Laemmle returned here Saturday to attend the wedding of his daughter, Rosabelle, who married Stanley Bergerman today. Bergerman is a well-to-do merchant here. Rev. Edgar Magin officiates at the wedding, while only a few friends and relatives will be present. Carl Laemmle, Jr., will be the best man.

Hobart and Le Baron
Are Reunited at F B O
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Henry Hobart and William Le Baron, both of whom were associated with Cosmopolitan in the days when Marion Davies first started her picture career, will be together again when Hobart goes to FBO to become part of Le Baron’s staff.

Erle Hampton Joins Pathe
(Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Jan. 2.—Erle Hampton, formerly assistant publicist director of Fox West Coast Studios, has been signed to the Pathe publicity staff on the West Coast.

James Kirkwood to Return to Screen

NEW YORK.—James Kirkwood will return to the screen to appear in Warner Brothers picture “The Time, the Place and the Girl.” Kirkwood will have a speaking part in the picture.

Marked Slump Said to Be Due To Xmas Season in Production

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Carrying One-Fourth of Present Studio Load, Survey of Hollywood Shows; Pictures Planned for Work at Once Is Prediction
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—With only 26 pictures of feature length in production this week the business of making pictures is nearer to a standstill than at any previous time in several years. It is a temporary respite, however, according to officials of Universal, Fox, First National and Warner Brothers which are the biggest companies affected by the slump.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, on the other total number of pictures in production hand is producing 25 per cent of the in the entire colony.

According to plans and announcements 10 pictures will be launched before the end of this week. Studios have been waiting for the conclusion of the holidays, it is said, to resume work on an extensive scale.

Fox Only Lot to Start One

Only one picture went into production during the last week of 1928. It was Fox’s “Girls Gone Wild,” a Sue Carol-Nick Stuart production which Lou Selle is directing. Miss Carol and Stuart will, of course, do the romancing and Roy D’Arcy will provide the menace.

John Darrow, another rapidly rising young artist, has been assigned an important role in “Girls Gone Wild.”

At the same time the Fox company finished five of the seven pictures they have been working on. F. W. Murnau wrote the story for his production, “Our Daily Bread.” This is Murnau’s third American-made picture and co-features Charles Farrell and Mary Duncan. Shooting on this great drama of the wheat ranches began on Labor Day and production has been kept rigidly to schedule since that time, many weeks having been spent on location. The supporting cast includes such capable players as David Torrence, Edith Yorke, Dawn O’Day, Jack Pennick and Dick Alexander. Murnau will assist in the editing and cutting of “Our Daily Bread,” after which he contemplates a trip to Germany.

John Ford completed his latest production for Fox during the past week. It is Victor McLaglen’s starring vehicle, “Strong Boy,” in which he plays the role of a baggagemasher who tries a white collar job. Loretta Young is cast opposite McLaglen with Clyde Cook, Parrell MacDonald, Tom Wilson, Jack Pennick and Slim Summeran playing important parts. Director Ford took a company of 80 to the Mexican border near Carrizo Gorge for the filming of sequences of this picture.

“White Fury,” which went into production on the Fox lot November 12, was completed during the week. It is a story based on experiences in the frozen north country, and was directed by Charles Klein. The cast is headed by Lawrence Gray and petite Nancy Carroll of musical comedy fame. Others of importance in the list of players are Josephine Dunn, Anders Ran-
“Good Month Ahead” So Actors and Studio People Whoo? It Up

And Arthur Stebbins Arranges Big Natal Day Surprise for Joseph Schenck; Mike Levee Does the Honors at Dinner

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Although the studio and theatre situation these past 10 days has been uninspiring there are prog nostications from every quarter that this month will find business extraordinarily good in both ends of the industry.

BUSINESS in all Coast theatres took a change of direction the latter part of December and, according to Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, the condition of the show business is on the upgrade.

Film buyers and talking pictures in stating his reasons for believing January will show a change in the barometer of business figures that many of them have been booked by West Coast.

The studios have accomplished practically nothing in the past 10 days. Employees have made "holo" days, three days before and after each Sunday and holiday. They have practically refused to do any work, which may or may not have been deliberate, when considering the approaching a prosperity of a month by making a running start on it. Three men.

Schenck and Stebbins Party Big To-Day

Joseph M. Schenck had honors bestowed upon him again this week at a heavy dinner at the Roosevelt hotel, Hollywood's club room. At this signal to get up and go, employee W. Stubbins, Schenck's friend and associate, helped arrange the shindig which was regarded one of Xmas Week's big affairs. And it was not about those of whom rate 21 guns and about three dozen who rate at least a couple of guns. They all laid off work and went to the big birthday party. Mr. Schenck was born the day after Christmas.

Mike Levee was toastmaster and gave numerous guests an opportunity to make remarks regarding the honored guest.

Many of the following invited guests were present:

Corinne Griffith, who had a contract with First National with a year to run, shrugged her contract out of the window for another which will last for three years and two pictures per year. All six films will be produced by Griffith.

It would be a laugh if some of the producers were found to be talking seriously about the approaching fate of talking pictures. It would be odd if talking pictures proved to be only a six-months' fad and if Corinne Griffith does not sign one of the big companies in Hollywood next year.

Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld is back here. He brought the first sound film of Ronald Colman's new starring picture with him when he returned this week from New York.

Our Pal Makes Good

Little Nate Slott, whom we may now hail a young producer, got in his good licks this week when Metropolitan theatre booked his latest picture of the "Ace of Sport" series. Johnny Weismuller and Merna Kennedy are in the film.

At Green Chooses Joel McCrea

"The Five O'Clock Girl," starring Marion Davies, boasts a notable's son. Alfred E. Green, director of the picture has just cast him this week in the role opposite Miss Davies.

He is a college athlete of West Coast fame and is the son of F. McCrea, recently retired as secretary of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Light Corporation. His name is Joel McCrea.

Carmel Myers and Noah Beery in the supporting cast.

George Melford, who has been mega- placing "The Charlie Chan" for Universal, took the final shots on this production last week. Paul Schoeff led the script for the story which was originally purchased for Conrad Veidt. Holmes Herbert, however, has portrayed the leading male role with Margaret Livingston in the feminine lead. Rockelle Fellows, Philo McCullough, Rose Tapley and Crawford Kent are in the supporting cast.

The Gas Edwards Movieite Subject, "From Broadway to Heaven" was completed in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound studios during the past week. This is an all-color, and is supported by Lewis Stone, Charles King, musical comedy star and popular baritone, and will be embellished with many colorful ballets and specialty dances.

Neilan Film Completed

Marshall Neilan completed the picture which he has been directing for British and Dominions Film Corporation, Ltd., during the past few weeks. The picture is entitled "Fog" and is an all-talking production made in the new Metropolitan Sound studios.

John Loder, under contract to Paramount, was borrowed from that company to play opposite Mary Brian, who has the feminine lead. James Kirkwood has one of the most important roles in the picture and is supported by Lyle Talbot, Hamilton, Robert Ames, Frank Reicher and Hallam Cooley.

New Parkside Opens (Special to the Herald-World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—The Parkside theatre, a 1,000-seat house, opened last week. The building is of Spanish design, with the interior representing a Roman theatre with canopied ceiling.

ON A LOT OF THE LOTS

Regarding:

Thelma Todd: Bennett Christopher
Tom Mix: Charles Bow
Colleen Moore: Billie Dove
Sharon Lynn: Jean Harlow
George S. Arliss: Douglas Fairbanks

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2.—Thelma Todd, who until a few days ago was a First National star, is finding it profitable in the free lance field. She has had three calls during the past three days to appear in leading roles for various producers, but had already signed to play the starring role in "The House of Horror" which Benjamin Christison is scheduled to start at an early date, for First National.

Tom Mix the big "he-man" from all out- doors, can feel justly proud when he can boast of hisdomain's greatest stars as his former leading men, Clara Bow, the past popular, (according to box office record) played opposite Mix three years ago when he was with Fox. Colleen Moore, did her stuff in "The Wilderness Trail" six years ago then became the desirable Billie Dove in her first big role, opposite Tom in "Sweet Boiled." To date, no one cause was needed with trio, except Mix, so with a combination how could anything but the highest be attained.

Sharon Lynn, recently signed by Fox for a long term contract, is looking forward to the time when she will be engaged for a picture where Jean Hersholt and George Sidney are cast. She appeared in one several months ago entertainment "Gay Claus" and is still gigging away over the many pleasant hours of the making. "Both Mr. Hersholt and George are so funny," says Sharon. "They kept the whole cast laughing all the time they were on the picture, kidding in Jewish and Danish dialect." She says they are a sure cure for the blues. This is known needed with trio, so many of the well known grouchers who are given an early call. More power to the ones with a sense of humor. Miss Lynn is preparing to make a Movietone short entitled, "Women Are Like That," at Fox.

Take it from me folks, Guinn Williams, better known as "Big Boy," will soon be as well known as some of the greatest stars. There is always a reason for predictions. He put over one of his biggest roles in "Noah's Ark" as a buddy of George O'Brien. Of course, George would naturally lend color, but nevertheless, "Big Boy's" work stands out. He has now booked to appear with Charlie Farrell and Janet Gaynor in "Blue Skies." When he finishes this he will return to Warner Brothers to do a Vitaphone production.

Starrdom within the next 12 months, is being freely predicted for William Bakewell, handsome young leading man for Alice White, now appearing in "Baby Snuff," with the charming Mervyn LeRoy is directing. Bakewell has little time to call his own, for no sooner had he finished a dual role with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Iron Mask," than he was called for the lead opposite Miss White.

Here's Principle Of Telegraphon At Sound School

The apparatus being used by Professors Immel and MacDonald in voice development at the school of the motion picture at the University of Southern California, is a refined form of the Poulson Telegraphon, based on a principle of use of electro-magnetic inductors. By magnetic recording without distortion, these voices are reproduced and analyzed, and defects are picked out and corrected. Unlike the phonograph, the Telegraphon record, on a piece of magnetized wire, can be slowed down, almost as "slow motion" films analyze motion, and the component parts of sound thus can be carefully dissected. Considerable headway in speech analysis and instruction has been made by Dean Immel and Prof. MacDonald.

Microscope of Sound Waves

The Telegraphon in itself is composed of a long steel wire, which, passing from spool to spool, runs through a magnetic talking head, in which, actuated by voice vibrations, an impedance is set up which changes the molecular assembly of the steel. The record is permanent. It can be run through a receiving head similar to a phonographic electric pickup, amplified by power tubes and sent over a loud speaker. Records are taken both with the microphone and the Church acousticon, or delicate four-plate microphone—a veritable microscope of sound waves.

Galvanometer Used

This device, in which a galvanometer, actuated by the delicate currents generated in the magnetic pickup, records its movements by means of a mirror, throwing a beam of light onto a moving sensitized paper, provides an extremely accurate "picture" of every voice vibration. The kymograph, a mechanical device for the same purpose, is also used. This consists of a delicate diaphragm from which a slender thread runs, to be looped three times over a drum pivoted on watch jewels, and then to a tension spring.

The movements of the diaphragm, thus impressed on the galvanometer, are used to record by a mirror, beam, and sensitized tape in the same manner as with the phonodine, save that the method is mechanical rather than electrical.

The laryngal stroboscope is also used in the "voice analysis," and photograph the actual movements of the vocal machinery in generating sound, by means of whirling perforated discs, somewhat on the principle of the camera-shutter in a motion picture camera.

$1,000 a Day to Run Carnival in Ouachita

MONROE, LA., Jan. 2—Carnivals outside the corporate limits in Ouachita parish, after January first, will pay a license fee of one thousand dollars a day. Opinion was manifest that carnivals are usually accompanied by thefts and robberies.

Warners Sign Juliana Josephson

NEW YORK—Juliana Josephson, scenarist, has been signed by Warner Brothers for a long-term contract. Josephson will begin work on Al Jolson's next picture "Mammy."

Notables of Industry Attend Last Rites for Fred Thomson

Funeral Services for Beloved Western Actor Held Three Days Prior to Burial—Film Capital Bows in Tribute to the Man and His Influence
(Special to the Herald-World)

Hollywood, Jan. 2.—Funeral services for Fred Thomson were held last Wednesday, and burial was at Forest Lawn cemetery Monday. Burial was private.

The industry paid beautiful tribute to its friend. Directors, writers, producers and actors laid aside their work to attend the rites at Beverly Hills Community Presbyterian church. Not since the death of Valentino had they lost a more widely known fellow-craftsman. Nor had the industry ever lost a member who had been of greater influence in building the prestige of motion pictures.

Studio people who loved Thomson because of this influence, were there in hundreds to pay homage. Douglas Fairbanks, Louis B. Mayer and Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton, Marion Davies, Norma Kerry, Lloyd Ingraham, George Hill and Al and Ray Rockett were among the more prominent persons present.

Admired for Many Talents

People attended who not only admitted he was their screen hero but people who had known him to be their real hero as well. People here have regarded him as a soldier, a fighter, a disciple of the Gospel, a scientist, a writer, sportsman and an actor. He represented to production people the kind of man any industry is fortunate in possessing. They had gazed when they heard of his death.

Pallbearers were Harold Lloyd, Charles Farrell, George Hill, Douglas Fairbanks, Henry Thomson and David R. Fearles. The honorary pallbearers were Frank Beery, Dr. Frank R. Barham, William Randolph Hearst, O. K. Cole, Harry Carr, Harry Chandler, Lloyd Ingraham, Norma Kerry, Buster Keaton, Al and Re, Rockett, Dr. Edward S. Merrill, Joseph M. Schenck, Milton Sills, Walter Van Pelt, Dr. John Wilson and Tom Mix.

Lauds His Ideals

Dr. Arthur Lee Odell uttered a pronouncement of Thomson's worth and ideals, addressed to the widow, Francis Marion, who was certainly comforted as much by his address as by the efforts that doctors made to help her bear up in her bereavement.

Rev. W. E. Roberts and Rev. Paul Elliott, friends and college chums of Thomson, were beside Dr. Odell on the rostrum. A hymn was sung by John Roach, one of Thomson's closest friends.

While the organ whispered the funeral march, the casket was borne slowly down the aisle and the great assemblage rose as one person in final farewell to Fred Thomson.

Arthur Knorr Marries Ruth Grey

NEW YORK—Arthur Knorr, associated with the Capital theater for five years, married Ruth Grey recently. Mrs. Knorr appeared in George White's "Scandals."
January Brings Christie Talking Plays and Cohen Negro Stories

The first month of the new year brings release of the Christie All-Talking Plays which mark the most radically different step in short feature production ever made by that organization. A series of pictures adapted from stage plays, as well as the Octave Roy Cohen stories in their original Negro dialogue, will go to the exhibitors.

The first Paramount-Chrisite release will be the travesty sketch, "When Caesar Ran a Newspaper," by Waldemar Young and William Jacob. It features Rayna Hatton as Julius Caesar, who edits the "Morning After," and Sam Hardy, former Broadway comedy star. S. Sam Anthony, the press agent for Cleopatra. Also seen are Betty Lorraine as Cleopatra, Maude Trux as Mrs. Calpurnia Caesar, and Carl Stockdale as Busto Magneto, Caesar's chauffeur.

Next will be E. P. Heath's comedy playlet, "A Bird in the Hand," featuring Lois Wilson, with Jason Robards, Roy D'Arcy, and Dot Farley, directed by A. Leslie Pearce.

Cohen Negro Story Follows

Following "A Bird in the Hand" will be Octave Roy Cohen's "The Melancholy Dame," introducing dusky fictional characters made famous in Cohen's published stories, such as Florian Slappey, Mr. Permanent Williams and his wife, Jonquill; Mr. Webster Dill of Dill's Sinful Sinecopes; Sappho Dill, his dancing wife; and Lawyer Evans Chew; these directed by Arvid E. Gillstrom, and supervised by Alfred A. Cohn.

"Post Mortems," a comedy of bridge and burglars, by Charles Devine, playwright, will introduce Raymond Griffith, the whistling comedian, in a unique audition role.

All-Colored Casts Planned

The next of the Octave Roy Cohen stories to go into production will be "Music Hath Harms," the story of the celebrated colored cornetist, Roscoe Griggers, with his rival, Professor Alec Champagne, Sis Cal-...

Theme Songs Help Good Pictures

STAGE SHOWS

San Francisco Granada
Week Ending December 28

This week's stage attraction was in the form of a double bill and patrons found their money's worth, and more, in each offering. The music, too, was of the double bill variety, with Gino Severi taking over the duties of director in the pit and Henry Buse continuing on the stage.

The first stage show was in the form of a special Christmas offering, featuring a group of youngsters from Rose DeBell's Dancing Academy in "Eddies in Toyland." The curtain went up on a dreary street scene, with snow falling on a homeless waif, who finally curled up in a doorway to rest. A good fairy tripped in, touched the hungry child with her wand and her rags were transformed into the raiment, while the tenement disappeared and a beautiful interior took their place.

The door of a cabin opened at a touch of the wand and six girls trooped out and danced. A small harlequin swoke at a touch of the wand and played the accordion very effectively. A huge candy box opened and out tumbled a tiny tot, who sang. The outstanding feature of the act was the performance of a couple of girl acrobats of exceptional skill.

The waif sang a little song of gladness, a boy in the costume of old Italy offered a comedy number and a doll came to life and danced on a huge drum. The chorus came on to the music of "The Wooden Soldiers" and later danced to "Jingle Bells." The act came to an end with the entire company appearing with illuminated building blocks spelling out the greeting, "Merry Christmas."

Following the rendition of an illustrated song the Public review "Wonderful Girl" took the stage, and this also proved out of the ordinary, being in the form of a film, with a film in three acts. The first act was on the deck of a ship on the Atlantic and opened with an introduction in song form, introducing the principal characters and the Dave Gould Girls, who danced.

The second act depicted a horse scene in New York, with a band of musicians appearing to welcome Henry Buse, returning from a trip to Europe. A quartet offered music that must be called the superstition to stop work to listen.

The final act showed the orchestra pit and stage of a New York theater, with tired chorus girls doing a sitting down dance. Henry Buse led the orchestra through an arrangement of old-time music, contributing a trumpet solo, and Eddie Magill sang a song written by a local writer and entitled "The Gang's All Here." offering an encore, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love."

Al and Roy Samuels did their celebrated tap dance, Helene Heller and Frank Reid sang, and the presentation came to an end with the curtain at the rear riding on the exterior of a beautiful church, with a wedding party making its appearance. The company sang "Wonderful Girl!" as the curtain descended.

Philadelphia Stanley
Week Ending December 29

The spirit of Christmas was greatly in evidence at the Stanley this week and the program was one of the most delightful and nicely balanced that has been offered for some time. Two beautifully lighted Christmas trees decorated the stage and the divertissement was called "The Night Before Christmas."

The Stanley Symphony Orchestra presented a Christmas fantasy beginning with a medley of Christmas melodies and coming to a dramatic climax with "Song of the Night" in white ecclesiastical robes floating be-

Claude B. Ball, a veteran teacher of motion picture theatre organ music. The Ball Theatre Organ School in Chicago is a busy institution these days. If you don't believe it, try to interview Dainty, as Mr. Ball is familiarly known by his students, for more than one minute (sixty seconds). It just can't be done, for after all, business is business.

Writes Tucker Song

Sam Lerner, director of publicity and advertising for DeLizza, Brown & Henderson, the music publishers, has written a special comedy song with Ted Shapiro, called "My Conversational Man." Sophie Tucker, that well known exponent of hot songs, is featuring the number in her tour of vaudeville theaters.

Good Music Puts Film Across in Any Theatre

"Sonny Boy" Has Added to the Success of "The Singing Fool"

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

After many years of close association the music publishers and the motion picture producers have finally realized the importance of each others exploitation angles and are now set out to work together in more close harmony than ever before. The tremendous success that several theme songs have made in the past year has convinced the music publishers that the motion picture tie-up is an essential one for a quick exploitation of the song. The film producers also feel that a good theme song can do a great deal in popularizing their production as the sheet music and records are a direct means of advertising the picture into the homes.

About two years ago Sherman Clay & Company led the field when it published the theme songs to "What Price Glory," and "Seventh Heaven." Everyone knows the "Ramarama" and "Diane" were hit songs and in all probability would have become popular regardless of the film tie up. However the songs helped make the film popular and vice versa, which resulted in a complete huge success of both. Almost immediately after this incident the Remick Music Corporation came out with a song called "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" that was used as a theme to Lon Chaney's motion picture of the same name. The song became an overnight hit and the picture no doubt also reached the money making class, as all Chaney's pictures do.

Ramona Song and Film Success

When Delores Del Rio came out with "Ramona" it was learned that Leo Feist Inc. had a song of the same name that had been written long before the picture was ever thought of. It also happened that the song was of a hit calibre and for a long time it remained on top of the best sellers list throughout the country. The same publishers later issued the theme to "Lilac Time" called "Jeanenne, I Dream of Lilac Time" that almost surpassed the pace set by "Ramona."

The biggest theme song hit that was ever written is "Sonny Boy" from the "Singing

From Church to Theatre
Organist, Grierson's Record Rise

He first became popular through his organ recitals, which have been broadcast over the Radio Corporation of America stations. At present Grierson is also a recording organist for the Wurlitzer corporation company and has just completed a series of records that will be used on the outdoor organ in Roosevelt Park, Los Angeles. Another series will be used by Cecil DeMille in some of his motion picture productions for atmosphere emotions.

Grierson's training in the musical field began at an early age in England under the tutelage of Sir Sidney Nicholson, the famous Westminster Abbey organist in London.

New Theatre Opens in Chicago

Another deluxe picture house made its bow to the Chicago theatregoers last week when the Symphony theatre, at Chicago avenue and Cicero, opened its doors. The new house is a recent addition to the new firm operating under the name of the United Theatres Corporation and has a seating capacity of 2,000.

The policy of the house will be first run pictures with vaudeville. The Symphony Stereophones are on the stage and furnish the necessary musical accompaniment.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: At the Smoot theatre this week I used an original set of slides entitled, "Miniatures of 1929," or "The Past Year in Song."

Just a line of each number's chorus was used up to the last two which were used in full. Words were shown on the last two numbers only, the other numbers being played with appropriate slides something like a "remembrance" act.

Audience seemed to get quite a kick out of it. I forgot to mention that the songs were picked as the "hit" songs of the year from statistics of Berman's column in HERALD-WORLD.

Best regards of the season to you, and a successful year to you and the HERALD-WORLD. Sincerely, Wm. J. Cowdrey, Parkersburg, W. Va.

Exhibitor Puts Over Film with Theme Song

Manager L. Wagner of the Rialto theatre, Fort Dodge, Iowa, displayed a good sense of press agentry when the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer special "White Shadows in the South Seas" was played his house.

He arranged to have the theme song called "Flower of Love" placed at the Firemen's benefit dance, which was attended by a large audience. The song was sung to one of the firemen, who also made an announcement that the picture was playing the Rialto theatre. Similar announcements were also made at two of their regular dances which followed this one.

With the co-operation of the music stores, window-tie-ups were arranged with sheet music and records displayed. Two thousand bookmarks were also distributed through the public library.

A mailing list of over 500, covering teachers and principals in the public schools, were also circulated. Special one-sheets were placed on both sides of the buses during the engagement of the film.

The exhibits of other good exploitation stunts which were furnished by an M.G.M. publicity man assisted Wagner in putting over the South Seas islands play-off in first order.

Publix Page Boy Is a Fighting Fool

On the staff of the Brooklyn Paramount theatre is a young colored man named Alfred F. Jones, who has been with the Publix interests for the last seven years. For the benefit of those who do not know much about Jones we will give a few inside facts.

For the first three years he was chief page boy at the Rivoli theatre in New York, later going to the Rialto in a similar capacity, and before coming to the Brooklyn theatre he held the same post at the Paramount in New York.

One of Jones' chief sports is boxing, and he is responsible for training the Paramount theatre staff in the art of boxing. He has twenty fights to his credit, of which he has won all of them. At present the young man is chief assistant to the secretary of the managing director of the theatre.

Australia After F & M Stage Talent

Word is received from the vaudeville booking department of Panchon & Marco that starting in January several theatres in Australia on the Williamson circuit will be supplied with F & M acts.

Doe Howe, in charge of this department, will have as his name cards several Levy circuit, J. B. Mueller, representing the Australian interests, is now completing arrangements with Mr. Preise.

Screen Comic on Stage

After creating quite a success in the William Fox comedy "Plastered in Park," Sammy Cohen, the star, is now making personal appearances in picture houses and will open an eight weeks' engagement for Publix starting January 15.

Cohen will open in Chicago for Balaban & Katz in a specially written set by Lou Breslin, a well known Fox writer. After eight weeks in presentation houses Cohen will be starred in a Broadway Publix unit.

In Person

Buster West, the young man who almost coped the stellar honors in the last George White's Scan- dal, is the star attraction this week at the Granada theatre, Chicago. Buster is assisted by John West and took part in the Charles Kelsey New Year stage show. This is the beginning of a new series of names that Marks Brothers will present to Chicago theatregoers during 1929.

fore a cathedral window. The soft, misty light, the brilliant stained glass window, the dim figure and the volume made the picture one of the most effective numbers. As the scene closed the window was raised and angels and trinitarian stars appeared out side as the choir took up the strains of music.

The curtain rising for the holiday divertissement revealed a number consisting of the audience on a huge canopy bed on the stage, with eight heads raised expectantly from under the covers. They put on a large coat dress, lit a rag of sleigh bells and a sack of toys, which were distributed.

After a formal dance with the toy the Ballet settled themselves at the side of the stage as Santa sat on a high chair. He raised a small blond girl followed by a Brunette—The Hudson Wonders. And they were wonders, for these two children brought more applause than any other feature on the program. They were full of pep and vivacity and did stunts that seemed humbly impossible, yet all were done with grace and ease that brought a storm of applause. They turned somersaults in the air, they bent backwards until their hands touched the floor, standing on her hands one bent backwards until her feet touched the floor, then she walked on hands and feet across the stage and showed a flexibility and skill that outdid most of their seniors in acrobatic feats.

In the finale Alexei Robokovsky as Santa Claus sang with a rich velvet voice, while the ballet, in the Ballet hopped into bed and the curtains were drawn, leaving the audience with a feeling of having enjoyed a thoroughly satisfactory presentation.

The stage attraction was the Publix unit Steger's Marionettes in "Mary's Book of 1929." A score of midgets giving a little revue, in which the tiny performers offer specialties one after another much as seen on the vaudeville stage. They are fully as capable as artists of normal size and their program includes costume changes of forty seconds. The series are also marked by a steady flow of even engineering. There are many special scenes, and the costumes are dazzling and diversified. One scene in particular scores a great hit. The curtain rises to find the entire company scattered about the stage, and each is imitating a mechanical doll or toy. Each performer is slowly going through his or her certain motions over and over again, and the audience bursts into applause at every showing.

In the grand finals these well-trained elephants add a big plus to the other numbers. The chief of the forty minutes for grown-ups as well as children. The concert orchestra, under the direction of Elias Breeskin, renders a medley of Christmas hymns.

Dave Rubinoff, famous violinist and one of the few personality pit directors, offered an orchestral production called "Happy New Year." In this a series presentation with the Paramount, local burnt wood singing was used.

The "Perfect Girl," featuring Helen Macfadden, was the stage offering. Bennie Krueger made his entrance and offered an explanation of the show.

Two of the "Four Cheerleaders" then did a telephone skit that was pleasing. Next, a rehearsal scene with the Foster Girls dancing and singing special songs for "The Perfect Girl." A "Syncopated Cocktail" with the girls shaking the cocktails as Luella Lee danced in a red robe.

Dave Rubinoff, entering to a fine hand, next played "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" in every manner and time a violin can be played. Dave is a favorite here (usually he takes one or two encores), but as the show was a long one he beggared off, amid much applause.

Luella Lee followed in a huge fog coat, sang and danced pleasingly to that new cap, "Dolm' the Razcoon." She was received well. The Four Cheerleaders followed with some popular tunes, which they sang harmoniously and to a good hand.

Helen Macfadden and the Foster Girls next offered some "Setting Up" exercises and bug punching that was well done and received generous applause. Joe Pena, a funny fellow, that had the house roaring at his gags and comedy singing, received a good hand. Helen Macfadden and the Foster Girls then have a race on "Pedometers," to learn who is the "Perfect Girl." The Four Cheerleaders sang "Performer Girl" as ensemble enter, and Helen Macfadden in frame background makes a pleasing picture that closes this show.

Chicago Chicago
Week Ending December 28

This week the Chicago theatre celebrated the holiday by staging an elaborate Christmas festival opening stage. The stage show was called "The Land of Make Believe" and had over sixty people in the cast, including little ones. Several scenes from fairyland and childhood were reproduced with much success as entertaining value.

Among the cast the most outstanding in individual performing were Shannon's Playtime Frolics, a novelty acrobatic child set, and Geraldine and Joe, two little totes who performed like regular trouper. One of the most impressive scenes was the old woman in the shoe.

The entire show was practically given by young folks and presented every conceivable form of entertainment that grown artists are capable of performing. The hand accorded this presentation was in evidence by the appreciation and enjoyment was an admirable piece of work on the part of the theatre management value.

The Chicago Theatre Symphony Orchestra presented one of its regular orchestral productions in the afternoon of "The Land of Make Believe." The orchestra assembled by voice, featuring Luella Frieria, a capable soprano. This was a Spitnay production and directed by one of his assistants.

Detroit Michigan
Week Ending December 28

And we hope you had a merry one, too! Of course, part of the stagehow at the Michigan this week had to be devoted to Christmas entertainment, particularly for the kiddies.

So a whole group of baby stage stars was imported for an extravaganza entitled, "In King Cole's Court." Charlie Jenks, Detroit's favorite tenor, was Jolly old King Cole. He sang a song as introduction and then introduced the various kiddies.

The group was out, and Baby Dorothy, Creighton Kissen and Luela Keeley, Zivin Twins and Herby Shey. All of them were garbed as characters in some of the Mother Goose rhymes.

Just which was which, as far as names go, escaped this reviewer, so we will list them by their characters. Feature honors went to Little Boy Blue, who we suspect was Herby Shey. A younger of about 12 or 13, that little fellow was very hokey and also sing. We predict he will make his mark some day.

Jack and Jill were a couple of clever child acrobats, who gave a good stump of rhythm and tumble work with a vest that brought forth many boisterous guffaws from Father Christmas, a youngster in which he interpolated "Sundown." He earned another encore.

The show closed with Paul Ash leading the boys in a special arrangement of "Rhapsody in Blue." This was a fine show and a great improvement since it played at the Paramount in New York.

Kansas City Pantages

Goldman's Midget Folios was given a prominent position on the stage program at the Pantages. The number of its five individuals presented its act much better on the order of the "master of ceremonies" type and went over well with large audiences all week.

Brady and Mahoney have a Dutch comedy dialogue number their hits in the last few weeks which could be included in a revue—vocal, dancing and acrobatic number.

The Stanley Brothers and Attrum, billed as "Con- tinuous Family Show" was a real acrobatic and aerial number that is a bit out of the ordinary insomuch as ability of the cast is concerned.

Lucas-Chile, the national Pantages orchestra rend- der popular selections as the encore.

New Orleans Saenger
Week Ending December 28

With applause that shook the theatre Ben Black, personality leader, was welcomed back to New Orleans Saturday with one of the best Public shows of the season, which even the most critical screen could go without. For "Deep This Way" is a true from any angle the spectator may happen to view it. As seen here, of course, the future chorus, six strikingly handsome Foster Girls and six of them, are seen. plunge, Bobo's, was also good, Bobo who danced, with perfect rhythm, knew how to wear their clothes and seemed to be in front of the audience—nothing is more characteristic of the early part of the season seemed entirely ignorant of... The Four Dictators, a quartet, which Ben Black rehearsed himself in New York, sang beautifully and with music and magic.

Bree Sarthe, featured as a blue singer, was the press department claim.

Frances Wills is some dancer and her acrobatic stunts were particularly pleasing, especially to those of the masculine gender who are beginning to count the hairs on the top of their heads.

Of the hit of the show, however, from the angle of audience, was Bobo's "Magic Ring," and the latter a dog, who did some very clever comedy juggling—Bobo is just as good as either Bob or Bob, though he recebered something with smaller hands and as he has no domestic expenses it is probably just as well. Aside from the odd ball Ben Black, the show was at its best when they put on their at yet if they would in the tramp rags, get a clean shave and look like Christians—the ladies would take more kindly to them.

Lottie Howell sang "Same Silver Moon," which was really better than many of the songs that have appeared on the Tulane stage in the past few years. Miss Howell received several encores.

Ben Black introduced to New Orleans his latest song success, "Rude That Bloom in the Night," with full stage band accompaniment, assayed by John Hammond at the orchestrations.

Don Filippini arranged a program of Christmas carols which was a great hit. One special scene was a choir boy at the entrance of a church in full vestments rendering a special number. Taken all in all, the Don's arrangements were very appropriate.
ORGAN SOLOS

Edward K. House (Chicago Uptown) presented a special Christmas solo with lyrics written to the tune of "Ring a Ring o'Rosies." When offering a special Christmas tree slide, House explained to the audience that he was present to play the piano. The house first began by going in front of the audience and began to serenade the crowd with "I Can't Give You Anything But Love," and then followed with "Rainbow Round My Shoulder," which was the best received of the night. House sang the last number, and for some reason or other, his voice became a bit husky. This solo did not receive the same reaction as the others, however, and the solo nevertheless received a very good hand.

Kenneth T. Wright (Mecomichle, Mich., Lloyd's) used in "Jingle Bells" at the Great Lakes Bowl. He then continued the Stahl color symphony, "In a Persian Market." An accomplished member of the orchestra was the same name was written by the house music supplied many interesting movements to the beauty of the film.

Harold Daniels (Buckingham Chicago) offered a straight solo called "A Christmas Vision." It contained the melody of the Christmas Carol. A high-light of Daniels' offering came at the site of the solo when a small Christmas tree, on either side of the orchestra, was lit up, and this combined with the beauty of the console decorated for Christmas. It was a perfect showpiece of an artist. Daniels then played two popular songs, "Sweetheart On Parade" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love." Love songs are always well received, and Daniels sang with great enthusiasm, as they always do for this organization. This solo also received a good hand. Indefinable style, and one of the reasons for this young man's increasing popularity in the field of solo organ playing.

Dick Liebert (Pittsburgh, Pa., Penn.) featured a novelty which suggested to the audience that all he cared for in the world was a gift was appliance. Also introduced "Roses of Yesterday," "Here's Lightning Round My Shoulder."" Dick Liebert's performance was very well received, and the audience gave him a hearty hand.

Preston Sellers (Chicago Oriental) introduced the next number "My Merry Christmas." Because it was Christmas week, one thing that is noticeable about Sellers is he always chooses for this season the best of seasonal songs. After the announcement was flashed on the screen that the stage show was to begin, Sellers was called back for an encore. His popularity at this show was nearly 100 per cent.

Jesse Crawford (New York Paramount). In keeping with the holiday spirit Crawford used an en- thusiastic "Jingle Bells" as his last number. He offered only two numbers in his concert this week, but they were very well played and received with great enthusiasm. His popular number "A Precious Little Thing Called Home," and his second number "Sonny Boy," were a big hit. Crawford received a well-deserved round of applause for his last number, and the audience gave him a hearty hand.

Bernard Cowham (Floating, Floating, N. Y.). Bernard's dynamic personality has caused a town that has never had community singing to sing as if they had been doing it for years. Cowham's first stunt was called "Hello Flushing," and with the use of special lyrics he introduced himself and community singing here. His first number, which was well played, was called "Sonnny Boy," but they were a little shy. The second number, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," lighten up the mood of the girls to sing, was better. "Old Man Sunshine" had every one in the house singing, and Cowham was a big hit with this. This week Cowham was called to town and the town is already talking very favorable of him.

Roland Copeland (Low's Prospect, Floating, N. Y.) played a solo of the "Girl's Life," a special song written for the "Girl's Life." He started off with a straight solo, this week, Copeland has long been a favorite here, and after the house music began. It is easy to see why the audience was pleased. By the end of the week, when all tempo suit them all, you are getting regular requests for the same song and so it goes on for weeks and weeks endlessly.

Benjamin H. Murtach (Brooklyn Paramount). Called his solo this week "New Year's Resolution." He began his first number with a complete melody, and so it goes on for weeks and weeks endlessly. "You’re probably cockoo by now, reading all this and I know what you’re thinking—this boy Stanley wants an extra edition of the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD printed for him big time, and android.

THE THEATRE

Your Suggestions Are Invited on Ads

A new service to exhibitors is launched in this issue by "The Theatre." You already are helping one another through this department in many directions—by the House Organ Exchange and the interchange of ideas it affords, through the publication of your letters telling how you have put over certain pictures, through reproduction of newspaper ads which you have used, and in countless other directions. Now comes the new service, in which you may share if you so desire.

Frequently the department is asked by its readers to comment on advertisements and various ideas submitted for just that purpose. That comment the department gladly and sincerely gives, and if each page contains only one helpful suggestion we think it still has accomplished something, though we are not satisfied with that, of course. But we believe that even more can be achieved if we all participate in offering comments.

We take for granted that each exhibitor will welcome any suggestions presented by fellow-exhibitors. That's the essence of the department, or rather half of the essence, because we all are operating on a principle that by helping others we in turn will be helped by them.

From time to time, and only as proposed by the one who sends in the subject matter, we will reproduce a newspaper ad or other paper, offer our own comment as requested, and follow up by printing the suggestions which you yourselves offer. You all are keeping a file of "The Theatre," of course.

At least, most of you are, judging from letters received. When an exhibitor's comment is printed, reference will be made to the preceding issue in which the original copy appeared. Thus you easily can refer to your file and compare notes. It is important, as a time saver, that you refer to the issue in question when you send in your comment.

Tyas Asks Suggestions

All set? All right, then, let's go. This is possibly a bit unorthodox to start with the accompanying copy, in that it will be a bit of a surprise to its author, P. E. Tyas, manager of the Liberty theatre, Amherstburg, Ontario, in that he has not been warned of this new departure. However, we feel certain not only that we are violating no confidence but also that Tyas will welcome this move.

* * *

"We are regular readers of all the 'Herald-World' columns," writes Tyas, "especially 'The Theatre,' from which we derive many pointers and helps in various ways.

"With this letter we are enclosing a clipping of our Christmas advertisement and would be glad to have you criticize it, from every angle. As is the case with most small town exhibitors, we are somewhat hampered with having a small town paper and also a week's program to advertise, which cramp individuality.

"Any suggestions you make will be welcomed. Wishing you continued success with your very interesting column in a very interesting paper."

Now, then, folks, cast your eye on the ad on this page. In one respect this is a particularly bad one, because taking into account the two handicaps mentioned by Tyas, there is little in the way of suggestion to offer. We like the betterer and particularly the separation of the two black matrices, in addition to the generous use of white space.

Italic Type Would Help

We believe the type selection could have been bettered. For example, we note there is not one line of italic type in the entire ad. There could have been changes to italic type that would have set off the ad considerably. We feel confident that the printer who set up the ad has at least some italic type, very likely in the families of type used. One place in particular that italic would have helped is in the line "Comedy—Eagles of the Night, Chap. 6." We take it that the rule above that line was on the mat, though of course that could have been routed off.

But the chief point is that this line is in the same size and type as the next line which announces the change of program. In reading newspaper ads we all have been struck often with the fact that the various programs are not separated. That becomes confusing to the reader and patron.

Now then, what do the rest of us think about it? Tyas and "The Theatre" both welcome your comment.

Telegram on Censors Puts Over "Red Dance"

Manager R. S. Roddick of the Capitol theatre at London, Ontario, in exploiting rather unorthodox chid three costumer space for the reproduction of the following telegram from D. O. Byrne, booker in the Toronto film exchange:

"If Dolores Del Rio's new picture 'The Red Dance' is released without cutting by board you will have it for London to open Monday, December 17, exactly as shown in New York with complete sound and music accompaniment. Doubtful, however, if it will be passed without cutting. If they cut it, then it cannot be shown as a sound picture. Picture rather daring, so be careful in advertising. If it gets through complete it will be the best possible bet to bring in pre-Christmas crowds, as picture is splendid romance of strong drama, big scenes, luxurious settings and packed with action and great thrills from start to finish. Original advertising held by Customs as too hot for Ontario, but am rushing you special material from our own studies which will have to do. Will advise tomorrow if picture gets past board. Regards."

Police Chief Host
To 3,000 Children
At Theatre Party

More than 3,000 pupils of the Indianapolis public and parochial schools were guests of Claude M. Worley, chief of police, recently at the Palace theatre. The party was given particularly for members of the Indianapolis school patrol and other pupils who wrote in response to an appeal for improved safety conditions among children in the city. The appeal was made in radio talks.

The theatre party was arranged through the courtesy of Wallace Allen, manager of the theatre. Three Movietone vaudeville acts, an "Our Gang" comedy reel and a news reel were shown. Lester Huff, organist, gave a special program of interest to children.

"Human Fly" Exploits
"Tarzan" Chapterplay

When Manager George Stevens at the Willoughby theatre, Willoughby, Ohio, booked Universal's "Tarzan the Mighty," he planned to step and get all the money the serial was entitled to. The master move in his campaign was the hiring of a "human fly" who, dressed in a huge ape suit, climbed the front of the theatre, all the high trees in town and telephone poles. Needless to say the "ape man" had a gang of kids following him all the time. And they all came to see "Tarzan the Mighty" at the theatre too. Then Stevens took the "ape man" on the top of his sedan advertising the serial with banners on the car, and ran miles out into the country each way from town. As a result, the Saturday matinee business, the time of "Tarzan's" run, is far ahead of the Sunday receipts.

Mothers Like Kiddie Revue at Theatre

A novelty for mothers was staged recently by the Olympic theatre in Watertown, N. Y., when one night was set aside for a kiddies' fashion revue. With children acting as models, fashion's latest creations were shown. The theatre played a good card in staging a fashion revue with living models throughout the week in connection with a "Suburban Week" sponsored by the merchants of the city and which brought thousands from the rural sections of northern New York.

Theatre Aviation Beacon
Another Road to Goodwill

An aviation beacon has been installed atop the new Oakland (Cal.) theatre and is now guiding pilots of night flying planes to airports in the Greater San Francisco field.

Airport officials pronounced the beacon practical and the theatre management applied to the Department of Commerce for permission to operate a private air to aeronautics. The beacons includes 125 feet of Claud Neon tubing, mounted on a bevel glass ball.

Hendricks’ Card

Both Ring the Bell

William L. Hendricks, managing director of the Capitol and Olympic theatres at Steubenville, Ohio, writes us about an idea put over in exploiting "The Cameraman." But before going into that, let’s take just a moment to call his Christmas Greeting card one of the bestliners of those received by "The Theatre" from its many readers.

Cut into a black and white comedy sketch is a strip of film in four frames, reading "Not a Vitaphone Talkie but talking just the same, and Wishing You a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous 1929. William L. Hendricks Capitol-Olympic Theatres, Steubenville, O."

But here’s the exploitation done on "The Cameraman" by Hendricks:

"Several days before the opening of the picture, arranged with the Chrysler people to furnish us with a new roadster with the top removed; this car was bannered with signs reading: WATCH FOR THE CAMERAMAN, carrying also, on the sides, smaller signs reading THE CAMERAMAN CHOOSES THE NEW CHRYSLER. This car was driven about town several days before the opening of the picture, with a man, costumed as a cameraman, with a motion picture camera set up in the rumble seat, apparently taking shots of the town and the Christmas crowds.

"Police permission was obtained to stop the car wherever desired, attracting plenty of attention and apparently taking pictures. The day before the opening of the picture the posters were changed to read SEE BUSTER KEATON AS THE CAMERAMAN AT THE CAPITOL and Dates. Several hundred feet of film made on the first day we used the gag were run during the run of the picture."

Colleen Moore Pictures
In Contest at the Circle

Theatre goers who have followed the career of Colleen Moore and who visit the Circle theatre at Indianapolis were attracted to the latest contest at that playhouse. In conjunction with the theatre, an Indianapolis newspaper printed a collection of pictures of Colleen Moore as she appeared in a number of her pictures. The theatre offered awards for naming the screen play from which each picture was taken.

“On Trial” to Sell as Book
NEW YORK—“On Trial,” Warner Brothers all-talking picture, will be sold in book form by Grosset & Dunlap, publishers.
DEAR FOLKS:

I've seen "Simba." Of course I've seen "Chang" and the other four-footed brethren, too, but that's another story. "Simba" is the big boy of the moment. A really big boy, although not really very good company. If it is all right with you I'd just as soon meet the fellow at no closer quarters. And thank you, Mrs. Martin Johnson, for plaguing the beast when you did. Another leap and he'd have been in my lap.

That's the sort of picture "Simba" is. The animals are right in your lap most of the time. And there are plenty of animals. In fact, many of the supporting quadrupeds were more interesting to me than the star, but of course that's my inexperience.

More interesting, for instance, was the elephant with the palm leaf ears. I could learn to like this guy. And the giraffes were nice, too. I suppose that's why the circuses have so many of them. And I've always been strong for the zebra, a horse with a sense of the artistic and the carriage of a lady. But of course the lion is the lion's share of the emphasis for the good reason that he's the boss of the jungle and I suppose I can do nothing about it.

The picture is great animal study stuff and you might as well count the natives under the heading too while you're at it. In fact I think these were, after all, the most interesting of the lot. And all, of course, are good

"THE AIR CIRCUS"

I CONFESS that I don't know whether the Merrwell Boys are still at it (Frank and Dick), but if they are I'm sure they're doing things like Arthur Lake, Sue Carol and their boy and girl friends do in "The Air Circus." All the picture lacks to be genuine Merrwell stuff is a villain. Probably, too, that is all the picture lacks to be bang-up entertainment. Somehow it isn't quite.

The story's about a couple of boys who go to school to learn the flight business and do so. Sue Carol is in view as the chief motivating influence of one of them. The other had a brother who died over there; also air fear. And a mother who is performed by Louise Dresser as well as this particularly unpopular type of mother could be performed by anybody in these States. (I wept for as well as with her in the weeping scene, which the youngsters in the theatre could not seem to take seriously however hard they tried.)

Probably I shouldn't have seen the thing with a young audience (most of those present were minors) because the young are so keenly perceptive of phoney sentiment. They simply sneezed at the sad spots, rounding into true juvenile form at the finish and applauding just as though everything had been all right. I guess that about describes "The Air Circus."

"THE HAUNTED HOUSE"

I'VE had a terrible time with these spook pictures. For this reason: A good many years ago I saw the stage production of "The House of a Thousand Candles" and thought it splendid. I saw it several times. And in all the years that have gone by I have looked at the various successive spook plays and picture with that early classic (to my mind) as a model. None were ever so good as the original, to me, and I suppose none ever could be. And so, when I had sat through "The House of a Thousand Candles" (as a child, it doesn't seem sensitive to me either.)

That much for my personal reaction. And the reasons. But I'm of the opinion that the fact of the matter is quite different. I have the increasingly firm conviction that "The Haunted House" is better than any of the other spook pictures. Because, quite plainly, it is just like "The House of a Thousand Candles" — without the candles—and that has always represented to me the best of all spook plays.

In view of these contradictory paragraphs, it seems quite plain that I have nothing positive to utter about "The Haunted House." Therefore I'll say no more about it.

"WEST OF ZANZIBAR"

ON this last day of 1928 I respectfully reissue my semi-occasional bulletin to Mr. Lon Chaney. As you must recall, if you read this page at all, it is my custom on these occasions to tell Mr. Chaney that we ought to forget the horror permanently and become the exceedingly brilliant actor that he is. In this wise—

Mr. Chaney's big moments have been "Tell it to the Marines" and "While the City Sleeps." In the former he wore no makeup, save a Marine's uniform. In the latter, none at all. Now why in the name of—of, say, Lon Chaney, go back into the muck and mire of "Congo" and do this "Dead Legs" guy? Who would rather see this bozo than the detective of "While the City Sleeps" Is it the European market demand? I doubt it. I think it's—but no matter. The point is that Lon Chaney is too good an actor to make a mere stunt man of himself. It's like Lindbergh enacting Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Maybe he could do it better than Barrymore, but whodunnit wants him to? (Come on, Lon, and come clean.)

"THE LOVES OF CASSANOVA"

KNOW about this guy Cassanova? (Use plain envelope if you choose.) And about the big time he had in and around Europe, if you believe his account of it? (Don't tell me you haven't heard.) Well, here he is, a Continental impersonation in color and English, and he's the same guy.

They ran this at the United Artists theatre the week before Christmas. The United Artists theatre, patronized by the smartest and probably the most adult crowd in Chicago, was exactly the place to run it. Possibly the week before Christmas was exactly the right time, for then if ever it takes word-of-mouth advertising to get the nickels into the till. And yet I'm not at all sure that Chicago, carefully shielded by a censor board that still believes in fairies, is exactly the right city for the picture.

The picture is very debly made. I'd say that nearly half the footage is given over to captions, which are in Mons. Cassanova's own inimitable phrasing (as cannily caught by a translator who knows his adverbs.) In between these captions there is much pursuing of women, none of whom seem to require a great deal of pursuing, and everything is so nicely tinted and so swiftly dashed off that it makes first rate pastime. (That is, if the gentleman on your left isn't the minister and the lady on your right is modern, too.)

Personally, and of course I can be nothing but personal in a matter of this kind, I think the picture is excellent stuff and hope to see more similarly courageous effort. Personally, too, I think by good friend Tragsdorf of Nellsville, Wis., not to mention J. C. Jenkins, will petition the editor for my release when—and if—they read of my having said so.

Another Opinion on Posters
MILWAUKEE, WIS.—To the Editor: I was particularly interested in a letter which was published in your "Letters From Readers" section under the name of Glennie, director of advertising and publicity, Fox Film Corporation, New York City, in your issue of November 27, 1929.

I was of particular interest to me for the reason that Mr. Allvine expressed the belief that the illustrated art work and poster ideas contained in an article by Al Nelson in reference to the work of L. G. MacDaniel, poster artist at the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, not only lacked originality but was a plagiarization of art ideas that originated, after all, is but the culmination of ideas that have been cultivated through the experience of contact with fellow theatremen. However, I am glad to state that there is nothing in Mr. MacDaniel's make-up that would prompt him to "harm the brain-child" of another and this was my reaction when he worked out his "Jazz Mad" posters.

According to the routine of theatre work, there are weeks when heavy schedules do not allow of sufficient time to delve into purely original work. On occasions of this kind he goes to his "morgue" or reference library, where he finds ideas that are more applicable to his mind. When time is less pressing, he works out his own ideas. I know, from experience, that this is a routine that every ambitious artist follows.

In fact, I will venture the opinion that should Mr. Miller or Mr. Dickson of the Fox art department, be questioned about the originality of many of their outstanding ideas they would say to Allvine and himself as most any outstanding artist would say, that they had benefited themselves not only by their own ideas but by those of many other artists they were influenced by.

May I conclude by stating that Mr. MacDaniel has gained his rating as one of the leading poster artists in the country through his own unselfish ability and his desire to consider and value the work of his fellow artists.—John Meaka, exploitation manager, Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., Milwaukee, Wis.

Trazes, then Phil, Galley, the Rabbi, or whoever he happens to think of. But then some of these we've been getting the rest of us posted about what they are doing so maybe it will stir them up. Now take me for instance, I always drop a line once a year so he leaves alone.

Well, sir, I am very much interested in the different versions the boys have, as to sound, and of course the opinions concerning the pictures, flivers or what have you. But I agree with them mostly that pictures are not enough to pull them in or recently, at least, in a decent crowd only when I have vaudeville or an added attraction, so I guess pictures are passe.

People have been led, so many times, to believe many pictures were supers. They were over expectant and after sitting through a rapid repetition of the same story, I guess most of us will have to give them something just pictures. But where are we to go to get a line of equipment now that the sound, no margin for us when we use a sound picture as the producers see another way to bleed us foolish people who will pay any price for the privilege of being part of the firsts to buy.

I am not in favor of those that are interested in sound is this will or that equipment allow us to use the different pictures from the many producers, or when we try to put them in one certain equipment that will allow all productions to be used on a chosen make.

It is useless to us to buy a Simplex, a Powers, and all of the other projectors to use certain productions that this or that producer may tie to, and it is the same with sound equipment. They cannot expect us to equip with the many different sound devices just because they cannot get together.

As it stands now, it would be very foolish to buy anything until sound equipment is stabilized, put within reach of all with the product to be furnished so that we can live, and to be assured that there will be some service guaranteed by the company.

Possibly this problem is one for Will Hays and Abram F. Myers to concentrate on and bring the problem as far as possible on some form of contract that will not only protect the producer but will also protect the buyer of pictures having sound.

If you are tired of the manufacturers of sound equipment offering different product forms for the choice payment of the picture you insist on, I am sure all exhibitors would sponsor.

I believe the producers are tied up tight by the manufacturer of sound equipment at present, and that it will take a combination of producers and exhibitors working hand in hand to get an agreement that will give all the boys on Wall street that they may have in every channel of this industry just now.

Says He's Exhibitor's Son; Bad Checks, 2 Years in Pen
(Special to the Herald-World)

SHARON SPRINGS, Kan., Jan. 2.—A two-year sentence in the penitentiary was imposed on R. H. Emert, convicted of passing bad checks on several exchanges and stores and representing himself to be the son of W. E. Ward, manager of the Strand theatre. He is not a son of Ward.

Talking of Airplane Patrol To Keep Planes from Studios
(Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Jan. 2.—In order to insure the safety of tricky pictures, an airplane patrol has been started to keep stray airplanes from flying over the M. G. M. Studios. Auto traffic was sufficiently controlled by the use of the picture "Hallelujah," and now the airplanes will have to be halted if they continue to disturb the singing choruses in "Hallelujah."

Board of Trade Gives Town New Theatre to Draw Country Business
(Special to the Herald-World)

GALT, Ont., Jan. 2.—The new Board of Trade, numbering 353 active members, has launched a theatre project for the town because of the belief that country trade was being expended at the rate of $10,000 annually at the present theatre facilities. Within two weeks the new board found that the local issue of stock for the theatre had been oversubscribed and they are planning to go into stock as a matter of good business. R. O. McCullough, Galt manufacturer, is directing the theatre scheme.

M. E. Cory Elected Head Of San Francisco Board
(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—The San Francisco Board of Trade has elected the following officers:

President, M. E. Cory, Pathe; vice-president, J. J. Patridge, Paramount; secretary-treasurer, W. E. Matthews, F.B.O. These officers, with G. P. Faris, M.G.M.; J. M. Miller, Warner, and Charles Muchman of First National, comprise the board of governors. Milton A. Nathan, who has been counselor for the organization since it was formed, and who has served as secretary for several years, continues as counselor. The retiring president, G. C. Parsons, was presented with an appropriate gift in appreciation of his efforts.

Children Are Barred From "Wedding March"
(Special to the Herald-World)

CALGARY, Jan. 2.—Practically the first restriction on a sound film in Canada, a picture an official source was experienced at the Capitol theatre when "The Wedding March" was shown. The production was passed by the Alberta moving picture censor but with the proviso that it should only be presented before adult audiences. Manager Hazza therefore had to announce that no children would be admitted to any performance.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Verdicts on Films in Language of Exhibitor

Columbia

THE WARNING: Jack Holt—Fair program.—J. L. Seltor, Selma theatre, Selma, Col.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF THE STRONG: Special cast—Good drama, but the paper, with the exception of the 11-27 review, did not comment. Whether under or over it is good, and pictures are usually O. K., but they don’t draw.—Right Grist, Theatresnith theatre, Columbus Falla, Mont.—General patronage.

THE SCARLET LADY: Special cast—November 27-28-29. A very good picture, pleased everbody. A lot of their pictures are very good and you don’t have to put a mortgage on anything to buy them. —L. A. Farrill, Orpheum theatre, Rock Valley, la.—Small town patronage.

FBO

CHARGE OF THE GAUCHOS: Francis X. Bushman—Very pleasing picture and one of the best prints we have run for some time. Eight reels. — B. E. Faehner, Electric theatre, Curtis, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE PERFECT CRIME: Special cast—35th. December 14-15. Tested and bought as a special. Only a mediocre program picture. Film dark. Glad I didn’t raise admission. As a whole it didn’t satisfy. Queen ending that didn’t quite let my patrons know what it was all about. Seven reels.—E. G. Aerts, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

DANGER STREET: Warner Baxter—B. A. A good underworld picture. Will they ever stop making underworld pictures? There are too many of this type of picture. Do not draw here. Six reels.—W. L. Hill, Orpheum theatre, Rock Valley, la.—Small town patronage.

SINNERS IN LOVE: Olive Borden—51st. December 13. I was extremely bored all through this picture and so were my patrons, if I am any judge. I’ve never read True Story Magazine but if it is not better than this picture based on one of its stories, I haven’t missed anything. Six reels.—H. B. Grice, Albin Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

TERROR MOUNTAIN: Special cast—49th. December 15. This is a good entertaining picture. Pleased my Saturday crowd.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE CHANCES ARE

THAT 1929 will be Better.

Hopefulness, of course, is such a human trait that it is often based on inaccurate judgment. But it seems to us that to expect in 1929 a settlement of many of the problems which have worried the average exhibitor during 1928, is not responding to mere hopefulness.

For one thing, 1929 brought a sudden change in the film business—synchronization. The more mighty exhibitors have been able to meet this change at least satisfactorily, for they have been able to install the necessary equipment.

But even now there are signs that this equipment will soon become available to the smaller exhibitor. Naturally, producers want it to be, so that their market may be larger. It is therefore only logical to expect that they will find a way to enlarge their market as soon as possible, and since there have been a few months for sound to grow to its present proportions, a similar time, it may be reasoned, should allow it to grow within the reach of everyone.

Then, too, in 1928 there were a number of sections of the country where local economic conditions were poor. Unemployment was a problem rather generally, while the coal fields, Eastern textile districts, the central Midwestern farming sections and the Mississippi flood area, furnished special examples of economic depression. Add to these whatever you may think of the economic influence of a Pre-sidential campaign and you will get indisputable data in favor of hopefulness for 1929, since most of these conditions have been or are on the way to being cleared up.

There is also the belief that the public has been “getting away from picture shows.” Perhaps. The public does things like that in almost every field. But the screen has something vital to offer—the eternal story, told in the best way man has yet found to tell a story. Motion pictures are not far. So the public, if it went, will be back—yes, it should be sometime in 1929.

—GEORGE SCHUZT.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE: Special cast—O. K. Lewis and a batch of other quiets, makes a rather aboveaverage fair-business. —Charles H. Richelieu, Richelieu theatre, Bellefonte and Clearfield, Pa.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—As good a picture as anyone could ask for, with Colleen Moore in her best. The air raid in this picture is the best that I have ever seen in real picture from the first scene to the final fade-out. The picture was over-sold and practically only grossed film rental. But not the fault of the theatre, Eleven—J. W. B. Bedwell, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—50th. November 17-18. Good picture but too much like “Wings” to follow after. Don’t be afraid to step on it, it is worth while. Twelve—W. T. Maickill, Ace theatre, Lake Providence, La.—Small town patronage.

THE WARE CASE: Special cast—Foreign picture, making its debut. Be sure you advertise it as such. Not a bad picture.—Charles H. Richelieu, Richelieu theatre, Bellefonte and Clearfield, Pa.—General patronage.

DO YOUR DUTY: Charlie Murray—Now then, when we get ready to show burlesque to the family trade, we will be ready for such pictures as this. Until then, this sort of rot is out. Anyone with any intelligence will kick themselves for sitting through this gosh darn thing. —W. H. Brennen, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY: Special cast—December, 1928. Don’t be fooled with this. A total loss. Grossed $5.50 the second night. Pass it up, it’s a lemon.—Younk Boh, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mo. —Small town patronage.

HOMEMADE: Johnny Hines—December 4-5. Good program picture, but I can’t get anybody to come and see this guy. Seven reels.—William E. Tragorado, Traga theatre, Nellsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE WHIP: Special cast—Not as good as the old release, just fair. May get by as a program.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

LOST AT THE FRONT: Charlie Murray—A very good rendition of the "Oshins and Zeller" type with George Sidney and Charlie Murray at their best. Ran this on my 10-cent bargain night to a fair audience. Pleased all who came—Twelve—W. T. Maickill, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

THE STRANGE CASE OF CAPTAIN RAMPER: Special cast—December 9. Forestr picture with an unusual theme. Not a particularly interesting title and did not draw so good but pleased those who did.—We hope first rational use the rest of its stories in America.—Carl W. Veseth, Palace theatre, Malta, Mont.—General patronage.

First National

SCARLET SBS: Richard Barthelmess—60th. December 21-22. Here is a real rough one with action and thrills. It is good, but not "The Noose." Seven reels.—W. J. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, la.—General patronage.
DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

MUNCIE, IND., December 24th, 1928.

As I am writing this before being Christmas Day, before tomorrow and before I have any idea of what is going to happen to me tomorrow, I want to say how much I enjoyed your column yesterday. You make me laugh and you make me think and you make me feel better. Thank you.

I am looking forward to Christmas Day with great anticipation. I know that it will be a day of joy and happiness for all of us. I hope that you will have a wonderful Christmas Day as well. I know that I will be thinking of you and wishing you all the best.

Yours truly,

public's interest in motion pictures. People seem to be indifferent; they seem to have lost that spirit of enthusiasm that was at one time manifest throughout the entire country. How to remedy this is the problem that confronts the industry today.

We doubt if good pictures can be made and sold for any less money than they are today. Good pictures do not seem to solve the problem, although it is a great help. We recently visited a theatre that had just finished a three-day run of "THE KING OF KINGS," and the operator told us that he lost money on the picture each day he ran it.

Exploitation does not bring the answer. We have seen many small theatres that expended more than $1000 in book-in at the start. In the early days, when we had to buy. In the smaller towns that are holding their own are those that can play Sundays, and a business that only pays one day of the week and loses the six other days is not a very pictures to be able to go on fast going out of the business.

Eastern Indians seems to be the worst off with respect to poor business of any territory we have visited recently. The crop condition is fairly good, the factories seem to be running full time in most places, and general business conditions do not seem to be so bad, and yet attendance at the theatres is something terrible, so one must look for the solution somewhere else. We cannot account for conditions. The small theatres are playing as good pictures as are played in the larger houses, and in many instances are playing them as the larger houses, and yet the attendance is gradually falling off. If someone will point out a remedy he will make the greatest Christmas offering he could possibly bestow.

Last week we called on Bill Brenner, who operates the Colony theatre at Winchester, Ind. We did not know that he was the son of Jink Brenner, who whom we used to coon watermelons with back in 1879 in Newton county, Ind., until we called on a friend at Bluffton who advised us of this fact. We hope that the next time Bill sees his dad that he will inform him of this and will give him whatever kindness regards, and we wish him to say also that we still maintain that there was many a missing watermelon laid at our door for which we were not responsible—we always took our out to the woodshed—and that the Christmas spirit impels us to forgive him for taking our girl home from the spelling school that night.

When we haven't anything of importance to write about, as is the case today, and since we are supposed to fill just so much space, we feel the urge to break into poetry. This, we realize, is not the place for the reader, but this is one of your last, and we know of no better way to get even with you, and since this is Christmas and even father has quit work, we are going to close by saying:

Since Christmas comes but once a year
Let everyone feel
But to puzzle whisky, wine and beer
Is not the proper way
What we should do is keep in mind
That Christ brought joy to all mankind.

J. C. JENKINS,
THE HERALD-WORLD man.

P. S.—The HERALD-WORLD covers the field like an April shower.
"They Should Know by Now."

To the Editor:

Now that we exhibitors (most of us) have written up for the HERALD-WORLD what the different pictures did for us—and I do believe every exhibitor told his story with honest convictions, not through any prejudice whatever to any producer—I believe every theatre owner can tell his picture what he has heard, how much he has in it, how much money it brought, what meaning they do have, there are foreign characters, Napoleon-style, and acting and lots of other fill-in stuff which we Americans don’t like. And we don’t care to study their meanings.

Now all these years most of us have been writing our views, etc., on all pictures we have put in our theatres, and I have been trying to present them and it does not seem that we have helped matters much, for our line of narratives is still coming to us day by day, year in and year out, in the same old way.

Now, I think it is time for the producers to know our wants and to know what group of pictures to line up for our localities and let them instruct their booking agencies along this line to show us what we should know by now what line of pictures would suit best small town exhibitors.

WALTER ODOM, SR.,
Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss.

about the most entertaining picture this pair has made. Seven reels.—H. B. Grice, Alcohn Mills theatre, Batesville, Miss.—Small town patronage.

RED HAIR: Clara Bow—A real good picture, she has made better pictures since, so it didn’t show up as well.—Arno G. Weigang, Community theatre, Oak Lawn, Wis.—General patronage.

SAWDUST PARADISE: Esther Ralston—We played this Saturday night with a two-reeler comedy, “Bargain Hunt,” to a very small crowd on account of bad weather and lots of colds raging in our little city and all around us. Both the picture and the comedy were exceptionally good. Six reels.—Wallace Odom & Son, Dixie theatre, Durant, Miss.—General patronage.

OPEN RANGE: Special cast—40%. December 15. Zane Grey Western, very good picture, pictorial good. Small house on account of B. Six reels.—H. B. Osborn, Community theatre, Mt. Hope, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SOMETHING ALWAYS HAPPENS: Esther Ralston—39%. December 16. A snowstorm cut our attendance, but the picture more than pleased those who did see it. Nice story, plenty of action and plenty of mystery. If they don’t like this they won’t like anything you can give them. Five reels.—Paul B. Odom, Legion theatre, Hollywood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SERVICE FOR LADIES: Adolphe Menjou—38%. December 16. A fine comedy feature. The actors are all so well known, and the picture pleased all that saw it. Seven reels.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—A good picture. Will do well with most any audience. It was made up very good especially well here. Could have been made in a few less reels. Ten reels.—Arno G. Weigang, Community theatre, Kenedey, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

SPEEDY: Harold Lloyd—The best of all Lloyd. Will please any kind of audience, and my patrons all liked it. Seven reels.—Arno G. Weigang, Community theatre, Kenedey, Tex.—Small town patronage.

CHICAGO: Special cast—Personally thought it was a poor picture for everybody don’t like this kind of stuff here. Good print.—Dwight Gris, Thetreum theatre, Columbus Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

KING OF KINGS: December 13-14. Below zero weather caused a decided loss on this wonderful picture. It hasn’t the appeal of “Ben Hur” when the weather is colder. It will fare better as the weather grows warmer. Six reels.—Dwight Gris and get out of the red. Twelve reels.—Frank Sabin, Majestic theatre, Bureka, Mont.—General patronage.

FOREBIDDEN LOVE: Lili Damita—Did not draw the house. We thought it was better than we expected, but we were not crazy over it our selves, although acting was fair, but lots of drawn-out necking. Mush! Seven reels.—E. E. Galley, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—Small town patronage.

HOLD EM, YALE: Rod La Rocque—This is a humdinger. Some of the people that saw it is still laughing. The hero’s appearance at the football game, at the last moment is far-fetched, but the rest of the picture was all good.—Dwight Gris, Thetreum theatre, Columbus Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

THE BLUE DANUBE: Operatic Joy—17%. December 13. Basketball and snow kept people away. However, this is a good drama. Seven reels.—Mrs. Holida J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

MAN MADE WOMAN: Special cast—Pathe wanted a picture at this time. Did not come out very good, does not compare with some of the star’s (Letticia Joy) other pictures.—Dwight Gris, Theatreum theatre, Columbus Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

RAYART

ON THE STROKE OF TWELVE: David Torrence—Picture was well liked and bought right. Six reels.—Elmer E. Vouzburr, Tiroll theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—General patronage.

United Artists

RAMONA: Dolores Del Rio—Really the only Una O’Connor picture I have ever seen. And bow! Music should not be so ov. moked as it helps immensely.—C. A. Swierczek, Majestic theatre, Westminston, Ind.—General patronage.

RESURRECTION: Special cast—A very good picture from the famous novel.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

MY BEST GIRL: Mary Pickford—December 3-4. Good entertainment. Not as good as “The Through Back Door,” which I played more than seven years ago. Seven reels.—William E. Traguer, Trago theatre, Neillville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

COLLEGE: Buxer Keaton—Very good comedy from Buxer, but one like this will last three months for comedy entertainment. Edward Zorn, Zorn theatre, Binkelman, Neb.—General patronage.

TOPSY AND EVA: Duncan Sisters—December 9-10. Didn’t see this one, but from the many good reports I had on it I would say they liked it. Seven reels.—William E. Traguer, Trago theatre, Neillville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HOT HEELS: Glenn Tryon—O. F. kare comedy, Tryon is getting better with every picture he makes.—Dwight Gris, Theatreum theatre, Columbus Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

TENDERFOOT HERO: Dunk! Get the book.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nebraska, O.—Small town patronage.

DESSERT DUST: Ted Wells—44%. December 15. A good picture and a comedy. Has an average show for average Saturday. Five reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

PRICE OF FEAR: Bill Cody—December 16. Double-bill’d this with Melva’s Napoleon, and both of them together didn’t make a good program. Suffered a number of walk-outs on both features and took a lot of razzing. This is better than the last few weeks we have had, but certainly not a good Sunday offering under any conditions. Small picture of the undercover story. Good, and mostly fair photography. Five reels.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nebraska, O.—Small town patronage.

GUARDIANS OF THE WILD: Rex—Suitable for Saturdays.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

Rayart

Warner Bros.

STATE STREET SADIE: Special cast—A good gang or crime picture, and it is one of the best offered theatre owners. Olive Breen in Colum ba’s “Silent Pigeon is the better of the two. But this is a fast moving crime picture, with some rather good romance in it. The Tom Tix makes it very, very good. I think most movie patrons will like it.—W. H. Breyer, Cony theatre, Win chester, Ind.—General patronage.

HUSBANDS FOR RENT: Special cast—Just another lemon like five out of every six the Warner programs are, No story. Direct filming. Just Slim. Six reels.—Edward Zorn, Zorn theatre, Binkelman, Neb.—General patronage.
PAY AS YOU ENTER: Special cast—December 12. This was simply awful. I ran it one night and voluntarily had a dark house the second night. Why did they make it? Why did they sell it? I'm way ahead in prestige through clearing the second day. Six reels.—Frank Sablin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE SILVER SLAVE: Irene Rich—Just anotherレン. Irene does what we call fine acting for other companies, but she's a flop with Warners. Six reels.—Edward Zorn, Zorn theatre, Binkelman, Neb.—General patronage.

State Rights

Serials

TARZAN THE MIGHTY: (Universal) Special cast—Getting better all the time, but don't see the people flocking in. Guess they are all too poor here. Fifteen chapters.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

Short Features

COLUMBIA

WINNIE'S VACATION: Please everyone.—W. L. Hill, Orpheum theatre, Rock Valley, Ia.—Small town patronage.

FANDANGO: Lupino Lane—Lupino seems to eat the laughs. This is what we call good acting as one of his best.—Newman & Gerdy, Nie-Go theatre, Toronto, Kan.

GOODY BIRDS: Charlie Bowers—This is a scream. More new stunts in this than any comedy we have used for some time.—C. E. Holt, Legion theatre, Elwood, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HIS PRIVATE LIFE: Good. Two reels.—Elmer E. Voshage, Tivoli theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—General patronage.

THE LITTLE RUBE: Dorothy Devere—A comedy that's different and it's a good one.—C. A. Swircenisky, Majestic theatre, Washington, Kan.—General patronage.

RED HOT BULLETS: Best comedy I have seen for some time. Eddie Quinn gets lots of laughs. He is well liked by my patrons and a good help to the box office also.—K. Vavere, Grand theatre, Mount Pleasant, Pa.—General patronage.

FBO

JESSIE JAMES: This "Raging Blood" series of comedies is good and please everyone.—W. L. Hill, Orpheum theatre, Rock Valley, Ia.—Small town patronage.

MICKY COMEDIES: These comedies sure please the kids, and the grown-ups don't object to them.—E. B. Conant, Charaknor Hall, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Welcome

Another new contributor is enrolled this week—D. C. Carter of the Kilman- rock Theatre Corporation, operating the Fairview theatre, Del Norte, Va.

"We have joined the army of reporters on pictures," writes Brother Carter, "and hope to do a bit of service from time to time. I suppose we belong to the General Patronage class, as our town is very small and most of our patrons come from the county round about."

To Carter a hearty welcome is extended, and it goes without saying that all exhibitors will benefit from his reported experi- ences.

UNITED ARTISTS: Ramona: Dolores Del Rio, 100 per cent. Nov. 21-22. All the good and beautiful things other exhibitors have said of this picture are true. Parked our house both nights and pleased everyone. Charming beyond words.—The General, Buster Keaton, Dec. 14. Fine, pleased the children most. Not nearly as good as "Steamboat Bill Jr." yet it drew well and patrons were pleased.

WARNER BROTHERS: (Old San Francisco): Dolores Costello, Dec. 12-13. This is a special on a big picture, that was well liked. This star has many friends here. The earthquake scenes were praised by many.

FOX: Vienna Wildcat: Tom Mix, Dec. 15. A good picture that went over well with our Saturday night crowd. Nothing rough in this one, some comedy. May said it was fine.

WE FAW DOWN: Laurel-Hardy—If this one doesn't suit, it can't be done, for it has a million laughs. The small comedy I have had in the past few seasons.

—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

BELIEVE IT OR NOT: Good comedy, chorus girls and everything.—E. E. Galley, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

FIGHTING FANNY: Jack Duffy—Very good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Green- river, Utah.—General patronage.

HORSE SHY: Everett Horton—Good; lots of laughs for the patrons. Two reels.—Eraser E. Vos- burgh, Tivoli theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—General patronage.

KOKO THE KOP: Inkwell Imp.—Nest little fellow. Good print.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

STOP KIDDING: Bobby Vernon—This is a good one.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SWISS MOVEMENTS: Jimmy Adams—My first one and I am well pleased. A good, clean two-reeler.—Mrs. Hubie G. Weigard, Community theatre, Kenedy, Tex.—Small town patronage.

PATHE

THE BICYCLE FLIRT: Good comedy; laughs aplenty.—Frank Sahin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

CAMPUS CARMEN: Here is a peach of a comedy; out of the ordinary. Biggest part in technicolor and it pleased all. Best for a long time.—E. E. Galley, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

MODESTY SHOP: Fair comedy.—Bert Silver, Sil- ver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

A ONE MAMMA MAN: Charley Chase—Another good one from Charley Chase. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

RUN, GIRL, RUN: A fair comedy; print in poor condition.—C. E. Holt, Legion theatre, Elwood, Wis.—General patronage.

SMITH'S COUSIN: Every Smith comedy is a winner.—Frank Sahin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

TAXI SCANDAL: Just a comedy, that's all.—E. E. Galley, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

OSWALD THE RABBIT: All of these rabbit pic- tures are good.—E. B. Conant, Charaknor Hall, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

SOUTHER FLY: Oswald.—Good cartoon. Nice filler for variety.—Wolfe & Williams, Screen- land theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

THAAT'S THAT: Good. Two reels.—Elmer E. Vos- burgh, Tivoli theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—General patronage.

WATCH GEORGE: Fair. Two reels.—Elmer E. Vos- burgh, Tivoli theatre, Mishawaka, Ind.—General patronage.
SEVEN hundred educators are returning to their colleges in all parts of the nation this week with a direct plea from their leaders for active cooperation with the motion picture industry, particularly in the field of the talking picture.

Lectures on the new school of motion picture technique, launched at the University of Southern California at the request of the Education für Film, Picture and Sciences at Hollywood, were given Saturday, December 29, at the Oakland Square theatre, Chicago, and supported by several distinguished personalities as the development of speech training for the new type production.

Dean R. K. Immel of the school of speech of the University of Southern California, and Prof. W. R. MacDonald, head of the department of dramatics, prophesied that the necessity for voice training is likely to increase and that the four-year course in technical will help develop for the auditor an art of its own, with its own personnel.

Freshman Already Busy

Freshmen already are taking the preliminary work of the motion picture school, which was founded following a long period of intensive survey at the studios by Professor MacDonald. Seniors will be appointed and advanced studies, after being specialized in their final two years at the university. Specialists in cinematography will concentrate their work on the physics subjects, laboratory students in the chemistry courses, and the like.

With a refined form of the Telephonic, tests already are being made on the voices of actors and already considerable progress has been made. First was Anita Page, who had had no stage speaking experience, and the improvement made was truly notable and astounding, the educators said.

It was a new idea for the motion picture to go to the schools for help, Professor M. C. MacDonald said. The convention was told of the formation of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and its development, with the naming of the committee on practical cooperation with the university in the establishment of a motion picture course.

"On that committee were Milton Sills, Douglas Fairbanks, Conrad Nagel and others," Professor MacDonald said. "A first step was adoption of a plan to place one of the students on the university staff to determine what courses should be taught. I was placed in the studios. They insisted that there be a complete four-year course, not a one-year program."

Two Years in Specializing

"It was decided that the first two years consist of cultural courses as for other professions, the last two to be for specializing. Those who were to study cinematography, for example, were placed in the physics department, those studying laboratory technique in the chemistry department, those taking the normal work in the English department, and so on.

"The need of a practical tieup was anticipated. Senior students in their last semester will be taking the practical courses, the educators said. If they prove satisfactory they need not worry about jobs. Freshmen now are taking the course and a survey course will start next semester.

"There will be two hours of lectures a week. On aesthetics the lecturers will include Dr. Von Kleinschmidt, president of the university, Dr. Kate Gordon and many others; Euston and W. L. Steiger, Frank Woods and Mary Pickford; business and administration, Mike Levy, production head of United Artists, and Louis B. Mayer, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Lecturers representing the actors will include James Cruze and King Vidor. Following the lectures there will be discussions, with apparatus already on hand for studying the voice in motion pictures. Likewise a reference library has been made.

"I had been on the M.G.M. lot for six months, with Harry Rapf, associate producer, cooperating with me in my survey, before the sound came picture problem arose. Before that, the motion picture industry had been at a standstill.

"I have seen the sounds stages in construction, and the changes are absolutely vibrationless. I saw the pits for foundations dug eighteen feet deep. Then was built a concrete foundation three feet thick, and slab, and next three more feet of concrete, and so on. The floor was built of concrete, for the first time.

"Dean Immel declared that the Academy was not organized for teaching, as the name might suggest.

"The possibilities of the Academy are very, very great," he said. "It is the most significant movement to us in the history of the industry. There are those in the studios who are interested in the artistic side. There are those who are not. One leader said that the aim of the motion picture was to furnish entertainment; if it had art he wouldn't hold that. They don't apologize for being in it to make money. But the Academy is not in it for profit.

"Are we talking pictures permanent or just a fad? I believe they are permanent. I don't believe there is any question about it. Those opposed probably are actuated by inadequate from Jesse Lasky and Mr. Immel, 'The Four Feathers' to Be Released Without Dialogue (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.-Announcement was made here that 'The Four Feathers' will be released with sound and music synchronization only. The Four Feathers' will be taken in the picture form as Mr. Lasky. 'Dialogue can augment the dramatic passages of any subjects but it certainly cannot help, and it might impair action and emotion as this story.'

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

Tiffay-Stahl sent some of the “big folks” out from New York last week to conduct a coming-out party for the new general sales manager, Oscar Hanson. The luncheons, dinners and things were held at the Stevens, Friday and Saturday, and Friday the whole gang of 31 (and that includes “Mac” McLaughlin, we’ll have you know) went over to the Chicago theatre studio and saw and heard George Jessel in “Lucky Boy.” For further details, see the news section. And yet—

It must be said here that the convention being in their particular bailiwick, McLaughlin and Eph Rosen had plenty things to do on those two days. There was, for example, a dinner on Wednesday evening at the Stevens to which no exhibitors—well, we mean, George Jessel, who has a new piece at the Harris, came over for a good meal, reciprocating, however, with a few comically cornpone anecdotes about his experiences in the talking picture business.

Then there was the theatre party at the Harris, and the banquet at the Alhambra—Alhambra Saturday night. Between times, of course, all Eph and “Mac” had to do was listen to sales talks and such.

Incidentally, which is the way many things happen at conventions, Roy Avey, branch manager at Oklahoma City, saved a woman’s life at the Stevens, just how, we forget. But no matter. John Francconi, who runs the exchange at Kansas City, asked us to set it down here so as to have an imperishable record of the fact, which both he and Bob Kelly, New Orleans manager, declare to be an absolute fact.

The Symphony theatre at 4923 West Chicago Avenue, has been leased by the United Theatres Corporation for 20 years. The new policy is stage productions as well as pictures, with sound. Albert Goldman was the broker.

Max Reinhardt, the German theatrical producer, and Lillian Gish, who has a sister named Dorothy, were in town last week, on their way to Hollywood, where they will begin production of a new picture starring Miss Gish February 1. It will be Reinhardt’s first picture. United Artists will release it.

About 500 patrons got more than the thrills they had paid for Sunday night, when a negro robber entered the Metropolitan on South Parkway and proceeding, where negroes are not allowed, to an upstairs office, where a negro business that ended up in his shooting and killing Matthew Taylor, the manager. The house catered to colored patronage. Taylor, who was in his office counting receipts of about $2,000, opened the door of the box office at the frightened command of Mrs. Lillian Lee, the operator, whom the robber was threatening. Struck by Taylor, the man shot him through the heart and fled, and he died on the way to the hospital.

Biophone is making a rapid progress hereabouts, according to Jerry Abrams. A machine is being installed in the Castle theatre, another in the Colonial, Sioux City, Mo., and one in the Van Der Vaart theatre, Sheboygan, Wis. According to Abrams, all machines will be ready for use about January 7. A new attachment makes them able to project prints from films as well as discs.

Paul Bokela, operator of theatres in Des Plaines and Park Ridge, has returned to his home from the hospital. Bokela was injured when a piece of steel flew into his eye.

Max Schwartz and Frank Ishmael are on their vacation from the MGM office.

Notice to the hungry: Tess Heraty received 22 boxes of candy for Christmas.

Saul Goldman, booker for Gotham, shaved off his mustache the day before Christmas, because, he said, “everybody thought I was Santa Claus, and my pocketbook was empty.”

Our “Longest-in-the-Industry Club” keeps growing. This week Fox has contributed the records of 11 employees who have been with the company for six or more years. Louis Dreher, head of the booking department, has been connected with Fox for ten years. Before coming to Fox, Dreher was with Paramount. Louise Schroeder, started with Fox 22 years ago. Miss Schroeder is chief film inspector. Bob Tohn, shipping clerk, has served 12 years in the Fox exchange. Charles Walsh has also given 12 years of service. Ernie Grohe, deluxe salesman, started with Fox in 1916, and is still going strong. Sarah Zeman, contract clerk, can celebrate her ninth year as a member of the Fox staff. Max Levine, operator, also has put in nine years with the company, while Harold Loeb, salesman, has been with Fox eight years. Selma Hochman, secretary to Clyde Eckhardt, has been with Fox for seven years; and Mildred Vesely, secretary to A. M. Van Dyke has just completed her sixth year with the Chicago Fox exchange, but altogether, Van Dyke has been with Fox for 17 years. There’s a record for someone to shoot at.

“Put Teeth in Blue Law Or Repeal It,” Urges State Senator-Elect

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 2.—Put teeth in the Sunday blue laws of Indiana or take them off—these are the words of a decision of John I. Niblack, state senator-elect from here. And the prayers of the theatre owners will follow him.

The system in Indiana is called vicious. The state judicial system still remains too largely on a fee basis. In every small town there is a painful justice of the peace, a prosecutor in the county who does not make much money and attorneys who just dote on defending somebody.

While the theatre owner is being fined and his shows stopped, automobile races, marathon dances, cock fighting and so on proceed unmolested. Niblack says the law represents class legislation, anyway.

Pathé Issues 12-Page Press Book for “Tiger Shadow”

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Pathé has issued a 12-page De Luxe Press book on “The Tiger Shadow,” the new 10 chapter serial. The press book contains 8 exploitation stunts, ads, cuts, scenes and cuts of which the showman may use in his campaign in advance of the showing.

Robber Escapes with $391

(Special to the Herald-World)

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 2.—The Portland Theatre suffered a second robbery Christmas Eve, when a robber held up the cashier. Upward of $4,000 was in a loot, but was overlooked by the robber who got away with $391.

No Faking in This See, Hear and Feel Show!

Editor, Exhibitors Herald-World, Dear Sirs:

I believe that I am the first small town exhibitor to introduce sound and effects. A few years ago while showing Fox’s “Johnstown Flood,” a heavy rain came up and as the house I was then in had several bad leaks, it began to come through. It increased as the feature progressed and was coming in heavy time in the flood scenes. The salesmen agree it was the first they’d heard about Vitaphone.

Yours truly,
C. C. CASSADY,
Cleveland, Ind.
In the "Talkies" too

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film — be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised — the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year — these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

When the tough New York critics rave like this, it means plenty!

"'The Shopworn Angel' is thoroughly charming and engaging. So delightful in story, action, direction and titling that it is assuredly THE MOST LIKABLE AND GENUINELY HEART-WARMING PHOTOPLAY TO ARRIVE HERE IN MANY WEEKS. Nancy Carroll has never been as good as she is in the role of the chorus girl. Gary Cooper is engaging, ingenious. Paul Lukas is, as ever, exceptionally good."—New York Herald Tribune

"Delightful, convincing, human, beautifully acted. Nancy Carroll plays her role magnificently. Gary Cooper will amaze fans. He gives a great performance."—New York Daily Mirror

"THEY DON'T COME MUCH MORE ENTERTAINING THAN 'THE SHOPWORN ANGEL.' Has every ingredient necessary to success."—New York Daily News

"Nancy Carroll looks pretty enough to be in the front row of any show, in fact right out in front. 'The Shopworn Angel' is ably done and wonderfully free of hokum."—New York World.

"Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper give expert and charming performances in 'The Shopworn Angel.' Richard Wallace has turned out a thoroughly fresh and fascinating film."—New York Sun.

"Entertaining, packed with audience appeal. SO WELL HANDLED THAT IT GOES DOWN AS ADDITION TO SEASON'S GOOD PICTURES."—New York Daily Graphic.

Variable Area Sound Track from Pathe Sound News

Variable Density Sound Track

Above are pictured sections of the variable area sound track from PATHE SOUND NEWS and the variable density sound track. One glance at these illustrations will prove to the man who knows nothing of the technical problems of film printing how infinitely superior the variable area system is. There is no necessity to compromise in negative developing, printing or positive developing between the light photograph and the sound photograph. The negative and positive are developed and printed for top quality. The sound track automatically comes out perfectly. There can be no loss of sound values through over-printing or over-developing.
That means that even the sky isn't the limit for PATHE SOUND NEWS!

It can go anywhere—see all and hear everything. The "mike" can go where the sound is and the camera can go where the picture is.

No single camera carrying a double burden of sound recording and photography devices to hamper it and sacrifice its pictorial quality.

PATHE SOUND NEWS can operate any number of picture and sound cameras on the same circuit and all sound recording is done on separate and special film.

Photographed as it is on a separate sound negative, when PATHE SOUND NEWS reaches the cutting room, it can be edited to meet the elasticity of the Editor's ideas and it is not confined to the very rigid limitations of a single picture sound negative.

PATHE SOUND NEWS alone has the editorial flexibility and sound superiority of the two negative system.

WHAT THE FUTURE HOLDS IN STORE FOR LEO AND YOU

Start the New Year right!
Know what’s going to happen

The greatest barometer of the days to come are days passed and passing. That’s why it’s a cinch to figure out what Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer means to you in 1929!
Here's what happened in 1928

“Our Dancing Daughters” with Joan Crawford started the fun! And what fun! Everybody said: “Watch M-G-M!” And oh baby they watched Bill Haines in “Excess Baggage”; Lon Chaney in “While The City Sleeps”; “White Shadows in the South Seas”; Marion Davies and William Haines in “Show People”; “Dream of Love” with Joan Crawford; Lon Chaney in “West of Zanzibar”; John Gilbert in “Masks of the Devil” and a lot more Big Ones. And that’s just the appetizer! Wait!

It’s been the greatest hit year in M-G-M history

THE FIRST RELEASE OF 1929 IS THE GIANT PICTURE

Clarence Brown’s production of the Astor Theatre Sensation

THE TRAIL OF '98 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer’s Epic of the Klondike Gold Rush

DOLORES DEL RIO

and a mighty box-office cast
"THE TRAIL OF '98"

is one of the greatest box-office pictures ever made. It has a great story with great players, including

DOLORES DEL RIO

RALPH FORBES  KARL DANE
THE WHITE HORSE RAPIDS
The tiny boats were tossed about like driftwood among the mountainous waves of the rapids that tore along at express train speed.

THE SNOWSLIDE
A thunderous roar! Hundreds of men, horses and dogs lost as the avalanche buries them beneath tons of snow.

THE BURNING OF DAWSON CITY
It was far wicked to last—the gambler with ignited clothing sets fire to the world's most famous gold camp.

FACTS about “The Trail of ’98”

More than two years in the making at a cost of two million dollars! Clarence Brown is the director. An All-Star cast: Dolores Del Rio, Ralph Forbes, Karl Dane, Tully Marshall, Harry Carey and a host of others. Fifteen thousand extras appear in the picture, more even than “Ben-Hur.” Based on Robert W. Service’s famous novel, serialized in hundreds of newspapers. Played to capacity for months at $2 at the Astor, N.Y., and at Grauman’s Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles. Hailed by critics as the logical successor to “The Big Parade” and “Ben-Hur.”

SOUND OR SILENT!

MORE BIG SCENES THAN EVER BEFORE IN ONE PICTURE!

THE GIGANTIC SNOW SLIDE
More breath-taking than the dividing of the Red Sea in “Ten Commandments.”

THE CHILKOOT PASS
A spectacle to be remembered with the winding march of heroes in “Big Parade.”

THE WHITE HORSE RAPIDS
Ranks for thrill and tenseness with the chariot race in “Ben-Hur.”

THE BURNING OF DAWSON CITY
Showing the origin of history’s great disaster, when the gambler with ignited clothing sets fire to the world’s most famous gold camp.

JOHN GILBERT in THIRST

The star they all wanted! He's just signed again with M-G-M (of course!). And his vast public will flock to see his new drama of love and thrills! Equipped for Sound—or Silent!

GRETA GARBO in WILD ORCHIDS

John Colton, author of the stage success "Rain" has given beautiful Greta the most gripping story she's ever appeared in. With Nils Asther. Sound or Silent!

THE BELLAMY TRIAL

Something to cheer about! The Saturday Evening Post serial! Directed by Monta Bell! The perfect TALKING picture. A thriller any way you play it—Sound or Silent.

WILLIAM HAINES in THE DUKE STEPS OUT

Jimmy Cruze who made "Excess Baggage" is directing Bill Haines (with Joan Crawford) in what is destined to be one of the talked of pictures this year. Watch for a Big Shot!

METRO MOVIETONE ACTS

It was to be expected that M-G-M would bring the much needed Quality note into the making of these important Movietone subjects. Within a brief six months M-G-M has built up a library of great box-office numbers and now brings you its Second Series of Metro Movietone Acts. Three de luxe numbers weekly. Among the big names: Van & Schenck, Vincent Lopez, Miller & Lyles, Ukelele Ike, George Dewey Washington, Odette Myrtle and many more.

A real night in Paris is this notable picture "Moulin Rouge". Dupont (director of "Variety") rented the famous night resort and entire beauty cast of its daring Revue for realism for the strange love-triangle story. Stars brilliant Chekova.

"A WOMAN IN THE NIGHT" amazing maternity drama starring luscious Maria Corda; romance of London marriage and Southampton night actually produced where story's laid. Variety's London Critic says "Delicate theme robustly handled—100% entertainment."

"THE BONDMAN", starring Norman Kerry, exteriors actually made in the romantic Isle of Man and Sicily, home of the vendetta, from Sir Hall Caine's great novel of bitter hatred conquered by love.

Biggest ice thrill since W. D. E. Climaxes "PAWNS OF PASSION" melodrama actually made on wild Russian frontier and artists' quarter, Paris. Brilliant Olga Chekova as beautiful dancer, hunted by men, until true love triumphs.

"TOMMY ATKINS" made in Mankind's Cradle of Romance, Egypt! A great, grim, battle-scarred fortress; hundreds of wild tribesmen; Battalions of British troops; a "Beau Geste" story of a beautiful girl and her lovers. That's "Tommy Atkins"—fighting lover. World Wide Picture.

Mr. R. F. WOODHULL, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, last week issued a statement in which he reviewed the progress of the organization during the past year. He announced that, “progress for the last year has been satisfactory and safe.” He further stated that, “its record of accomplishments is comparable to that of any similar endeavor.” Other details of the strengthening and development of the organization during the past year were referred to.

Right up to this point Mr. Woodhull’s statement was interesting, constructive and timely. The association has been making steady and even progress and its future is bright. A public pronouncement covering these points was most appropriate, but, unfortunately, Mr. Woodhull did not stop there. Instead, he undertook to deliver a vigorous slap at the Allied States exhibitors association and all of this portion of his statement might very much better have been left unsaid.

If a group of exhibitors standing outside the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America want an association of their own, we see no reason under the sun why they should not have it. If Mr. Woodhull wants to defeat such an organization and strengthen his own, the course for him to take, it seems to us, is to make the service of his organization stronger and better so that it will attract exhibitors who are not members. Simply to attack the other organization offers no reason for members of that organization to abandon it and join his. Also, we do not think that such a course will have much appeal to the many thousands of exhibitors who are now standing outside both of the organizations.

Mr. Woodhull, among other remarks that will be strongly resented by the Allied States organization, charges this latter association with ignoring the proven fact that the problems of this industry can be settled within the industry through peaceful negotiations. Mr. Woodhull may be right in his charge but it must be said that as far as this statement goes he is guilty of the same charge because such a statement can only be regarded in the light of being anything but along the line of peaceful negotiation.

We reaffirm our position: The Allied States group, or any other group, have equal rights with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in the matter of organizing along such lines and in such ways as they may deem fit and proper. To contend against this is a course that will reflect no credit upon the industry or any part of it.

Both the M. P. T. O. A. and the Allied States organization will flourish only in so far as they render good and valuable service to their members. Competition among these organizations should be on the basis of service and not mud-slinging.

Insuring the Future

BEHIND the name hunt for a suitable term with which to describe talking motion pictures there is a pressing necessity which does not seem to be recognized in various quarters in the industry. As is usually the case, the keenest—and most successful executives—are quite aware that if such a term as “talkies” comes to be satisfied upon the talking motion picture this new form of expression will go through its life under a severe and expensive handicap. But many of the others are content now to do nothing and to try nothing, having either no constructive ideas or else believing, weakly, that no suitable term can be popularized.

Brand names attached to a product that necessarily is varying in quality has always been held by competent experts to be a dangerous course. But the right name for talking motion pictures would not in any sense be a brand name; it would be a name that would be attached to an entire classification of pictures. Brand names come into disfavor when they are associated with an inferior product. This same principle could not work to the disadvantage of talking motion pictures unless the entire classification of talking motion pictures proved to be inferior product. If this, unfortunately, should transpire it would make no difference what they would be called; their early demise would be in the cards.

The motion picture industry, despite its intimacy with the public, has not and does not give adequate attention to matters relative to forming and directing public opinion. In a great number of the most successful industries when a new important line of product is brought out an effort immediately is made to identify such product by name. Such effort is then followed by the adoption of ways and means of getting the new product, under its new name, definitely and favorably into the consciousness of the public.

These are the object lessons which the motion picture industry at this time should study and act upon, and may do so with assurance that in such ways they will be advancing and insuring the future of the talking motion picture.
Competition, Not Mergers, Brings Good Films: Zukor Predicts Continued Prosperity For Industry as Whole in 1929

ADOLPH ZUKOR

Says—

"Individual prosperity will depend this year, as always, on the quality of the pictures produced during the year by the various companies, and shown by the different theatres."

* * *

"The drama will come back. It will not disappear. It will not be crushed by the competition of motion pictures for I am satisfied that motion pictures that are simply copies of stage plays will not be good enough to amount to anything. We are in different fields and there is no reason why both of us should not be eminently successful."

* * *

"The figures for last year showed that the industry had a good year. Attendance at our theatres showed a normal increase. In other words, we have not lost touch with the public."

* * *

"Pictures should be better this year than ever before. We have had experience and we have learned."

* * *

"I like to see strong companies in competition. I don’t like to see them joined together and made fewer. I don’t see where great amalgamations help the industries, where they help the companies, or where they help the public. Competition makes good pictures and good pictures provide attendance."

* * *

"Though I am firmly convinced that dialogue is here to stay, a definite part and parcel of picture equipment, I hesitate to state a definite opinion. . . . I am not satisfied with talking pictures that are merely novelties. The day of the novelty has not passed, because every new installation in every new city opens a brand-new field, but even so I am not satisfied just to give sound, or talk. We must improve and solidify our position."

NEW YORK. Jan. 8.—The motion picture industry will enjoy continued prosperity through 1929, in the unqualified opinion of Adolph Zukor, president of the vast Paramount organization, so long a barometer of business.

In his panelled office high in the towering Paramount Building, with the warmth of a brilliant winter sun streaming through the leaded windows, Zukor discussed the future in terms of the past in an exclusive interview for the HERALD-WORLD, his first personal message to the trade in a year.

"The industry as a whole will be prosperous," he said. He slid forward in his chair and perched himself on its edge as he grew interested and enthusiastic. Which company will profit most, which theatre, which individual, is a matter for circumstances to decide.

"Each year we all of us get some share of the general prosperity. Sometimes we get more, sometimes we get less. Sometimes this company leads, sometimes another. Individual prosperity will depend this year, as always, on the quality of the pictures produced during the year by the various companies, and shown by the different theatres.

"In the motion picture industry, quality and revenue are brothers. They go hand in hand."

Zukor based his prediction of prosperity, in a measure, on the success achieved during 1928.

"We have a yardstick by which we can measure success in our industry," he said, "and that yardstick is attendance. The figures for last year showed that the industry had a good year. Attendance at our theatres showed a normal increase. In other words, we have not lost touch with the public. The public is still interested in motion pictures and is still willing to go and see good pictures."

Zukor talked with engaging frankness. He met every question without evasion, without quibbling. He made each answer fully, generally in terms clear and refreshing. Obviously, he was full of his subject, testimony of his active interest in the industry and its work, of course no surprise in view of his long and continuous and highly successful service.

"Pictures should be better this year than ever before. We have had experiences and we have learned. Each company is reaching out for better stories, better players, better directors, better pictures. They are in keen competition with each other, and these things taken together testify to the health of the industry."

"The industry will always need keen competition—not unfair competition, not unethical competition, but keen competition. I like to see strong companies in competition. I don't like to see them joined together and made fewer. I don't see where great amalgamations help the industry, where they help the companies, or where they help the public. Competition makes good pictures and good pictures provide attendance.

"I have just come back from Hollywood and have seen and heard a great deal about pictures with dialogue, about 'talkies.' Though I am firmly convinced that dialogue is here to stay, a definite part and parcel of picture equipment, I hesitate to state a definite opinion. Opinions, during this present state of flux, change from day to day. Our actions have to be determined, to a large extent, by what we learn as we go along.

"This much I know. We shall use dialogue as we use any other device for the production of good pictures, not more. When we get a situation that seems suited to dialogue, then we shall use it. When we get a situation obviously made for silent pictures, then we shall not strain to insert dialogue. We must not forget the importance of relaxation in motion picture entertainment.

"We are determined to go slowly. Whereas we used to try and lay out a year's program ahead of time, now we shall be content with planning two or three months ahead. Much can happen and we are eager enough to improve the quality of our product to want things to happen.

"I am not satisfied with talking pictures that are merely novelties. The day of the novelty has not passed, because every new installation of sound equipment in every new city opens a brand-new field, but even so I am not satisfied just to give sound, or talk. We must improve and solidify our position."

Zukor said he was not surprised to hear that some audiences through the country are already tiring of sound pictures. He reiterated the point that pictures must be good no matter what devices they employ. He said that he personally, along with other motion picture theatre-goers, would far rather see a good silent picture than a bad sound picture.

I asked Zukor if the motion picture industry felt any antagonism toward the legitimate stage, if the film industry felt an elation over the dog-days of the drama, any sense of having scored a victory.

"We bear no ill will toward the legitimate stage and do not in any way feel a sense of victory," he said. "In fact, those of us who have been through the mill see no reason why the drama should be so frightfully concerned over its present unhappy state.

"The drama is now going through a period of depression that hit us sooner and left us quicker. It is not extraordinary to come upon a whole series of ordinary plays, whether on the stage or on the screen. Somehow it happens that you reach a period when nothing turns out well, when results are mediocre, unimportant, uninteresting. And then, curiously, when things look blackest, one or two smashing good things will come along and lift the whole level with it.

"The drama will come back. It will not disappear. It will not be crushed by the competition of motion pictures, for I am satisfied that motion pictures that are simply copies of stage plays will not be good enough to amount to anything. We are in different fields and there is no reason why both of us should not be eminently successful."

Zukor's manner was doubly enthusiastic. First, he seemed roused over the promise of success through 1929. Second, he seemed more than energetic over the prospect that success will not be too easily achieved, that obstacles lie in the road and that the situation is interesting enough and promising enough to threaten day to day changes.
Variety

Analyzes

The Trade Papers

FROM time to time "Variety," a show business publication, undertakes a critical analysis of the motion picture trade papers. Like much of the general text that is written and printed today, it is amusing but, consistently with the policy of the publication, they do not trouble themselves with the little matter of facts. We do not suggest that particularly in the case of contemporary publications "Variety" maliciously, or even deliberately, misrepresents the facts. It is simply in a case in which general unfamiliarity with the habits of truth-telling is the normal order of the day.

In a recent issue "Variety" published the latest analyses in the series. In this the merger of Exhibitors Herald and "Moving Picture World" was discussed and several erroneous conclusions arrived at. We shall not trouble ourselves to attempt to correct these conclusions for the first mention of a mis-statement in "Variety" would have the originality and infrequency of the greeting, "Merry Christmas"; secondly, it was long the hallmark of the "fast school of journalism that even the terms the business in which we are engaged would sound to its managers as a foreign tongue.

Mr. Sime Silverman, publisher of "Variety," is commonly and widely held by those who know him best as a great guy. On this point it has not been our privilege to share an intimacy which would enable us to make a more informed judgment. Our observation asserts itself to be able to put up with what his publication technically would call the mob he has around him—be must he be.

"Variety's" estimate of itself as published in the above-mentioned analysis is as follows:

Variety

Variety probably remains about the same, a mixed sheet trying to cover all of the show business, with the chances it is making a bun of itself trying to cover all of it, even though selling at $2.50 on the stands, this paper is far less progressive than it looks some weeks.

Variety's silly way of writing and printing is likely a laugh to those who know, but no way has been discovered to rectify its faults. The latter must be plenty to newspaper men if they ever read Variety, for those in Variety's office can see 40 holes in the sheet every time it comes out. So this page comes at the same terrible occasion of newspaper work it always has been.

HALIFAX, Jan. 8—Fire starting near the turbine of the picture theatre at Jojgin Mines, Nova Scotia, owned by F. J. Burke, was not subdued until 21 buildings had been destroyed. The loss is $100,000.

Burned structures included the theatre, a church, hotel, school, and 12 residences.

Pathé Wins Round in Fight to Keep Censors off Talking Films

Injunction Granted by New York Supreme Court Restraining Board from Invalidating Licenses for "Sal of Singapore"—Test Case, Says Colvin Brown

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Pathé has gone to court to prevent the censors of New York state from interfering with dialogue in motion pictures that talk. The Supreme Court yesterday granted a temporary injunction restraining the New York board of censors from invalidating or revoking licenses for the sound and dialogue version of "Sal of Singapore."

"Sal of Singapore" was released January 4. The silent version of the picture was passed without deletion or change. Pathé did not submit for censorship the sound record accompanying the film.

Colvin W. Brown, executive vice president of Pathé, said that the suit was brought for the single purpose of clarifying the situation. Students of the industry recalled, however, that Pathé has long been in the forefront of campaigns, combining censorship, began. the fight that freed news reels from censorship interference, and won important legal actions against Ohio.

That an important issue is in the balance is recognized and Pathé has received congratulations and aid from its limited or restricted licenses for the exhibition of any films, that the obligation to issue unrestricted licenses for all films, except those found to be obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, sacrilegious or of a character tending to corrupt morals or incite to crime, was maintained. Pathé held the limited or restricted licenses in law and an arbitrary assumption of power.

William Innsman, secretary of Pathé, emphasized the absurdity of this ruling.

Bill Broadening Powers of Censors Is Expected

ALBANY, Jan. 8—The question of how far a censoring body can go under the law which created the censoring commission of New York State and outlined its duties, in passing final word on sound pictures, has been the subject of considerable discussion at the state capital in Albany during the past few weeks, and fresh impetus has been gained by the Pathé motion picture company before the state board that a bill is to be drafted in the near future, and which will be introduced in the Legislature, broadening the powers of the New York State motion picture commission insofar as talking and sound pictures are concerned.

Kansas Board May Get Device for Censoring Sound

KANSAS CITY, KAN., Jan. 8—The Kansas State censor board would become censors of the spoken word, now that the board has moved into its new headquarters, Miss Emma Viett, chairman of the board, announced.

If the funds will permit, a small sound device synchronized with the films will be installed.

When Viett had the Kansas censor board made its announcement concerning the censoring of talkies than the Kansas City Star came forth with an editorial in which the lettered: "As if the talkies did not already have enough to worry about, along comes the Kansas State board of review and proposes to censor the spoken word as well. The scenes upon the screen. . . . It might perhaps be spared the complexities of being subject to the whims of an appointive board as to whether the words which pour forth in synchronization with the film should be listened to by the impressionable public."

Theatre Inserts Titles in Two Languages

(Special to the Herald-World)

MONTREAL, Jan. 8—Bilingual titles made their appearance in sound productions here last week when they were introduced at the Capitol theatre by Manager Harry Dahn with the presentation of a "Woman of Affairs." Titles were presented in English and French to meet Quebec legal requirements and also to cater to the immense French population of Montreal. Manager Dahn announced that arrangements had been made, at considerable expense, to have bilingual titles inserted in the movies at the Capitol. Since September 1, the French-speaking people had been struggling with English titles, and it was said that they were thus learning English.
LEADERSHIP —

THE Exhibitors Herald-World carried approximately 400 pages of advertising more than its nearest competitor in 1928. Of every dollar spent in the five national motion picture trade papers during 1928, approximately 42 cents was spent in the HERALD-WORLD. This overwhelming vote of confidence for the HERALD-WORLD was in almost every instance the result of thorough tests and investigation—surveys conducted by the advertiser or his advertising agency, questionnaires sent to representative people in all divisions of the trade and in all parts of the country, and a careful checkup of direct results, particularly the use of coupons in advertisements.

Motion Pictures

During the year, the HERALD-WORLD was the only motion picture trade paper receiving the full and complete advertising schedule of every motion picture distributing company of importance.

Theatre Equipment

“Better Theatres”, the section of the HERALD-WORLD issued every fourth week and devoted to theatre construction, operation, decoration, and equipment, carried from issue to issue throughout the year from 25 to 40 per cent more advertising than its nearest competitor.

Individual

In advertising placed by individuals—screen and presentation artists—the HERALD-WORLD easily led all competitors. In Presentation advertising, a class of advertising to which direct results can be readily traced, the HERALD-WORLD led by a wide margin.
Classified Advertising

In the three years since this department was started, the HERALD-WORLD has become the recognized "classified advertising medium" in the motion picture field. During the year of 1928, it carried in excess of three times the number of these advertisements printed by all of its competitors combined.

Constructive Policy

Advertisers like the HERALD-WORLD way of doing business. Its only advertising rates are those printed on its rate cards—no favoritism, no trick offers, no bargaining. Its only method of selling is on the basis of merit. It does not resort either to attempting to "pressure" advertising into its pages or enlisting outside assistance to "pressure" advertisers.

Proven Circulation

_The HERALD-WORLD gives a full accounting to its advertisers for every dollar accepted. It is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations (the only member in the motion picture field) and furnishes audited circulation statements twice each year._

The Thousand Mark

On the first of the year, Western Electric passed the thousand mark in the number of its sound installations. This is a record that defies criticism and compels admiration.

Practically every part of the country now has theatres equipped for the showing of sound pictures. There are few patrons of motion pictures who have not had the opportunity to inspect the newest product of motion picture development, to form a first-hand opinion.

The list of theatres equipped for sound showings, as published first in the Herald-World, was a most astonishing one and laid to rest many rumors floating through the industry. Small theatres had their share of sound equipment, along with the large. Charges that Western Electric, a huge organization, was interested only in other mammoth organizations were thus proved thoroughly false.

Opinion through the industry in regard to Western Electric has changed considerably through recent weeks. Worries that the "electrical monster" was going to devour the motion picture industry seem to have been given an indecent burial, just what they deserved.

Western Electric's record in the motion picture industry has so far been a highly honorable one.

Fox Theatres

RUMORS, familiar rumors, that William Fox is to build a forty or sixty or eighty story theatre on Broadway are again being heard. The building is to go up on the southwest corner of 42nd Street and Broadway, just where it can best be seen by all the members of the Motion Picture Club.

The fact of the matter is that Fox is considering a huge theatre on that site. Whether his plans will go through or not depends on many circumstances. Just how his plans are progressing no one knows. For Fox long ago learned not to say anything about his projects until the last name was blotted on the dotted line.

In other words, if all goes well there will probably be a great new Fox theatre on Broadway. If it doesn't go well, if someone wants a little more than Fox is willing to give, then there are other things that might be done with all that Fox money.

Georgie Jessel

TIFFANY-STAIL gave a highly spectacular private showing of Georgie Jessel in "Lucky Boy" at the Embassy theatre. At 11 o'clock on a Friday morning the house was packed.

Jessel soon proved himself to be a real acquisition to sound pictures. His voice registered admirably and his manner of presenting his familiar songs was made for the new order of pictures. He was given a highly enthusiastic reception.

"Lucky Boy" will be a box office hit. It has all the elements that go together for an old-fashioned success.

Jessel got into talking pictures late, but he's apparently making up for lost time.

Le Baron Bars "Talkie" in Referring to Sound Film; Audience Campaign Growing

By DOUGLAS HODGES

They are juggling words today in Hollywood.
—and all because of the Herald-World campaign to find a suitable name—one to which the public will react favorably—for talking pictures.

A canvass of studios shows producers are the most vigorous of any of the personnel to find a word that will replace “talkie” in a suitable and meaningful way. Publicists dislike the word. They prefer another but are reluctant to join in the launching of a new word because of their peculiar position with relation to newspapers.

Whether the word will be “Resonfilm,” “Graphotone,” or “Movietone,” Carl Laemmle doesn’t know; but it will be a word that is easy to spell, read, pronounce and remember.

William LeBaron, general manager of production and vice president of FBO, declares emphatically, “The word, talkie, will no longer be tolerated by official reference among members of this organization.” He clearly states that the word, “Dialogue,” is being incorporated into FBO’s identification of the talking picture. FBO people are instructed to term them Dialogue films and Sound films.

He states further that, “according to a survey being made weekly among exhibitors FBO finds that interest in Dialogue films is growing regularly.”

There are those like Robert Welsh who are interested in the very keenly follow the developments of sound. Mr. Welsh who is general manager of Universal Studios and was formerly editor of Moving Picture World, believes however that the best word that can describe it and the best word that at the same time dignifies it is “Movietone,” one we already have.

“It’s a word of only nine letters,” says Mr. Welsh, “and one that is easily acceptable by the public. It bears a heavy investment made by Fox to exploit it.

Eddie Carewe got into a string of audios, vocos, phonies, and resons that would frighten a philosopher when he began talking about the words that the Herald-World might encounter in its search for stems, roots and prefixes with proper derivation. He began by saying, “It’s difficult for me to give a correct name for talking pictures because my sympathies are rather with the silent pictures.”

And then he added, “Johnny Grey told me they might be called the ‘Chinema.’” Al Boasberg says “the Smooshies” typify them. A producer in town says they are “squawkies.” Some people call them names that you can’t print.

“Something like ‘vocalfilm,’ ‘audiopix,’ ‘audfilm,’ ‘phonecinema,’ ‘sonofilm,’ ‘resonfilm,’ ‘cinephone’ or what have you might be useful,” said one.

“Y’ gotta get a better name than ‘talkies,’” says Harry Joe Brown, associate producer with Charles R. Rogers, whose pictures have been under First National release two years and under other release four others.

Mr. Brown observes that, “Every guy in town ought to get his noodle working on the job of finding a word because a good one is harder than the devil to find.”

But Harry Joe Brown is a student of production, a scholar with degrees from University of Michigan, post work in University of Chicago and is not bad as a linguist. He ran over his Latin derivations for a moment and then came back with a hasty conclusion that the word won’t come from a man of letters.

Tom Mix had several words to say about it this week. He said that he and Tony hadn’t done so much in the line of talking pictures but that he had put a lot of thought on them.

And you know how droll Tom talks and how sincere he was when he said, “I want this industry of mine to find a better word than ‘Talkies’ because I love this old business of making pictures and I hate to see a worthwhile effort just be placed in a bad light by a fickle public that misnames things whenever it can.”

Comments on and suggestions offered in the Herald-World's campaign to find a suitable name for talking pictures are coming from many sources—the public, dramatic critics, producers, exhibitors, publicists, directors and all others associated with the industry.

"Vitascope" Is Offered

In answer to the theatre industry's request for a name for the combination of motion picture projection and synchronized sound accompaniment, I wish to submit, for your approval, the word "Vitascope".

As you can easily see "Vitascope" is composed of the prefix "vit" denoting "life" when spoken, and the suffix "scope," which in its general total range of a subject. Therefore, the word "Vitascope" may be interpreted as the science which is based on the range of fundamental principles necessary to reproduce a scene or image as if such were actually being enacted or alive and appearing before the spectator. The synchronized sound picture does this. It incorporates a moving image projected to the screen and synchronized accompaniment of voices, music, sound effects or a combination of the three.

Our chief concern in coining a new word will be the public's reaction and popular approval of any new expression to take the place of such names of "tablo" and "spoke" which are being widely used because of their ease of pronunciation. The public should understand but little difficulty in becoming accustomed to the word "Vitascope," however, as its prefix has already been adopted by a large percentage in the well known trade names: "Vitaphone," whose meaning is generally understood throughout the United States to such an extent that in some cases any sound installation is frequently called, (erroneously, of course) "Vitaphone." In conclusion it might also be said that the word "Vitascope" reflects the dignity and purpose of an industry so closely related to modern life.

—JOHN B. WYSS, Teutopolis, Ill.

"A See and Hear"

Those manufactured Latinizations are liked by the public remains in museums. Why not clothe the dry bones with living tissue! They never can become current popular vernacular.

Permit us to suggest the Shakespearean English — Anglo-Saxon! "Can't the dead language, a "See and Hear," describes the thing—it says it! It is better than hivow—It is alive!"

—PAUL RICHTER, Orchestra, Colonial theatre, Montpelier, O.

Professor Apologizes

Please do not think that I have been unmindful of the request you made. The fact of the matter is that I simply cannot think of a term that would fit the case. I have raked my brain and the brain of others, have waited for an insipirator moment, but all to no avail.

—GEORGE W. OBERHAG, Department of English, St. Olaf college, Northfield, Minn.

"Audien" Hardly

I am pleased to note that you are making a drive to find a suitable name for the sound picture. This action is to be commended. Your initiative is praiseworthy and the end in view necessary.

The public is quick to grasp a synonym. Already the words "talkie" and "speakie" are heard in repetition. And within a few months they will have such a firm place in the public's vocabulary that erosion will be impossible. The word "movie" will forever etch itself industry because we made no effort to eliminate it at the start. Your proposal of the word "audien" should be seriously considered. Its connotation is perfect. It smacks of modernism, yet is dignified and appropriate. As I see it, there is but one objection to its adoption—the lack of immediate application to the motion picture when first heard.

To the layman "audien" will at once be applied to "audience," due to its derivation, but will have sufficient significance to distinguish the motion picture audience from the legitimate." —E. F. NUTTER, Rechelsburg, W. Va.
Girl Manager Who Began in Shed
At Five, Urges Sales Counsellors

Miss Monica T. Lamere at 18 Runs Two Theatres and Says She'd Rather Drop Lease Than Herald-World

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

LUDLOW, VT., Jan. 8—"Salesmen think more in sympathy with the problem of the exhibitor in 'the sticks,' and less in competition for his order.
Give him a boost with honest counsel." This is the plea of Miss Monica T. Lamere, who though only 18, has successfully managed the two motion picture houses here for more than a year.

Despite her youth Miss Lamere is a real veteran of the industry. She learned her alphabet from the full sheet litographs of Biograph days and could read the press agency of the clip-sheets before ever she went to school, for her father, Harry N. Lamere, has been the arbiter of Ludlow entertainment programs since she was a babe in arms.

Writing to a stock of EXHIBI-TORS HERALD-WORLDS she declined that but for such advices as is contained in the "What the Picture Business Needs" she felt the theatre manager would be in a permanent predicament for his selection of a program.

"Up here in the country we would be hopeless without such help as our trade magazines afford us in the exchange of experiences with our tutors," she continued. "It has been a constant problem for my father and me to sift the pictures offered him and to realize what is best suited for our city. Without the candid opinions of fellow exhibitors our average of successful selections would certainly be far better than it has been.
We would sooner dispense with our theatre least than with our HER-ALD-WORLD, for without the latter the former would be but a liability.

When only five she demonstrated her exhibitor's heritage in threatening her dad, a monopoly with a show of her own in the family woodshed at a two penny print. Other children might be content with pins and buttons but only the hard core of the realm would open the doors to the Lamere woodshed for little Monica's mimdicking of her impresario father. She demanded cash and had sold all nine served seats too, before discovering that her paternal rival had confiscated the rotary kales. She had intended to project her show, besides tearing down her hand-printed advertising from the trees throughout the neighborhood.

The girl manager has never missed a single picture in Ludlow since she has been of school age, a record in itself perhaps. Certainly the several thousand pictures she has attended have given her an excellent background in the selection of her community's moving picture offering by affording her an unexcelled opportunity to sense her fellow fan's reactions to the various types of pictures.

Through high school Monica was permitted to help with the ticket and ushering. On Sundays she collaborated in the correspondence, serving as her father's secretary. After graduation from Black River Academy—President Coo-lidge's high school too, incidentally—she chanced upon college instead of college in order to relieve her dad as soon as possible of the office detail, for motion pictures have been but a hobby with him.
Printing is his trade and hobby.

Father was stricken seriously ill shortly after Monica completed her commercial course and the business developed entirely upon her before she had had time to hang up her bookkeeper's diploma. She proved equal to the emergency, however, and was overjoyed to hear her father agree that she had done even better than he himself ever had done in a similar period. Her management had been profitable enough to warrant her assuming complete charge permanently, he said, in turning over the business to her after his recovery. Since then, more than a year ago, Miss Lamere has had the responsibility of every detail in the seletion and exhibition of every program in both Hammond Hall and the Town Hall, Ludlow's only picture houses.

Wrote All Advertising

She writes all the advertising of a local nature, helps in ticket selling and when her boy aids have to be absent, even posts the lithographs and distributes the window cards. But no matter how busy she may be, she still views every show.

"I haven't lost a bit of my childish enthusiasm for the screen," she explained.
"And besides seeking personal enjoyment in the picture, I can find out how our friends like it by sitting among them.

The greatest obstacle in motion picture exhibition seems to me to lie where one ought least to expect to find an obstacle, the salesmen. I have been discussing the the country exhibitors appreciation of selling methods from her own experience.

"The average salesman is all wrong about the country audience. He cannot realize, or will not realize, that there is as definite a demarcation between program preferences in country cities as is between political preferences in metropolis and village. A hit in the big towns is most likely to flop in the country districts. What spells success for Broadway may mean ruin on Main Street.

It isn't the superspecials and superfictuals that get across for the small exhibitor, according to our Ludlow experience.
Time and again we have seen it demonstrated that drive-in theatre managers cannot coax the customers literally across Main Street to view the highly touted ro-manic or historical pageant, while blood and guts Westerns, Verticals or animal animal star stories have a positive and profitable appeal. Curious, yet true.

Librarian Adds Proof

"Our village librarian bears me out in this, for people choose their pictures as they choose their books. In Ludlow we are blessed with an unusually fine library, but it is not the romanticists and poets whom we read. We read the sensational rustic dust in their undisturbed slumber on our library shelves while there is always a waiting list for Zane Grey, Peter B. Kyne, Rex Beach, and other writers of pioneering eras and apostles of the great outdoors.

"Nor is the reason far to seek. It is merely a question of environment, I think.
In our proximity to the wide open spaces we suffer less from artificiality, the gloss and gaiety of small towns, and for little or no part of us. Curiously too, when we venture to the city we seem mad in our pursuit of the cosmopolitan and are quite content to relive in the city's entertainment upon which we would turn thumbs down at home.

"Put them in a comfortable, by contrast, to return to our accustomed corner in our town hall and thrill with the kids for five reels in the triumph of right over wrong and the final rescue of the fair lady in a wild and woolly Western. In a word, I think country folks like city shows just to escape back to our own home. They go to extravaganzas when away from home just to be able to tell their neighbors they had seen the same and, in fact, not because they enjoy it especially.

Black and White of Experience

"This is but a casual survey of our country problem in program selection. Yet when we try to explain it to the average salesman he will argue himself hoarse in the face to contradict the black and white of our experience. Out of 20 recent special features, including "The Covered Wagon, "The Way of All Flesh" and the like, we lost money on nineteen and barely broke even on the twentieth. Yet strangers to our theatres will try to prove us wrong in our prejudices.

"Dad and I have compiled a record of every picture exhibited in both our houses during the last year, with the women city and rural audiences as affected attendance carefully checked.
We call our volume 'Figures Don't Lie,
"after the manner," Miss Lamere began. In the face of this record there are salesmen who will waste thousands of words in attempted refutation of our observation.
The salesman some day is going to ex-cute a right about face and approach the

Fox Fetes Silver Anniversary
With Plans for 7 Huge Houses

Broadway Theatre-Office Building Would Be 40 Stories High—Agreements Signed for Boston Site—Predicts $200,000,000 Fox Chain Business

Coincident with the observance of his Silver Anniversary in the motion picture industry, William Fox announced this week a new expansion program calling for construction of huge theatre and office buildings of 5,000 to 6,000 seats within a year in a key group of cities, including New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Boston, and Baltimore, according to newspaper dispatches from New York.

The New York theatre building, reported as a ten-million-dollar project, would be a 40-story structure at Broadway and 47th street, where the Central theatre now stands, and would dominate one of the most striking parts of New York.

The company has recently opened large buildings as in Detroit, Brooklyn and Washington and buildings at St. Louis, San Francisco, and other key points. The sites already have been selected, it was stated. Fox is quoted as follows:

"About three and a half years ago I decided that the motion picture industry was growing. I wanted to expand and build a bigger theatre. The recent activity in opening new super-theatres, seating 5,000 to 6,000 people, is the result of an expansion of many years' work and planning."

"After reorganizing the program department, we decided to extend our activities into all of the principal cities of the United States, and in 1925, the new Fox Theatres Corporation was formed, with an initial investment of $12,000,000."

"Fox predicted of the Fox Theatres Corporation, "In three or four years it would not surprise me to see this business equal $200,000,000 a year."

Twenty-five years ago Fox, who has been brought from Hungary by his family as a poor immigrant boy, made a modest start in the film business. For $1,664.67 he bought a one-third interest in a tiny cinema theatre of 146 seats contrived out of a store on Broadway in Brooklyn. From that inconspicuous start Fox has risen to be one of the leading millionaires of the country, holding hundreds of theatres throughout the country, with a seating capacity exceeding 600,000. Among them is the Roxy theatre, largest in the world, and the new Fox theatre in St. Louis, called the second largest, to be formally opened this month as part of the Silver Anniversary celebration.

140 Acres of Studios

From a circumscribed studio at Fort Lee, N. J., which the Foxes inaugurated when it was found necessary to produce its own pictures for filling its expanding theatre circuits, the organization now has two huge studios in Hollywood and nearby. They comprise 140 acres and include Movietone City, a 40-acre plant with 27 buildings and eight stages, completed with typical Fox speed in three months. In addition there are the studio facilities in the New York headquarters at 10th avenue and 55th street, with capacity for ten units. These are now devoted to Movietone short subjects.

130 Branches in World

The laboratory equipment of Fox has grown from a ramshackle building at Fort Lee, first used in 1914, to huge plants in New York and Hollywood. A production capacity of 56,000 feet a day has soared to 1,000,000 feet in the New York laboratory alone.

Exchange offices have grown from half a dozen to 130 branch offices throughout the world. From 150 workers the number now employed by Fox Film Corporation totals 8,666.

Agreements Signed for Boston Traction Purchase

BOSTON, Jan. 8—With a strong foothold already obtained in the New England territory through purchase of the Poli Circuit, comes the announcement that agreements have been signed for the purchase of about an acre of land at Tremont and Boylston streets, this city, by interests representing William Fox. It was also announced that the largest theatre in New England would be erected by Fox interests in Boston as part of a theatre-office building project.

Bandits Shoot Way Out of Filled House

With $3,000 Loot; "Thriller" Chase Ensues

(See Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Every resource of the New York police department is being thrown into the search for eight bandits who Sunday night held up the Fox Poli Theatre, in Brooklyn, and escaped with $3,000. It was show time and the 2,500-seat house was crowded.

The bandits fought their way out of the theatre in a gun battle in which one policeman was wounded, and then followed a typical motion picture chase with bullets flying between the bandit car and pursuing police.

The bandit car was later found abandoned with 27 bullet holes in it, and blood on the car showed, police say, that at least one of the bandits had been wounded. Patrons were terrified by the shooting. Many of them fled the theatre.

No trace had been found of the bandits late Monday.
Community Tieups Point Way To Increased Receipts in ’29

Biechele Sends Woman to Confer with Parents on Pictures for Children—F & R Has Business Association Operate Theatre at Premiere—Hallowe’en Party Draws Thanks

By ERNEST A. ROVELSTAD

Greater and more effective use of the community tieup as a direct link between the theatre manager and the box office for increased business in 1929 is seen in the experiences of the past year. Exhibitors are awakening more and more to the fact that the exploiting of goodwill, not necessarily in connection with the screening of a particular picture, will show him larger returns than in 1928 when he comes to balancing his books next winter.

Sound has been a factor in bringing new patrons into the theatre, but even sound will not bring the added receipts possible unless astute management is asserted in the form of exhibitor-evidence of his public’s affairs, leading theatre owners agree. To show what has been done in an outstanding way in the direction of community tieups in the past year, the HERALD-WORLD called upon its correspondents, and the first of their replies are printed here-with. It is also to be emphasized that exhibitors are invited to send in descriptions of their most effective community tieups in the past year.

Turns Show Over to Business Association
(Special to the Herald-World)

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 8.—Probably the most notable community tieup of F & R theatres in 1928, and certainly the one that reached the greatest number of people, was that in connection with the opening of the Granada theatre, an up-town house. The day before the regular public opening, F & R turned the theatre over to the Hennepin-Lake Business Men’s Association, an organization in the Granada theatre district. F & R provided the association with the entire makings of the show, films, operator, musicians, and so on, and then let the Hennepin-Lake association put on the show. The business men had charge of the tickets, with admission only by invitation.

"That the business men were "all for" the Granada goes without saying. Since opening late in the summer, the theatre has had excellent patronage from the neighborhood. The business people patronize it largely as a matter of fact and their patronage of the theatre and its pictures brings in many residents of the neighborhood who otherwise would be tempted to go downtown, as well as new patrons.

Two other tieups, both at the State theatre, a downtown house, proved successful. The week preceding the showing of "Four Sons," Clem Pope, then manager, and E. V. Seibol, publicity director, went out after the German patronage. Thousands of post cards, depicting the mother with her four sons, were mailed to members of the various German societies in the Twin Cities and territory within a 25 mile radius. Pastors of the various German Catholic and German Lutheran churches in the Twin Cities were also induced to make the pictures the center of their pulpits on the Sunday preceding the opening.

Lottery Sentence Upheld; Says Free Raffles Are Legal

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—The Louisiana supreme court held that it would not issue a writ to review the facts in a criminal prosecution, or to ascertain whether the defendant was justified a conviction where no question of law was involved.

The defendant alleged that the facts in the case did not constitute a violation of the Louisiana lottery laws. Prizes were given to patrons of the theatre each night, the patrons being given a number which could win the chance on the prizes.

However, according to prosecuting officials, the procedure is entirely legal if numbers entitling anyone to a chance on the prizes are distributed on the streets, to passers-by and to residences and if when the drawing is held, the winning number is posted outside the theatre. The holder is not in the theatre. According to the district attorney's office, there is an element of chance only when a sum of money is paid for the privilege of competing on a prize.

Columbia Appoints William J. Morgan Sales Executive

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—William J. Morgan, who for many years has been a well known figure in the motion picture industry, has been appointed sales manager for Columbia, according to the announcement issued yesterday.

Morgan has had a varied as well as lengthy career. He was president of Len J. Levy, president of the distribution phase of motion pictures. For eight years he was in charge of the home office sales department and the contract department of First National. He later became general sales manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, now Pathe, and for the last 15 months has been European general manager for First National.

Washington State Exhibitors Wait on National Affiliation

Change Name to Allied Amusements of Northwest, Elect Al Rosenberg—Pizor Renominated at Philadelphia—Urges More Advertising in Trade Publications

Two state exhibitor conventions held since Christmas brought decisions of national interest. The MPTO of Washington, meeting at Seattle, decided to change its name to the Allied Amusements of the Northwest and voted that the organization for the present shall not join any national exhibitor body but leave the matter open until a future session.

Al Rosenberg was named president.

Among the recommendations of Lewen Pizor, renominated for president of the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, at a session in Philadelphia, was one that the producing and distributing companies be urged to increase their advertising in the trade publications.

Bigger Film Ad Budget Proposed by Lewen Pizor

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—At the meeting of the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware held at the Elks Club December 27, the following officers were renominated: President, Lewen Pizor; secretary, Mike Lessy; and treasurer, George P. Aarons. Election of officers will be held January 17.

A motion was made by President Pizor that the various film companies be asked to devote more money to trade journal advertising. It was also moved and seconded that the by-laws be amended so that nomination may be held in January and elections in April.

The application of the Benn theatre, Chester, for membership was accepted. Following the regular business meeting, a buffet luncheon was served.

More than 100 reservations already have been received for the annual banquet of the MPTO at the Franklin hotel.

Sound Equipment Discussed

As there are four holdovers, Grombacher, Kenworthy and Thall were elected for the three-year term; Fay for two years and McGill for one year.

At the invitation of the association, sound equipment was discussed by Pete Carroll, representatives of the Quackenbush; and of Kohlstache, and M. L. Quackenbush of Delux-Master-Phone.

Stockholders Strive to Retain Ascher Chain as Receiver Seeks Right to Sell

Filing a bill of application by the receiver in federal court for the right to dispose of the Ascher circuit in Chicago, held and operated by the Chicago Title and Trust Company since last spring, has aroused the stockholders to take steps to retain their interest in the properties.

Plans of the stockholders have not as yet taken definite form, it is stated, but in whatever form the plan is adopted, according to Chester R. Davis, chairman of the board of directors, the receiver will have the aid of the company in reclaiming their interests. The circuit, one of the first in the country and at one time one of the most important, was declared solvent some months ago, but upon failure of the receiver, his brothers to reassume management, was continued under the direction of the receiver.

In the reorganization of the circuit it is expected that Nate Ascher, former president, who holds the larger portion of the stock owned by the three brothers, will continue to be identified with the chain, but that Harry and Max Ascher will sever their connection.
Help Health Authorities Fight “Flu,” Sydney Cohen Tells Exhibitors

Recounts Experiences of New York Theatre Owners in 1918, When Copeland Insisted Houses Remain Open—Producers Provided Slides

SERVICE of the theatre owner to the public as well as to himself in fighting further spread of influenza is suggested by Sydney S. Cohen, former president of the MPTOA, in a letter to the Herald-World in which he recounts the experiences of New York exhibitors with health authorities in the epidemic of 1918.

WHILE pressure was being brought to bear by other authorities to force the closing of the theatres, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, then commissioner of health of New York City, urged rather that the theatres be kept open. With cooperation of the producers, special trailers were made and the theatres not only remained open but also proved a tremendous factor in eliminating the illness. How that campaign was waged is detailed in Cohen’s letter, which follows:

“I read in the Pensacola, Florida, newspapers of the closing of all theatres and schools by the City Health Officer there, and this action will undoubtedly be followed in other places throughout the country as happened in the ‘flu’ epidemic of 1918.

“At that time, when I was active in theatre ownership, Dr. S. Royal Copeland, then my Commissioner of Health in New York City, and who is now our United States Senator, and discussed the situation with him. Pressure was being brought to bear on him to close the theatres and other places of public assembly in the city, because of this ‘flu’ epidemic. We suggested to him that instead of closing our theatres, he utilize our screens, theatres, programs and rostrums if necessary to carry a message to the public to allay the panic and fear engulfing the people. With the cooperation of the producers, special trailers were made and cartoons warning the people against sneezing, coughing and spitting in public and to use their handkerchiefs and to cover their mouths, and to take other preventative measures.

Stay Open, Says Copeland

‘Theatres everywhere and places of public assembly of any kind, such as schools, etc., being closed, and even the Surgeon General of Health at Washington was urging this result.’

‘Dr. Copeland made a public announcement urging that these places remain open, telling the public through our screens and otherwise, that he believed it would be far better to have the places of amusement continue, as it afforded relief and recreation to the public who needed so badly under such circumstances. Two days after this announcement by Dr. Copeland, Woodrow Wilson, then President, while in New York on a visit attended a public performance at the Liberty Theatre.

“Our theatres remained open all during the ‘flu epidemic. We carried these messages of health and precaution in our programs, on the screen and in the weeklies, and it was found after the epidemic had subsided that New York City, despite its close quarters, crowded subways and stores, had the lowest death and sickness rate of any city in the country.

“This was the strongest kind of an endorsement for the sanity and common sense displayed at this critical time by Health Commissioner Copeland.

Emphasizes Theatre Ventilation

‘Our experience here in New York may prove helpful to theatre owners and to the theatre going public elsewhere if it is brought to the attention of the theatre owners. Conditions are bad enough as they are for theatre owners and now many of them face the closing of their theatres because of this epidemic. Perhaps the reprinting of Dr. Copeland’s message of ten years ago (printed elsewhere on this page) may prove helpful. No doubt the thought will present itself of suggesting to theatre owners the calling of the attention of their public health authorities to the whole-some conditions surrounding the operation of their theatres insofar as cleanliness, ventilation, etc., are concerned, and the invaluable aid they can give in carrying health messages from these authorities, as well as the need that all public relations be in all times of panic for recreation under wholesome conditions.

“It is another real opportunity for the industry to offer helpful public service.’

Copeland Announcement In Fight on Influenza

“Commissioner Copeland announced,” writes Sydney S. Cohen, “that theatres would remain open as usual and the public would be educated in fighting the disease through slides, placards and announcements reading: To prevent the spread of influenza, please cough or sneeze, if you must, into your handkerchief. There is no danger if you heed this warning. By order of the Board of Health, Royal S. Copeland, President.”

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—the acquisition of the Victor Talking Machine Company by the portable radio interests, announced in these pages some time ago, was effected this week. The method of acquisition consisted of giving one share of new Radio Common, one share of new Radio Preferred, and $5 in cash for each share of Victor. The plan was looked upon as highly advantageous to Victor.

Under the plan, Radio stock was to be split five-for-one.

Theatres Are Closed in Four New York Towns During “Flu” Spread

(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—The present epidemic of flu is raising havoc with the motion picture theatres of New York state, according to reports. In four northern New York towns, Brushton, Redwood, Alexandria Bay and New Norfolk, theatres were closed last week and will remain so until the present epidemic ceases. Some villages report that at least fifty per cent. of their residents are ill. Albany theatres played to fair-sized crowds last week, while Troy showed a noticeable slump.

Exhibitors Fear Gang Is Aiming at Film Theatres as Bandits Attack 3 Houses

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—Three robberies and attempted robberies of motion picture houses in Northern California the past few days, have inclined theatre owners to believe that organized gangs are at work.

Four youths staged a spectacular holdup last week at the Wilson theatre in Fresno, making away with $1,500, the day’s receipts. Two of the bandits hid on the mezzanine floor and stopped Kenneth Workman, the doorman, and Miss Perne Salee, ticket seller, as they carried the money to the manager’s office. Workman recognized them and knocked one of them down, but the other grabbed the money and both escaped. Next day three of the bandits were arrested at a ranch, and the stolen money was recovered.

Safe crackers visited the Plaza theatre in Oakland, during the holidays, knocked the combination knob off the safe, and made away with $80. The men entered the building through a skylight.

Thieves gained an entrance to the Hayward theatre in Hayward and tried to force the door of the office safe containing several hundred dollars, but they were frightened away.

'Way down South in the land o' cotton where the leisure of old is not forgotten, King Vidor in such a setting is an anachronism, but, we're told, 'twas necessary, this scene being laid near Memphis where the M G M director shot sequences for "Hallelujah," in which all the players are colored.

The spirit of 1929—the spirit, it would seem, of eternal youth, especially of youth as it eternally is these days—but a spirit with much in its favor when symbolized by Lina Basquete, who is presented above in the spirit of her new Columbia film, "The Younger Generation."

Pat Rooney, Mrs. Rooney (Marion Bent) and Patsy, famous vaudevillians, as recorded by the Herald-World photographer at their hotel in Chicago, where they paused on their way to the Coast to make Universal short audiens.

Left: Once a screen comedian, always a screen comedian. Or was that said of some other vocation? No matter, it is applicable to Cliff Bowes, veteran comic who has returned to Educational to play featured roles in Cameo one-reel comedies.

A wreath for Leo, M G M's renowned representative of the cat family, as he arrives in Atlanta on his tour of the world. Leo is spending the winter in the Southland, where his receptions have been notably like the climate. Tom James, manager of Loew's Capitol in Atlanta, and Captain Phillips, trainer, are shown decorating Leo upon his new triumph.

Fame, apparently, has pointed at Jane Daly, who has stepped out of the ranks to take an important role in M G M's "The Mysterious Island," Jules Verne romance.
A new chief to confer with has Cecil B. DeMille, who is shown talking over his first M.G.M contribution, "Dynamite," with Louis B. Mayer, vice president in charge of production of M.G.M, in the latter's office at the studio.

Right: A new portrait of Greta Garbo which emphasizes the cast of feature distinguishing her Scandinavian beauty. Miss Garbo's latest production is M.G.M's "A Woman of Affairs," in which, of course, she is co-starred with John Gilbert.

At home with her pets. Louise Fazenda is shown with Black and White, two puppies which, owing to the fact that our dog expert is out to lunch, we can only classify as belonging to the cute family. Miss Fazenda is now working in Warner Brothers' "The Desert Song."

H. B. Warner, who seems to be climbing to still greater heights in his long career, has a character role in Warner Brothers' timely story of the Antarctic, "Conquest."

Will we "change cars" in this fashion some day? For the present, however, let such transfers be restricted to hardy fellows like Reed Howes, who is shown in a midair scene from Educational's "The Air Derby," new production in the "Russ Farrell, Aviator" series of short thrillers starring Howes. Lieut. Earl Robinson is the pilot of the upper plane.
Does Personality Count in Managing Theatre? Read About Garrity!

He Always Stayed in Background Until His Man Friday Failed to Appear—Now He's on Stage Daily

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

BOSTON, Jan. 8.—Personality counts in every sphere of life. That's what Ed C. Garrity, manager of the Columbia theatre, has recently found. Garrity has always been an aggressive exhibitor. He has kept abreast of the times in providing entertainment, but, until comparatively recently, he did this unobtrusively. If it were necessary to have somebody on the stage as a master of ceremonies, he engaged a professional to fulfill this role. If he wished to broadcast news of important developments in the Columbia theatre and program, he hired somebody familiar with public appearances.

A small man, in height and weight, the exhibitor kept himself in the background. The last thing in the world he would be was IT he thought. But one night his Man Friday failed to appear, to take charge of a special contest. Garrity was in a quandary. As a final resort, he went on the stage and took charge of the action there, serving as announcer.

This experience convinced him that he should come into the open more and talk to the patrons. Although he spoke on the stage in only a conversational tone, he planted himself right on the footlights, in order to put his talk over effectively. He was a talker, and to his group. He explained the contest. Live animals and birds were to be awarded the contest winners.

The average announcer would allow everybody to come up on the stage to collect the awards, but Garrity used better judgement. The men, boys and young girls, he invited to go on the stage, via a flight of stairs, and get what they won. However, if a woman of mature years and refinement proved a winner, she went only as far as the orchestra pit, being told to go around to the stage and get her trophy. It was realized by this exhibitor that squawking of the animals and birds would be humiliating to some of those who won them if the creatures had to be carried through the crowded house.

Twice a Day Appearance Now

This adventure on the stage resulted in Garrity making practically twice a day appearances in front of the curtain. He takes his patrons into his confidence in outlining plans for the future at the Columbia. He thanks the customers for coming; he stresses his desire to have all the modern devices of motion picture theatres, and pledges himself to install these just as soon as business warrants. The personal angle is now brought into this presentation of the Columbia. There is no affectation on Garrity's part and no frills. He came out in an ordinary suit, and simplicity is his vocabulary.

Service with a Smile

"Friends, I want to thank you for your patronage, which is increasing every day. For the last three weeks we did rec-

"And, if you continue to show your appreciation of what I've been doing, I can promise you a lot more for your money than you are now getting, which everybody thinks is pretty near the limit. I have been very much pleased at the increase in patronage, and I can assure you I appreciate your interest. I'm here to show you the pictures you want, and if you will tell me what you prefer, I will do my best to put them in this house.

"As it is now I have the first run of the pictures in the south end. Now, in this connection, I would like to tell you about several pictures I have booked for next week. (He then discusses the good points of feature films to be shown at the Colum-bia the following week, with days and dates stressed.)

There are complete changes of program Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Garrity is a firm believer in stage attractions as business builders, and, on Sundays, he presents four vaudeville acts, a jazz unit and a song revue, with community singing.

When vaudeville acts need better scenic environment than is possible at the Colum-bia, Garrity points out to the audience that the acts are handicapped because of the lack of equipment, and asks the audience to remember this.

He frequently arranges for Saturday morning matinees and special treats on holidays for boys and girls. These treats consist of pictures and distribution of candy and novelties. This is one of the reasons why the Columbia is favored with more patronage of boys and girls than the aver-age theatre.

Hecht and MacArthur Signed To Write Originals for FBO

Each of Co-Authors of "The Front Page" Will Pen Story for 1929-30 Production—Hecht Already Working on "Upperworld"—New Stroke by Schnitzer

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, playwrights, novelists and co-authors of "The Front Page!" Broadway stage success, have been signed by Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of FBO Productions, as a further indication of the steps being taken by FBO in a great expansion program for 1929-30.

Each of the playwrights will write an original story for FBO. Hecht already has in work "Upperworld," and MacArthur is to start soon on his story, as yet untitled.

Hecht started his career in Chicago as city editor and managing editor of the Chicago Journal and Chicago Daily News, and during the war was transferred to the Berlin offices of the Chicago Daily News as war correspondent. In 1924 he founded and published the Chicago Literary Times.

He is an unusually prolific writer, having written, published and produced twelve novels and plays since 1921, among them the famous "Erik Dorn." His other novels include "Gargoyles," "Fantazius Mallory," "The Florentine Dagger," "1001 Afternoons in Chicago" and "Count Bruga." His plays include "The Egotist," in which the late Leo Dricthen starred; "The Kingdom of Evil," "The Wonder Hat" and "The Front Page," written in collaboration with MacArthur, which is playing at the Times Square, New York. Hecht also authored the film success "Underworld."

MacArthur is equally famous as a playwright. He is the author of the David Belasco-Lenore Ulric success, "Lulu Belle," and also authored "Salvation" in collaboration with Sidney Howard. He is the husband of Helen Hayes, star of "Coquette."

Work on the Hecht and MacArthur vehicles will be commenced at the FBO studios in Hollywood. The authors have completed their scripts.

Since his election to the presidency of FBO Productions four weeks ago, Schnitzer has been in constant negotiation with leading Broadway producers, playwrights and novelists. Two days after his election he purchased the screen rights of Florent Ziegfeld's musical success, "Rio Rita." Production on this talking and singing feature with the original "Rio Rita" company will be started at the FBO studios.

Seattle Business Leader Lauds "In Old Arizona"

(SEATTLE, WASH., Jan. 8.—E. H. Hatch, president of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, after seeing and hearing William Fox's "In Old Arizona," sent the following telegram to Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, Inc.

"Please convey to William Fox my heartfelt congratulations on 'In Old Arizona,' saw it at the premiere here at the 5th Avenue theatre and it has made a picture fan of me. 'In Old Arizona' is all, and more than I claimed for it and it is the finest screen production I ever saw. The Movietone brings truth and natural voice to the screen at last. This is a great triumph for the speaking screen and your industry."

(Special to the Herald-World)

SOUTH BEND, IND., Jan. 8.—Three youths who are alleged to have planned to hold up the Strand theatre on South Michigan street here, are being held in Indianapo lis in default of bonds on charges of conspiracy to commit a felony. They are Hubert Hamilton, brother of Betty Hamilton, cashier at the theatre; Joseph Car michael and William Cosgrove, all of Indianapolis.

Lo, the Poor Indian Is First Convicted In One Year of Stench Bomb Outrages

(SPECIAL TO THE HERALD-WORLD)

KOKOMO, Ind., Jan. 8.—Busy Allen, a half-bred Indian of Tulsa, Okla., has been convicted in city court here of placing stench bombs in a local theatre. He was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to 120 days on the state penal farm.

The conviction is the first the state has been able to get following a series of attacks on local motion picture theatres for almost a year. Ill-smelling liquids have been poured inside practically every theatre in the city, alleged to be the outgrowth of labor trouble between operators and theatre owners.

Ex-Olds, Blacker, local motion picture machine operator, accused of complicity in the crime, was acquitted when Allen refused to testify against him or to identify him as the man who employed him to come here from Chicago to plant the fluid in the Isis theatre.
Western Electric Installations Pass Thousand Mark in December

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The number of Western Electric sound equipment installations in American theaters passed the thousand mark with the turn of the year. Any official announcement stated that 169 installations were made during December, bringing the total up to 1,046.

Installations are now being made regularly and it is expected that the speed with which sound equipment is being installed will be accelerated.

Airplane Contest
Is Only Part of “Lilac Time” Drive

A model airplane contest was staged by Ray C. Brown, manager of the Strand, Akron, Ohio, with the publisher of the Akron Beacon Journal, on Christmas Day, with the showing of First National's Colleen Moore's "Lilac Time" at his theatre.

The Beacon-Journal has been promoting the making of miniature airplanes capable of actual flight, and a number of model airplane meets have been held in Akron. Brown offered a total value of $350 in cash prizes for the designers of the model airplanes which remained longest in the air. The first prize was $25, $15 with ten prizes of $1 each, also a pair of tickets to every boy who entered a model plane that actually flew, no matter for how long.

Guts Good Press Space

The Beacon-Journal played the meet up over double column headlines for a week in advance of the meet and the showing of the film. Brown also used a puzzle contest from the "Lilac Time" press sheet. Three weeks in advance of the showing, he placed novelty airplanes in the lobby with a 40x50 painted picture of a novelty airplane and tag stickers of " Lilac Time," which were on a point system. When the points were tallied, the winners were selected.

He borrowed a $1,000 talking machine, which plays twelve records without stopping, and used it in the lobby a week in advance, placing the record of the song, "I Dream of Lilac Time," with a special poster, announcing the coming of the picture.

American Legion Helps

The American Legion Log Cabin, on one of the most important streets in the town, used the "Lilac Time" banners for five days in advance. The 10x6 foot banner board panel was mounted on top of the marquee in advance and during the run of the picture.

Entire windows were given up to displays of "Lilac Time" stills, posters, book and sheet music in the following stores: Kresse 5 and 10c Store, Wirtgiler-Polling Music Store, Emerson Music Store, Brownell Music Store, Robinson Book Store. The music store also gave display of sheet music, records and special 2x2x8 cards on their music counters.

Paramount Buys Story
For All-Audience Picture
(Factory to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Paramount has bought the motion picture rights to Margaret H. Lawrence's story, "A Woman Who Needed Killing." The story will be filmed as an all-audience and Clive Brook and Bactanova will have the starring roles.

(Factory to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—Among the many traditions, obeyed by sound pictures will be that of the screen going to the sound studios for talent, says Cecil B. DeMille.

Paramount Doubles Equipment
At Long Island Sound Studio
(Factory to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Paramount and engineers of Electrical Research Products have doubled the sound recording equipment at Long Island studio of the producing company, and a third sound channel for recording musical scores will be completed in a few weeks, John W. Butler, executive manager of the studio, declared today.

Since the actual making of all-dialogue feature pictures was begun last fall with "The Letter," featuring Jeanne Eagels, followed by "The Hole in the Wall," it has become possible to make only a single talking scene at a time. There was but one sound channel. Consequently, only one picture was made at a time, in contrast to the old days when as many as six silent pictures were in production simultaneously at the studio, and the only speeding-up possible was the use of three sound channels.

Effective soundproofing of the new main floor stage is now in progress. Because of its size, and the necessity of keeping its space flexible, it was impractical to treat this stage with hollow-tile walls like the smaller stages.

A later experiment with heavy drapes, it has been decided to equip the stage with huge tent-like hangings, arranged to pull up on the floor to make a window of Venetian windowed curtains. The device was worked over by Butler in conference with sound experts of the studio staff.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—A special shell, fired in a regulation gun, has been perfected by Maurice Manne, effect director for Pathe at Sound Studios for use in shooting shots before the microphone. It is being used in filming "Ned McCobb's Daughter."
Writer Proposes Coolidge Lead War on Censoring Talking Films

Suggestion that Calvin Coolidge be retained by the motion picture industry to represent its interests when and if the question of censorship of dialogue productions becomes an issue for the United States Supreme Court to settle, is made in an article in a December issue of "The Nation," or "Padlocking the 'Talkies.'"

The hope that the "creed of the Star Chamber will not prevail" is voiced by writer, James N. Rosenberg, who declares that "previous restraint" as censorship has been defined since the days of Blackstone, was eliminated by the Fathers "because history taught it to be the tyrant's surest weapon."

"If the talking movie is to be subject to censorship what has become of our constitutional safeguard that 'Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of speech?'" the writer asks. "Is speech, when mechanically reproduced in its every accent and intonation, no longer speech? If not, what is it?"

Calling attention to a decision of the Supreme Court in 1915 that "the argument is wrong or strained which extends the guaranty of free speech to the billboards of our cities...the common-sense of the country is against the contention," the writer points out that in the wake of that ruling the following took place:

"Framed censorship was attempted in thirty states, was actually put through in seven, operates in over thirty cities by process of municipal ordinances, and the Battalions of the Blue Men were twice six tremendous assaults on Congress for national censorship; assaults defeated only by the single-handed opposition of Calvin Coolidge, while Governor of Massachusetts vetoed a censorship bill on 'constitutional grounds.'"

Can Speech Be Stifled?

"The censor's power to muzzle the talkless movie has been established in this country by statute and court decision," says the article. The censor and the talking movie is my present theme. Can the censors throttle speech via the talking movie as they are permitted to muzzle the film without vocal accompaniment? This is no academic subject for the Pennsylvania censors have already asserted such power. "Dare they do so in the face of our federal censorship; the slowly won liberty of speech in England; the fatal result of the muzzle."

"Then came the movies. If Gutenberg's hand press struck terror into the wielders of authority, it is not difficult to comprehend that in order to control movies, which contain untold amounts of public opinion, the forces of virtue girded their modest loins. The mothers of America, led by Canon Chase, gathered for battle. It is told that they had little headway. In 1912, Mayor Gaynor of New York denounced and vetoed a New York censorship bill. In 1913 an Ohio moving-picture censorship bill was enacted. Other states followed suit. It was in 1915 that the Supreme Court of the United States was called upon to decide whether an Ohio statute providing for censorship (i.e., previous restraint) over the movies was constitutional. The Supreme Court held that the policy which is exercised in granting licenses to theatres (chiefly in relation to fire hazards) justified censorship over the movie, and so sustained the statute; and at the very same term of court a similar Kansas statute, giving the censors power to suppress even the news reel, was likewise held constitutional.

Held Mere Spectacle

"These decisions the Supreme Court predicated largely on the then reigning situation, the moving picture is a mere spectacle. Counsel for the film companies urged expressly that censorship contravenes the constitutional safeguards. The fact that moving pictures are displayed not only for entertainment but as exponents of policies, teachers of science and history. The only answer of the Supreme Court was that since, according to the statute, 'Films of a moral, educational, or amusing and harmonious sound' were to be approved, "'no exhibition, therefore...will be prevented if its pictures have those qualities.'"

"That the determination of these qualities was left in advance to the decision of a censor, the Court refused to consider as an infraction of the constitutional safeguards. Its declaration made some years earlier, that the purpose of the constitutional provision was to prevent all previous restraint, then was transformed into a mere spectacle. Thus in 1915 the principle of previous restraint was for the first time adopted as a part of American jurisprudence..."

"Thus through wartime decision, not only were 'Dr Caligari' and 'The Covered Wagon' subjected to censorship as mere spectacles, but even the daily news reel with its pictures and text was relegated to the same category. Other courts soon followed suit. The New York Court of Appeals, in 1917 (Justice Cardozo not sitting) acquiesced."

Electric Officials Feted After Sound Film Show

(WINNIPEG, Jan. 9—Officials of the Northern Electric Company, which is installing the sound equipment in various Canadian theatres, were guests of honor at a dinner of Winnipeg projectionists at the Marlborough hotel, Winnipeg, following the presentation of the first synchronously projected film "Star of the Metropolis." The Northern Electric experts were H. S. Walker, A. Cash and Mrs. Cash, and A. Jackson.

"Present at the dinner were V. Armand, supervisor of projection for Famous Players Canadian; R. Reney, president of the Winnipeg operators local, and W. Hale, chief operator of the Metropolitan."
Here's Clue on How To Tell Public About Sound Equipment
(Special to the Herald-World)
BERKELEY, CAL., Jan. 9.—Since the installation of Vitaphone and Movietone equipment in the Campus theatre several months ago the management has been deluged with questions about synchronization, many people writing long letters requesting information.
Recently the Elks Club of Berkeley put on a Big Charity Circus in a huge tent that housed more than 100 exhibits by merchants and the Campus theatre arranged for a display of equipment used in the projection of sound pictures. The display presented the most interesting and outstanding features connected with Vitaphone, Movietone and the late inventions of the Western Electric Company in the field of sound synchronization.

Eddie Dowling Goes West
To Make Sono-Art Picture
Eddie Dowling and a party of ten have gone to Hollywood where Eddie will star in his first talking picture, "Broadway Bound." In the Dowling party from New York were O. E. Goebel, president, and George W. Weeks, vice president of Sono-Art productions, which will produce the picture; Frances Agnew, who is doing the screen adaptation, and others who will aid in putting the story on the screen.
Production will be started as soon as the party reaches the Metropoleon of St.
Christie Film Company.

Disney Sound Cartoons

business manager for Walt Disney.
Distribution in the Philadelphia and Washington territories will be through the Penn Productions at 1331 Vine street, Philadelphia, Upper New York State rights have been awarded to Richard G.
Fox of the Fox Film Exchanges at 257
Franklin street, Buffalo. These two distributors will fill the bulk of the Stanley-Warner bookings.

Sound Boosts B. O. for Universal Seattle House
(Special to the Herald-World)
PORTLAND, ORE., Jan. 8.—Melvin G.
Winston, manager of the Columbia theatre in Seattle, has made a tour of the Universal chain of houses in Oregon and Washington in company with K. Burke, general division manager of Universal Theatrical Enterprises. The Seattle house recently equipped with Vitaphone and Movietone is given the greatest satisfaction with an increase in patronage and it is expected other houses in the chain will be similarly equi-piped in the near future.

Sound "Trouble Shoots"
(Special to the Herald-World)
CULVER CITY, Jan. 8.—A regular staff of Movietone linemen and "trouble shooters" is maintained at the MGM studio.
The linemen run connections to locations and the "trouble shooters" eliminate disurbances disturbing voices or sounds.

Example of the film used in producing Fox's "Follies." It requires an enlarged screen and in addition to the synchronization it gives a third dimension effect, the principle being similar to that used by George K. Spoor at the old Essanay plant in Chicago in his third dimension experiments.

Spoor's Third Dimension Device
Reported in Movietone "Follies" HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—It has become known that Winfield Sheehan has completed production on the Fox "Follies," which is said to be a musical transferred to Movietone.

In order to obtain the near shot with eight dancers in the range of the camera it was found a special kind of film was necessary.
The standard width film will shoot a chorus at a long shot or it will shoot two people in a closeup but it fails in bringing eight dancers up to a closeup at the same time.

Whether actually Spoor's, the film that Fox used in making the picture was in principle like the film used by George K. Spoor in his third dimension camera. It requires an enlarged screen and gives third dimension effect together with synchronization.

People on the lot say that Spoor's equipment was used in the picture making. It is said that it was comparatively simple to attach the sound device to the three dimension equipment.

British Authors Divided Over
Future of Dialogue Pictures
What do Britain's authors think about talking pictures and their future?
Opinions vary, as is to be expected, but the arguments advanced by the authors in support of their viewpoints provide some interesting sidelights.

Following very outspoken criticism of talking pictures voiced by Warwick Deeping, a number of writers of the old and new schools are quoted by Film Weekly, recently launched British publication.

Deeping's view is upheld by Ethel Mannin, who calls the talking film "a contradiction in terms." Film Weekly quotes her in part as follows:

"Even though the voice-reproduction part of the talking film be improved from its present crudity and reaches perfection, it will never succeed in giving a realistic three-diensional quality to the essential two-diensional quality of the film!"

Not so is the effect upon William Gerhardt, the younger school of British novelists, who says:

"I think that talking pictures have a real future when producers realize the merits and demerits of dialogue.

"The effect of witty or delightful dialogue instead of interfering with the story will add to it by supplying something in a medium of its own and beyond competition."

Canon James O. Hannay ("George A. Birmingham"), after saying that he has no opinion because he never has seen or heard talking pictures adds:

"If, however, Mr. Deeping is right in saying that they are adding a new noise to the enormous number already in existence, I sincerely hope that they will absolutely and completely fail."

"What we want is something which creates a little quiet in a world distracted by entirely unnecessary sounds."

Sees Both Kinds Progressing
Another conception of the entire situation is broached by Marjorie Bowen, with the following:

"I do not consider one form of entertainment ever likely to supersede another. There seem to me to be great possibilities in the talking films, but I do not think either the silent film or the stage will be adversely affected.

Answers Mechanical Objections
A reader of Film Weekly takes issue with Warwick Deeping with the following rather unusual comment:

"I would suggest that when talking films have attained a high standard of excellence, as they undoubtedly will, the vulgarity of a cinema play will be decreased and not increased by the addition of speech."

THE STUDIO

LeBaron Announces Many Personnel Shifts for Greater F B O

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur Are the Latest Additions to the Company's Staff of Writers at Studio
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—William LeBaron, vice president in charge of production of F B O, added to his staff Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur today. It was the seventh addition he made this week.

Earlier he had announced that Luther Reed and Henry Hobart will be in parallel capacities as associate producers.

The studio is being rapidly reorganized in preparation for the execution of the previously announced change of policy in production. LeBaron is one of the few familiar faces on the lot who was there one year ago.

Hecht and MacArthur are authors of "The Front Page" which made them theatrical fan favorites when they had written "Underworld" for Paramount will now write "Upperworld" for F B O. MacArthur, his team mate, will write "Gold Coast," presumably a story of radio.

The company has also announced the purchase of "Rio Rita," musical comedy.

Among additions in personnel this week are the signing of Betty Compson, Walter Woods, Sally Blane, Harold Schwartz, Myles Connelly, and Don Eddy.

Compston will be featured in four pictures. Woods is a scenic artist, formerly with James Cruze. Connelly has been engaged as a production supervisor. Eddy is publicity director.

F B O people who have left or are soon to leave include Tom Tyler, Buzz Barton, Frankie Darro, Bob Steele, Martha Sleeper, Hugh Trevor, and Tom Mix. Ranger has also withdrawn.

Contract Suit Against
Betty Compson Settled Out of Court for $400
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—When the lawsuit of F. Nigro against Betty Compson was called for trial yesterday before Superior Judge Guerin, the case went "off calendar" when attorneys announced a settlement had been reached out of court. The amount paid by the actress, it is asserted, was $400.

The account of which the plaintiff alleged was one assigned him by the Edward Small Company. The complaint alleged that Miss Compson had been entitled to the concern April 16, 1926, for $3,000, the amount being a 10 per cent charge for obtaining for Mrs. Cruze a $30,000 contract. It was asserted that $1,500 was due and unpaid.

Miss Compson contended that the suit was outlawed by not having been collected within two years.

Lina Basquette and Peverel Marley Wed
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—Lina Basquette, widow of Sam Warner and during the past year player in a number of productions for various companies, was married to Peverel Marley, head cameraman for Cecil R. DeMille, at All Saints Protestant Episcopal church yesterday.

June Collyer was bridesmaid and Robert Edeson was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Ernest Belcher, dancing master, prominent on the coast.

Estelle Taylor to Play
In "Jungle" with Chaney
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—Estelle Taylor has been assigned the feminine role opposite Lon Chaney in "Jungle." It is the first time Miss Taylor has ever worked on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot.

Marc McDermott, Player Since Films' Early Days, Is Dead
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, CAL., Jan. 5.—Marc McDermott, identified with motion pictures from the time they first began to be recognized as an art and continuously since then one of the screen's most successful players of supporting roles, died at a Glendale hospital last Saturday of a liver complaint.

McDermott is known wherever motion pictures are shown as one of the screen's most effective personalities, and his roles are numbered by the hundreds. He also did some directing.

He had been in poor health for some time, and during the four weeks just prior to his death his life had been despaired of by his physicians.

Anthony Coldeway Named Assistant Executive for First National Studios
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Anthony Coldeway, well known motion picture executive has been appointed assistant associate executive at First National Studios.

Coldeway will work with Al Rockett on production matters and will be in charge of the writers and the story department. He will begin his duties at once.

Baclanova Is Sued by Al Rosen for $1460
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—Olga Baclanova was haled into court this week to face a claim against her amounting to $1,460. The claim was filed by Al Rosen who claims to have been her business manager. She asserted in a previous petition that he had taken advantage of her "ignorance of the English language" in obtaining her signature to a contract.

Fox-Movietone Studios Actually in Operation with Installation of Stoloff’s "Speakeasy" Company; Fairbanks Feeds Extras by Generous Budget

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—With producers eager to counteract the depression felt since before Christmas practically all studios have launched new pictures.

Adolph Zukor's presence on the West Coast showed its influence when Paramount stepped ahead of the other studios by beginning production on four stories this week. B. P. Schulberg states there will be three more next week, several hundreds of screen players each day for several weeks. It is a season when there is a premium on a day's work. Dozens of técnico contracts are made to transfer electrician and William Nolan as film cutter.

The staff of technicians consisted of Paul Burns as master of wardrobe, S. L. Chalf as assistant, and master of properties, Burgess Beall as interior decorator, Walter Fullman as director of técnicos, and J. R. Costello as gripman. The three musketeer companies of Mr. Fairbanks, Artagran, Тhe player, and The Rolfe Section—Le Dix, William Bakewell as Louis XIV, Nigel de Brulier as Cardinal Richelieu, Belle Bennett as Anne of Austria, Marguerite de la Motte as comtesse, Dorothy Revier as Milady de Winter, Vera Lewis as Madame Peronne, Ulrich Haupt as de Rochefort, Lon Pool as Father Joseph, Charles Stevens as Planchet and Henry Otto as master of the king's wardrobe.

Other pictures on the United Artists' list star the famous Mary Pickford; Vilma Banky, Mae Busch and Gloria Swanson. Sam Taylor is directing in “Coquette.” Al Santell is directing "Brown Avenue." Roland West is directing Miss Busch in "Nightstick." Von Stromho is directing Miss Swanson "Queen Kelly." While the first sequence, "Queen Kelly" are laid in an imaginary kingdom of the German Empire, Cobourg-Nassau, the second sequence is reproduced in the picture is in reality a composite reproduction of a number of continental palaces. Months were spent in preparation of the sets under supervision of one of the best technical thoroughness a by-word. The marbel hallways provided the background of one of the most dramatic scenes in the picture, in which Miss Swanson as Patricia Kelly, a convent girl, who has become involved in a romance with a prince is housed and driven from the palace by the mad queen.

The German sequences are almost complete and preparations are made to transfer production activities figuratively to German East Africa, the locale of the final portion.

Santell to Direct Dove

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.—First National called Al Santell back to the lot yesterday when it was decided that he will direct Billie Dove's next picture. The story is to be named. Santell's contract recently expired and he left the lot to join Sam Goldwyn on a Vitamkina picture.

MGM Speeds Release of Sound: 26 Acts Out Next Three Months

Spending up their releasing schedule because of the public’s enthusiastic reception of sound, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will place 26 new Metro Movietone Acts at the disposition of exhibitors in the first three months of this year, or two a week. The earlier group from Metro also consisted of 26 acts.

The list of short sound acts which will be released semiweekly from January 3 to March 30 includes two talking plays, “Confession,” directed by Lionel Barrymore, and “Nearly Divorced,” directed by Lowell Sherman and now playing at the Embassy theatre, New York, as a supplementary attraction to “The Viking.” There are two Gus Edwards’ songs revived in Technicolor, or “colortone revues,” and two recordings each by Van and Schenck and George Dewey Washington, making four releases a week of the popular Negro baritone.

While Gus Edwards revues and the playlets were made on the coast, most of the other revues recorded at M.G.M.’s New York sound studio, where capacity production has been attained under the supervision of Major Edward Bowes and Louis K. Sidney, with Nick Grinde as director.

The complete list of the new subjects follows:

For release January 5—U-klakele Ike (Cliff Edwards), with two numbers: (a) What a Night for Spooning, (b) Oh, Baby, Don’t We Get Along. (2) A Gus Edwards song revue, made entirely in Technicolor, with a special comedy song and dance act.

January 12—(1) Bernardo de Pace, world’s foremost mandolinist, in one number: (a) Thais. (2) Ramona (c) Morning, Noon and Night. (2) Confession, Kenyon Nicholson’s one-act play, directed by Lionel Barrymore, with Robert Ames, Carroll Nye, and Yvonne Stark in the cast.

January 19—(1) Van and Schenck in two numbers: (a) Pasta Vaznola, (b) Hungry Women. (2) “Nearly Divorced,” Stanley Houghton’s one-act comedy directed by Lowell Sherman, with a cast made up of Sherman, Cyril Chadwick and Betty Frances. (January 25—(1) Movietone Revue, featuring Frances White, the Ponce Sisters, the Reynolds Sisters and Joseph Regan, with Jack Pepper master of ceremonies. (2) Macion Harris in two numbers: (a) He’s Mine, All Mine, and (b) Ten Little Miles from Town.

February 2—(1) Songs of the Roses, a series of unusual song and dance acts, done entirely in Technicolor, directed by Gus Edwards. (2) George Washington in three numbers: (a) Lonely Little Bluebird, (b) Rainbow ’Round My Shoulder, and (c) Sonny Boy.

February 9—(1) George Lyngs, the Singing Harpist, in a medley of vocal and instrumental numbers. (2) Jan Garber Band in two numbers: (a) Blue Shadows and (b) Tiger Rag.

February 16—(1) Vincent Lopez in one instrumental solo. On the Air. (2) Miller and Lytes in “Jimmie’s Cabaret,” a cakewalk act with dialogue, song and a dancing contest.

February 23—(1) Dinner and Dance in a novelty singing act in four scenes. George Whiting is composer of the song hit, “My Blue Heaven.” (2) Duri de Kerekjarts in two violin numbers.

March 2—(1) Mr. and Mrs. Norman Phillips and Norman Phillips, in (a) one of the first “Parents,” written by Edgar Allen Woolf. (2) Gordon and Spikes in a dialogue and acting act.

March 9—(1) Van and Schenck in two numbers: (a) Chinese Firecracker, (b) Way Down South in Heaven. (2) Eight Violin Actresses in an act called “Rube Minstrels.” The artists are Henry Burr, Monroe Silver, Billy Murray, Frank Banta, James Stanley, Carl Mathieu, and Sam Herman and Stanley Baugham.

March 16—(1) Bob Nelson in a comedy singing act, with three numbers: (a) Everything I Do I Do For You. (b) Berlin Medley, (c) She’s Got a Great Big Army of Friends since She Lives Near the Navy Yard. (2) Phil Spitalny’s Band, a novelty orchestral number featuring, in addition to Spitalny and his Hotel Pennsylvania orchestra, the Penn Trio, the Paul Sisters, 8 Chester Hall girls and AI Wohlmam as master of ceremonies.

March 23—(1) George Dewey Washington in three numbers: (a) Lonely Vagabond, (b) The Sun Is Shining at My Window, and (c) The Curtain Comes Down. (2) Elsa Ersi and Nat Ayers in two numbers: (a) Was It All for Me? Brought to light. (b) Brought to light to Mr. and Mrs. (3) Odette Myrtil in a special instrumental subject, “The Dancing Master.” (2) Sunshine Sammy in a novelty act.

Educational Films Lead In Number of Pictures Approved by Catholics

Rev. Francis Talbot, S.J., literary editor of America, Catholic weekly, and chairman of the Catholic Book-A-Month Club, broadcasting Thursday evening, January 3, over station WLW in the subject of "Endorsed Motion Pictures," praised Educational on the fact that this company had the greatest number of endorsed subjects on the "white list" of the International Federation of the Catholic Alumnae.

Especial emphasis was given "The Lion's Roar," a series of Mack Sennett audiological comedies, and Father Talbot urged that his listeners prevail upon their local managers to book this subject. Father Talbot said: "The two pictures of "Talking to each other" in 1500 pictures of talking pictures to come from that company, and it has been very well done. The color effects are fine, the photography and technique are exceedingly interesting."

Staged Units Are Not Clicking

Book Better Acts With Bandshows On Long Tour
Give Masters of Ceremonies More Leeway—Revamp Shows Along the Route
By A. RAYMOND GALLO

Does the public like syndicated stage shows in picture theatres? You have probably asked this question of yourself many times especially if you are a theatre owner or a theatre manager. Of course if you are an exhibitor of a chain theatre circuit it will not do you much good to even think about it for you will receive these syndicated units until the “powers” deem it advisable to make a change. We have always contended that a syndicated idea cannot and will not work successful in the entertainment field for the simple reason that a show put together in New York loses all its flavor and freshness by the time it gets to Chicago.

We have tried to reason this matter out with the important executives on the various circuits and for a while things were going along smoothly with a local producer stationed in each territory. However since that time, which is close to a year ago, some efficiency expert has gotten the noble idea into his head that if Sears & Roebuck can manufacture suits on a national basis and sell through the mail all over the country, why not work the same arrangement in the presentation field. That has been the main downfall of chain theatre operation and by that we mean that one individual or a group of individuals have tried to force the same type of entertainment, fashioned after one model, to everybody in the amusement seeking world. Whether these people were in New York City or Des Moines, Iowa, made no difference, for in accordance with their way of planning, the show was good enough for anybody.

Public Taste Varies All Over
There is no question that in every case there has been honest intentions behind the moves and production of several syndicates, but it seems that since people have been old enough to seek entertainment they have also been different in what they sought, and by that we mean that you cannot expect an eastern stage offering that has taken the public off its feet, to do the same thing in another territory with the Above is a likeness of Billy Randall the singing-violinist-dancer, who just completed his third tour of Public—at one time Billy was featured in the Gus Edwards Revue and is a product of that star discovery, Randall has a unique routine and one of the few novelties that is now playing combination theatres. At present he is being featured over the Marcus Loew circuit.

Nadina Borgi Booked
Nadina Borgi, famous European soprano, is being featured in an elaborate singing act called, “The Mediterranean Singers.” The ensemble consists of fourteen splendid voices ranging all the way from jazz to opera. Four of them also bear the title of Count and Countess. This attraction will soon be seen in deluxe picture theatres.

ferent class of people whose taste and opinions vary. The same thing applies to Chicago, Los Angeles, or any other important key city. Then, too, with the increased standard of entertainment, there might be a great success in their own community and a terrible flop in another territory.

The only sensible way to make presentation pay in deluxe picture houses is not to give the same type of stage show as it is produced in one town. The idea of keeping pictures from the standpoint of costumes and scenery, but when it comes to arranging the talent, that should reflect the local situation and should be programmed in accordance with the likes of that particular audience which the theatre is trying to cater to. Besides if your programme means anything to the theatre, which in the past few years has, he should be given an opportunity to discuss your stage wares and not be hampered by a stereotyped speech.

Give the M. C. Something to Do

The future success of stage shows with personality band leaders also act the role of masters of ceremonies depend on this very same thing. By robbing the band leaders of their individual capabilities you are merely making a one stage directing the band. After all any musician can pretend to direct and once he assumes the part of a hundred and one others will immediately lose interest in him and the result will be shown at your box office.

It has been learned from past reports and constant survey that independent picture houses produce a more entertaining stage show than the big chain theaters. The reason for this is very easy to understand for the reason that they do not try to stage an idea that will endeavor to please everybody. Each show is produced with enough human interest of a universal appeal and yet with enough of the local color in it to make it entertaining from the get go. Therefore the lines, timely, the jokes are not so stale, and the songs are new and up to date. The very same thing could be accomplished by the large circuits by placing a capable producer in certain territories where the unit is expected to fill more than one week's engagement, and that producer should be acquainted with the desires of the local audience and should try to cooperate with the management in presenting the entertainment in the manner in which it is wanted.

In towns where the units play only one week and the managers feel that it would be wise to appoint either the theatre manager or the band leader to try to fill a succession of shows in the stage show each week. By allowing each and every band leader access to the box office to observe the wants of the audience and accepting their suggestions means only enhancing the stage show operator and that thing is a steady, satisfied patronage, with a steady flow at the box office.

When less thought is given to the possibility of hiring cheap talent because of the fact that they will have only one week's employment but the more successful stage show bands and producers hire the better stage show theatres. Instead of trying to save a few hundred dollars on rehearsal we should consider what the box office, executives and booking managers should devote more time in giving the public enough for their money so that they may feel obligated to patronize your theatre.

Don't Be Penny Wise and Pound Foolish

Trying to eliminate stage programs and cutting or changing rehearsed but not over the long run it may also cut your profits and there is a chance of driving your audiences by overlooking it. When every theatre, regardless of its size and location, will present talking pictures what are you doing to keep them in business? What will you offer as an inducement to fill your theatre? What will any sensible exhibitor do who has a de luxe box of 2,000 seats or up? Why, he will go right back to presentation and featured organs, or whatever the location between a deluxe theatre and a small neighborhood picture house.

"Resolution" with a Russian atmosphere and setting finds Dave Apollon acting as master of ceremonies this week. There are several other numbers but when all is said and done, Dave and his Manila band are the whole show. The presentation opens with the "Volga Boat Song" by the gang followed by a snappy dance by the ten Torney Dancers in Russian costume to the tune of "Boris."

Dave Apollon then makes his appearance and leads the gang through a five-symphony arrangement of "On the Road to Mandalay." The Torney Dancers again make their appearance while Dave supports them with his accordion and steps a few mean Russian steps himself.

Humay Bailey, who never fails to make a hit in Milwaukee, obliges in her usual fine manner with "She's Funny That Way" and "I Can't Give You Anything but Love."

The latter number Dave accompanied her on the mandolin, and then he proceeds to give a clever exhibition by playing the piano and mandolin at the same time. He is perfectly versatile and manages to slip in a bit of humor which keeps the audience bawling all the while.

The next number is by an announced mico who sings "Mississippi Mud" but whose dancing is the high spot of her act. She is pretty good.

Another dance by the Torney Dancers augmented by Dave close the show when confetti drops from above the stage and a backdrop is lifted to disclose a long leashed etork with glasses drooping infant 29 into waiting chimney. The entire presentation is well done thanks to Apollon who was one of the best versatile band leaders on the Wisconsin stage for many a moon.

Increased patronage during Christmas week was secured by a wonderful arrangement of stage talent brought here by Ranchon & Marce in their "Private Idea" with the outstanding artist "Red" Corcoran and his talking banjo.

The Ocat from the Steppes put over some harmonious effects in Russian musical offerings. The 12 Sunkist Beauties had no trouble in securing their share of attention, too, Love, some fancy sets.

"Happy" Phil Lampkin and his Beavers gave selections from "Student Prince," while Norma L. Flannigan and Maud were the corned act for the New Year's Midnight Frolics which established a house record.

"Cheerio," the Pubbx stage show produced by Paul Lindstrom is in its second week and as it is understood that changes will be made before it plays the Paramount, New York, in two weeks. Jack North has the biggest hit of the season. Grace and Marie Kline were not strong enough to hold up the company, and they will be replaced by Misses Eilene and Helen, who are at present in "The Garden"

Patti Moore and Sammy Lewis were given work plentiful in the stage program at the Mainstreet. The number is a veritable meadowlark program after they had finished their regular number. Their regular act consisted of a bit of dancing, some vocal numbers and clown repartee, while their hit in additional acts was comprised of timely entrances with vocal and screen company presented a number featuring fast repartee. They have an unlimited number of musical numbers.

Walter Davison and his Louisville Loons, the theatre's stage orchestra, offer specialty musical numbers of their own as well as being drafted to assist in the proceedings of other acts.

Harlan Christie, master of ceremonies, again is seen in his usual rollicking role that goes a long way in putting over the show in a big way.

Salt Lake City Pantages

An appointment for the theatre this week. The act titled "Billies and Sainies," was a very pleasing headliner, consisting of an array of snappy songs and dances. A Spanish orchestra, under the leadership of Davolis, assisted by a number of fine dancers, put over the number of dance creations, with an elaborate stage background, carried off the laurels of the evening's entertainment each night during their week's run. A local melodist and one who has been creating considerable comment with his radio broadcasts, billed himself as "King of the Singers." He was well received in his dialogue and musical offerings.

John A. Green & Co. presented a novelty offering called "Mike at the Piano," which act portrays Mike as the town "hick" who has an array of very pleasing impersonations.

The screen attraction this past week was "A Single Man" and a very good week was enjoyed for the pre-Christmas season

Milwaukee Wisconsin
Week Ending January 4

For the second consecutive week on the Milwaukee stage is "Micolor," with Johnny Foster as manager. This week "Cherry Love" with "Red" Corcoran as star, takes the stage. The arrangement is a splendid one, and the enterprisers have made quite a showing.

The screening of the week is "The Glass Menagerie," with George Dewey Washington as star. The production is a splendid one and the public and the critics all have been speaking well of the production.

The singing master of ceremonies at the Plaza is also on parade, with Arthur Ball singing a special. "Blessings" gives it a touch of life.

The Foster Girls, nattily attired in the "jeans" fad, are的成绩 with some well-timed fancy steps, that delight the eye of the spectator.

Dolores and Rolly then come upon the scene, as they do every year and are the cause of some trick dancing. Dolores is so tiny she seems to be a little doll in size and she does the various acts as caileously as one made of rag. It is easy to see that little Dolores "tops the show" by the peal of applause that follows the act.

The Foster Girls then come up again, dressed in colour costumes, and dance along with Arthur Ball who sings, "I Can't Give You Anything but Love."

Armfield and the Serenaders then play "Moonlight and Roses," while Gertrude Latry and Edward Lindstrom, vocalists, give a splendid duet in Jacob Abraham's clever arrangement of the song.

climbing exhibition both thrills and amuses the audience. His efforts at balancing a canoe in his ear and then transferring it to the other ear without using his hands is laugh provoking.

Dolores, Eddie and Salmonoff are the outstanding feature of the stage show. This adapts Aiken, presenting a routine that combines effective spectacle with the beautiful, has a sense of rhythm and co-ordination that is developed to an unusual degree. They toss little Dolores around with an abandon that seems reckless, but she survives despite the contortions, twirls and near-falls she endures.

The finale is worthy of a Moulin Rouge, from which it probably gets its inception. The invisible, up to this time, mill has a wheel the spokes of which are beautiful girls, tied with golden cords. Along the sides are the Fodder girls in different poses, and on top of the mill is a large roebuck, which, at the climax, opens and reveals the spirit of the blossom. The entire ensemble is on the stage with strings of blossoms in their hands, while the orchestra plays. "Blissome!"

Philadelphia Fox

Week Ending January 5

Wide variety characterized the surrounding bill at the Fox this week. The orchestra, conducted by William A. Krauth, played "Indian Fantasy," accompanied by a stage presentation with Stella Powers of the Vitaphone theatre. She was singing in Indian garb as she stood beside a water-fall falling into a canyon against a picturesque sunset scene with crinoline and the sound of the wind and the total of children were extra-ordinary and the difficult and clever acrobatic stunts thrilled the audience to round after round of applause. The Frank Cambria-Publix stage show gives the band an opportunity to read a "proclamation" about its inception and its record since that time. They review their "travels" that were made from week to week in each new show and re-vist some of their former haunts. They also provide a high point in the entertainment by playing a "1929 version" of the St. Louis Blues.

The Six Brown Brothers, including emphatically, Tom, gave Marie Rostand's production department the motif for the Granada show this week. The sax-blowing clowns inspired a show of jesters and jazz called "Saxonomia."

The curtain rose on a garden wall, behind which a caricature-like scene and star-dit thy on a drop kept rising while the ballet leader sang a special introductory song, with the rest of the ballet, in cap and bells, perched on the wall. Descending, two of these girls went through a routine, at the close of which the drop and wall lifted on full stage, revealing Benny Stahl's band, dressed as jesters, seated between steps that led to a backstage elevation now curtained by a fantastic drop carrying out the jester motif. At the files and wings also were fantastic representations of the Joker idea.

The usual harle of rusty brought in Meredith, who took the band into "My SupermanTango." Not so hot. Nelie Rasch and her three boys are next with folding a la dancing and acrobatics, difficult stuff which thrills the customers. Two bows.

Adams and Rasch follow, opening with "So's Your Old Mandarin," under a green spot. This is well received, but other songs quickly exhaust their talents and they give way to more important matters with a bow. But, before which important matters take place, the band does "That's How I Feel About You," with Benny tincering with a trumpet for a chorus but redeeming himself later with a sinister bit of his super dancing.

In the next spot is the ballet demonstrating that, with the exception of the curtsey production department, the ballet may be useful. The leader, in a song, introduces a number of Mother Goose characters, each one being impersonated by a member of the ballet. Meanwhile four chefs have brought in a big pie in a canoverade. The girls do it and down the pie is cut, and as it is opened, a dancer steps out and doer her stuff, whereas she steps back in again and is carried off the stage at the close of a ballet routine.

The headline act follows, Tom Brown leads out with his saxophone-playing clowns doing an instrumental piece, at the close of which a number of things happen, all of them dominated by Tom in his usual black-face and white pate. He comically work with the aid of a soprano sax, and a closing trompe medley of popular songs, brings them out for more and encore, and essentially in the house which last week had the irresistible Buster West, Big Time headline, contrary to the work of the past period, the Brown boys succeeded where many another must have failed.

Obviously a tough spot, the next one, but Cliff Craine takes it easy with eccentric dancing and a few gags that show he's high class. Encore and three bows.

Then the back drop rises, disclosing on the elevation six hoop-drumers, through which break the Browns for a number, while another drop rises revealing the ballet, which does a turn beneath jester cut-out dancing on strings operated from the files during the finale.

Audien and Color FilmSubjects Good for Organ Novelties

Since the talking short subjects have become an important part of many theatre programs it has been noticed that a great many of them furnish musical accompaniment, either with an orchestra or with an organ.

For example, last week's "Too Hot," solo drop organist at Loew's theatre in New Orleans, Michigan, synchronized his own score in the form of a solo to "An American Caledonia symphony called "In a Persian Market." The Kettel composition of the same name was used throughout as a theme classic.

The organist was compelled to rehearse the flashbacks a few times and in many instances furnished appropriate and entertaining music for the scenic views that ordinarily an orchestra show was called for. Especially so was the case in the scene with the dancing girls, who display their charms as the musicians in the film played musettes and tom-toms. The organ in this instance sounded more realistic than a mere tremolo, and built up the finish in real good fashion.

Organists should try stunts of this sort and expand with any subject like Tiffany-Stahl or Music Masters who furnish some real backgrounds for novel solo.

Brooklyn Paramount

Week Ending January 11

Paul Revere's very few real live variety show was "The Perfect Girl" and as reported last week, featured Helen MacFadden. As luck would have it the show announced and introduced an added feature, a contest to find the most perfect girl in Brooklyn. There is under auspices of the Brooklyn Mirror, in which Helen MacFadden's father, the famous physical culture expert, is much interested, Ash has also explained this rehearse and that he would sit in the audience to see it. The entire show was reported last week, with the exception of Paul Ask and the band numbers which were as follows: "All Alone in the Moonlight," in which Paul played piano impressively, and in which four of the boys do a comedy song and dance which was favorably received. And a special comedy song called, "Why Aren't We Satisfied," in which Paul Ask, Joe Penner and the Four Cheer leaders sang, danced and did comedy extravagance. This was very well received. All of the acts seemed to click better at this house and to win more applause. The entire show was better.

New York Paramount

Gene Rodebisch, formerly of Publix Boston Metropolitan, opened Thursday, January 11, at the Paramount. He has received, and though he kept in the background the first week and didn't do much, the audience will see that he is a good leader and wasn't as cold to him as they have been to some of his predecessors. This week's show used the title "Cheerio." All the special lyrics used in this show were written by his Honor James J. Walker, the Mayor of New York City. (We must say that they are very good ones too.) The show was received by the Paramount, and opened to a girl singing "Cheerio" to a grotesque march as the ballet did a smart routine.

Gene Rodebisch, then entered and led the orchestra in "Don't Be Like That." Wally Jackson, then offered some love-bomb flavored comedy that earned him an encore. Helen McFarland next sang a blue number, tap danced and played some hot tunes on the array of voices while Paul Ask was received. Gene sang, "You're the Cream in My Coffee" to Helen as they walk off.

Eight black and white leopards appear as the curtain was raised to knee height, and they do a cown routine with Neeck, whom dancers, pleased with an operative number that was well received. Wally Jackson then kidded Gene into letting him lead the band he didn't do so good so he finished with another of his funny dances.

Dave Rubino, entered to do a very fine hand, and played his own violin and sang "The Russian Peasants." Rubino's violin playing is always a pleasure to hear. He ended with his own special arrangement of "Hallelujah" which received a very fine hand. He was forced to beg off for another encore.

The finale was another of those beautiful pictures in which the girls danced and the orchestra and Helen McFarland played "Cheerio." This was a fine show and received a fine reception.

Omaha Riviera

Years ahead as Fanny Brice sang "My Man" over the Vitaphone were dried up in admiration and interest in the spectacular show "Pow Wow," which was Manager Raymond Jones' offering over the New Year's season. The Publix entertainment "Pow Wow" was not the only show that was acclaimed the most magnificent of the recent months.

Girls in Indian attire, strapless as Redcoats, for red and blue and thundering and all contributed to the display that started the pulse.

Jay Mills, master of ceremonies, did a song and a clever dance, and had as his entertainers Eddie and Morton Beck, "window cleaners" in song and dance act, Paul Ask and Edie Morton, Pearl Packard, dancer, and Art Dickson, "wee bit o' Scotch." A novelty during the week was 16 Riviera Girls tap dancing by Jay Mills. Naturally they put it a big hand.

Salt Lake City Capitol

The stage attraction here this week was titled as "Up in the Air Idea" and was marked by flashes of color in many hues, swirling dancers, melodious music and beautiful girls. Walter Nilson is featured in a number of hazardous and sensational stunts while sitting on a one-wheeled cycle many feet above the stage floor.

Robert Stickney, an eccentric silent dancer of remarkable ability, with his presentation as does Doris Whitmore, prima donna. Miss Whitmore sings while accompanying herself on the violin and at the same time dances. Miss Nilson, Whatever and Fred Bates, are simply marvellous and the show is a sure hit with the audience. The Capitol, a favorite of the advertisement, the Brooks Trio furnish the music for the purpose, and the laughter and banjo selections.

The chorus of girls are all expert dancers on stilts. Alberti and his band in a specially arranged musical program.

JOAN ANTHONY (Chicago Grandara) played a midnight solo on New Year's Eve and offered a stunt called "New Year's Resolutions." This was in the form of community entertainment and the following songs were used with clever egg-ideas. "Hallelujah!" "The Gang's All Here," "Where the Sky Little Violets Grow," "The Merry Minder," "I Can't Give Anything But Love," and "Rainbow Round My Shoulder" concluded the list of popular selections, but three old time tunes were also thrown in for good measure and they were "Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Sweet Adeline," and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," and we don't mind telling you that the merry crowd made plenty of whoopee. Special verses on resolutions were flashed on the screen between each chorus. Joan is the fellow who also originated the Vocakole.

William J. Cowdrey (Parkavenue, W. Va., Smoot) played a solo in conjunction with the "Singing Pool" which is to play this theatre next week with a sent called "What Will the New Year Bring," which included adequate slides on the two Al Jolson pictures. After the introductory slides a chorus of "Mammy's" was played by the Smoot alongside the Brunswick record No. 5912 with Jolson singing. This was also followed by "Sonny Boy" and there's a Rainbow Round My Shoulder." These records were used on the non-synchronous section of the W.E. equipment.

Henry R. Marttich (Brooklyn Paramount) offered a community song fest during Christmas which included a version of "The Twelve Days of Christmas" with a special version on the second chorus. A comedy song with special lyrics where "Where Did My Little Dog Go?" had then all singing. Marttich finished with "Don't Be Like That." He was very well received.

Jesse Crawford (New York Paramount) offered the usual organ concert playing only two numbers, but these numbers were well played and one at least was unusual. They were "How About Me?" and "I Faw Down an' Go Boom." Crawford played this last number in his own inimitable way and around a lot of enthusiasm on the part of the audience, in fact so much, that some of them got up, and that is quite unusual for this house.

Eddie Dunstedter (Minneapolis, Minnesota), the Minnesota organist, gets somewhat of the best path of theatre organ solos this week when he presents the evergreens "I'll Guarneri" instead of the usual solos. Cook's organ and arrangements were played which were credited to Ray Chestnut, bandmaster of the orchestra. Here is a real find for some theatre organists.

And here is a find who has been discovered! Samuel L. Ray of Atlantic City, N. J., is the organist who formerly was at Loew's State Theatre, Cleveland. L. Ray organ is to be played by Mr. York. This is Sonny's third week here and from all evidence he is very well liked, so he'll remain here for another week.

The new music department in the Radio-Kelch Organ Circuit is now working in full swing under the guidance of Milton Schwartzwald and Fred Kleider. Fred was formerly the featured organist of the new Hippodrome and is now in full charge of the activities of all the solo organists on the entire circuit. Fred is also presenting the masterful solos at the Hippodrome will undoubtedly prove valuable in the training of many of rising organists throughout the country.

And speaking of organists—Milton Sinner of the Missouri Theatre in St. Louis is truly popular with the entertainment solos which are so novel, it is really a great treat to watch and listen to him.

And still another Chinese-American Restaurant owner seems to have to the very best that he can do with his own main attraction, Ernie Golden and his music, as it should be played. The name "Ernie Golden" is music to me, the quality of the music. They also broadcast over Station WOR. If you haven't got a good set, listen on Thursday night.

Just to inform you that Waring's Pennsylvannia are playing at the Vegetable Market and they are featured in the 13th of this month, at the Vegetable Market. Better dig up a grand big welcome, or some thing. I mean those of you in Chicago.

LARRY SPIER.
Exhibitor's Radio Blankets City
With Theme Songs Over Speakers

When you blanket an entire town simultaneously, and with radio—that is exploitation. That plan was adopted by Don W. Hoobler of the advertising and exploitation department of the Bloomington Theatres organization at Bloomington, Ill., to put over three synchronized pictures playing consecutively at the Irvin theatre. The theme song of each picture was played and reproduced at the theatre, then sent out by private wire.

This system also affords the theatre an opportunity to tell something about the pictures. Furthermore, as Hoobler writes us, "the feature of having the microphone on the set enabling the theatre to make announcements also adds materially to the general help, as, in the case of one of the films, the title was perhaps a bit misleading and this impression was corrected by the announcement.

How the Plan Works

The three pictures, for each of which the theme song was used, were "The Awakening," "Mother Knows Best," and "Four Sons." How the system works is explained by Hoobler as follows:

Briefly, this idea is an electrical amplification of the Victor record, obtained by means of Victor electra electric "pickup" or similar device run through a radio set for its amplification. The record is played and the sound amplified and run to power dynamic speakers located in various parts of the city.

The recording and reproducing mechanism is located at the theatre, and the sound transmitted to the cooperating music stores (in this case there were five stores, in scattered locations about the business section of the town). The sound is transmitted by means of a private wire leased from the local telephone company (the same as the temporary installation of a private telephone). The telephone company must take all voltage off the wire, however.

Throw Sound Into Street

The reproducing apparatus, located at the theatre, plays the theme song and they are carried to the stores, to the large power dynamic speakers, located above the entrance doors and throwing the sound into the street. These loudspeakers are 450 volt amplified speakers, and are clearly and easily audible for a distance of one block in each direction from the speaker.

Then, after the theme song (on the record) has been played, a switch cuts off this electrical pickup and cuts in a standard broadcasting studio microphone and the theatre man may make the desired sales talk or announcements pertaining to the picture, that it is the theme of such and such picture, coming to the Irvin theatre (dates also included). A mention that the music may be had at (name of music store cooperating).

Two Pictures Exploited at Once

Two pictures playing somewhat near the same dates may be exploited simultaneously, if desired. A brief explanation of the nature of the synchronization of the picture is also made, which gives patrons a clear impression in advance of what they may expect to hear when they see the picture.

In this instance, the plan outlined above was used one week in advance of the picture and during showing also.

Take Hicks’ Name Off Exchange List?

Doggone If We Do!

Verner Hicks suggests that we take his name off the House Organ Exchange list, but we aren’t so sure that we will. And at that, he says “I am always glad to get them.” But here’s the story and I rather think you’ll prefer to keep him on your mailing list after reading his letter.

Under the letterhead of the Phil H. Heyde Theatres—the Arcadia and Elks at Olney, Ill., Hicks writes:

"I think I should advise you that I am not connected with a theatre, and my name should be taken off the house organ exchange list; in fact I should have notified you some time ago, but have been on the road until recently.

"I am now idle and looking for another connection as manager and should I locate I shall be glad to again appear on the exchange list. When I severed my connections with the local theatres I notified those whom I was exchanging with, but recently I have been receiving some programs from others, who no doubt are wondering why they have not heard from me, and this will enlighten them. However, I am always glad to get their organs, and note some of them are improving since they first started mailing to me (some of those I first exchanged with continue to send theirs, which I am very glad to have).

"So you see it looks as if Hicks will be back with us before long. No, sir, Hicks, we won’t take your name off the Exchange.

One New Idea Each Week

Is His 1929 Resolution

(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—From the standpoint of the theatre owner there could be no better New Year’s resolution than the one conceived by Herman Vineberg, owner of the Arbor Hill theatre in Albany. Vineberg has firmly resolved to conceive one new idea each week during 1929, said idea to be of the sort that will bring added patronage to his residential house.

E. E. Bair Puts Over

Newspaper Section

On Theatre Opening

Our compliments go forth herewith to E. E. Bair, resident manager of the State and American theatres at East Liverpool, Ohio, operated by the American Amusement Company.

A special newspaper section launched the new State theatre there with a real bang—not a blowup bang but a regular ring-the-bell bang—that not only shows that Bair is perfectly on the job, as usual, but also foretells a good administration for the theatres with plenty of community good will.

Bair writes to "The Theatre" that "your publication will no doubt recall the writer as former editor of the "Falk Theatre News," published in connection with the Falk theatre, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, just a few months back. Trusting you will like the section being mailed to you."

We will and we do!

Will See Results of

This Goodwill Move

"Just completed one of the biggest charity matinees that I have ever seen put on," writes Lester M. Fagg projectionist and publicity man, to this department from the Palida theatre at Sandpoint, Idaho. "We packed them in and had them standing up. We put the matinee on Dec. 23d and the admission to the show was anything that the public cared to bring: A spad, or a full sack, an apple, clothing, canned goods, vegetables, or they could bring cash—a penny on up. The whole proceeds of the matinee went to local charity, and there was some proceeds! A good sized truckload of clothing and foodstuffs and also about $30.00 in cash."

"Mr. F. C. Weskil (head of Amusement Enterprises) furnished the entire program without cost. The show was put on in the Palida theatre"
Gift Candy and Tickets Help This Chain at Christmas

Several ideas to store away—in writing in your file for next Christmas are these that were put into practice by Sidney Lust, residence of the U. S. A. A., attraction with chain of theatres in Washington, D. C. and Charlestown, W. Va. In fact, the ideas are of service—particularly two of them—t at other times besides Christmas.

All four houses in Washington gave half a pound of candy to the children, each special Christmas box with a sticker ceding, "Compliments of Sidney Lust theatres." This brought good space in the newspapers.

Then there was a deal with the Goldenberg Department Store.
"In return for the tickets that I gave them," Lust writes, "I advertised th eir extensively in their ads as follows: "Goldenberg’s Department Store have purchased from Sidney Lust and A. Lichtman the Box of Negro theatres" a thousand (5,000) tickets to be given way in the boys department to any child accompanied by his parent or parents. No purchase is necessary."

A third instance of effective management in the cooperative ad used in the Washington Times. Of this Lust writes: "By grouping our ads together, especially in smaller theatres, we get a special rate (the newspaper which of course interests the small theatre owner.)"

Theatre Assists Paper and Civic Body in Contests

A splendid tieup with the Tribune-aptal and the Junior Chamber of Commerce brought plenty of patronage to the spitol theatre all last week.

The Junior C of C put on a "Know Des Moines Products" campaign in which it staged two contests. One was for the best general song boosting home products and e njoyed the beautiful young man who would be "Miss Des Moines Products."

The theatre gave time each night in the edition of the newspaper about the group of girls presenting certain products. One was selected each night as a winner. On the night the final winner was picked.

Jay Mills, master of ceremonies, and h e Blumberg, pit orchestra leader, dged the songs. The winner was sung ch night by Mills.

Bread Wrappers Tell of this Film

Every loaf of bread delivered by the ottage Bakery of Springfield, Ohio, carried a wrapper sticker copy on Marion Davies' production, "The Cardboard Over," starring Sorenson. Editor Willard sorne of the State theatre there. This idea started with "The Cossacks."

In addition to the usual advance publ icity, the theatre used a large cut-out fig e of a man in the foyer. This was aranged to have the arm move from the figure of Marion Davies to a card giving the date.

On this production there was mailed to large mailing list a card with institutional p.39.

And how those youngsters did enjoy gathering about Mae Murray when she appeared at the Rochester theatre, at Rochester, N. Y. The success of Thomas D. Soroier in putting over the show in the face of Christmas shopping and the opening of a new theatre is told in the accompanying story.

Christmas and Opening of Rival Theatre—but He Wins Through!

"That's the week before Christmas, and All Through the House Not a creature was stirring . . . ."

No attendance wasn't that bad, but another exhibitor than Thomas D. Sorierio, manager of the Rochester theatre at Rochester, N. Y., might have had visions of something approaching that. It was not only a question of Christmas shopping, but there was the fact that the new Keith-Albee Palace theatre was to open on Christmas Day. What to do?

Sorierio knew what to do, because he had been figuring on just such an eventual ity for several months. In the first place, he booked the alluring Mae Murray to appear at the theatre. And the result? The Keith-Albee threw open its doors on Christmas Day, and did a good business, too. Did the Rochester play to empty seats? Why, there wasn't room for all the throng. All week Sorierio played four ent ire showings a day and there was a capacity crowd at each.

Given Great Reception

Miss Murray was accorded one of the greatest receptions any star ever received in Rochester. At the train, the station was packed. Her special car, with footman and chauffeur, took her to the hotel, where again the crowds received her. On leaving the theatre or on arrival, the sidewalks were lined with onlookers, and inside was capacity business.

The newspapers in Rochester, too, recognized the situation. Special double page advertisements rapidly were subscribed to by the merchants, an unheard of thing at Christmas time. These tieups continued all during Miss Murray's stay in Rochester.

Newspaper Stories Every Day

Besides, every day, photographs and news stories appeared in all the papers. Special feature stories about Miss Murray were played up, as, for example, how on Christmas day she made a special visit to the Children's Home and provided Christmas cheer for the youngsters.

Sorierio's foresight netted the theatre a ten thousand dollar increase in receipts over last year. Sorierio says it's the show that counts, and it doesn't make any difference whether there is a new theatre opening, whether it is Christmas Week or whatnot—provided the show is good—and the exploitation.

Fortune Teller and Bear Help to Put Over "Revenge"

A fortune teller and a trained bear cub added a realistic touch to Dolores del Rio's latest picture, "Revenge," a recent attraction at the State theatre, Minneapolis.

The fortune teller was on duty from 1 p.m. until 10 p.m. and did a rushing business. The crowds were so great that each session had to be limited to three minutes.

The black bear cub was led about the city several times a day, much to be amusement of most of the children of Minneapolis. In between strolls, the cub was caged in front of the theatre. Needless to say, many mothers brought their youngsters downtown to see the bear and then went in to the show.

Huge Sign Added

The Circle theatre at Portland, Ore., will augment its famous spinning globe of light with another huge additional sign having radial rays of seven feet beyond the circumference of the present ball.

Carnival Engaged for "Barker"

A complete carnival was engaged by W. C. Watson, manager of the Hippodrome at Cleveland, to put over First National's "The Barker," and the result was a tremendous ballyhoo. The entire inner foyer was canvas on both sides, and during intermissions a real sideshow was put on, including fire-eater, sword-swallowers, and girl-in-the-box attractions. Pete Mardo and four other clowns made appearances. Fifty thousand colored heralds in the form of carnival handbills were distributed.

Wegener and Fagg

Plan House Organs;
Give Them a Hand!

Add to House Organ Exchange:
L. J. Wegener
Rialto Theatre
Fort Dodge, Iowa

Lester M. Fagg
Panida Theatre
Sandpoint, Idaho

Folks, here are two more chances to show the real value of the House Organ Exchange.

L. J. Wegener, resident manager of the Rialto at Fort Dodge, Iowa, comes to bat with the following:

"We are planning to start publishing a house organ, and I am wondering if you could send some samples from other houses. Any help or suggestions that you can make will be appreciated."

There's only one answer to that letter: Every member of the Exchange sits down this minute and addresses the last two or three issues of his theatre house organ to Wegener. That's what Wegener wants, and the least we all can do is to send him house organ copies.

As soon as we saw the letter we pulled out a pile of house organs and, diligently getting to the top (and members of the House Organ Exchange always deal off the top), have rushed him copies of fifteen exchanges.

And Lester M. Fagg writes from the Panida theatre at Sandpoint, Idaho:

"Would like to place myself and this theatre on the House Organ Exchange list. Have not as yet developed a house organ, and would like to get a few from the different theatres in this exchange before doing so."

As soon as they get started, Wegener and Fagg will exchange with all of you. So help them now when they need it most.

Faces of Nations

Put Over Picture

The Savoy theatre, Superior, Wis., pulled a good exploitation idea on "We Americans" when that picture played in the city. A co-operative page of advertising was obtained from a number of merchants. In these advertisements was printed an illustration of a face representing a certain nation.

The readers of the paper were asked to try to figure out what nation each face represented. It was a unique contest and created much attention. Everyone sending in the right answers received theatre tickets. The Evening Telegram, Superior, also cooperated in putting the contest over.

Star Identifying

Goes Over Strong

Miss H. Marie Alexander was the winner of the Buick sedan in the P. I-West Coast Theatres Film Star Identification Contest. Her name was on top of the 140 award winners in the 41-star competition. More than 15,500 answers, competing for more than 7,000 in prizes made it the most successful contest ever held here. There were 1,918 correct answers turned in and Miss Alexander won on "neatness and legibility" according to the three judges.
Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

"FOUR SONS"

I AM sure that an interesting story lurks behind the repeatedly demonstrated fact that the "foxy company" can make better mother pictures than any or all of the others. It might be discovered by an investigator into this phenomenon that there are more mothers in the executive family of this concern, or on the other hand, by a reverse process of logic, that there are more fatherless executives. Without becoming at all personal, I hazard the guess that John Ford, at least, either has an extremely human and lovable mother or that, by the other method of reduction, he has been deprived of her under circumstances which would he extremely interesting if they were any of our business. Certainly his "Four Sons" is the best mother picture since "Over the Hill," which was the best mother picture of all time.

"Four Sons" is a German-American war story. Most of it has to do with the German side of the encounter. The American side is dealt with naturally, necessarily, and without undue waving of flags or marching of troops. The mother, a German mother, three of whose sons enter the German army, the fourth coming to America before the outbreak of the war and enlisting, eventually, on this side of the argument. That happens to the boys it is the business of the picture, not of my typewriter, to tell you, earnestly advise that you see the picture, if at first possible, and learn the story first-hand. It will be good for you.

The players in "Four Sons" are too numerous to be even matched for me to name and edit them separately. If you care to know he does good work in the picture, look up the list and select any or all of the names. You will not be wrong. There are no also-rans, no immensely outstanding triumphs, but there is a great many equally able performances by great many people. And there is a great deal good direction, good setting, even the captions are good—and this latter I think we can be proud of very few pictures in this day of wise-acknowledging slapstick by the gentlemen who write the editorials.

I am among those who do not like to see other pictures, for the excellent reason that they do things to me. I do not particularly like weep, though I feel after doing so as any other normal individual feels, and so I seek to avoid the experience. Perhaps this is only the other reason why I regard "Four Sons" so highly, this and the fact that it presents the little matter of war much as that little matter presented itself to me on the occasion of its last appearance in these parts. That is to say, not very attractively, but very, very accurately.

"CONQUEST"

I HEARD from a quite reliable source, a good long while before Monte Blue began work in the production of "Conquest," that Mr. Blue was not particularly glad of the assignment. Not, it was pointed out, that he lacked vocal equipment for the job or that he wished to continue in the expansive silences to which he had been accustomed. Rather because he thought little good could come of making the picture, the story being what it was to be and all that. I have not heard what Mr. Blue has to say of the picture, now that it is completed and in exhibition, but I believe I could guess. I hasten to assure him, however, that he need have little fear of being blamed for what has happened. He has shown that he can speak up when occasion demands and he loses, in the articulate, none of the charm that was and still is his in pantomime. Messrs. Tully Marshall, H. B. Warner and others in the cast likewise. Blame for what has happened goes further back, back, in fact, to the inevitable rush and stampede of production which is an outgrowth of market conditions with which we all are familiar.

The trouble with "Conquest" is, I think, that nobody took the trouble to write lines for it. Maybe I am wrong, maybe somebody really did write the lines that are used, but if that is the case the error merely becomes personal.

The picture, aside from the quite inadequate wording of it, is quite interesting. It is timely, too, for Commander Byrd is somewhere South in search of the pole over which Messrs. Blue and Warner fly with relative ease in "Conquest." Told with the legendariness of the silent cinema working in its behalf, bolstering wobbly logic and making the impossible seem probable, it might conceivably be highly entertaining and interesting fiction.

I should list the picture among the experiments which had to be made. We will be fortunate indeed if there are not many worse ones before the technique of the andien is perfected. In view of the greatness of the aim, the magnitude of the benefits to be derived ultimately, let us pass gently this, and such other transient imperfections as may be encountered.

MACK SENNETT, HIMSELF

COUNT among the triumphs of the audience its success in bringing the one, only and entirely too exclusive Mack Sennett back from the shadows to the plain, white glare of the screen. This funniest of all funny men, who doesn't appear in the picture but is all around and about it by reason of having written and directed it, has a comedy in distribution which all good motion picture people should see if they see nothing else this year. It is called "The Lion's Roar."

I could write more words than you'd read about the genius named Sennett. I would begin by recalling the best of all his jokes, when he employed Raymond Hitchcock to star in "My Valet" and then, finding the stage comedian to be funny as a farceur in film, enacted the valet himself and made the funniest of all Mack Sennett comedies and put the first Triangle program over with a clatter and bang. I would finish by complaining that Mack ain't done right by one little art-industry in turning over the megaphone to a lot of good boys who simply aren't Mack Sennett. But I'll save all those words and ease up to the news that in this, his first andien comedy, you have the Sennett humor in story and direction, and in a gentle kidding of the audience itself, which interferes in no way with a handsome demonstration of just what the apparatus of absurdity can do.

Mr. Sennett puts the reproducing mechanism through its paces by making it reproduce practically all the noises you can think of in a given space of time, including the human voice. But he has done this by rigging up a comic yarn, in which the noises occur, that is just about twice as funny as anything any of his directors has turned out since he laid aside his personal megaphone. The comedy would be a riot without the absurdity stuff. With it, it is a riot plus a panic plus pandemonium. (Try that on your reproductors, men.)

I am told that this comedy signals Mr. Sennett's affiliation with Educational. This may account for the putting forth of the personal effort, or again it may not. I prefer to think that the grand old man of the slapstick has been reinterested in picture by advent of the andien and has set out to show the younger generation of Hollywoodmen just how little they know about making comedies and a few of the tricks they'll have to learn if they want to keep in the procession. I wag my old grey head happily and chuckle. Attaahoy, Mack, give 'em 'ell.
In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaign.

TYPE AND THEME: Airplane thriller. Steve Rogers, air mail pilot, has a reputation of never being late. On his landing one day, he finds a letter from the widow Grayson asking Steve to get her son, Dave, into the air mail service. Although Steve is in love with Sally, she does not seem willing to marry him. When Dave Grayson arrives at the air field and makes advances to Sally, she accepts him. Dave gets his chance to become a pilot, and he and Steve are sent out in a storm with the mail. Dave loses his nerve and jumps out of the plane. Steve recovers all the lost mail and tries to kid Dave's cowardice. Dave is looked upon as a coward, but through Steve's efforts, he is given another chance. In another trip Dave again turns coward, but Steve urges him to go on. Steve is hurt and Dave helps him to land with only a slight injury. Sally is waiting and she falls into Dave's arms. Steve gives them his best wishes.

BURNTING THE WIND: Universal Western, from a story by William Macdowall, with Hoot Gibson, Virginia Brown Faire, Cora Grayson, Robert Homans, George Granger, Bert Hardoff and Spookee Maria. Directed by Henry MacRae and Herbert Blache. Released by FBO. Length: 5697 feet.

TYPE AND THEME: Richard Gordon, Sr., and Russell Valdes, once neighboring land owners, regret that the romance and adventures of their own lives have not visited their children. Dick Gordon, Jr., is sporting but he finds a love in the East, and Gordon, Sr. and Valdes plan a way to get Dick to come to them. They send Dick to write his own story that the Valdes are unfailingly taking away his land. Dick is not strong enough to hold on to the house he falls and hurts his foot. Maria, daughter of Valdes, not knowing who Dick is, takes him to his home away from the storm. The two fall in love with each other, but when Maria finds out who Dick is, and knows he has led a wild life, asks him to leave. They are unhappy without each other, so marriage is suddenly decided to unite everyone. Dick tells Deag Dorgan to kidnap Maria in the hope of bringing Dick and her together. Dorgan does not, but keeps her for himself. Dick is also captured by one of Dorgan's gang but escapes and robs Maria. Gordon, Sr. and Ramon Valdes arrive in time to see the children in each other's arms.

TRAIL OF '98 (M.G.M drama): Go after your schools on an educational basis, offering to give awards to children for the best recitations of any of the Robert W. Service poems. Arrange with the school teachers for this tie-up.

This week Bakes's cocoa is being played over the radio and that the people identifying the songs will be invited to your theatre as guests.

Thousands of inexpensive bookmarks may bring their share of upon tie-ups in conjunction with tie-ups with the popular-priced photoplay edition, and with special library displays of books by Robert W. Service. Prepare these bookmarks from the press book material and see that you get ample display button.

Many of the products used in the days of "98 are now national. They appear frequently in the picture and present unlimited opportunities for special window displays and cooperative newspaper advertising. Stills for these tie-ups can be obtained from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Order stills by number: Maxwell House Coffee No. 28; Carnation Milk, Nos. 276-29, 276-1 and 276-11; Sperry Flour, Nos. 276-1 and 276-27; Snyder's Catsup, Nos. 276-368; Royal Baking Powder, Nos. 276-31; and Coca Cola, Nos. 276-937.

Varied selling points can be incorporated in these cooperative propositions. For instance, "Since the days of '98, Maxwell House Coffee has been 'good to the last drop.' Just as good today as it was then; so you will find it a favorite."—"We sold Royal Baking Powder in '98 just as we do today."

LETTERS FROM READERS
A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity adds forcefulness to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

"Keep Working"
AMHERSTBURG, ONTARIO, CANADA
To the Editor: We were very interested in a letter from Walter S. Odom, Sr., of the Dixie theatre, Durant Miss. appearing in the latest issue of the Herald-World. Mr. Odom complains of the small towns being so hard hit by the "audience" in nearby cities. He asks a panacea and cites his competition, a city 40 to 50 miles away to which his people go in droves.

Here is our competition: We are situated in a Canadian town of 3,000 with a house of 500 seats only 18 miles from Detroit, Mich. Detroit has some of the finest theatres in the world (sound in all the downtown first run), the movie films, the greatest stage houses, not to mention legitimate houses. Detroit theatres also advertise in papers on this side and all the Detroit papers, daily and Sunday circulate here. It is not unlikely to be in downtown Detroit in 45 minutes. There is a paved highway and hourly street car service to Windsor (a city of 75,000 directly across from Detroit, which has no theatre advertising pictures and vaudeville). From Windsor to Detroit there is a five minute ferry ride and practically no trouble whatever. Worst of all, shows run Sunday in Detroit, a privilege which we are not allowed.

Naturally we feel this competition for "small town business" can never compete with "big city entertainment" but the "audience" have not affected us to any appreciable extent. On the other hand some patrons have joined our "audience" club. Yes, we saw it in talkies, but we want to see the difference when it's silent." There's a new angle.

In spite of all our business shows no decrease, and while there is a real solution to the problem, until sound gets cheaper we guide ourselves by the following: Give the best show you can afford; get the best and newest films; cash in on all the big town publicity you can by getting your pictures quick; make the best of what you have to offer. You are a little fellow and you are also working—TYAS BROTHERS, Liberty theatre, Amherstburg, Ontario, Canada.

The "Little Fellows"
BRESTER, O. To the Editor: Here's my check for one year's subscription. It's a dandy paper. I love to read it, but what a sad and distressed feeling I get when I read about these theatres located in the large towns and cities doing capacity business with this and that picture, especially in "sound."

How about us little fellows? We don't have sound. We mean the little fellows in towns of 3,000 and up to 5,000. We are the real little fellows. We are the ones who will have to be content with silent pictures but with what we can do we are booking on the nearby towns to "see and hear" pictures in deluxe houses. Why not a department in your paper for us little fellows. We have problems, more so today than ever before. I'll contribute my share towards such a department. How about it?

Let's get the little fellows together. We need help and if we all contribute to a "little fellows" department in your paper, we can get some help, but remember just us little fellows, independents, us $7.50 and $10 accounts who are forced to wait 30 and 60 days on our producer-exhibitor opposition in nearby towns.

Four Neto oe Theatres Near Completion; Chain Almost 50 in One Year
(Special to the Herald-World)
BOSTON, Jan. 8—Six new theatres, each seating 2,500, are nearing completion as additions to the expanding Neto oe chain, while locations for still more theatres are under consideration, according to Samuel Finanski, president of the New England Theatres Operating Company.

Just a year ago, this company was incorporated with a authorized capital of $25,000,000, and Samuel Finanski was elected president. The circuit then comprised 13 theatres. There are now nearly 50. Sixteen years ago Finanski broke into the picture business and worked his way through every phase of theatre operation until he rose to be manager of one small house, the Modern in this city.

The four new houses are the State, housed in a $1,000,000 office-building in Portland; the Seville in East Boston, and Egyptian in Brighton, patterned after the Temple of Karnak at Thebes; and the Continental, with Anglo-Saxon Colonial design. All these theatres are to be equipped with sound apparatus.

Reeltone Welds First Links in Sales Chain
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Reeltone is busy with a world-wide campaign and has already completed arrangements to merged the Reeltone Corporation of the Southeast to represent it in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia; with F. T. Welter for Wisconsin; Richard C. Houghton for New England; and with Maurice Sebastian for the West Coast. Other territorial distribution contracts are pending and will shortly be announced, it is stated.

The new Service Distribution Corporation has obtained control of the operators in Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Arkansas; and Harry Webb, for Virginia and Maryland.

Even Circus Folk Go in For "Sound" at Meeting
(Special to the Herald-World)
KANSAS CITY, Jan. 8.—The blare of calliopes was a thing of the past. The potent "sound effects" at the Coates House here last week, when the annual convention of the Heart of America Showmen's Association was held, brought 50 motion picture exhibitors are members.

Several thousand persons visited the exhibits during the convention, which closed yesterday. Everything, from the inside of a giant Edwardian circus line was exhibited, including novelties for magicians and actors. A dinner and dance closed the convention. The association has about 500 members.

E. R. MEdD Leaves Puhlix To Manage Independent
(Special to the Herald-World)
LUMBERTON, N. C., Jan. 8.—E. R. Medd, who has been manager of the Public Xaenger theatres in Clarksville, Miss., has accepted the position of general manager of the Carolina theatre here, operated, by the Lumberton Theatre Corporation.

Medd has been connected with the theatre business for 18 years. He is a graduate of Carolina Theatres, Inc., before joining Publix last spring. He has bought Oliver Thornton, organist, with $1,000 from Publix.

120 Blind People Hear Paramount's "Interference"
(Special to the Herald-World)
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—The seeming miracle of showing pictures for the blind became a reality last week when one hundred and twenty blind persons attended a special performance of a "picture 'Interference' at the California theatre. The plot of the story was outlined to the guests from the Blind- cribs Institution and the audience started, and the listeners had no difficulty in following the story, the voices of the characters serving to fix them in the minds of the audience.

Italy Government Gives Its Support to League Educational Film Society
(Special to the Herald-World)
NAPLES, Dec. 30.—[By Mail]—In the presence of the king and of the prime minister of several nations, the International Institute of Educational Cinematography, which is under the control of the League of Nations, was inaugurated at Frascati in the villa of Pinanski, the former summer residence of the Pope.

Ex-Minister Bisi, who had been appointed by the Italian government president of the Ente Nazionale per la Cinematografia, went a few days ago to Berlin, where he concluded the agreement planned with U.F.A. It is to be remembered that this "Ente Nazionale per la Cinematografia" has been sought by Mussolini for a general revival of cinematographic production in Italy. U.F.A. has a very large capital, being supported by important banks, and according to the agreement with U.F.A of Berlin, the president is to make agreements with companies interested in cinematographic production.

Columbia Signs Ben Lyon; Dorothy Revier Returns
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Ben Lyon has been signed by Columbia to continue in their Silent and Sound pictures. This is Lyon's first contract with an independent company.

Dorothy Revier has returned to the Columbia studios after an absence of several months. Juliane Johnston, Martha Franklin and Julina Swwayne Gordon were also signed to play in Columbia's products.

Fox Takes Movietone of Ohio Governor's Address
(Special to the Herald-World)
COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—A movietone reel of Governor-Elect Myers Y. Cooper, who will be inaugurated Governor of Ohio January 14, was taken by Fox in Columbus. This reel, which will be about six minutes in length, will contain a portion of Cooper's inaugural address.

"Marriage by Contract" Booked by Fox Circuit
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—"Marriage By Contract," Tiffany-Stahl picture, featuring Patsy Ruth Miller, has been booked by the William Fox Circuit to play in their New York and Brooklyn theatres starting February 14.

THE FIRST VOTES

THE first votes in the "My Favorite Players" contest are in, and they place Lon Chaney in the lead of the male players, and Joan Crawford and Louise Lovely, who are tied, at the head of the list of feminine players. Miss Lovely, by the way, received all her votes from one exhibitor and his family, as did William Farnum.

It has occurred to us that some may think that theatre employees are eligible to vote. That is not true in this contest. A contest open to employees is a good idea, but it will have to wait for another time. In this voting, only the exhibitor, his office and home. The usual conditions are eligible to cast a ballot. If a theatre is operated by partners, of course, each partner is considered an exhibitor and the rules apply to him accordingly.

Elsewhere in this department is published the name of each voter, by theatre, and his or her choices. Following is the standing to date of those nominated:

FEMININE

Joan Crawford
Louise Lovely
Laura La Plante
Clara Bow
Dolores Costello
Lillian Gish
Martha Mansfield
Patsy Ruth Miller

MALE

Lon Chaney
William Farnum
Richard Dix
John Gilbert
Clive Brook
Clemente Nash
Reginald Denny

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Very good.
Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill. —General patronage.

THE CIRCUS KID: Frankie Darro—Well, well, here is a real circus picture. Frankie Darro and Pavlos Hanneford are good in this one. Drew a good house and patrons were well pleased.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patronage.

THE PERFECT CRIME: Special cast—This was sold as a special, but was nothing out of the ordinary. All patrons kicked on the finish of this one.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patronage.

TERROR MOUNTAIN: Tom Tyler—December 18-19. It is hard to tell whether to call this a Western or not. Shots inside the studio don't make a good story, but this seemed to go over about average. Five reels.—Frank Johnson, Opera House, Louisville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

TERROR IN THE WILD: Tom Tyler—This is not a Western, it's very good entertainment. Worked out from an angle different from that of any picture I remember having seen. Plenty of action and comedy. The audience was thrilled.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

CONEY ISLAND: Good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

TERROR OF BAR X: Special cast—Not so good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

FRECKLES: Hobart Bosworth—75% August 21st. It's old but good; that is why I went back to it and played it. Seven reels.—E. J. Hosek, Strand theatre, Pella, Ia.—General patronage.

HOME STRUCK: Good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

LOVES OF RICARDO: George Beban—There is nothing to this one. Had a very poor crowd. Seven reels.—Andrew Rapp, Thorntoon theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

WIZARD OF THE SADDLE: Special cast—It's good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE BANDIT'S SON: Just fair.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

First National

HAROLD TEEN: Special cast—December 27-28. Good take-off on the comic strip, and enjoyed by all the younger element. Thought I would stick this in for Holiday Week, when all the Nit-Wits from the Collittches were home in their own skins in order to touch Pop for enough jack to last 'em for the next semester. However, most of 'em must have seen it on the campuses, or else they were way rocking someplace where out in a snowdrift, fur few of 'em planked down cash at the B. O. to see themselves as others see 'em. Eight reels.—William E. Tragendorf, Trags theatre, Neillville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HAROLD TEEN: Special cast—15% December 20-22. A collegiate number that just gets over. Arthur Lake is the lead is very good, as is Alice White. The amateur movie sequence is too long drawn out and becomes tiresome and misleading to those coming in when it is on. Pleased the younger generation. Eight reels.—E. R. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

HAROLD TEEN: Special cast—November 25. A silly "High School" story that even the kids thought pre-, light. Not much to it. Eight reels.—M. A.
CHAMPAIGN, ILLINOIS, December 30, 1928.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

This city is still decked out in holiday attire. The streets are arched over with a canopy of red, orange, and blue lights that give this impression of a gala day at the county fair. The theatres are offering excellent entertainment with a lack of patronage that is difficult to believe. Right now the public seems to be looking for something that has been asked for many, many times in the past few weeks, WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE BUSINESS?

While it has been a lifelong habit of ours to be optimistic, yet this typewriter has become pessimistic in spite of all we can do. This is occasioned, no doubt, by our constant desire to tell the truth, and to tell the truth as we see it will call forth a storm of protest from the four corners of the earth, and we will be charged with having a sour stomach superinduced by a disgusted disposition. Be that as it may, here is the truth as we see it and as we have it from all our sources in various parts of the state.

Generally speaking, attendance at theatres is gradually falling off. That's the first statement, mark it down. In the show business it is considered the proper thing to say that business is good, even though the sheriff is standing out in front with the keys in his hand. But that's a story in itself. On our mind when we were a kid and we have had a great deal of admiration for little George ever since, although historians have disagreed on the question as to whether it was an apple or a cherry tree.

On January 1, 1921, there will be 5,000 less theatres in operation than there will be on January 1, 1929. That's statement No. 2—mark that down also, and if you want to put a note after this statement saying "that guy is crazy," it will be all right with us.

How do we arrive at that conclusion? It's the easiest thing in the world. If a man sees a black hen laying a white egg he knows darned well that it isn't a Shanghai rooster—that is, if he knows anything about chickens. Your first question naturally would be, "What is the case and what is the remedy," and here is where we all get into deep water. The man who is willing to forego his present profitable remedy is the man who will do the work for next year before the candidates are elected President and others are defeated. We are not very strong on causes, but when it comes to figuring effects we believe we will grade 100 per cent. In the last four weeks we have sat in no less than 50 theatres that we knew didn't take in enough money at the box office to pay for the program, and we also can say the effect ought to be put back in the first grade. And that's why we say that there will be 5,000 less theatres two years from next Tuesday.

All theologies are good theories, and we have more theories than there are bootleggers out of Chicago, most of which are not worth a nickel [Editor's Note: Who, the bootleggers?] and the balance are worth even less. We will give you some of them but we wouldn't have the nerve to charge for them.

You go down the street and you hear Tom Johnson say to Bill Smith, "Why the dickens didn't you go to the last night? We tuned in on PYM and got Billy Burlap and his jazz orchestra and it was simply immense!" Well, says Bill, "I wanted to go down to the theatre and see "THE KISS AT MIDNIGHT" but when I got there I found that my wife had invited the whole damn neighborhood over to hear Ted Maloney's "Royal Symphonets" over XOPQ."

That's one of the causes. Then you hear the blonde at the ribbon counter ask the usher in the checkoff department if he went over to (the nearest city, whatever it is) and heard the Vipaloe show. She simply raves about it, says it seemed like the whole town was over there, and wonders why they couldn't have such entertainment here at home. And she winds up by saying, "This theatre manager here must be a dub, he never has anything worth seeing." That's the second cause.

Then there is the epidemic of flu, of basketball, of football, of election excitement, of home talent plays, of commencement exercises, of Christmas festivities, of house parties, of what parties and the Lord only knows what else, all of which the small theatres feel the effect of, and for it is believed that we again are getting that unless something is done to place change conditions, the small theatres are doomed and there will be none left except those in the cities and possibly county seat towns. Yes, this is a pessimistic view, we will grant. We would like to get up top on this hotel and shout that business for 1929 had a rosy outlook, and shout it loud enough to be heard from Pipestone, Minn., to Tombstone, Ariz., but that old hatchet story comes up in our mind, and like George, we wouldn't lie to please anybody (unless there was something in it, and there isn't), and you can take this for what it is worth, which isn't much.

We have tried to point a few of the causes. The remedy is up to you. We don't offer any remedy, and if you can—and one that will bring the answer—you would be worth more to Herb in his cabinet than you would be to the theatre business as such. Just that is saying a plenty, for the government needs such a guy. We have too few such already.

We have heard it frequently said by men who run off at the mouth, that the reason the small town theatremen are not making a success is because they are lazy and unfit for the business. We will grant that in some instances this is true, but when they blanket the entire small-town theatremen with this scandalous imputation, we are going to resist it with all the power we have, for we are just as cogent enough to believe that if there is a man in the business who knows these boys and what they really are, we are the guy, for if our associations—thousands of them in 18 states in the past three years—have taught us something.

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

Manning, Opera House, Baldwin, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THREE RING MARRIAGE: Mary Astor—75%. December 1. A dandy picture to our radar. Don't be afraid to step on this one. Seven reels.—R. Hollenbeck, Rose theatre, Sumas, Wash.—Small town patronage.

HAPPINESS AHEAD: Colleen Moore—December 25. A good picture and well liked.—M. W. Matthescheck, Lark theatre, McMinnville, Ore.—General patronage.

SEVEN REELS:—R. Hollenbeck, Rose theatre, Sumas, Wash.—Small town patronage.

OH, KAY: Colleen Moore—75%. Too poor to maintain this star's reputation. She must deliver something soon. Carries herself very well. Showing a comely, pleasing, 75 per cent.—M. D. Frazier, Empress theatre, Arna, Kan.—General patronage.

OH, KAY: Colleen Moore—Now here's the type of story people seem to like Colleen in, yet it failed to draw any extra business for me. However, the weather was also against us. It's a dandy picture and good. It's pretty silly, but it got a number of laughs. Colleen, I received your Christmas present. I read it. K. R. E. PLEASANT.—Colleen, I can't say which for certain. "Lilac Time" is better since she seems to have got away from me. I'm off of you.) Seven reels.—P. G. Vauchon, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE WHEEL OF CHANCE: Richard Barthelmess—16%. December 15. Heavy drama. Good picture of course, but didn't do too very good. Seven reels.—R. Hollenbeck, Rose theatre, Sumas, Wash.—Small town patronage.

SNEAK NOISE: Chester Conklin—December 7. Good comedy—the kind you enjoy.—M. W. Matthescheck, Lark theatre, McMinnville, Ore.—General patronage.

THE VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Special cast—Good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breeze, Ill.—General patronage.

HEART TROUBLE: Harry Langdon—December 14-15. The first Langdon ever played here and the Langdon wasn't the silly one. Looked like a feature-length picture, this has it. Two reels would be too long for this one. Five reels.—M. A. Manning, Opera House, Baldwin, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CANYON OF ADVENTURE: Special cast—Good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breeze, Ill.—General patronage.

THE NOSE: Richard Barthelmess—Very good. Eight reels.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breeze, Ill.—General patronage.

THE NOSE: Richard Barthelmess—December 23. The most wonderful picture that has come along. Actor of Alice Joyce is wonderful. Eight reels.—Andrew Rupp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

HEART TO HEART: Special cast—85% December 29-21. Very good picture. Miss Astor very good. Scene at the sea and writer is great. Seven reels.—Billie Dove.—Not a special but an A-1 program. Eight reels.—M. D. Frazier, Empress theatre, Arna, Kan.—General patronage.

CHINATOWN CHARLEY: Johnny Hinc—December 18. Started out poor, but turned into an interesting picture.—W. M. Matthescheck, Lark theatre, McMinnville, Ore.—General patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Special cast—Very good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breeze, Ill.—General patronage.

FLYING ROMEO: Sidney Murray—66%. December 16. A set of the cutest little fellows and personally didn't think very much of this one. Seven reels.—R. Hollenbeck, Rose theatre, Sumas, Wash.—Small town patronage.

THE TEXAS STEER: Will Rogers—I was about the only one that enjoyed this. Sure fell flat. Oh, for some of the good old pictures like Bill used to make. "Just call me Jim"—those are the kind I believe most all small town exhibitors need today. They were very CLEAT—Rondell, is a top draw, and Bill kisling Irene Rich once. Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breeze, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LITTLE SHEPHERD OF KINGDOM COME: Richard Barthelmess—86%. November 29. Ran this Thanksgiving afternoon and night with rain and mud as my only rewards. Had a superb story and special music which helped the picture some. John Payne was a novel idea and was quite natural. Newspaper article came to the screen, and for people who have never seen it before. Richard tried hard at a comeback, but came up a little short for me. Seven reels.—W. B. Branton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

AMERICAN BEAUTY: Billie Dove—Very good. —

we are a hopeless case and a flat failure, and we are ready to stand up on our hind legs—and fight Jack Dempsey if he would make that charge against us. We have found the great majority of these boys honest, energetic, and doing all they can to make their theatres a success, and we are going to go further and say, that if a lot of chain theatre managers were to put a lot of these boys to managing their theatres, and dispense with a bunch of ninny's that can only see their pay check on Saturday night and then they turn their back on the theatre counter at showtime, they would note a marked difference in receipts. Think it over.

"We may be crazy but we ain't no fool."

Now isn't the foregoing an awful thing to write right here in the holiday season when we are supposed to have an optimistic view of things for the coming year? If we could have spent five minutes in Bill Weaver's cellar before we commenced this Colyum we might have had a different outlook on conditions, but you know how Bill is, he's so doggone particular about these dry republics.

Well, that's that, and now if you are still waiting with us, let's proceed with another chapter.

Over at Montezuma, Ind., the other night we saw "The Strange Case of Captain Ramper," released by First National. We don't think First National made the thing—we have more confidence in First National—but how they came to release it under their banner is what puzzles us.

The players were a bunch of Dutch who should have been making saurkraut and limburger cheese rather than pictures. The thing contained about as much entertainment as one would get when the bulldog was tearing the seat out of his "towers" when he was stealing watermelon all about the place and no more. We stuck to the finish because Mr. and Mrs. Young had invited us to their home after the show to have a little lunch, and to lunch with those pictures and people and lunches, well if you don't know Mr. and Mrs. Young and their lunches, you have your sympathy lessons, too. We go there, and we couldn't get around to the dining room at Wayzata, Mich., and anything from Michigan is ace high with us. We hope to go back there sometime—we are invited too.

We wish we had a good theatre that we wanted well managed. We would try and hook up with this hoy Nells, for he impressed us a boy with plenty of "IT," as well as pep and a thorough knowledge of the business. Can't see why some big theatre hasn't grabbed that hoy before this.

Believe it or not, but over at Gayuga, F. C. Richardson of the Palace, offered us some "Christmas Cheer" which we refused. Again we say "Believe it or not." We also had a very pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hughes of the Crystal. Gayuga's two theatres is one too few and not a second time, that's all said and said.

We also had a delightful visit with Miss Dorothy Clark, who operates the Empire at Chrisman, III. Miss Clark was out billing the town when we called, and yet some people say that theatre folks are lazy. We will hit anybody on the nose that dares to say that of Miss Clark. We won't stand for it.

Mrs. Knox and her son of the Star at Villa Grove certainly gave us a very warm welcome. We would like to visit them again when we have more time, and we were cordially invited to do so.

* * *

Last night we saw "Lights of New York," with the Vitaphone. This is a baroque-underworld-crew-story in which the boss crook got shot, for which we thanked the director.

We had beauty pictures of the "heavy" and the "snooty" and the "sneaky" and the "trashy" and the "exquisite." Cullin has been a favorite of ours ever since we played him in "The Girl from Outside" some year ago. He played his part in this as well as we could have played it ourselves, therefore we have nothing to kick about, except that if he and that heavy are going to play these pictures in this way again, they'd warn the fellow that they are a lot too good to be played out of "Light" and "Low Grade" and "nill‖ having a dam site put a dam site more of the raw material in the "Low Grade" than they do in the "Patent." During the war we all ate dog biscuits made out of "Low Grade" flour, and some of us are kicking about it yet. The public will take "Low Grade" flour with about the same relish they do low grade pictures. The effect is just about the same. Maybe that has something to do with business—who knows?

News Item: Clark Munson, assistant manager with A. N. Gensior in the Virginia theatre here in Champaign, is said to be recovering from a very serious operation. Mr. Munson will be remembered as winning second place in Harold Lloyd's "Speedy" contest. Here's hoping he will soon back at his desk.

By the Way—

"Any picture with Sue Carol is bound to be good," comments Mrs. Hulda J. Green of the Gem in Greenriver, Utah. Note, if Mrs. Green will vote for her in the "My Favorite Players" contest, Miss Carol will be doubly benefited.

Due to our correspondence course in detectives, we discovered that Bill Tragsdorf of the Trags in Neillsville, Wis., has been wounded by the flu. And our only clue was, "Due to the flu having a stronghold on me, I didn't see this..." written in one of his reports.

Walter Odom of the Dixie in Durant, Miss., whispers concerning a picture, "There are bushes of the most beautiful girls all dressed up in bathing costumes playing leap frog with this thing. My, isn't she pretty," and I will bet that there were 50 or more boys in my theatre who would have given the "Goddess" a long look. They all like the bathing suit styles down here in Dixie." All of which gives us the lowdown on the Sunny South, eh, what?

* * *

And J. S. Walker of the Texas in Grand Prairie, Tex., learns that there is always something new under the sun. "I have never seen a picture of the stage or of actors that was worth a durn, but I have some of my patrons leave weeping, so this had something."
How They Voted

Following is the list of voters in the “My Favorite Players” contest, with their respective choices for male and feminine players (in parentheses), and arranged by theatres. The first voter’s name is that of the exhibitor, the next that of his wife (except when conditions are otherwise), and the rest of those children. No attempt has been made to arrange the list in any special order, and the position of each theatre is approximately according to the time the ballot representing it was received.

Broadway, Brooklyn, Ls.—M. A. Fauser (Laura La Plante, Lon Chaney); Mrs. M. A. Fauser (Joan Crawford, Lon Chaney); Suzanne Fauser (Joan Crawford, Lon Chaney); Jack Fauser (Laura La Plante, Lon Chaney).

The Haunted: Special cast—10%. December 18. A very good picture. The story is interesting and the acting is good.

United Artists

RAMONA: Dolores Del Rio—Every one well pleased with the 10-cent raise in price for this, and incidentally boosted how absurd of two years’ standing with this picture. Eight reels.—Geo. H. Koch, Gem theatre, Nellisville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Dolores Del Rio—93%. November 15-16. A very beautiful story of Helen Hunt Jackson’s famous novel. Dolores Del Rio is an actress in her own class, in acting and talent, and as Ramona she is wonderful. Be sure and use the song score with the picture. United Artists sells its pictures, each on its own merit, and I will say that they are the most consistent line on the market and everyone a special.—W. E. Branton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Dolores Del Rio—December 25-26. Well, so far as the picture is concerned, it will stack up pretty well against some of my 75 cent Westerns. However, due to the extreme lack of publicity which was spent on this thing, there were a lot of people in to see it and it was all about. It will draw, but it is the “goose grease” for entertainment. Eight reels.—E. C. Johnson, Trent theatre, Nellisville, Wis.—Small town patronage.
Warne Bros.

LAND OF THE SILVER FOX: Rin Tin Tin. Good picture, which many of us not see in the theatre. We've had of Rin Tin Tin. Very good house.—R. H. Nall, Nuaco theatre, Duke, Okla.—General patronage.

THE MIDNIGHT TAXI: Special cast—December 15. Another program that was just fair. Six reels.—Graffon Nutter, Royal theatre, Republic, Kan.—General patronage.

THE BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS: Monte Blue—Fair business, good picture, except the railroad sequences, which are rather involved. A railroad man. Why don't they get a technical advisor for railroad pictures, same as they do for other class pictures? Seven reels.—Geo. H. Koch, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kan.—General patronage.

HIDE YOUR MIGHTY: Special cast—Not so good. Six reels.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE MIGHTY • TRAZAN THE MIGHTY: Universal: Frank Merrill. Certainly up to expectations. Frank Merrill has quite a following since his "Perils of the Jungle" success.—Uyles Ponsant, Bijou theatre, Waterville, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lauds Mussolini for Stand on Film Education

Mussolini’s attitude in support of educational motion pictures was praised editorially recently by Arthur Brisbane in his today’s column published in 16th papers.

“It is the present stage of human development, with the stone stage only 120 years behind us,” the editorial continued, “moving pictures are by far the greatest force in education. In one hour they can teach the young, through the eye, more than printed books or oral lessons could teach in a month.”

THEATER PAYS Tribute to Newspaper Head

(Kansas City, Jan. 8.—A fine tribute to August F. Seested, general manager of the Kansas City Star, who died the other day was paid by the Globe theatre, Kansas City first run playhouse. At exactly the time of Mr. Seested’s funeral—1:30 o’clock—the performance was stopped at the theatre for three minutes and “Rock of Ages,” which a massive choir sings in “The King of Kings,” a sound picture being played at the theatre, was played and sung.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

THE Row presented several new quick changes characteristic of itself, other Rows and the film business in general, last week. Henri Ellman, until just recently manager of the Columbia exchange and more recently associated with Jerry Abrams in the distribution of Biophone in this territory, was appointed supervisor of the Central district for Tiffany-Stahl, in succession to A. H. McLaughlin, who has been connected with that company for many years, both as exchange manager and division chief.

Ellman's successor at Columbia was also named last week, William (or as you and we know him, Bill) Brumberg being appointed to the post.

McLaughlin states that he has no plans to announce at this time, though he expects to shortly.

Joe Lyon, than whom there is none more well known along the Row and who recently became associated with DeForest Photo film in this territory, announces from his headquarters at 806 So. Wabash, that the Willard theatre, which recently was taken over by the United Theatres Corporation, has installed his product and will open with the device December 13. Harry Willard is manager of the house.

Joe has just returned to his new job following confinement to his home with a severe cold, for which, he says, a broad-minded doctor prescribed most effective treatment.

Among other things confided to one of the town's reporters by John Balaban the other day, the B & K official declared that ten years ago, in the first year of the circuit's operation, it served 250,000, and that last year B & K houses played to over 300,000.

The Lincoln theatre in Danville, Illinois, which had been closed since last August, has been leased for 10 years to the Ania Amusement Corporation of Chicago, Albert Goldman, 3 South Wabash, was the broker.

One reason, at least, for Chicago's excitement last Friday, was Pat Rooney. Pat arrived with his wife and son, Patsy from New York on route to the Coast to make 12 audience shorts for Universal. They have already done a Movietone short.

As they thought of talking pictures, Pat said, "They are the big thing today and in time they will be perfected. When the phonograph first came in, it was neither good nor very bad, but in time it became entirely satisfactory. In time talking pictures will be regulated so that the voice of the actor can be tuned in as a radio is. In this way it will be clear like the Victrola and radio. All-talking long features, however, will have a harder struggle than shorts."

Pat the 3rd, who is a chip off the old block, was 19-years old on his last birthday.

The North Center theatre at Irving Park and Lincoln, is to open with sound in a few weeks. Harry Radfield is the new manager of this house.

The Fargo theatre in Geneva, III, will have sound starting January 11. The Fargo theatre in Sycamore, III, will also present sound pictures. Along in May the Deplaines and Deerpather theatres are to open with auditions.

William Brumberg, who was appointed manager of the Columbia exchange to succeed Henri Ellman, began his career in the film business when little more than a lad, being first hired to play minor parts in a traveling road show. Next he entered the newspaper field and was appointed assistant circulation manager of the Santa Barbara Morning Press. At one time in his career he was a theatre usher, and though that was before the days of the present highly trained ushers, one knows that they haven't got anything on Bill.

L. V. Kuttuauer, who is responsible for Photophone success in these precincts, says that the new device, which will play all kinds of standard talking records, will be ready in another week or so. Kuttuauer says that a test will be made shortly.

Frank Ishmael and Max Schwartz of M G M, have returned from their vacations. Schwartz spent his time around Chicago—"his favorite place," says Ishmael, who visited his mother in Danville.

"Submarine," Columbia special, has been booked by B & K to play in the majority of that circuit's houses. Coston theatres have also signed for the picture.

The Lincoln theatre, in Springfield, owned by Frisina & Grachetto, has been rebuilt and now seats 800. The theatre has installed a new Whitt organ, and Henry Wagner is the organist. The front of the house is equipped with a new 36-foot sign.

Nels Fischer was a visitor at the Columbia exchange last week.

Max Gumbiner has taken over the Lincoln theatre in Danville. The theatre was formerly operated by C. C. Pyle, the "Bunyon Derby" expert, and Harry McKeven.

Clarence Phillips and Oscar Florine are now selling Columbia pictures, both in Chicago.

Fred Knispel, district manager of Columbia, is back in Chicago after spending the holidays with his family in Minneapolis.

A. B. McCallen of the McCallen circuit, has bought a new airplane.

Adolph Siegfried of the Byou theatre has sold out. He operated the Byou for more than 21 years. Great States was the buyer. Siegfried has not announced any plans for the future.

Columbia is handling Buck Jones' first independent picture, "The Big Hop," for the Northern Illinois territory.

Educational will release 20 Bennett all-talking shorts for the season of 1929, according to Dave Dubin, Educational manager.

Holdups Rob Theatre of $535, Caught in Boxcar
(Special to the Herald-World)

LAGRANDE, ORE, Jan. 8.—Less than two hours after a holdup of the Arcade theatre here January 2 in which Francis Greulich, one of the owners, was robbed of $353, the two robbers were captured in a boxcar and the money recovered.

$150,000 Theatre to Open
(Special to the Herald-World)

BILOXI, MISS, Jan. 8.—The new Saenger theatre, erected at a cost of approximately $150,000 is nearing completion and will open about January 15. The new house will be fitted for the showing of movietone films.
"In the "Talkies" too"

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film — be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised — the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year — these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

Certified Circulation is to the Advertiser What Certified Milk is to the Baby. Count on both and take no substitute!

The HERALD-WORLD is the only publication in the motion picture industry with Certified Circulation.

The HERALD-WORLD is the only trade paper whose books are audited by the Audit Bureau of Circulations, a neutral and thorough investigating agency whose reports are gospel in the advertising world.

This means that when the HERALD-WORLD announces, with no small pride, that it has the largest circulation the field has ever known, then that means something. You can count on it.

This is Certified Circulation.

CARL LAEMMLE'S $2,000,000

A HARRY POLLARD PRODUCTION

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN
--Silent or Sound—Carl Laemmle Leads the Way!!!
You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.
You can't make a raven sing.
By the same token, absolute verity of sound recording cannot be achieved on coarse-grained film stock.
The recognized superiority of Dupont-Pathe stock for sound recording guarantees the clearest and most natural tonal effects.

With the Pathe Sound News two negative system—the sound and picture recorded simultaneously on separate film—Pathe' Sound News is able to utilize the extremely fine-grained Dupont-Pathe positive stock for the sound track, with the picture photographed on regular negative stock. Hence Sound is not sacrificed to picture nor picture to sound. The use of this special Dupont-Pathe fine-grained positive film stock for the sound track banishes the recording and laboratory evils of other systems. The highest or lowest degree of sound variability is achieved. The chirp of a cricket or the roar of a cannon are recorded with life-like fidelity.

ELIMINATES DUPING

Moreover, with the variable area system as used in Pathe Sound News duping is eliminated because the sound and picture are recorded independently and simultaneously on two separate films. Whereas with the variable density system the picture and sound track are photographs on one film, and inasmuch as Picture and Sound track are not spaced in correct relationship for synchronization in projection, it is, therefore, necessary to go through a duping process to get them in that relationship.

Thus Pathe Sound News combines to a superlative degree. Dupont-Pathe fine-grained positive stock for the sound track plus every element of perfect sound and picture recording.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertising the Industry

The industry's need for institutional advertising, frequently referred to in these pages, has commenced to assert itself in the thought of various of the leading producers and distributors. As the result it is reported that the Hays organization has under consideration plans for a broad and comprehensive publicity effort. Nothing definite as to the plan of procedure has yet been arrived at, although various specific suggestions have been discussed.

We have frequently insisted that the motion picture industry is decidedly under-advertised. Altogether too much reliance has been placed upon free publicity and upon the attention that comes to the industry and its product because of the peculiar nature of the business. Too much dependence has been placed upon word-of-mouth advertising unsupported by printed advertising and too little effort has been made to capitalize upon favorable word-of-mouth advertising by making such the subject of printed advertising.

The industry has long indulged itself in the illusion of being a well-advertised and a well-publicized business; the facts only are that it has been peculiarly fortunate in having a subject matter which naturally attracts attention. The few, random advertising and publicity efforts which it has originated have uniformly been both inadequate and inexpert.

Hence it is not surprising, now that the subject of advertising and publicity for the industry at large is finally coming in for some consideration, that many of the ideas being put forward are futiley academic or otherwise impracticable.

One suggestion is that a weekly picture supplement be inserted in the large daily newspapers throughout the country. We wonder if anyone has taken the trouble to figure out the cost of this, leaving aside for the moment the question of whether newspaper publishers could be prevailed upon to accept such a proposition.

Another suggestion is that the Hays organization publish a monthly fan magazine. This is the relic of an idea that has persisted at various places in the industry for a long time. In this connection it may be noted that the industry, without investment, is now enjoying the services of several good fan magazines, including Photoplay which is not only a good fan magazine but is a publication that ranks well up in the list of the best and most influential magazines of the country.

The Hays organization has quite enough before it in the way of immediate and proper duties to fulfill without even considering a flyer into the publishing business.

What the industry needs is advertising; there are plenty of publications both inside and outside the trade to carry these advertisements and the independent management of these publications, without risk or effort by the industry, is a very much more desirable situation than one in which the industry would attempt—and doubtless with little success—the running of a magazine.

While, as we have noted above, such little effort as the industry as a whole has made along publicity and advertising lines has been both inadequate and inexpert, the record shows that the industry has profited by the individual initiative of certain of the concerns in it. Had this initiative not been put forth the state of affairs would be much worse than it now is. Paramount has consistently gone to the public with well-devised efforts and while this concern naturally has reaped the greatest benefit, still the industry at large has profited indirectly. The same holds true in the case of Warner Brothers, particularly in the fine newspaper campaign which has been put out during the past few months. The Warner Brothers' effort was particularly helpful because it advertised the sound picture at a time this new subject especially needed both introduction and promotion. Carl Laemmle's column in The Saturday Evening Post has kept steadily on with good results.

The industry as a whole needs advertising. The logical and proper course for it to take is to buy advertising space in the good publications now available and not to waste time in seeking some magical and mystical means to the end of advertising in ways not available to other advertisers.

The Michigan Question

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, long regarded as a model exhibitors' association, is now confronted with a difficult situation as the result of recent developments. The Michigan organization has played a lone hand and has played it most successfully. Now, however, a movement is being agitated for affiliation with the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

From present indications there is a possibility of a split in the organization over the question. It is to be hoped that nothing of this kind will take place. The Michigan organization has worked earnestly and has builted solidly. It represents an important influence in the industry and on the point of service it has yielded big returns to its members.

The question of affiliation with the Allied States organization is one for the membership of the Michigan association to decide, but whatever the decision may be, it is obvious that many matters of pressing importance close at home demand the continuance of a strong, united and functioning local organization. This is a primary consideration that should not be sacrificed.

The Fox Stride

The unwavering stride of the William Fox interests toward a position of increasingly greater prestige and influence in the theatre market continues. The latest development is the acquisition of control of approximately 200 theatres in Greater New York. This deal makes Mr. Fox easily the dominant figure in the theatre situation in New York and places him in a position which many have striven for but he alone has gained.

Michigan MPTO Ripped Open By Clash Over Joining Allied

Permanent Split Threatens As State Legislation Crisis Arises

Director Shift from 12-3 to 8-6 Vote for Alignment—Decree Richey Remain Neutral

By JAY M. SHRECK

DETOUR, Jan. 15.—The Michigan exhibitor organization has been ripped wide open.

Just how serious the breach will become is another matter. One guess is as good as another at this time.

There is strong evidence of the situation becoming permanent if it is not cleared shortly. There are those who hold that if the present situation is permitted to continue the state organization will be disrupted.

What is the occasion for this breach among the membership of an exhibitor organization which has been highly regarded as a model in national and state exhibitor affairs?

The trouble had its inception with the revival of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, which is now headed by Abram F. Myers, with headquarters in Washington.

Two factions developed, one believing that so long as there were doubts as to the purposes and policies of Allied the state organization should be neutral. The other faction, sponsoring Allied, sought and received an affirmative vote.

The first faction held the conviction that Michigan should vote "no" at this time, thereby offering the state organization six months to study Allied and to learn whether or not the new national body had and was ready to inaugurate a constructive program.

Places State Organization First

This faction considered the efficiency of the state organization to be of greater importance than national affiliation at this time when state legislation of a serious nature—income tax, admission tax and carnival—is threatening.

The present disturbed situation in Michigan has developed along these lines: A meeting of the board of directors was called and, according to some, without knowledge of the business to be considered. With little or no explanation, it was claimed, a vote was taken on the entry of Michigan into Allied, with the result an affirmative vote of 12 to 3.

Following objections to the procedure, another meeting of the board was called for last Wednesday, and the vote for joining Allied stood 8 to 6.

Referendum Now Required

At this juncture a legal opinion was obtained, with the decision being that a referendum of the membership of the state organization must be taken. A ballot, void of factional differences, is in the mail, or has been received by the theatre owners.

Another situation which created a stir was that involving H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan body. As a result of his activity on behalf of Allied, it was voted, almost unanimously, at the last meeting of the board of directors that Richey should remain neutral, entering into no factional fight within the organization.

While all were reticent about discussing the situation, especially for publication, there seemed to be a feeling in some quarters that it was decided unanimously to use two or three directors, to use the power and prestige of an organization to boost one faction as against another.

If there is any ill-feeling in the situation, this seems to have caused it, with some believing that it will be detrimental to the proper functioning of the state organization. Affiliated versus Unaffiliated

The alignment in the present factional fight discloses the affiliated theatres in one group and the unaffiliated in the opposing group. In the connection it was heard frequently that those behind the Allied movement did not deny that the purpose of the new national organization was to harass the affiliated theatre. On the other hand it was forcefully stated that Myers would not be destructive—that he would not be Hays, but that the activities of the Hays organization when the exhibitors considered the Hays organization right, and 1,000 per cent against Hays when the members of Allied considered Hays wrong.

Though the foregoing involves Will H. Hays in the controversy, it was intimated that he had had no direct interest in the fight and did not care one way or another about it, although he did feel personally that it was wrong to have two exhibitor organizations.

With this alignment it was intimated strongly that the big theatre would not continue its support of an organization which was prejudiced against its (big theatre) interests.

On the other hand, however, it was stressed that the Hays organization should welcome Allied, for, as it was expressed, organized opposition means more to Hays than he can figure.

As stated, conversations were very guarded, yet there was apparent in those quarters supporting Allied a tendency to criticize the...
Silent Picture Will Be an Antique in 30 Years, Says D. W. Griffith

But Industry Must Find Right Way to Use Dialogue, Declares Director—Must Preserve Speed and Action

BY WILL WHITMORE

K, Jan. 15.—“Thirty years from now there will be an exhibition room in which will be shown the silent motion picture. People will go there and see silent pictures with written captions to explain the ideas which the picture itself cannot get over. People will laugh on seeing them. They will say, ‘And that’s what papa and mama thought was real entertainment 30 years ago.’ This will happen, I believe, provided the motion picture lives that long.” Such is the belief of D. W. Griffith, expressed in an interview at the Astor hotel, last week.

“Let me explain. The silent picture is dead as a door nail. The talking picture has killed it, and if the motion picture is to live it must depend upon dialogue. If we can find the right way to use dialogue in motion picture pictures, then motion pictures as entertainment may die.

“Right now, many of my friends, conservative people not connected with the industry, tell me they do not like the new talking pictures they have seen. When I tell them that I ask them have they seen a good silent picture recently. They invariably answer, ‘Yes.’

“This condition means this to me. The talking picture has ruined the silent picture for the patron. It offers so much more than the silent picture, they no longer can be satisfied with the silent ones. They perhaps do not like the dialogue picture because we have not found the true medium for dialogue yet.

“People say the dialogue is too slow. They are right. The pictures already made are too slow in dialogue. I believe stage technique will kill the talking picture if it is continued. A new medium for dialogue must be found, and I know it will be found. I believe I know how to do it, and in another year I believe I will be able to demonstrate it.

“We must continue to use motion picture technique, the technique which has made motion pictures what they are today, and add to this dialogue. The dialogue picture can only succeed, I believe, when the dialogue picture is essentially a silent picture with the addition of dialogue. When this is done successfully you will see the greatest entertainment the world has ever witnessed.”

Add Dialogue to Speech

“We must preserve all the speed, action, swiftness, life and tempo of the motion picture today. Add dialogue to that, and, boy, you will have people standing in their seats cheering.”

What sort of story can you do this with? It will take a story with action, excitement. Could you do it with “The Birth of a Nation?”

“I am afraid I could not do that again. There are no one today who could do ‘The Little Colonel’ as Henry B. Walthall did it, but what a picture it would have been with dialogue. ‘Birth of a Nation’ would have been better, if one could hear the shouts, the cheers, the roars of those great old warriors.”

Battle Story Is Aim

“I know what I want to do. It will be a story revolving around one of history’s most famous battles. I haven’t the story yet, and haven’t found the man to do it, but I will. When I get the story and put dialogue in it and yet retain the life and tempo of the silent picture, I am sure I can demonstrate what stupendous entertainment the dialogue picture will be.”

The interview was over. A clattering telephone announced another. I walked out of the Astor over new faces and a new love for the motion picture. A man with a great faith and a wonderful love for the motion picture has been added to me. Not a box office faith and love, but the faith and love for the motion picture itself from a man who has cherished it and helped carry the motion picture almost from its inception to its greatness of today.

New Film Center

Building Officially Opens in New York

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Official opening of the Film Center, Building was made by Abe N. Adelson, president, last week, marking the completion of work started nearly four years ago by the building committee of the MPPDA.

One of the features of the structure is the large number of storage vaults with fireproof walls eight inches thick that have been placed on every floor. Each vault has a separate flue that extends to the roof and an individual sprinkler line.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer already has moved to its new premises on the twelfth floor and the other film companies are installing their equipment and will occupy their new quarters between now and February 1.

Adelson states that leases have been closed with the following firms:

Change of Venue Granted

In Suit Over “Fleet’s In”

(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—Superior Judge Cabanis has granted a change of venue to Los Angeles in the suit of the Pavilion Ice Skating Rink Company against Adolph Zuckor. The case has been connected with the presentation of “The Fleet’s In.” Much of the film was made in San Francisco, and the plaintiffs charge that Roseland Ballroom was represented as a hangout of underworld characters.

Michigan MPTO Ripped Wide Open by Dispute Over Allied Affiliation

activities of Hays. The opinion was expressed that unless something was done regarding picture protection, the affiliated companies would face federal intervention. The sentiment seemed to be that Hays had done nothing to improve these conditions.

See Solution in Opposition

Organized opposition, in the opinion of some, would correct this situation and avoid the possibility of government regulation.

It was apparently impossible for the Allied organization consider that neither product nor protection is within the scope of an exhibitor association, insofar as taking over its executive functions is concerned. Conversations would indicate that they believe that the dominant purpose of an organization is for the protection of all members against outside interference. On the other hand, and in the opposing faction, are those who believe that product and protection hold a vital place in local and national exhibitor organization affairs.

Has $50,000 Surplus

A split in the Michigan state organization would undoubtedly become involved in a sur- pluse matter. The organization now has a surplus of $60,000. Whether or not a split in the organization would mean a division of funds is problematical, with the result finally requiring a compromise or legal action.

In sponsoring Allied the money raised came from private funds. In fact, J. C. Ritter, a director and a former president, presented his check to Myers for a portion of the $10,000, and underwrote the balance. Under present conditions, if he did not reimburse the money must come from the individual membership. It is understood that already he has received a considerable amount in this way.

Among the directors attending the meetings at which the question of joining Allied was voted upon were: Samuel Ackerman, Detroit; W. S. Butterfield, Detroit; Glenn A. Cross, Battle Creek; Fred DeLodder, Detroit; J. R. Dennison, Monroe; H. T. Hall, Detroit; E. E. Kircich, Detroit; T. H. Koon, Detroit; H. T. Reynolds, Grand Rapids; J. C. Ritter, Detroit; G. W. Tennel, Detroit; John Niebel, Detroit; Allen Johnson, Grand Rapids; Eiseman, Flint.

The ballots taken were secret, therefore the vote of each is not available.

While no one would consider as to the individual vote, the vote in the secret ballot, there was belief among those voting against Allied were: Dennison, Butterfield, and possibly certain individual voters. Among those voting for Allied was J. C. Ritter.

A summary of the situation as I observed it follows:

A serious disruption of the organization if it joins Allied.

The muzzling of Richey in factional matters.

A vote of 1 to 3 in favor of Allied.

A second vote, 8 to 6, in favor of Allied.

A legal decision requiring a referendum among members, which is now in progress.

A hesitancy on the part of all factions to discuss the subject.

There is a certain significance in the latter. The fact that no one seemed willing to talk for publication may be an indication that the breach is not one which cannot be healed.

Fox Buys 200 N. Y. Theatres; 57-Story Building for Broadway

Purchasing Independents Gives Circuit Firm Grip on New York

Acquires Seating Capacity of 280,000 in Houses with $5,000,000 Annual Profits

BY PETER VISCHE

ARCHITECT'S SKETCH OF FOX BROADWAY BUILDING IN "BETTER THEATRES," PAGE 47

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—William Fox has taken a firm grip on the theatres of Metropolitan New York. Obtaining control of 200 more theatres in Greater New York, once the biggest single group of independents, he made the Fox Theatres Corporation with a master stroke this week the largest theatre owner in the nation's biggest city.

At the same time plans were definitely announced for the erection of a new William Fox theatre on Broadway which will tower over the theatrical district. A 57-story theatre and office building is to be constructed on the southwest corner of Broadway and 47th street, opposite the Motion Picture Club, at a cost of about $10,000,000. The theatre will compare with the Roxy and the Paramount, which seat 6,200 and 4,000 respectively.

New York was tremendously impressed when William Fox issued his statement that he had to go-closed, by purchase and merger, the acquisition of over 40 independent theatrical units, containing approximately 200 theatres with a seating capacity of 280,000 and combined annual profits of $5,000,000, in Greater New York and the surrounding metropolitan area, to be known as the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc. The Fox Theatres Corporation will own 100 per cent of the stock of this company.

FOLLOWS COOPERATIVE MOVES

For the last two years the so-called independent theatres in the Metropolitan District, comprised of Greater New York, and the surrounding territory in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, have tried in vain to form an organization that would function as one cohesive unit to deal with problems such as the buying of their film supply and other outside entertainment. The last and most noteworthy cooperative attempt was made by Aaron Sapiro. William Fox conferred with the leaders of these various groups and determined the only way to meet the problem would be to pool the theatres so that they could be successfully operated as one large circuit.

To accomplish the acquisition he solicited the services of A. C. Blumenthal, who had been engaged in all the larger activities on behalf of the Fox organization for the past two or three years. After several months of negotiations, contracts have now been signed by which practically every important circuit of independent theatre operators in the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, Kings and Westchester County, and a large number in New Jersey and Connecticut, have agreed to sell their holdings to Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc.

MODERN NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSES

These theatres, for the most part, have been elected the last three to five years; they are commodious and modern neighborhood houses. This merger includes the following:

William Fox Elected to Directorate of Harriman National Bank and Trust

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, has been elected a director of the Harriman National Bank and Trust.

Louis A. Gimbel, a director of Gimbel Brothers, also has been named to the directorate of the Harriman banking concern.

247,607, have been acquired under leases having an average life of over twenty years, diu an average gross business in the last three years of approximately $25,000,000, and made an average net profit of $5,000,000, Fox states. Paid admissions for the year ended Oct. 31, 1928, exceeded $72,000,000.

L. F. Merriweather, manager of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., will form one of the most strategic links in the Fox chain and will constitute by far the largest group of property under single management in the metropolitan area. Several of the best equipped exhibitors will be made division managers.

Fox has several exhibitors to immediately equip each theatre with sound.

Under centralized management, theatrical experts estimate the expenses of the new circuit will be decreased by about 20 per cent, and it is hoped that the net return of $5,000,000 will be increased to $7,000,000 and $7,500,000. All theatres were purchased strictly on their past earnings, during the past three years.

Fox Theatres Corporation in its statement declares this by one action has acquired a circuit over three times as large as its next largest competitor, which took over 20 years to build, and five times as large as the third largest competitor, which took about 30 years to build. The acquisition practically will eliminate all the so-called independent theatres in the Eastern territory immediately surrounding New York City.

Arrangements were made at the same time for the erection of about 20 new theatres in certain neighborhoods, to add at least $500,000 to the earnings.

For the acquisition of this circuit the Fox Theatres Corporation expects to do a gross business of $100,000,000 a year, and including the West Coast circuit $135,- 000,000 a year. The total investment Fox has made in Fox Theatres Corporation and West Coast Theatres reaches the tremendous sum of $700,000,000, with hopes that he hopes before the end of this year to bring this figure up to a million seats.

KANSAS Public and Press Fight Two Bills Aimed at Film Trade Amusement Tax and Censorship of Talking Pictures Demanded by Politicians Despite Protests—Seat Levy in Missouri Is Doubted
(By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World)
KANSAS CITY, Jan. 15.—As a rule, when the state legislatures of Missouri and Kansas open sessions that is a signal for exhibitors of those two states to start guessing as to what bills detrimental to the industry will be introduced. This year, however, two such bills became known in advance in Kansas.

There are two bills to be considered by the Kansas legislature which, without exaggeration, would do nothing short of demoralizing the industry in that state if they were to become laws. The measures would saddle an amusement tax upon the shoulders of the theatre owners and provide censorship of all spoken lines in talking pictures.

Kansas City daily newspapers, which have the greater part of their circulation in Kansas, are bitterly opposed to both measures, but the great majority of legislators is trying hard for the passage of those bills.

Can't Bear Burden, Says Biechele
"There need be no fancy adjectives used in stating that Kansas exhibitors cannot hear the burden of an amusement tax," R. R. Biechele, president of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri, who is attending the meetings of the Kansas legislature said. "General business conditions in the Middle-west have been such that the exhibitors of the smaller towns in Kansas are hard hit. To place an additional tax upon those exhibitors simply would be the equivalent of driving them out of business and depriving them of their rightful means of earning a livelihood. It is about time we awaken to that fact!"

The censorship of talking pictures would please havoc with films of that type, exchange representatives say. As the cutting out of spoken lines would necessitate replacement by a blank strip of film, synchronization would be impaired, it is pointed out.

Public Opposes Measures
The Kansas censorship board has a reputation far and wide for being "straight laced" and irresponsible, they believe, there would be little doubt but that plenty of spoken lines would be cut out if the censor board legally were permitted to do so.

With both the press and public opinion against the two bills it is believed the chances for their demise are good, but history has shown the fact that it is difficult to predict what a Kansas legislature will do.

In Missouri it is believed there exists little danger of injurious bills becoming laws. Governor Henry S. Caulfield has announced he is opposed to an increase in state salaries, which is taken to mean that there is scarcely the likelihood that the legislature will pass the expected amusement tax bill which would provide increased revenue for the state treasury.

October Film Exports
Almost Twice September
(Special to the Herald-World)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Exports of motion picture films in October were nearly double those of the preceding month, totaling $6,142,726, while the total value of exported prints was $296,010, an increase of $6,333,855 feet, valued at $410,741, according to figures just compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The increase in the October exports were 2,033,792 feet of positive film with a value of $550,770, 6,331,216 feet of raw stock with a value of $150,648 and 9,947 feet of negative film with a value of $95,092.

Paramount and RCA Reported discuss Joint Operation

Arrangement Would Involve All Phases of Entertainment and Would Associate Six Large Organizations and Other Interests in Every Branch of Industry
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—It is understood from well-informed sources that Paramount and Radio Corporation of America (R C A) have entered into discussions looking to a possible operating agreement between these two powerful factors in the entertainment field.

Because of the magnitude of the issues which would be involved in such an undertaking, it is not to be expected that anything of a definite nature will be known for some time—probably not for several months.

Although only in the conversational stage, it is understood that the agreement, if effected, would involve practically every phase of the entertainment field, including motion pictures, radio, vaudeville and stage.

The possibilities of such an agreement on which the under discussion would be limitless. It would bring into association such outstanding organizations as R C A, Paramount, Keith-Albee, Loew's, Miller, and Borden; in addition, the laboratory, which co-operative and others.

Such an arrangement would give to Paramount and other production facilities of R C A, a galaxy of artists of international prominence, a nationwide broadcasting chain and other assets.

To others it would give the benefits of an international theatre chain, international distribution of pictures, and all the facilities of the foremost motion picture producing companies.

It would give each participant in the agreement an outlet for product, the scope of which scarcely can be visualized.

The organization would rank as one of the greatest internationally.

Universal Is Launching Dressmaking Contest in Gordon Fabrics Tieup
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—A total of $3,500 in prizes will go to winners of a dressmaking contest arranged by Universal, the world’s largest film company, in conjunction with M. C. D. Borden & Sons, Inc., makers of Gordon Fabrics.

Any woman who purchases Borden Fabrics from her local store and submits a dress to the local store before May 15 is eligible in the contest.

The fifteen best dresses from each store will be entered in the national contest and the awards will be made June 15 at the Borden New York headquarters.

A motion picture style show of new Borden Fabrics modeled by Universal stars is ready for use of exhibitors with the latest paper and trailer. After preliminary style shows at the theatre a local Cotton Queen Contest and Style Show is to be conducted in May.

RKO Productions Is New FBO Title; 4 Firms Renamed
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—RKO Productions, Inc., made its formal appearance in the motion picture industry here yesterday in the announcement of the new title, RKO Productions, whose part in the development of the industry has been a long and honorable one.

The title C.B.O. disappears entirely, as each of the four subsidiary companies of RKO Productions was renamed also. Henceforth they will be known as the RKO Distributing Corporation, RKO Studios, Inc., RKO Pictures of Canada, Ltd., and RKO Export Corporation.

Officials of the old C.B.O. company were elated at the change in name, feeling that the new title carries with it some of the glory and prestige of the giant Radio-Keith-Orpheum organization. The RKO Productions is such a prominent part.

Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO, will spend the New Year in Florida and will be back in New York Tuesday night, January 22, introducing the first of a series of Coast-to-Coast programs. RKO acts will present their specialties.

Simmons and Lee to Edit A M P A Year Book; Masque Ball March 2
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Mike Simmons, Bristolphone publicist, and Nancy Lee, Pathe minnesinger, have been appointed by President George Harvey of the AMPA to take editorial charge of the AMPA yearbook. The book will be one of the distinctive features of the Hollywood Masque Ball, to be staged at the Astor hotel March 2.

Myers Quits Commission To Take Over Allied Duties
(Washington Bureau of the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Commissioner Abram F. Myers, recently elected head of Allied States, today led the federal trade commission to take over his new position.

He will be succeeded as chairman of the commission by Commissioner Edgar A. McCullough. Appointment by President Coolidge of a member to succeed him on the commission is expected soon.
Show Boat

Weather foul or weather fine. Positive dates, rain or shine!
Clean, cozy, classy, comfy.
Shows without a single blush or an offending remark.
Better far than pills or powder,
That you laugh a little louder.
Keep the door from rusting,
And your cares from you entrusting.
Laugh then, brother, when you laugh,
You may healing virtues calls.

Laugh long. Live long!
The show boat's coming to town. A real honest-Injun show boat is coming to Broadway, to open at the Belmont theatre on January 21. The Princess Floating Theatre Players will appear, minus their show boat for the first time, but with all their plays and every note of their calliope. They will present a season of repertoire—4 weeks 4, and only 4.
The show boat players will start with the moral drama, "The Parson's Bride," with specialties to eliminate the intermissions. They will present "Shadow of the Rockies" and "My Jim, or the Stroke of Ten." And also "Tenderfoot."
Norman F. Thom, "The John Drew of the River," gives you your money's worth—or your money back.
Universal is bringing the Show Boat to Broadway, a brilliant piece of publicity and exploitation for their picture of Edna Ferber's grand novel. * * *

Midnight Show

New York had a new midnight show last week. At the hour when most cities through the world are quietly retiring for the night, or already asleep, New York finds fresh entertainment. This time it came in a form unique.

Just before the stroke of midnight lines of picture-wise folk went to the Colony theatre, where Universal has been striving mightily to attract New York. A new sort of picture, with singing and dialogue, was to be shown, recorded via Powers Cinephone.

The picture was an audition version of "White Lilacs," the Shubert operetta which has been enjoying a long run at the Jolson theatre. The show was condensed into a brief form, speeded up a bit, especially prepared for the sound screen. It was highly interesting and gave indication that much may be expected from this form of entertainment.

The showing of "White Lilacs" held the particular attention of the Messrs. Lee and J.J. Shubert. To them it may mean new fortunes, for it may provide their huge string of theatres through the country with a new form of entertainment. Taking a sound film from one city to another is quite a different thing from transporting a huge Shubert production.

Wrestlers

Among the most exciting films on record are those of championship prizefights. So great is the interest in these films that they have been bootlegged from one state to another, a process necessitated by another of those brilliant laws on the federal statute books.

Educational has now done a remarkable thing. Educational has a special reel of a championship wrestling match at Boston, in which Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg won the world's title from Stranger Lewis. And if you don't think a wrestling match can be exciting, go and take a look at this one!

Montana Burglars Rip Knob off Safe; Flee with $2,000
(Special to the Herald-World)

ANAconda, MONT., Jan. 15.—Burglars who gained entrance to the offices of the Sundial theatre here Sunday night escaped with $2,000, most of it in silver, after knocking off the knob of a safe. The criminals destroyed $200 worth of silk plush drapes in cracking the door.

They entered the theatre after forcing the lock of the stageroom, and knocked off the combination of a safe on the lower floor but were unable to open it. Then they went upstairs to the offices of the manager, Albert Nadeau, knocked the dial off a second safe, tore down the coast drapes in the entrance lobby, soaked them in water, poured nitrогlycerin into the hole in the safe and blew the door off its hinges.

The burglars are believed by Butte and Anaconda police to be a gang of expert criminals who have been staging robberies across the entire Montana territory. The money stolen was part of the Saturday and Sunday receipts of the Sundial and Bluebird theatres.

Eberhardt on Publicity And Advertising Staff Of Electrical Research
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW York, Jan. 15.—J. Thomson, director of public relations for Western Electric Company, has announced the appointment of Walter F. Eberhardt, for seven years with First National Pictures, as a member of his staff handling the trade paper advertising and publicity for the Electrical Research Products Corporation. This is Western Electric's first publicity effort embracing that company's activities in the field of sound pictures, including the manufacture and installation of talking picture equipment. Eberhardt will be at 195 Broadway.

Ohioan Drafts Law to Censor Sound and All Theatre Advertising Matter
(Special to the Herald-World)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 15.—John L. Clifton, head of the Department of Education of Ohio and as such head of the censor department, has prepared a draft law to tighten the censorship in the state and also of advertising matter displayed at motion picture theatres. This is the first time, it is believed, that any attempt has been made to censor advertisements at theatres.

The amendment also provides for larger censorship fees. It is believed the bill stands a good chance of passing as Clifton has the support of many of the women clubs, parent-teachers associations and similar organizations.
River Romancers to Play Broadway; Gag for Universal "Show Boat"

First Night Performance at Belmont Practically Sold Out in Unique Test For Stage and Screen, Says Reichenbach

(EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Beginning the 21st of this month and lasting four weeks, a unique experiment both for the stage and screen will be held at the Belmont theatre here. Harry Reichenbach, special exploitation man for Carl Laemmle, says the experiment is a "natural" and wise shown along Broadway agree with Harry.

HERE'S the gag. A real troupe of show boat actors will present its repertoire of four plays at the Belmont. Five-fifty is the opening night admission and, thereafter, novelty seekers will pay a top price of $2.50 to see the river romancers do their stuff. The plays will be presented just as they are given to the people of the river towns along the Missouri, Mississippi and Kennebec. Even with the regular show boat settings, only eight feet width will be used, and nightly the weird strains of a compressed callsipe will attract playgoers to the Belmont at showtime.

It is a stunt of publicize Universal's "Show Boat," starring Laura LaPlante, which will begin its Broadway run on the heels of the Belmont experiment. Universal expects to make a profit on the experiment as well as receive valuable publicity for the screen show. Already, according to Reichenbach, the first night performance is practically sold out, and the New York press even this early is doing its share to give both the Belmont experiment and Universal's picture a good sendoff.

Universal believes that New York playgoers will relish the novelty of a real show boat troupe presenting its regular repertoire. It was originally planned to bring troupe, show boat and all up the Hudson and present the play. But Times Square in the boat itself, but this plan was abandoned when it was found it would take $50,000 to make the river craft seaworthy in tide water.

The troupe is from the show boat, Princess, captained, managed and directed by Norman F. Thom, billed as "The John Drew of the River." He has "show boated" for 28 years. His father was a show boat producer and his grandfather a Mississippi river captain.

According to advance handbills, done in typical show boat fashion, the repertoire consists of "The normal drama, 'The Parson's Bride'; 'Shadows of the Rockies'; 'My Jim or The Stroke of Ten' and 'Tenderfoot.' "Oreo of high class specialties between the acts," will be given, says the dodger.

I'm Responsible, Brookhart Says of U.S. Regulation Bill

Myers, Answering Rembush Charge He Authored Measure, Tells Herald-World He "Does Not Desire to Participate in Controversy Raised by Producer Interests"

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Senator Smith W. Brookhart claims full responsibility for the bill bearing his name which seeks to regulate the motion picture industry by federal legislation.

Charges have been made, particularly by Frank J. Rembush, militant exhibitor from Indiana, to the effect that Abram F. Myers was the author of the unwelcome Brookhart bill, or at least lent a helping hand in its drafting.

Myers, since the offering of the bill, has become head of the Allied States Exhibitors organization, with headquarters in Washington.

The Herald-World asked Senator Brookhart pointblank if Myers wrote the bill or helped in the task. Senator Brookhart did not answer the direct question, but made this reply:

"I am personally responsible for all bills which I introduce in the Senate unless I state at time of introduction that same is introduced by request."

A study of the Congressional Record for Dec. 13, 1927, the day the Brookhart bill was offered in the Senate, reveals that Senator Brookhart brought up the bill without comment or address. It was read twice, a formality, and referred to the committee on interstate commerce.

Despite the fact that Senator Brookhart implies, now, that he alone was responsible for the bill, he has been charged openly and not denied that Myers was at least a consultant. Myers and Brookhart are both from Iowa and the interest of both in motion pictures—the former as federal trade commissioner and the latter as United States senator—is well-known.

The Herald-World, seeking the facts from the principals involved, asked Myers if he wrote the Brookhart bill or participated in the drawing of its terms. He declined to answer the question, replying in the following terms:

"Do not desire to participate in controversy raised by producer interests regarding authorship Brookhart Bill, nor do I think it would be proper. I suggest that you address your inquiry to Senator Brookhart."

"One Day a Week Off?" Is Asked for Projectionists

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—A bill of interest to every motion picture machine operator in New York state will shortly be introduced in the New York state legislature as the first step toward providing a day off for projectionists each week. Harry A. Brooks of Troy, president of the Troy local, was in Albany during the past week, spending some time with the bill-writing committee.

The operator is demanding the provisions he desired to be embodied in the bill. While there is a state law to the effect that employers must grant one day of rest out of every seven, the law does not apply to projectionists.

Theatres Closed for "Flu"; Ban Is Lifted Early

ST. MARY'S, ONT., Jan. 15.—Belated action on the part of local authorities because of the influenza complaint was taken when the town officials ordered the two local theatres, churches, schools, dance halls and pool rooms closed for one week. The order was still in effect for two weeks, terminating January 14, but the ban was raised January 10 after conditions had materially improved.

2 Youths Escape with $700 Theatre Receipts

CHESTER, Jan. 15.—Thomas Mangan, manager of the Washington theatre, was held up by two masked youths while alone in the theatre office shortly after 10 o'clock last night and robbed of $700. Mangan and Edward Weber, a special policeman employed at the theatre, gave chase, but the thieves disappeared and no trace has been found of them.

Citizens of Elwood Pay Tribute to Frank Mackey

ELWOOD, IND., Jan. 15.—Citizens of this city recently paid tribute to Frank H. Mackey, well-known theatre operator, with funeral services conducted at the residence. Earlier members of the Kiwanis club visited the home and held short services.

Children Beat Out Flames with Caps Before Firemen Can Reach Theatre

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15.—Fire broke out in the Queen theatre Saturday night during a performance of "Tarzan the Mighty," but was extinguished by a half dozen children who, with their caps and seat cushions, beat out the flames which ate their way up a sidewall towards the ceiling. The youngsters had the blaze out before the arrival of the firemen.

Under a heading, "A Happy Record," the "Morning Times" stated editorially: "Fires have started recently in three or four neighborhood moving picture theatres during the showing of films. But in no case did panic result. In two of them, the fire was confined to the projection room. But last Saturday night a fire in the Queen theatre started near the audience and attacked the side walls. But the audience, mostly children, instead of stampeding in panic, quietly walked out. Some of them even stopped to attack the fire with rugs and seat cushions."
Columbia Moving to Larger Offices To Meet Business Demands

Entire Eleventh Floor at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, Is Leased—New Quarters Twice Size of Old

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Columbia has leased the entire eleventh floor of 729 Seventh Avenue because of increased space demands of a rapidly expanding business, it was announced today. The move to the new address is to be made at the end of this month from 1600 Broadway, which has been the home of Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn for 17 years, first when they were with Universal and since then with their own company with Harry Cohn in charge of production.

EIGHT years of accomplishment by the Columbia organization was topped in the past year with the greatest twelve-month growth. For a long time the old offices have been crowded, however, what with the increase of personnel and detail work.

Have Double Space Now

The new quarters which are now more than two times the size of the old, will house an augmented sales staff. Important additions will be made to the advertising, publicity and exploitation departments as well as to the scenario division. Others slated for expansion are the contract, auditing and foreign units.

Columbia’s new home, which covers a floor space of 10,000 square feet, faces both on Seventh avenue and 49th street. The entire Seventh avenue side has been divided into private offices for Joe Brandt, Jack Cohn and the executives of the sales, contract, purchasing and foreign department. Arrangements also have been made for separate quarters for the publicity and scenario departments and for a private projection room.

In 1912 Joe Brandt and the Cohn brothers came to the Mecca Building with Carl Laemmle’s Universal Film Company. They devoted their time to the distribution, exploitation and production ends of the business.

Started for Themselves in 1918

In 1918, Joe, Jack and Harry felt that the time had come to create for themselves a place in the industry. Under the name of C. B. C. they entered the production field for themselves with the Hallroom Comedies and Screen Snapshots, with home offices in the Mecca building.

This was a modest beginning, but during the eight years of the company’s existence the growth has been rapid. In 1923 they entered the feature length field with 10 productions. This was increased to 16 when C. B. C. became Columbia Pictures Corporation, then to 18, 24, 30 and now to 36 features a year for the present season’s schedule. In 1926 Columbia also entered the distribution field and became a national organization with its own exchanges in the principal key cities.

“Flu” Hits Box Office In Many New York Cities

(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The “flu” is costing New York state theatre owners hundreds of thousands of dollars in lost patronage. Many theatres have closed down temporarily at the request of city or village authorities. Theatres are closed in Chestertown, Newton Falls, Antwerp, Cape Vincent and many other places.

Lee Langdon, one of the best known bookers and operators of the Central theatre in Albany, died last week of the “flu.” Mrs. Alec Feldtman, wife of the owner of the Lincoln and Rialto theatres in Schenectady, died last week.

Permanent Writ Hearing on Pathé Sound Film Waits

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Hearing on the order to show cause why the temporary injunction against Pathé and United Artists is to be made permanent was held yesterday. The delay from January 7 was granted at the request of the attorney general’s office on the plea that more time was required to study the case.

It will be recalled that the injunction granted Pathé restrains the New York censor board from invalidating or revoking licenses for “Sal of Singapore,” which in its silent version was passed without deletion or any change because of Pathé’s failure to submit for censorship the sound record to accompany the film. The picture opens at the Colony Saturday.

"We wish to commend your fine stand in resistance of pre-censorship of sound accompanied films,” the American Civil Liberties Union, through Forrest Bailey, wrote Lewis Inmanery, Pathé secretary. “It may be of interest to you to learn that we have among our consulting attorneys and have specialized in the study of censorship problems. We should be very happy to make one of these available to you in an advisory capacity, if that would be of helpful service.”

Sam Morris Promotes J. V. Allan to Warners’ Western Sales Manager

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager in charge of distribution of Warners, today appointed J. V. Allan, former branch manager of the Detroit exchange, to western sales manager.

Allan will have charge of the branches previously supervised by Claude C. Ezell, who was recently advanced by Mr. Morris to the post of general sales manager. His headquarters will be in New York.

Exhibitor Finds Search for Name for Talking Picture Is Live Exploitation Stunt

The hunt for a suitable name for the talking motion picture has taken on a new significance.

To one exhibitor it has meant "one of the best publicity stunts" for advance promotion on the installation of sound equipment.

This campaign will be carried complete in the HERALD-WORLD within the next few weeks, when the name selected by 800 students and the winning essay will be published.

In addition, there will be offered the names selected by the public—the fathers and mothers of the students, and other fans.

This money making and valuable stunt was promoted by L. A. Woodin of the Arcadia Theatre Company, Wellsboro, Pa., cooperating with Woodin are the local dailies in addition to the schools and fans, among whom are the parents of the students.

Jack Byers, one of my wishes that other exhibitors will interest their local schools in this wonderful undertaking.

Studios to Take Active Hand in Drive

(Special to the HERALD-WORLD)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15.—According to statements of numerous production executives, it will be only a short time before studios will take an active hand in the HERALD-WORLD's campaign to find a name to give the talking picture.

Words being contributed go from the extremely simple to the elaborate. Syllables and prefixes fail to halt these story-telling geniuses when it's a world-wide stunt.

"Photoplay" Is Suggested

One of the sensible and commonplace suggestions this week is "Photoplay." It comes from Charles Burr, president of the Burr and Hess company, who says, "If no one else has beaten me to it I advocate a word that we are all acquainted with and repeat 'talkies.' Although it has always been used to mean any motion picture fact remains it combines the suggestion of a stage play with a motion picture.

This word has been used to mean one kind of entertainment, a dialogue production on a stage.

Of course Zukor and Goldwyn and a number of others tried to establish the word photoplay in the trade some time ago but the word 'movies' had attained too great a hold on the fans. Photoplay has the advantage of considerable usage which can aid in its being woven into the litany of the industry."

Charles S. "Tonalis" Louis A. Sarecky, assistant to the vice-president of FBO, suggests that "Tonalis" be used to Company Wellsboro, Pa. "Tonalis" or "Tonal Films," he says, "means the same in French, Spanish and English and has definite meaning in addition to dignity."

Jack White, prominently identified as head of Jack White Productions, declares that "Audien is a good word for talking pictures." He rolled the word over on his tongue and said he believes the need of a word was recognized by the HERALD-WORLD at a critical time.

C. E. Sullivan, vice-president of FBO, is enthusiastic for a new word. He says, "It strikes me that it is going to be a difficult task to get the public away from referring to the new type of picture as 'talkies.' This misnomer, in my judgment, tends to replace the word 'movies.' In this connection I call your attention to 'movere' which is quite suggestive and inventive towards the use of a coined, imperative descriptive word.

"If I were to search for which I would regard an appropriate name I doubt very much that I could possibly find one that would be more properly descriptive than 'Photophone Entertainment.' This suggestion might seem to be influenced somewhat by our connection with the Photophone Company but regardless of this 'Photophone Entertainment' is my story and I will stick to it."

World Wide Managers Picked, Says Skiboll; No District Sales Heads

(Special to the HERALD-WORLD)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—All sales offices of World Wide Pictures in the United States and Canada will be operating 100 per cent by Feb.

Herald-World sales manager, announced on his return from the field today. Practically all managers have been employed and they will be attached to the Educational exchanges which are handling physical distribution.

There will be no district managers; local managers will hire all road salesmen.

Clarence Brown on Way To N. Y. for Male Lead

Clarence Brown, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, arrived in Chicago Tuesday, Jan. 15, on his way to New York where he will seek a male lead for his next picture, "Wonders of Women." Brown intended to take a plane both ways but cold weather prevented. He hopes to return by plane, however.

Brown became however, in making the Rocky Mountains the thermometer fell apart 30 below, he said.

ASK SUBSTITUTE FOR "VITAPHONE"

Trade Names and "Talkies" Not Satisfactory—Movie Men Want Name for Synchronized Pictures.

Students of W. H. S. will take part in a nation wide effort to secure a new name for the talking picture, or synchronized film, when Manager Larry Woodin of the Arcadia, presents the plan of the Exhibitors Herald and World, a leading moving picture trade journal, to them Friday morning.

Exhibitors, actors and producers alike have expressed keen dissatisfaction with the current term, "Talkies," for the synchronized film.

Equally objectionable are the popular terms, "Photophone" and "Vitaphone," due to the fact that they, like "Vicrola," or "B. D. Q," are trade names. More than this, none of the names now in vogue are sufficiently comprehensive to cover the entire field.

A name like "Kodak," or "Radio," is the aim of the Exhibitor Herald's campaign.

"As an incentive to thought on the problem, Manager Woodin is making the following offer to Wellboro high school students: For the best essay (so adjudged by a committee from the local board of Woodin) propounding a satisfactory word, explaining its derivation and meaning, and advocating its use as a blanket term for synchronized moving pictures, the Arcadia management will give a six month's season ticket. The winning word and its accompanying essay will then be sent to the Exhibitors Herald and World and entered in the national contest.

Savants, entomologists, philologists and druggists, lexicographers, editors, athletes and fishermen, anyone who can puzzle out a word to be not too "highbrow" but not too "low brow," are working on the problem.
Try These!

The Herald-World's campaign to find a suitable name for talking motion pictures is becoming as popular as the cross word puzzle. Try these names and see whether they roll easily off the tongue.

SOUND PICTURES

Try Out This Knockout Ad Idea!

UP on your toes, men, and give a real hand to Don Hoobler, advertising and publicity man of the Bloomington theatre at Bloomington, III. For a drag-'em-out campaign this one is right on the top rung of the ladder. As for the results, we'll mention them after we've told you just what he did.

As a matter of fact, the reproduced newspaper ads on this and the next page speak for themselves and tell the whole story. But we'll condense it a bit. Al Jolson's "The Singing Fool" was coming to the Irving theatre. Now let's emphasize right here that the very same campaign can be put on for any picture. Be sure, first, that it is a good picture, however.

Asks Public for Idea

Picking up the sound theory that everyone likes to be on the "inside," Hoobler tells the public through the first advertisement that the coming picture is so good that "he feels words cannot describe it." So he asks the prospective patron to tell him what he would do if he were in the advertising man's boots. All he asks is the idea; he says "Don't Try to Do the Work." And he offers $175 in awards.

Simple, isn't it? Perhaps. Anything looks simple after we see it. One big result was that it gave the theatre an accurate check on its best publicity medium, and that, the contestants decided, was the newspaper advertisements.

Small Ads Used Daily

Hoobler writes to "The Theatre" as follows:

"Tear sheets from a campaign used by the writer for the Irving theatre for 'The Singing Fool' and which attracted much attention, are enclosed. The ones enclosed comprise the two larger advance announcements (the first of these is reproduced on this page, the second is reprinted on page 37) and the other (see the large ad on the same page) is the followup which was used during the run of the picture.

"The smaller ads issued each day previous to the opening and following these larger announcements were omitted from this group, as they were practically the same in subject matter as these.

Thousands Interested

"We have never run a contest which was more successful in replies received. It seemed that thousands were interested in advertising and the letters and ideas were numerous, although most of them were old and stereotyped and anything but original.

"A very interesting feature of the contest was that it gave us a check on our most important mediums and the ideas chiefly consisted of newspaper ads. You see, the ideas suggested most often would naturally be the ones which the people thought of most often and consulted.

"Would like your opinion of the campaign. It is needless to say anything about the success of the run for that was abnormal everywhere, but our opening day was big."

A Real Followup

Well, Hoobler, we think just so much of it that we are passing it on to all readers of this department with the recommendation that they put it to use, for it should be a whiz for anyone.

Note, everybody, that in the followup ad (on page 37) Hoobler thanks all who took part, names the winners, quotes the winning letter, names the judges, and then adds this caveat that only speaking wanted idea is use, credit will be given to the person suggesting it.

The winning idea was this, to quote from the patron's letter:

"You might advertise that each night certain persons who come to the show will be chosen to have their pictures taken. These pictures will be moving pictures, taken in their home, at their office or any place you might desire. You would also get their impressions of the picture and have that written in letter form, and these letters with the pictures might be shown on the screen the following night.

"There are many, in fact, nearly everyone, would like to see themselves on the screen and they would be back the following night to see just how they looked. I feel certain that this would arouse a great deal of interest. If it were not possible to have a movie made, you might have some stationary pictures and letters made and show them.

"Nor was that such a bad idea in itself.

[Keep your seats a minute, folks. Next week, not 'East Lynne' but another campaign on 'The Singing Fool,' and sent in by Alvin Hostler of the Strand, Altoona, Pa. And a dandy it is, too.]

Speak with Care or Lose

Screen Personality, Says Del Ruth to Audien Actor

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15—Roy Del Ruth, who has had an abundance of experience with Vitaphone pictures, today declared that the only hope for actors who wish to survive the talkie era is with such exacting care that their voice does not change their screen personalities.

He predicts that otherwise quite a few big people of the screen are going to fall by the wayside. "A big he-man," he says, "with a strapping body will be ruined the minute his audiences realize he has a tiny, squeaking voice."

Several players of prestige are regarding this matter with apprehension. Their voices do not fit the line of parts which they have been playing, and in which they have built up their reputations. There is always a way out for the actor who is willing to undergo study and retraining. Del Ruth is directing "The Hot-tentot" for Warner Brothers.
New Sound Device of German Company Is Tested in Berlin

(Special to the Herald-World)

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—(By Mail)—First demonstration has been given of a new unified reproducing device for sound pictures by the Tobis Syndikat Company (Tobis).

This does not require a special projector, but is small and simple attachment which can be installed in a few hours in addition to any usual German cinema-projector, together with amplifiers and loudspeakers specially designed by Tobis, providing an excellent reproduction of speech, music and effects.

The Tobis device is running usual films of normal width, bearing the sound track inside the sprocket-holes. Interchangeability is claimed with any English or American sound-on-film system like Movietone, Photophone, Cinephone, Phonofilm and so on.

The Tobis people showed, after a number of their own recently produced sound subjects, also three reels of American origin.

Tobis is now wiring five big houses in Berlin, Hamburg, Düsseldorf, Leipsic and Munich at a comparatively low price and continue the installations from February at a rate of 50 sets a month.

If Public Wants 'Em We'll Do 'Em, Says Brenon in Detroit

(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Jan. 15.—Herbert Brenon, director, admits that he's puzzled by the rapid rise of sound pictures. Here last week for personal appearances with "The Rescue," starring Ronald Colman and Lili Damita, and showing at the United Artists theatre, Brenon had this to say:

"This talking picture thing has me at the crossroads and I hesitate to take a step for fear it will lead me in the wrong path. Personally, I believe the stage and motion picture are two separate and distinct mediums and it would be better for both to keep within their own limits."

"However, the appeal of the talking pictures to the public has everyone in the film industry guessing. I regret the issue is here, and frankly I am afraid to face it. I would much prefer to go on making silent pictures, but if the playgoers want the 'talkies,' I suppose I will have to try my hand at the audial films."

West Coast to Install Sound in Butte Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

BUTTE, Jan. 15.—A total of $100,000 will be spent here in the next five months by the West Coast Theatres company, redecorating and installing sound equipment in two houses.

The largest expenditure will be made on the Park theatre. West Coast will spend $20,000 remodeling the interior of this house, an additional $25,000 in installing vitaphone and movietone equipment. The house will be opened in April. Vitaphone and movietone will also be installed in the American theatre.

Manager of the houses will be Harry Stone, present manager of the Rialto and American theatres.

Recording Laboratories Offers Two Devices; W. M. Brown Is Head

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—William M. Brown has been named president of the newly organized Recording Laboratories of America, which will offer a synchronous device under the name of the Phonoscope, and non-synchronous equipment named the Auditone. Both devices are being demonstrated at the company's laboratories.

William M. Brown has been assistant to the president of a large industrial concern in Canada in which a large interest is held by the du Pont de Nemours company. He also heads William Brown and Company, Inc., parent company of Recording Laboratories of America.

Jess Smith Vice President

Jess Smith, former First National producer, is vice president of Recording Laboratories and studio production manager, and Jordan M. Cohan is secretary.

Recording Laboratories of America has obtained a long term lease on a studio and offices at 216-218-220 East 38th street, New York city. These premises are declared to be particularly adaptable to the exacting requirements of recording and producing sound pictures.

Disc Method Used

The company's engineers, after a long study of every phase of the sound picture industry, perfected the synchronous and non-synchronous talking picture devices, using the disc method, interchangeable with all outstanding disc systems.

The company will produce a series of short length talking picture novelties at the standard 33 1/3 speed and a synchronizing service is offered to independent producers who require a synchronized musical and sound score.
Cinephone-Biophone Attachment Deal Is Not Merger: Powers
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Neither a merger of Powers Cinephone with Biophone nor any affiliation except a buying and selling contract is signified by an arrangement just announced for the installation of the Powers Cinephone sound-on-film attachment with Biophone equipment, P. A. Powers declared today. He added that similar contracts may be made with other manufacturers of disc devices.

The action of the Biophone company in adopting the Powers Cinephone sound-on-film attachment as a standard device for inclusion in its sound reproducing installations, says the Powers Cinephone office, is the first definite step in a general movement on the part of several makers of disc machines to obtain the Powers Cinephone attachment to complete their equipments, and meet the exhibitor's demand for sound reproducers embracing both disc and sound track methods.

These negotiations have bred rumors of mergers between Powers Cinephone and the bigger independent companies making disc reproducers. None of these proposed mergers has progressed beyond the stage of an original proposition. Powers said that his company has no intention of merging, nor of granting exclusive selling rights for the sound-on-film attachment as a unit or an accessory.

In this respect, Powers pointed out that the contract between Powers Cinephone and Biophone is a non-exclusive agreement whereby the Biophone company is assured the Powers Cinephone attachment for its equipments without prejudice to any similar arrangements which may be made with other manufacturers of disc sound reproducers.

Powers further stated that the Biophone agreement and the other similar agreements pending will in no way affect the selling plans nor the sales of Powers Cinephone complete equipments. These will be handled both direct from the Powers Cinephone offices in New York and through territorial sales agencies.

Bristolphone Adds Sound-Film Device To Attach to Disc
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Sonora-Bristolphone is now as physically interchangeable as any other system, with the making available of a sound-on-film device available as a simple attachment to the present disc reproducing apparatus by February 1, says Charles R. Rogers, general manager.

Commenting on the acquisition of the sound-on-film attachment, Rogers said:

"We have been negotiating for this attachment for some time, but I have been averse to saying anything about it, until we had fully determined that it met the most rigid requirements of mechanical perfection, and, even more important, that it was clear of patent infringements of any kind.

"With the addition of this sound-on-film attachment, Sonora-Bristolphone is now physically interchangeable with every type of system now being used by the outstanding producers of the industry. This new auxiliary service will be marketed along the same lines that have won quick support for Sonora-Bristolphone, which has all the patents necessary to its operation under its own roof, and is a distinct benefit to exhibitors who cannot afford the higher priced instruments."

Mr. Saurer’s Winning Letter:

I wish to congratulate you on the plan you have followed in promoting The Singing Fool. Whatever the motive was in your proposal of making auditions for the advertising campaign, it was bound to yield the very best results. In using for the campaign letters you have in mind, asked the publicity question for better times not now which might be better time. In good plan to have house, with sight, you have wonderfully accomplished the job yourself.

I will, however, make a suggestion which I feel might make the interest of a little greater and help with the reward.

You might advertise that each week certain person who sees the show will be chosen to have the picture taken. Each picture will be sent to you in a personal letter. You might also get their signatures of the picture and have them be better done and these letters with the picture might be shown as the winner for that week. These are, in fact, very creative, would that he be right, ourselves as for some and they would be the following.

The wonderful letters which have been sent in have been an inspiration for the British advertising man to attempt to prepare a campaign for the balance of the week which will properly describe and tell you about the picture. Mr. Saurer’s idea will be used in connection with the campaign which goes at many others. When an original suggestion looks is used, credit will be given to the person suggesting it.

The Follow-up—the Final Punch.

Horwitz Puts Phonofilm in Second Cleveland House

(Special to the Herald-World)

CLEVELAND, Jan. 15.—The Astor theatre is the second house in Cleveland to open with DeForest Phonofilm equipment. M.

B. Horwitz selected the Western Electric synchronized version of "Uncle Tom’s Cabin" for the first feature. The other Cleveland theatre having the DeForest equipment, installed by General Talking Pictures Corporation, is the Plaza, also owned by Horwitz.
The new model Cutawl is entirely portable. It is not attached in any way except by electric cord, and can be operated in any plane horizontal, vertical or oblique.

It is POWERFUL having a two-speed motor, allowing the operator to use low speed on fine and intricate work and high speed where rapid cutting is practicable and desirable.

It has a variable cutting stroke up to 3/4 inch and is convertible for sawing by substituting saw-blade for the chisel. Thus it is possible to cut several thicknesses of cardboard or wallboard at one cutting. Note example in soldiers shown to the left.

There is practically no limit to the range of its usefulness, other than the ingenuity and ability of its user.

Send for detailed information about our FREE 10 day Trial Offer, also list of Theatre and Studio users and complete catalog describing the new and improved Cutawl.

Movie-Phone Making Progress With 10 to 12 Weekly Wirings

L. E. Goetz, general manager of the Movie-Phone Corporation located at 724 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, is making rapid progress in the installation and manufacture of the synchronized devices being sold by the Movie-Phone Corporation.

Recent installations have included the following theatres in the Central West: Granada theatre, Milwaukee; Burleigh theatre, Milwaukee; Grace theatre, Milwaukee; Fern theatre, Milwauk ee; Rex theatre, Beloit, Wis.; Beverly theatre, Janesville, Wis.; Regent theatre, Prairie Du Chien, Wis.; Municipal theatre, Mineral Point, Wis., four theatres of the United Theatres Circuit in Kenosha, Wis. Other installations include the Palace theatre, Pana, Ill.; Hippodrome theatre, Herrin, Ill.; Hippodrome theatre, Murphysboro, Ill.; Opera House, Rayne, La.; Missouri theatre, Columbia, Mo.; Rex theatre, Battle Creek, Mich., and the Columbus theatre, Lowellville, Ohio.

The company maintains a screening room at 746 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, and the Sun Projection Rooms at 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, are also showing the various types of apparatus the company manufactures.

Goetz announced that there are a large number of installations on his books which are being made at the rate of ten to twelve a week, and states that the various producers aside from Warner Brothers, are supplying the theatres who have installed his equipment.

Goetz also declared that the synchronized devices manufactured by the Movie-Phone Corporation are covered by patents and have other patents pending, and he claims for these devices that they are the only ones that operate directly from the motion picture machines that are free from mechanical interference, as he claims to have a special equalizing apparatus which eliminates any variation in tone.

He further stated that he can make installations within seven days after receipt of order and guarantees his equipment to work equal to any others.

The equipment consists of two complete synchronizing machines, one of which is shown in the illustration herewith, together with one six-tube amplifier and tubes, Monitor speaker for the booth, sound changeover device and volume control, and the auditorium speaker for the stage. These machines are sold for $1,000 F.O.B., Chicago, installation costs being paid by the exhibitor.

LeBaron Adds Five to FBO List of Authors Of 1929-30 Productions (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15.—LeBaron, vice president in charge of production for FBO, announces that James A. Creelman, author and playwright, has been added to the list of writing talent being lined up for FBO's 1929-30 program. Creelman has been signed to write two original talking pictures, one of which is tentatively entitled "Waterfront," the other has already started. The second is as yet untitled.

The line-up of authors for the new season's product, in addition to Creelman, include Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, co-authors of "The Front Page."

Jane Murfin, Winifred Dunn, Jack Cunningham and Sidney Lazarus have been added to the scenario staff. Jane Murfin is the author of "Lilac Time," which she wrote in collaboration with Jane Cowl. Winifred Dunn has "Patent Leather Kid," "Twinkie Toes" and "Lonesome Ladies" to her credit, while Jack Cunningham is responsible for the scenarios of "The Covered Wagon," as well as the Douglas Fairbanks vehicles, "The Black Pirate" and "Don Q." Sidney Lazarus has been writing titles for two years.

Zanuck Promoted to Associate Production Executive for Warners (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15.—J. L. Warner has elevated Darryl Francis Zanuck to the post of associate executive in charge of production. For several years Zanuck has been right-hand man to Warner in studio matters and this promotion, it is said, is in recognition of his conscientious work and untiring efforts.

Zanuck won professional distinction as a magazine writer. He entered picture work in 1921 and soon became one of Hollywood's leading screenwriters. In this capacity, he made his first affiliation with the Warner studios, where later he was selected as J. L. Warner's principal aid.

Many of Warner Bros. outstanding box-office successes have been written or adapted by Zanuck. He is the author of their mammoth spectacular, "Noah's Ark," starring Dolores Costello, the most ambitious undertaking in the production history of Warner Bros.

First National's Story Division Reorganized; New Writers Engaged (Special to the Herald-World)

Burbank, Jan. 15.—A reorganization of the story department at First National studios has been announced by the supervision of Anthony Coldeway as assistant associate producer. There are 13 new writing adaptors, continuities and titles. The list with new names includes Tom Geraghty, Bradley King, Monte Katterjohn, Louis Stevens, Forrest Halley, Ewart Adamson, James Gruen, F. McGrew Willis, Humphrey Pearson, Walker Anthony, Gene Towne, Paul Perez and Edward Luddy.

265 Players Employed; Monthly Pay Totals $40,000; 37 Films

Mix Finishes "Dude Ranch" with Director Ford; Estelle Taylor in Big Role of Chaney Film; Heavy MGM Schedule Under Way; O'Brien in "Son of Anak" (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15.—Two hundred and sixty-five actors and actresses are working in parts here this week. Not counting salaries of stars these people are receiving salaries totaling approximately $1,300 a day. Total monthly checks for them are under $40,000 a month. According to estimates of casting agencies this item was $90,000 two years ago. There are 37 pictures in production today which is only slightly under the number in production two years ago.

Nine studios are doing the bulk of the production work on feature pictures.

FBO quieted down this week when Tom Mix finished shooting "The Dude Ranch." His director was Eugene Ford. Tom had excellent support in the persons of Kathryn McGuire, Martha Mattox and Ernest Hillard. The picture was exactly one month in the making, having been begun December 10, shooting through the holidays to January 11. Nothing is in production at FBO this week.

On the contrary Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer boasts eight productions under way after having begun three this week.

Estelle Taylor Opposite Chaney

Charlie Brabin, Tod Browning and Jack Conway are the directors of the new ones. Browning is shooting a Chaney picture, "Where East Is East." The charming Estelle Taylor provides practically all the pulchritude for this opera. Of course Lupe Velez and Lloyd Hughes are also in the cast but their parts are subordinate to the aforementioned principals.

While five United Artists pictures are in the making only three are being shot on the lot. They are "Coquette," starring Pickford; "Child's Fifth Avenue," starring Banky, and "Alibi," with an all-star cast.

The two being made away from "home" are "Queen Kelly" and "Hell's Angels." Von Stroheim and Swanson moved their sets and equipment from the FBO to the Pathé lot last week to finish "Queen Kelly." The picture has been under way since November 1 and is now being wound up.

"Hell's Angels" has been in production since Columbus Day, 1927.

Reginald Barker has begun a picture at Tiffany-Stahl lot called "Zepplin." In the cast are Conway Tearle, Claire Windsor, co-stars, and Larry Kent. It is a big air picture.

Frank Borzage will begin another Farrell-Gaynor drama this week. The story is by Tristan Tupper who wrote Borzage's last picture. The entire stage, number three, is being transformed from the wheat ranch recently used by Murnau in a country-side of New York State. The wheat ranch extended over the entire stage as will "the countryside." Rolling hills, woods, several houses, a country road, and a rambling brook are being built within the confines of a stage 300 feet long and 150 feet wide. Harry Oliver, who is making it, also made the big snow set for "The River."

"Fog," the first 100 per cent talking picture to be made at the new Metropolitan Studios, under the Western Electric system, has been completed, and Herbert Wilcox is taking the first print to New York this week for showing.

Blystone Begins Audien

John Blystone commences shooting this week on his second feature-length Movietone for Fox.

With Warner Baxter and Mary Duncan playing the leading roles, Blystone will embark on the great murder trial entitled "Through Different Eyes." It will have dialogue, but it will also have flash-backs and fade-outs which will embody the picture with action. The dialogue will be used only to emphasize the high lights of the picture.

A story written by Ben Ames Williams and printed in the Saturday Evening Post is the next script to star George O'Brien. "False"

WARNERS CUT 5,000 FEET OF "NOAH"

IT'S BETTER FILM THAN EVER

WAMPAS DECIDES ON 13 1929 BABY STARS; GEORGE O'BRIEN QUITS THE AIR

First National Signs Writers

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 13.—Warner Brothers has cut 5,000 goodly feet from "Noah's Ark" and it's a better picture than ever. The picture formerly ran 14,000 feet when it opened nine weeks ago at Grauman's Chinese theatre. It ends its run there this week. For all other bookings the revised prints will be used.

"BROADWAY MELODY" goes into the current week for an extended run. It is an M.G.M. picture.

The most noticeable difference in the new cut is that instead of alternating familiar musical sequences to modern sequence and back to Biblical sequence throughout the picture, the director now sticks to his story until it is practically finished. You follow the travels of Travis and Maire through the years and the war and through the war to the Armistice before the Biblical story begins. While much of the war sequences have been cut out, comparatively little of the Biblical stuff has been lost. The Biblical portion of the picture has been emphasized, proclaiming the songs as being part of the story. It remains so and is made more effective by the revision.

The Pendulum Swings the Other Way at F.N

First National-Vitaphone showed us this week it is still a force. Jack Warner and Al Rockett announced yesterday that they have acquired the talents of the following gifted scribes for work on next year's product:

Bradley King has come in to work on "Fat and Millionaire."

Loulou Stevens is assigned to "Hot Stuff." Forrest Huber is doing the adaptation of "Prisoners," the Milton Towne script, which Griffith will star.

Edward Adamson is working on the next Billie Dove production. James Green is doing "The Girl in the Glass Cage," in which Dorothy Mackall is to have a starring role.

F. McGraw Willis is working on "Two Weeks Off" as a collaboration. Humphrey Pearson is doing the dialogue for "Hot Stuff." Gene Towne, Paul Towne and Sue Gordon, Luddi are engaged as "stock" writers and titles.

Three months ago, there were two scenarists under contract at F.N.

WAMPAS SENDS 13 MORE TO FAME

Stakes for the election of the Baby Stars by the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers every year the monotonous and humdrum of the after holiday fall would probably prove fatal to many newspapers and publicists. It is known to be an excuse for the slightest effort towards enthusiasm at any time. Hollywood's head isaching from emotional intoxication (nonlycoholic).

We're printing the list herewith and hope—but do not trust—that you will recognize one or any of them. We have investigated the matter thoroughly and are prepared to back each. (Here's the surprise) Everyone of them has appeared on the screen at some time or other.

JEAN ARTHUR, Paramount.

BETTY BOYD, Educational.

SALI BERTHON, Fox.

BETTY BLANC, RKO.

ETHLYNE CLAIR, Pathé.

DORIS COCHRAN, First Nat.

George Amy, film editor, who has been with Burr and Hines for the past three years, has been working on the "Down Argentine Way," a picture of which he has had experience of late cutting and editing talking pictures.

George O'Brien's Lindberghian inclinations faded somewhat in the past three weeks. Not that George isn't an air advocate and a cold war hater of the October kind. He is to fine his flying to more southern and more homelike surroundings in the future. Since Hollywood to San Francisco air transport has been inaugurated, O'Brien's aforementioned inclinations have taken him to the northern port regularly on visits to the homes of his father, Chief of Police Dan O'Brien.

But with the official retirement of the Chief a few days ago, the family has been reunited at home in Hollywood.

NOTE TO TAY GARNETT: Watch that Grant A Coolidge's name is no shadow, it's not long before we make that spring voyage on your yacht to Catalina.

Colors" was George's most recent production. This one will exceed it in expenditure. It may be that the friendship between the author of the story and the star has had some influence in bringing them together in this work. The picture will be directed by David Butler and according to George O'Brien it has an excellent supporting cast. In it Nora Lane plays opposite George. In the supporting cast are the principal characters actor and David Sharpe, James Gordon, Edward Fell, and Frank Hagney compose the cast. The title of the picture is "Scare of Another Year," which George O'Brien assures us is a brainchild of Harry Brand and Benjamin J. Markson.

Having completed the selection of the cast for the "Hottentot," director Roy Del Ruth has started actual filming of this production. Such satellites as Edward Everett Horton, Patcy Ruth Miller, Douglas Ger-ard, Stanley Taylor, Gladys Brockwell, Otto Hoffman, Edmund Beebe, Maud Turner Gordon and others are included in the list to appear in this all-Vitaphone.

Mentioned previously is Del Ruth, who was exercised in choosing these people, as the exacting requirements demanded of them by the synchronization device made this impossible.

Del Ruth, moreover, is the director of "The Terror," money-making all-audience.

BRICE DESERTS SCENARIOS FOR SONGS AND PRODUCTIONS

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16.—Monte Brice has deserted his scenarios to work on some songs and plays for a short time. One of the songs is called "Agua Caliente." He is also working on a story based upon the same title which he and Grant Clark and Red Nichols will produce in color and synchronization.

Regarding:

Tommy Hacker
Harry Burns
Arthur Ungar
Welford Beeton
Bob Wilk
Dick Hunt
Jerry Hoffman
Larrie Dube
Monroe Rathrop

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16.—Tommy Hacker, through his installations of electronic devices, has offered several opportunities to work with dialogue pictures, but hesitates on several of the proposals. This new angle has met with the approval of many of the best critics but remains to be tested thoroughly before it will be offered. Hacker is well known in the picture industry, having been with several of the more prominent studios, but retired to spend more time on his branched.

Well, the time has come and gone for the Wampas to name the "13 Baby Stars" from the ranks of beautiful young women who have made their way on film fame. They're a nice lot and we envy them.

It is my privilege to reveal the information to the world. They have been in competition in a fashion from now on. Their initial organization, the Wasps, which is the Women's Association of Press Agents, contains naming the strong list of names from among males in Hollywood who will contribute their share towards screen histrionics.

First on their list of chosen candidates is Harry Burns, a Valentiino type of man. Second is Arthur Ungar who will be projected for Wally Reid roles. Then came Dan O'Brien first, and Welford Beeton. Others on the list include the pulchritudinous Ralph Wilk and Dick Hunt. Jerry Hoffman and Larry Nichols are representative as sure contenders among the Irish Baby Stars. Monroe Rathrop and Speed Kentendl have always had the desire to be stars and if they can do it Harry Nichols should be among them. But after suggesting H. E. N. it is only fair to enter the name of Robert Mims. And, like everyone else, I'll put in my best wishes if the worst comes to the worst. We need a 13th candidate and there's only one likely candidate to be thrown in the mix, which, Doug Hodges says he'll feel like the devil if his name is left out of the list.

Ann Christy, former leading woman with Harold Lloyd, believes in everything. After her marvelous portrayal as Harold's "sweetie" in "Speedy," she decided to stay in the freelance field. Since, she has had four offers for contracts from studios, but has declined them. Two happened within a week before Christmas. She states that Monday, Friday, black cat and ladders are her best bets. According to the work she is scheduled to do, she must be right.

Alice White, First National star, branded a "sure thing" even at a bygone repute, The audience was very cold along the first few scenes of "Noah's Ark" but Alice, who enjoys good pictures, emitted her inimitable laugh at a scene that was clever. The reaction followed. The audience seemed to enjoy the beat of laughter, from the "Wampas" premiere.

Wesley Ruggles, Universal's ace director, is recuperating from a sprained ankle, and directing Laura La Plante in "Haunted Lady."

The Short Feature

Columbia Will Produce Series Of Talking One-Reel Pictures

Now comes Columbia as the latest to undertake plans to produce a series of talking pictures in the short feature field. Vice president Jack Cohn is reticent as yet as to the exact nature of this group of one-reel productions but promises at least that the series will be different from anything yet offered, say dispatches from New York. This much also is known: in the casts will be many stage and vaudeville names of wide repute.

Although Columbia never has been identified exclusively with production of short features, its short film product always has been unusual.

“Screen Snapshots,” which it has produced and distributed for many years, is the magazine of the screen showing the stars at work and at play.

Educational Gets Sound Rights To Lane’s New Music Box Review

Educational has acquired priority rights on all the material incorporated by Lupino Lane into the new Music Box Revue which opened on Christmas Day at the Hollywood Playhouse in Los Angeles. In sound and dialogue pictures in particular this deal is expected to prove of particular value to producer and distributor alike.

This new tieup would enable Educational to use in sound pictures the highlights of this successful revue, providing on the screen, with dialogue and musical accompaniment, some of the best current material available from the stage.

Lane, Educational’s topnotch comedy star, has won renown on the stage in the capacity of both director and performer, and is in charge of staging the Music Box Reues.

In the cast of the new revue, in addition to Lupino Lane and his leading woman, Doris Eaton, are Wallace Lupino, brother of Lane, and Betty Boyd, both featured players on the Educational roster.

Canada Retains Theatre

Los Angeles Met Changes Name To Paramount

Enlarging Stage to Play Eastern Publix Units — Milton Charles Is Organ Soloist

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15.—Adoption of an "all-audience" policy as far as pictures are concerned and a change of name to the "Paramount theatre" was announced today by the Metropolitan theatre, which, in addition, on that date goes on a stage presentation policy on the same basis as New York and Chicago. A new booking arrangement with Paramount-Famous-Lasky corporation whereby the Los Angeles Paramount will play practically all of that company's audiens is one of the primary reasons for the change of name, according to Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres Corporation.

The first of the new talking pictures to come to the Paramount will be "The Wolf of Wall Street," with George Bancroft, which has been chosen for the rechristening week show. "The Dummy," "The Letter," "The Doctor's Secret" and "The Canary Murder Case" will follow in close succession.

Drastic changes in the interior and exterior of the theatre are now under way in preparation for the change of name and policy. Huge new electric signs will be installed on Sixth and Hill streets and on Broadway. More than 20,000 electric bulbs and 1000 feet of tube lamps will convert the corner into a blaze of light.

The stage equipment is being enlarged and improved for the handling of the augmented presentations, which will be the same as the Metropolitan in New York and the Chicago in Chicago. The organ is being completely reconditioned and modernized and will be the largest organ in Los Angeles. Milton Charles, who is well known in Los Angeles, where he was the organist at the Old Million Dollar theatre eight years ago, will be at the console of the Los Angeles Paramount. The price policy remains unchanged.

Variety is the spice of life and versatility is the first cousin to it.—Milton Slosser, popular young organist now going in his sixth year as the featured organist at the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, has also tried his hand at leading a stage band and acting in the capacity of master of ceremonies. This happened several weeks ago, when he took Brooke Johns' place, until a new man filled the post. Slosser can always be depended upon for a solo each week on his four manual Wurlitzer—deluxe picture houses are in need of this type of man and Milton has a great future before him with his various capabilities.*

Orchestras

Six Film Houses Keep Musicians With Audiences

Besides Increasing Its Staff, Several Famous Theatres Also Hold Organists on the Job

OTTAWA, ONTARIO, Jan. 15.—With only one or two exceptions, exhibitors in Canada are continuing with house orchestras at full pay after the introduction of audiens. Only at the Metropolitan theatre, Winnipeg, and the Palace theatre, Montreal, have the regular orchestras been discontinued, other managers holding to the belief that the appearance of the orchestra for special musical presentations makes for valuable variety when sound programs are presented. At the Up-town theatre, Toronto, key theatre of the Famous Players Canadian chain, Jack Arthur went one better after the wiring of the house by engaging a well-known master of ceremonies to add pep to the stage and orchestra presentations which, incidentally, are as elaborate as before the introduction of sound films.

The famous orchestra at the Tivoli theatre, Toronto, under the baton of Luigi Romanelli, continues to have a place in the sound program. At the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, the big orchestra under the direction of Earle Hill continues its presentations three times daily despite the sound pictures and the Capitol's two organists have been retained although they have little to do.

At the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, the audiens have not interfered with Calvin Winter and his fine orchestra while at the Capitol Theatre, Montreal, Maurice Meeter and his orchestra continue to please the crowds between synchronized screenings.

In the case of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Manager Ray Tubman has retained Orville Johnston and his orchestra of 18 pieces for evening presentations and twice on Saturdays and holidays. W. Charette, the Regent organist, however, has become the pianist with the house orchestra at the Imperial Theatre where silent films are shown, both houses being under the direction of Mr. Tubman.

In nearly all cases, the number of employees has been increased when a theatre has adopted audiens because of the addition of projectionists to the projection room crew.

PRESENTATION LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I'm back in New York and don't know just where I'll be sent next. I expect to know soon. I didn't have to stop off in Chicago except for a few hours and it was on Sunday. You will hear from me just as soon as I'm given another assignment. Very truly, Miss Julia Dawn, Public Organist.

Many Stars of the Stage and Screen Are in Chicago This Week

This seems to be a convention week in Chicago theatres among the stage and screen stars. Tony Lewis is completing his one and only week at the Chicago Theatre, while Tom Brown and his six Brown Brothers are also completing two weeks' engagement for Macks Brothers. Sammy Cohen, motion picture screenwriter, is completing a twelve months' engagement for Balaban & Katz this week.

Playing Picture Houses

Lina Basquette, widow of the late Sam Werner and formerly of the Ziegfeld Folies is now appearing in Fanchon & Marco stage shows on the West Coast. Miss Basquette last season at the New Marley, a well known motion picture camera man. She has done considerable work in motion pictures.

Chicago Starts New Stage Policy

On January 18, Balaban & Katz will introduce a new type of stage presentation to Chicago on their Chicago theatre stage. According to newspaper advertisement, the show is to be a new type of entertainment program produced upon the basis of a spectacle with one hundred people in the cast. Frank Camahlo, formerly producer at this house, will take charge of these new creations.

Pickwick's Conductor

Karl Stolka is the musical conductor of the Pickwick theatre orchestra in Park Ridge, Ill. The Pickwick is a brand new cinema theatre named after the famous author, Samuel Pickwick, and is being managed by Aubrey Stauffer.

Maffie Pinch Hits

Cornelius Maffie, featured organist at the Metropolitan theatre, Houston, is set to be master of ceremonies, while Vic Inzirillo, the master of ceremonies, is recuperating from a bad attack of influenza. Maffie was formerly featured organist at the Adler theatre Chicago.

In New Offices

Leo Feist, Inc., has opened new professional offices at 1625 Broadway, New York. The building has a private entrance on 56th street, with a private elevator running to the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th floors. 14 plates available in the new quarters and Phil Kernheimer, assisted by a capable staff of professional men, will welcome any visitor.

Christy Is Back

Joe Christy, formerly master of ceremonies at the Lerner theatre in Elkhart, Ind., has returned to the Ivory House theatre, Chicago's newest west side deluxe picture house. Christy formally opened the house with his Stage Serenaders and has been brought back by popular demand.

GREETINGS: well folks, did you hear the latest news from Al and six other Little Kylers has been re-elected as congresswoman from Minnesota for his fifth term. Lubis, Larry & Andra, were compelled to cancel their date at the Palace theatre, Chicago, last week due to a nervous breakdown of Lou Lubin. Dave Pickford, manager of WDAY, the Kansas City Star radio station, was a Chicago visitor last week in search of talent. The subject of discussion you ever turn in on Walter Flanders from WMAQ who plays an organ concert every Sunday morning at 10:45 from the Pabst Theatre in Milwaukee for use broadcast over WIBO. Al Belin is taking a short rest in New Orleans and will return to his duties next Monday. The Pickwick family is now in Hollywood making short sound pictures. Aubrey Stauffer is the managing director of the new Pickwick theatre in Park Ridge, Ill. Harold Jolles is the featured organist at the Lerner theatre in Elkhart, Ind. Andra Jolles is the organist at the Detroit theatre in Rochester, N.Y. If you tune in on WEAN or WJAC you will hear some organ music by Eddie Robbins Gross.
More Roof That Pit Orchestras Are Coming Back

In compliance with the public demand, it is evident that the deluxe cinema theatres are augmenting their pit orchestras, as well as featuring orchestral productions. To supplement this statement, we wish to call attention to the fact that Balaban & Katz are increasing the number of musicians in their Chicago theatre symphony orchestra from the present number to about twelve men, starting January 15.

The same thing may be done with the Uptown theatre on the north side, as well as the Norshore theatre. When the Paradise, their newest west side theatre, recently underwent a complete renovation and the audience met with instant approval of the audience.

For instance, the introduction number was "Orpheus" with a clarinet and flute cadenza played by N. DeBois and F. Francia. A violin rendition of "D-Zap" was played by violin quartet, S. Kruty, J. Rotas, O. Engelhart and S. Lang. This was followed by a hot fiddle number played by E. Chico. A cello solo of "Morcees" was played by P. Kruse. This was followed by a tuba solo of variations on "Old Black Joe" played by V. Fiorino. The saxophone quartet composed of H. Wells, P. Brudner, S. Binder and N. DeBois played "Mighty Like a Rose." B. Sands gave a piano solo of "Dizzy Fingers."

Number three was a comedy number, which was played by C. Jackson, E. Clark and conducted by W. Hils. The two trombone players, A. Gott and M. Passec, played "I Love You Truly," but A. Goes did a banjo specialty. Three trumpeters, R. Martill, W. Hils and R. Pietsch, offered popular tunes before Fritz Basten joined in with his crash and drum solo. Porky Pringle and piano vocal selections were used throughout this overture, which lasted more than ten minutes. This pit may not be an original idea, but it is nevertheless worth while using. Adrian is responsible for the above arrangement.

Kvale something to do besides being an ornament, for this chanter is quite capable of making himself useful with his natural gift of comedy.

Des Moines Capitol Week Ending January 11

An abundance of attractions was the condition of the Capitol a popular house in spite of a blizzard and subzero weather for the week. Paul Spor and his name in the Public Star, Cart, Public Star, Cart, Cart, have been over some sparkling entertainment, aided by the scenic effects which were used.

Paul Spor in charge, arrived via scooter to start the Indian atmosphere for Paul Kliest, who sings two numbers in the park of an Indian chief. He sang "The Legend of the Evening Star" and "White Eagle." He was assisted by the Felicia Sorel dancers and by Helen Packard, dancer.

Horvon Spurrr, eccentric rube, heel dancer, made a decided hit with his cleverly planned number. Ed and Morton Beck around no end of fun with their original chatter and song act. This was topped off with a very dramatic take-off on a choice rendition of "King for a Day." The Sorel girls presented an Indian dance and a Totem pole number.

Paul Spor sang "Eyes on the Hill Top" and then, with the help of the band, did a comedy novelty, "The Dampkey-Tunney Fitch." The grand finale was spectacularly staged forest fire, vividly produced and successfully put over.

Detroit Fox Week Ending January 11

As usual, the stage show at the Fox this week was a double barreled one and was full of color and melody, thus forming an opening curtain of "Impressions of Aida," presenting selections from the Verdi opera, including the return of Roadannes, commander-in-chief of the Ercymes, who won the battle, and the bestiality, by the king, of his daughter's hand on the event of.

The cast included Nadine Ray, Ethel Manning, Joseph Turia, Clay Inman, Margaret Donaldson, the corps of ballerinas and dancers, accompanied by the symphony orchestra under the direction of Adolph S. Kurnopan.

A group of music comedy and revue stars took part in "Symphonie Jubilee," Milo, the famous imitator of Tchere's word, but that's the way they introduced him—was billed as the headliner.

Jules and Josie Walter, billed as New York's smartest dancing team, lived up to that reputation in a lively dance number. West, Lake and Hane, members of the old Christmas shows, were accompanied by the symphony orchestra.

Bert Nagel and Omar gave some clever impersonations of cats; there were WeHard and Newton, comedy dancers; Louie Aslant, blues dancer; Ruth Gianville, saxophonist and "Toots" Navello, novelty dancer.

Oh yes, and there was a dance divertissement entitled "Bowery Silhouette," which gave the 59 Fox Tillertreners a chance to go through their paces.

The Kentucky Jubilee Singers made their appearance via Fox Movietone.

Detroit Michigan Week Ending January 5

Publix brought a rollicking review direct from New York to usher in the New Year at the Michigan theatre.

It was titled "Crisoline vs. Jazz," an extravaganza showing how music dear girls have changed since 1829. The settings were in the modernistic manner by Clayton Doan.

To start there was an "Old Fashioned Wedding," with Chapman & Snyder, singers, as the principals. Then time went forward a hundred years and the Felicia Sorel Girls presented a dance number entitled "Girls of Today."

A quintet of good girls, a mighty good singer, was next with a collection of "Songs of Yesteryear." Carl Novello, with the public sections, presented the modern section of this number with a lot of "hot" dances in a 1929.

Neil Jewell, singer of old fashioned fashions, was billed for a quiet little number, "Butlers of Lone Ago." Remember when they were them? And to close, getting back to the 1929 idea, there were a couple of extraordinaries, Rumeke and Speck, in "Howdy, New Year."

For the orchestral overture, Edward Wener, conductor of the Michigan Symphony Orchestra, had a medley of song hits of the last year, Charles Jolley, popular soloist, was heard to advantage in this number.

The pit orchestra presented an overture of "Mignon" this week with Ulderico Marecoli conducting. This was a Spitalny creation and was played in admirable style. There was considerable surprise shown by the patrons in the youthful appearance of the director but he was quite justified in his expert handling of the musical program.

The stage presentation was called "Stars and Stripes" and had a master of ceremonies, "Eddie Perry," whose selection was of the most famous and attractive dancers. "Eddie Perry," as master of ceremonies. The stage setting depicted the inside of a prison with three level platforms containing several cells on each level. The musicians as convicts and the entire offering was presented along these lines.

It opened with a girl singing special lyrics about the host, "Eddie Perry," who would lead the prison band, etc. The ballet which consisted of the "Gould Girls," were the convicts and did some clever routine.

Lamberti was the joker of the hale type, and Roy Chancer was the kepper. Chancer offered a tender selection of "Min Bella Rosa" interpolating "O Sole Mio." His fine voice and personality put him in good standing with the visitors.

He was followed by Reed and Dusters, a couple of young chaps, who as stewards, offered some acrobatic and tap dancing that was worth half of the admission. They were the best liked specially outside of Lamberti.

The three Dennis Sisters were carried on next in a fancy cell and were let loose to do their harmony singing without the aid of the band. Their first rendition was "Somebody Is Trying to Be Sweet on Me" and we don't mind saying that a good many of the onlookers would have ached with relief if someone had stolen them from the bill. These young ladies might be a sensation in the East on radio work but in this day and age of good talent it takes more than a pretty form to go over. Their second and last number was "There's a Rainbow Round My Shoulder" failed to even get them a bow.

The Gould Girls followed them with a novelty stop-time routine in which the band and Perry stopped the musical accompaniment at various intervals and caused much fun provoking.

This was followed by Lamberti with his xylophone selection intermingled with dry humor that made him the star of the show. He played the identical selections that he played before in his previous engagements, such as "Stars and Stripes" and the manner in which he was received proved that the audience didn't care how long he would stay on as long as he continued his funny antics.

The show ended with the Gould Girls in black and white costumes and decorating the background set while the cast also assembled around the cells as two large bird cages each containing a convict, hung from each end of the scenery.

Philadelphia Carmen

Week Ending January 5

A unique and exotic miniature musical comedy was presented at the Carmen this week by the Honorable Wu and his company of Chinese girls and boys in the "Pavilion of Lanterns." The dancing ranges from quaint, Oriental numbers to the most modern Jazz and syncopation and the entire company shows great skill and vibration of movement. The Honorable Wu is an able leader and in addition is a clever impersonator and his representations of Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson brought much applause. In addition to their ability as dancers the Chinese youths and maidsens proved to have exceedingly well trained voices and displayed great adaptability as entertainers, there being no trace of Oriental accent in their songs. The costuming was rich and colorful in the extreme and the staging of the show left nothing to be desired.

St. Louis Ambassador

Week Ending January 4

Dave Silverman was forced to pinch hit for Ed Lowry as the master of ceremonies for "Making Whoopee," as an attack of laryngitis and bronchitis forced Ed onto the rip track so to speak. He was off the job for ten days. However, Dave made a very agreeable substitute.

Myrtle Gordon helped immensely with a rollicking song routine while "Buddy," the orchestra drummer, sang a refrain as only "Buddy" can.

St. Louis Missouri

Week Ending January 4

Eddie Peabody, the syncopating banjoist, styled his stage show "Banjoeys," and was very prominent in the selection of the "Bows of Lanterns," and was followed by a few of the members of the Missouri Rockets was made to resemble Peabody. Some novelty.

Chicago Paradise

Week Ending January 11

Another good show under the able direction of the golden-voiced master of ceremonies Mark Fisher, whose shows and personality continue to improve. The "Ezr-Zag Friedes" boasts some good scenic and the usual attractive costumery, to say nothing of a personage well known to vaudeville-goers, Senator Murphy.

The setting represents the inside of a cafe, half the stage given to tables and diners, and the other half to the orchestra. The first number was "Don't Be Like That," to which the ballet girls did a routine which included the services of the Four Edemorens.

The MeCane Sisters then came on, singing "My Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now" which received a hand, after which they went into a dance which pleased more.

The band arrangement following was "I'll Get By As Long as I Have You," with chorus by Mark Fisher, after which followed an exchange of banter with the audience. In one of the turns each of the dancers were lifted and included a be-at-icre and several choruses of the song. This was very funny and heartily ap- plauded.

Grace Johnson sang a few numbers, "He's A Great Big Headed Baby" and "Lonely Nights," her voice and personality was in such a manner that she would get by even without ability to hit the high C's. Following her was a little colored girl who had been "wait- ing" on the table, waiting on and off the stage at various times, but was always seen on the tray. His name was not announced at this performance, but his dancing was snappy though he was a little rough in his foot work. He merited and received a big hand.

The featured performer came on next, Senator Murphy, whose political talk was as highly enjoyed as it was clever and funny. The Edgewood Four followed with a tap dance which received fair applause.

The number preceding the finale was "She's Funny That Way," with Fisher taking the spotlight. As he sang the melody he handed over. He sang "Who Wouldn't Be Jealous Of You" while the cast assembled on the stage for the finale.

Chicago Avalon

Week Ending January 11

Roy Dietrich's "Bluin' the Blues" was quite some offering. This was a stage setting between the 9th and 11th degree, the orchestra was on its toes every minute and Roy—well, Roy Is Just Roy.

Now that he started singing, he could make a song out of an indistinguishable melody. He sang "You Wouldn't Be Jealous Of You" while the cast assembled on the stage for the finale.

Keeping up the pace and increasing it was the Midnight Trio, three dark boys formerly with Paul Warman. Acrobatic and dancing specialties with special emphasis on picking up handkerchiefs off the floor. One of the trio fairly turned himself from back to front in the air and brought a big applause. Their other hankie stunt was to somersault over two chairs and retrieve the handkerchief. The boys were clever, three encored pitched.

Ketch and Wilma (whether that is the name of the messenger boy) I am not quite sure, but rather the one that applies to the messenger boy (dol) who opened the act and stopped the show. It was one of the best ventrilo- quiet acts I've ever seen. Not only was the patter excellent, but the handling of the doll was almost too realistic. "Wash your neck," both stories, and the heart rending sobbing of the messenger boy (dol) convulsed the audience. This act ended with Ketch singing a duet with himself. Quite an accomplishment.

The show quieted down for a few minutes while the orchestra presented "Listen to the Dance" with one of the boys singing. While the scurril stage lift stepped the scurril bar stage lift disclosed the missing girls presented an graceful poem. After the song they stepped to front and went through a very pleasing classical routine which was well received.

Kleota and Byrne followed and continued the riot- fun a little. Kleota presented her act with his xylophone, and while most of his playing was fool- ing in the rendition of "Pagan Love" was carried out. His gum, wigs and signs brought many large laughs. Miss Byrne's first appearance was by far her best. Dressed in what appeared to be an old fashioned idea of a society ballet costume, gogles, galoshes, very large daisy and wool wig, she presented her Spring dance with many stumbles and unbreakable solemnity, which brought her a good hand.

Roy brought this fast moving show to a successful close by singing "Blue Shadows," while the girls paraded in various shades of blue costumes, and finally posed against a vivid background of a setting sun.

Chicago Marbro

Week Ending January 11

This week's stage presentation featured Buster West in Charles Kalley's "Shades of 1929." The offering was beautifully staged with appropriate scenic background and the band situated in two sections, upper and lower, divided by a staircase in the center.

It opened with the Marbro ballet dancing to a band tune while Kaley and a blond girl opened the proceedings with "You're the Cream of My Coffee." This was done in the form of a duet with Charles and the girl sitting on a couple in the center of the stage while the boys in the bank took part in a combination of dance as "The Big One." Shown by a spot light, was novel and received a good hand.

This was followed by a young couple, who probably were Peplke and Carthe, who presented some novel vaudeville dances. They were followed by Jerome Mann in some clever impersonations such as Ted Lewis, Eddie Leonard, and Pat Rooney. This chap... is clever and stepped the show at this performance. He is a comedian and could do well anywhere.

This show was reviewed by a fine band arrangement of "Moonlight Madness" in which Charles Kelsey offered a vocal refrain. We must say that Kelsey has quite a following in this business. The next routine was offered by the Maraho ballet in musical comedy style with a male singer offering a special song called "Get Me a Beany."

The treat of the bill came next in the way of Buster Busse. He was another one with some acrobatic dance-line and did a difficult split on the staircase which won his applause. The next routine was offered by the Maraho ballet in musical comedy style with a dummy body attached to theirs, giving the appearance of two bodies on one pair of legs. It was well done.

With the advent of the New Year there is the usual change in the various theatres. Here are the first two changes I've heard about so far: Frank Whiteman, the leader Jimmie Lunceford, organize the Presiding Offices of the New Year at the Strand theatre, Fremont, Ohio, as the solo organist. Okay with me, Jake! * * *

* * *

You know things have rather slowed up a bit along the lines of the 1928-1929 schedule? They don't start this year's as of now, but three companies are still playing at the various night clubs, theatres, grills, etc., and nothing exciting seems to happen that would really interest a follower of the movie industry. There's the London's, fights that go on at the Strand theatre, Fremont, Ohio, as the solo organist. Okay with me, Jake! * * *

* * *

And talking of the Capitol theatre—recently, when Walt Roesner terminated his stay as master of ceremonies, those who have had the joy of hearing him play in this theatre have lost a great artist. He has done much to the entertainment industry and to the Broadway theatre. * * *

* * *

Here's an unusual name for a band—"The Band of a Thousand Melodies," directed by Larry Paris—and they broadcast over the National Broadcasting network. They tried to interest you this week in the fact that they're one of the greatest bands in the east, and none of the publishers are sorry about it either. * * *

* * *

And while my thoughts are on the publishers, Johnny Finch, who was formerly in the movie public relations business, was recently in this city and has gone off on his own business in Detroit. Just as present Johnny is in New York on an "expansion trip" and he was here this week. He is quite busy. * * *

* * *

"Tin rumoured that the inimitable Ted Lewis will soon be the master of ceremonies at the New York Paramount. * * *

* * *

I bet the DX fans around the country are a bit disappointed that they haven't been able to hear from Bobby Hackett, the famous organist. He has been in New York for the past week. * * *

* * *

A novelty that is proving to be of unusual interest to radio fans is the "Forsan Song Shop Hour" on the National Broadcasting Company's book-up every Thursday at 8 p.m. (E. S. T.). At this time each week they present a different band of music over the network and introduce their past and present hits via the Bob Haring Orchestra, Ed Salle, the New Yorkers, Will Connors, and others. The composer themselves, who introduce their new tunes, which they hope will be hits. The idea is great! And just by way of mention, Sam Coslow and Larry Spier were on last week's "Forsan Song Shop Hour."

Did you know that Earl Ahe, away down at the Texas theatre, San Antonio, is quite capable of starting a tune? Now music publishers, please don't rush him! * * *

* * *

Sorry—that's all there is for this week.

LARRY SPIER.

ORGAN SOLOS

Henri A. Kratas (Chicago Necrobia) offered a novel community solo called "My Magazine of Songs," which contained "I'm Sorry, Sally," "Good Little Little," and "Put Me on the Parade," which closed his last number a spotlight was flashed on the audience, which exposed those that did not sing in the singing phase, and throughout the entire chorus slides and special lyrics were interpolated. On the strength of going over this routine each week, the manager announced that Kratas will be held over for another week. This organist has played every Balaban & Katz theatre in Chicago, and has proven a success with his community solo, where the others fall in making them sing, Henri gets their whole-hearted support.

Hersie Koch (Omaha, Neb., Riviera), new at the organ, is the liveliest of recent organists at the Riviera. He puts force into his playing and accompaniments that difficult task—gets the audience to sing with him.

Proctor Sellers (Chicago Oriental). Every day in every way they like him better and better. He solo's great and I'll relate a thing or two he did. The songs played with "New Year's Resolution" were: "Where the Stry Little Violets Grow," "Mistletoe," "Candy Girl," "Thee Sweetest Thing," "That's Me and the Man in the Moon," and "Lonely Night." He bowed once, he bowed twice, he bowed three times over, over, and over, and over. "Like the Man with the Selection of Fine Songs."

Frank White (Newark, Brooklyn) offered an original organ novelty called "Let's Have Some Harmoney" which this audience sang well. The numbers he played were: "Blue Greets," "Sweetheart of My Dreams," "Dream Makers," and "Shine," a duet the boys singing: "Swee Miss," as the girls song, "Whose Will You Choose?" "Eyes of Youth," was effectively done and received a very fine hand.

Dick Lichten (Pittsburgh, Pa., Penn.) had the audience singing a few of his favorites, one of which is "Three Blind Mice," "I Faw Down and Go Boom," also "One Grasshopper Hopped Over Another Grasshopper's Back."

Jim Thomas (New York Proctor's 86th St.) said "Lot's Wurble," and they did. Jim featured "I Faw Down and Go Boom," which started the audience off well. The next number, "Me and the Man in the Moon," had every one singing and not stopping until the curtain went down; with other numbers were sung to the tunes of "Where Has My Little Dog Gone," "Out of the Blue," and "In Dreams." Jim has, in three short weeks, become quite a favorite at this house.

Henry B. Marthac (Brooklyn Paramount) featured "Old Favorites," for his community song fest this week. He used special slides for the following songs, to which the audience sang duly. The numbers were: "School Days," "Mary Lee," "K-Katy," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart." His closing song was a special version on "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Martha has become a showstopper at this house.

How Would YOU Start a House Organ?

HOW would you go about starting a house organ? How did you go about it when you started your own? These two questions are brought up indirectly in a letter to "The Theatre" from Dick Martin of the Columbia Amusement Company, operating five houses in Ashland, Kentucky, and two others in Catlettsburg, Ky.

Here's a splendid opportunity to be of genuine lasting service to others as well as to yourself. It will be a tremendous important contribution to the theatre if each of you would sit down and write a letter to this department about it.

Those of you who do have a house organ: Tell us just how you started it. The splendid house organs that come to this department daily are the result of a lot of study by the individuals, and as much perspiration as inspiration. We are likely to forget that when we run over them. The finished product in any line always looks like a simple affair; in fact, the simpler the house organs appear the better the proof of hard work, because they read smoothly.

Those of you who do not have a house organ: You undoubtedly have a number of ideas back of your eyebrows as to just what you would do if you started one. Any one of a dozen reasons may explain why you do not have one though you would like to.

Here's what Martin writes:

"I am preparing to institute a House Organ to be distributed through the houses of this company, and would like to have some sample House Organs for suggestions. Would also like to have the names of some publishers of the same. (Please you have received the copies sent you, Martin, as well as the list of members of our Exchange.)

"Believe your Exchange is a great thing for exhibitors using publications."

A Dozen Suggestions

Following are a few suggestions that many be of service to anyone contemplating the starting of a house organ:

First: Be sure that you can follow through before you start. Nothing will give your theatre a blacker opine than starting something and not following it.

Second: Analyze your budget and the expense involved. Check up with your local printer confidentially, as to just what it will cost you.

Study Your Staff

Third: Study your staff and make certain that the one whom you will designate to edit it will not only be qualified but also will have the time to do a good job.

Fourth: Study your patronage. Before going into the project, be sure that you understand your audience. For example, if you are in a college town you will have to write in it a special tone. We don't mean flippant or ultra-jazzy, but at least airy. If you are in a mining town you can't use the language that will appeal to a campus clientele; your audience wouldn't have the faintest idea what you were attempting to do, and probably even would resent it. Nor does that mean that your mining population wouldn't take to a simply written, solidly written publication just as enthusiastically as the college town patronage to its type.

Fifth: You could kill two birds with one stone if you appealed directly to your clientele to tell you just what it would want in the house organ. You not only would get some ideas from the patrons, but you also would arouse their interest in that of others.

Sixth: Decide for yourself whether you want a magazine type, a newspaper type, or a combination of both. There have been some interesting discussions of this point in these columns.

Seventh: Whatever form of publication you decide upon, remember that it must be fresh in appearance and in reading matter. It must be interesting. We have seen house organs that had become so departmentalized that they were nothing but a way to give others. The old definition of news is "that which is new or that which is interesting. Take both those factors into account. There should be something new in each issue, but if the "new" thing just does not appear by press time, at least make sure that the publication is interesting in itself. Sometimes just changing the order of departments will help that, a little change in dress.

Appeal to Women Patrons

Eighth: Remember that your women patrons are the ones to appeal to in particular. They are the ones who will take the publication home. And getting it into the homes is a big subject in itself that we cannot go into at this moment.

Ninth: Play up your attractions, of course, but remember that that is only one part of it. If your house organ is to be no more than a handbill, then print it as a handbill and save more for better things.

Tenth: Do not let anything interfere with making the same date of publication either each week or each month, depending upon whether it's to be a weekly or a monthly. First get your public into the expectation of receiving the house organ on a certain date and then don't disappoint them.

Eleventh: Establish contacts with your community in the matter of writing departments, their interest, demands, etc. But be particular to select individuals upon whom you can depend.

Make It Pay for Itself

Twelfth: At a special and attractive advertising rate to merchants, you should be able to make the publication self-supporting, even a profit-making project. But give your public something besides advertisements. Always remember that primarily your patrons will want to read stories and items, and that if they see only advertisements they won't read anything. A general rule there, of course, is to increase the amount of reading matter as the number of advertisements increases.

Well, there are an even dozen suggestions. And those twelve scarcely scratch the surface. They are a starter, however, and this department invites each of its readers to add his suggestions to this list, as well as to amplify them and even protest them, if his experience is at variance.

Will he start the ball rolling? We'll be glad to publish your comment. And always remember that only as you help others will you yourself be helped. That's the creed of the House Organ Exchange.

Here is an ad that tells a story as well as announces the coming of Universal's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The upper half of the ad is modernistic, the lower half illustrational; the upper half depicts the modern theatre and the modern playgoer, the lower half the freeing of the slaves, a symbolism of the freedom of progress that the upper half reflects. This ad was sent in by J. M. Blanchard of the new Strand theatre at Sanbury, Pa., a Comerford house. Note also the prominence given the starting time.
Feminine Fashion

Layouts in Rotos

Draw Attention

Try a feminine fashion layout in your local paper, and if it has a rotogravure section all the better. It paid for Manager Ray Brown and the theatre at Akron, Ohio, in connection with the showing of M.G.M.'s "A Woman of Affairs." Brown obtained a fashion layout of Greta Garbo and Dorothy Sebastian in the Times-Press in a Sunday edition the week preceding the opening. The Times-Press gave three columns, ten inches free on the layout.

To the Public of Portland—

The Portland Theatre wishes to take this opportunity to extend apologies to the thousands of our patrons who were obliged to stand in line so long Saturday night, and to the thousands who turned away at the height of the tremendous crowds. In the history of the theatre, business, to many people accustomed to admittance to a theatre for the final night performance, has started to which occurred the presentation of an extra and complete show after midnight.

INTERFERENCE—Paramount's first all-talking production, is the reason--Rudy Wather and Ida Dar squawk. This also adds to the exception of the press of the theatre, and New York City, and resell local merchants who in turn give them away to their customers.

A red devil's mask is in red, black, wreathed about with the caption in white and red, "The Devil in "Masks of the Devil," appearing on the reverse side of the book. On the reverse side, colored in red, is a blank for theatre name and playdate.

Match Books to Be Resold in M G M Tieup

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's pressbook on John Gilbert's "Masks of the Devil," contains the announcement of a new type of accessory. It is a match book which exhibitors can order at wholesale prices from the Lion Book Match Co., Fisk Building, Broadway and 57th Street, New York City, and resell to local merchants who in turn give them away to their customers.

Good Y. M. C. A. Tieup

George Morrell of the College Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, an excellent neighborhood house, obtained considerable extra business and also incurred the pleasure of the Y. M. C. A. by staging a series of junior bowling matches as Saturday afternoon features. There was little work necessary for Manager Morrell because the details were handled by the physical director of the Y. M. C. A. The expense to the theatre comprised admission passes, light refreshments and a few gifts, such as gymnasium suits.

The State theatre, Minneapolis, staging its first all professional "Kiddie Revue," tied up with the National Tea Piggly-Wiggly company. The theatre and the grocers took a double and theatre at Akron, Ohio, in connection with the showing of M.G.M.'s "A Woman of Affairs." Brown obtained a fashion layout of Greta Garbo and Dorothy Sebastian in the Times-Press in a Sunday edition the week preceding the opening. The Times-Press gave three columns, ten inches free on the layout.

After using teaser underlines for three days, on the Thursday preceding the opening, thirteen-inch display ads were placed in both papers. Seventeen-inch display ads were used on Friday, a twenty-seven-inch display ad in Beacon-Journal on Saturday preceding opening, with display ad in Times-Press on the same day, and twenty-seven-inch display ad in Times-Press on Sunday, opening day, with a thirteen-inch ad on Tuesday, and nine inches on the Wednesday and Thursday during playing of picture. Preceding the opening the Times-Press ran a Gilbert-Garbo comic on "What Would You Say," as suggested in the press book. Two weeks in advance 5,000 Lion book matches were used. Special art work panel 42 by 39, with spotlight focused on it, was used inside the theatre.

A trailer from the National Screen Service was used a week in advance of the playdate.
Every Day Is Christmas Day If Exhibitor Wins City's Goodwill

Christmas has just begun, for those exhibitors who showed the real Yuletide spirit to their communities. The celebration is over but the gifts of the public to its theatres will be coming in throughout the year. Goodwill is lasting, and certainly it will be a long time before the citizens of Buffalo forget the royal time they were given by H. M. Addison, managing director of the Great Lakes theatre. Everyone benefited, from Mayor Frank X. Schwab down to the loneliest orphan.

As the opening gesture Addison sent special invitations to all members of the police and fire departments, to be his guests at the theatre the week of December 17. These invitations were good for admission of the city employe and one other. They read in part:

"The Great Lakes theatre sends you this little token of appreciation for the many courtesies extended by you during the past year and to wish you and yours a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year." Each invitation was signed by Addison. There were 2,345 issued, 1,350 going to the police department.

Special Morning Matinee

The day before Christmas, with the co-operation of the mayor the theatre gave a special morning matinee to children in various institutions. They filled the big house from the orchestra pit to the roof—a noisy, eager throng, each of whom was given some little token with the cooperation of charitable workers, the mayor’s toy fund committee and the theatre, assisted by charitably inclined citizens. It was the biggest Christmas theatre party ever staged in Buffalo.

In the theatre itself, there were miniature Christmas trees, gaily decorated with lights and the conventional ornaments so dear to the heart of all at this season of the year, while on the Main street marquee over the main entrance stood a 40-foot evergreen, outdoing even the municipal offering placed in the principal square. Bright lights, gaily colored streamers and tinsel snow added to the realism. The tree was left lighted every night.

When Santa Claus in Lobby

Lobby cards all carried conventional Christmas decorations in addition to the attraction matter, and several five-foot heads of Santa Claus, all decked out in red, helped brighten up the entrances. Santa Claus himself made his appearance in the main lobby and greeted children for a week and permitted him to finish up his last minute orders for Christmas.

Special Christmas Cards

Special Christmas cards were got out, conveying the best wishes of Mr. Addison and various members of the executive staff; a holiday edition of the house organ, “Moviemens,” was put out, and ads in the newspapers, on Christmas day, carried a seasonal message, with but an underline on the current show.

Cashears, doormen and ushers wore Christmas greens in the lapels of their coats and smocks. Instead of a thank you, for the last three days before the holiday each patron received a calling card, saying "Merry Christmas" from all members of the staff.

And the pupils of School 3, who prepared decorations for the Christmas trees, were invited to a special party at the theatre.

Perhaps such wideawake efforts as the foregoing account for the fact that the Buffalo Sunday Times carried a cut and sketch of Addison in a personality series on civic leaders.

Polar Question Quiz

Aids "Ramper" Film

A polar questionnaire, taking in Commander Byrd’s trip to the North Pole, Amundsen’s and Lincoln Ellsworth’s flight in a dirigible across the pole and General Nobile’s disastrous expedition, served as a newspaper exploitation feature for the showing of First National’s "Strange Case of Captain Ramper," at the Jefferson theatre, Jefferson City, Mo.

The manager of the theatre tied up with the Daily Capital of that city in a six day contest, in which newspaper and to see "The Strange Case of Captain Ramper" were offered to readers who scored highest in answering the questions of the questionnaire. The questions were divided into five installments while the correct answers were published on the sixth day.
“THE SHOP WORN ANGEL”

DEAR FOLKS:

Now and again the unexpected happens and a picture of which no great amount of praise has been uttered slips into the theatre and makes everybody glad. This is one of those cases. So far as I know, and I admit that isn’t very far, nothing extraordinary was claimed for “The Shop Worn Angel.” Wherefore I shall take up that little burden and say quite a few words in its favor.

Probably the first thing to mention about the picture is that the story concerns a chorus girl to whom diamonds is nobody’s business and neither is one Bailey’s participation in her financial and professional affairs. The next thing to mention is that Gary Cooper is a doughboy, on his way to France, who falls in love with the chorus girl. Then it is in line to say that Paul Lukas is the Mr. Bailey and Richard Wallace is the director, and here occurs the thought that perhaps Mr. Wallace should have been mentioned first of all. His direction is one of those fine, feeling, human exhibits seen seldom more often than once a year. I hail and cheer him.

The story of the picture is simplicity itself, which anyone will tell you is also strength, interest and entertainment. It has the best musical accompaniment I have yet witnessed, unless you classify the sound aspect of “Singing Fool” as musical accompaniment, and there are words in it now and then. These, too, are excellent although in my opinion a bit unnecessary. Of course that’s a minority report. And if “That Precious Little Thing Called Love” isn’t a hit after this picture has used it a while as themeword, the world is melody deaf.

Nancy Carroll is splendid, Gary Cooper is better than I’ve ever seen him and he’s always been good, and Paul Lukas gets across a role that would have stumped anybody I can think of except Menjou. The picture is full of gaiety, pathos, merriment, music and misery, this last in very minor and highly favorable degree. If I could see one picture so good in each four weeks of theatre going I should render thanks daily to the Fates who have decreed that I shall spend most of my time in the picture houses.

THE RESCUE

I THINK the rescue completes the information about the recently subdivided Colman-Banky duo. You may or may not recall my report with regard to Miss Banky’s first independent picture, “The Awakening,” but the gist of it was that the girl has everything and the picture is a wow. There may have been a note of surprise in the writing of the report, for I had carried the idea that Mr. Colman was more important to their combined products than Miss Banky. So, too, there may be a note of surprise in this report of “The Rescue” for in it Colman completes demonstration that his is the lesser talent. And just possibly it may not be his fault at all that the picture isn’t onetwothree with “The Awakening.”

“The Rescue” has Mr. Colman as a polite gunrunner and Lili Damita as the heroine, with whom he falls in love and for whom he does many things. The chief thing, in point of story, being the rescue of her party when it is captured by natives of some place or other along the equator. As the two-faced guy who accomplishes all this, without the use of either fist, Mr. Colman is my idea of a nice looking young actor in the wrong job. Maybe, as I say, it isn’t his fault.

The story is of excellent source and no doubt was good reading between hook covers. As unfolded on the screen it is a slow, dull recital with nobody getting anything done and nothing much happening. The love stretches, of Miss Damita’s participation in which you no doubt have heard a great deal, are just stretches. As for Miss Damita, if all these princes like this sort of girl why then, of course, this is the sort of girl all these princes like. And of course I have only the picture to judge her by and the picture may he, as I have said, unfair to its players.

“A ROMANCE OF THE UNDERWORLD”

HERE’S a neat little picture, folks. There’s nothing original in the bare outline of the story, which is about the nice, innocent young thing who is ashamed of her past and afraid to tell her happy, idolizing husband, even when one of her old pals attempts blackmail on the strength of her past.

But the frosting on the cake is different, and that difference makes the picture. The underworld spice is well handled, and the way the blackmailing pal is disposed of and tranquillity in the home restored is, as I have indicated, different and intriguing.

The picture is most fortunate in having Robert Elliott in the cast as a detective. He puts a great deal in his characterization and the picture as a whole. By giving his character a few little idiosyncrasies, he makes quite an engaging fellow out of the detective, and as you and I know this is a feat in itself, for screen detectives are almost inevitably rubberstamps.

Non-Theatrical Competition

DELPHI, IND.—To the Editor: I was very much interested in J. C. Jenkins’ letter in the January 5 issue. I am interested in all his letters as he is particularly open-minded to me so much that I am writing regarding the situation in Delphi, Ind.

The town has a canvass of the town selling tickets through the medium of children. The enter- tainers are of the best type ever performed for which we are assessed a tax to help keep them up. The law requires us to have seats fastened to the floor, guard exit holders, all modern fire escapes and various State laws. State At- torney’s reports are up to date in every respect, fulfilling all law requirements. Yet the children have been selling tickets on shows playing copyrighted music for which we must pay a tax to play and don’t have to meet the requirements we do.

I believe Mr. Jenkins would enquire of the exhibitors he called on he would find that they have the same conditions to meet that we do. I believe this big feature is killed by competition like described above. What is the remedy? The small town exhibitor needs help if he is to continue in business.

—MAURICE B. GARDNER, Arc theatre, Delphi, Ind.

Calls Industry “Sick”

CAMPBELL, CAL.—To the Editor: It is useless to deny the fact that the moving picture business is sick, and has reached its zenith and is rapidly on its way to zero. It is interesting to read the many articles written by the so-called big men in the game—the producers. It is pathetic the way they live in the woods and in their endeavor to blaze a trail they are getting deeper in the mire. The fault is all their own and not the public’s. I have no doubt that they would block selling their productions to the exhibitor. No other manufacturer, with the possible exception of bootleggers, would risk his business to sell his product at full price and then force the retailers to market it for him. The tire and hosiery manufacturers and all other reputable business organizations that value the respect and confidence of the public, sell all seconds and culls at a reduced price with their brand or name carriage.

The producers have turned out a bunch of rotten stuff and sold it, all or none bearing their name to the exhibitors at full price and forced him to sell them to the public or assume the loss. And in too many in- stances, the exhibitor could not, or would not, assume the loss. And too a chance selling them to his patrons, with the result that they lost respect and confidence in him and when he did not trust him with better showing he could not sell it to them.

Both producers and exhibitors have awak- ened to the fact that the public at the present time but there is a limit, and it has been reached. The producers in their anxiety to settle the stomach of a mauated public have had to agree to all manner of same tactics with “squawks,” forcing the exhibitor to mortgage his right eye, labor and profits for a number of years, to install various sound devices to show the stuff in another form, or pay a ruinous price for something worth showing. There is a law in nature requiring a period of rest for everything. We have a low and high tide, all vegetation, the earth and everything has its period of rest, including all kinds of business. As an illustration the barbers reached their peak about the time the showmen were invented and rapidly declined and reached zero. Then women started to bob their hair and a period of activity set in.

This is one of numerous cases that could be cited that should be sufficient to convince any thinking person that this law exists in nature, and that it has. It has been recognized by all successful business men for ages.

In my opinion the motion picture business has reached its zenith and has this been accelerated by the above mentioned abuses. If the producers cannot produce without recourse to the sound pictures it will not only serve to wreck the business but it will serve to educate the younger generation to something. The vast majority of the patrons, at any rate, go to plays, and after the novelty wears off they will tire of the canned stuff and demand stage plays. The old actors and actresses have a long period of rest dating back to the beginning of the movies and the sound pictures will prove a blessing to them and serve as a stepping stone to the movies.

The only hope, from my point of view, for the motion picture business, is to cut out the sound pictures, play on a strictly business basis and give the public nothing but high class silent pictures, something it has never had. If the producers concentrate on pictures and destruction, my advice to the small exhibitor is to get your investment out of the business and focus your efforts on the better as S. W. Doons, Campbell theatre, Campbell, Cal.

Could’n Do Without H.W.

LUDLOW, SALOP, ENGLAND.—To the Editor: Enclosed please check, value one pound, my third year’s subscription to the Herald-World. I am quite honestly of the opinion that I could not do without the paper now. It gives me an invaluable and thoroughly proved assistance in selecting American films and the selling hints in “The Theatre” department help me considerably. J. C. Jenkins, through his “Colvm” is as good as a personal assistant to any exhibitor and the people he meets. One of these days I’m going to write to Phil Rand and send him a few photos of my town and ask him to explain the above. He has told me so much about the Salmon River and the grand view that I want to see it. I can think of several good localities in places I’d like to know, but I’ll take them in the end.

Stettmud’s Views

CHANDLER, OKLA.—To the Editor: I have read the letter of Hon. J. C. Jenkins regarding the poor business in the theatre line.

I suppose that Mr. Jenkins or anyone else of his standing in the business does not know what is wrong, what has ruined the theatre business.

I have been in the business for over 30 years and see when business started to go to the bad. It was about a year after that wonderful man amongst men, Mr. Hays, was acclaimed the bull goose of Wall Street and the exhibitors’ hand and foot so that they could not have a voice in the selection of their entertainment. It was soon foiled. What was once a contract there was no way on God’s Green Earth to keep from playing or paying for the pictures. If they were as rotten as hell you had to take them anyway. Pull the pull and you were on the edge of losing your deposit was a thing of the past.

When people complained about pictures the exhibitor could only say that he had no control over them as he had to show them regardless of their merits.

Product was sold on misrepresentation and in some instances outright fraud, anything to get the signature on the dotted line was reported to the contract, he made him pay and pay and pay.

The selling season has been advanced because the producer is selling his output before he makes it. He knows the public will buy it, so he figures so much for profits, so much for expenses and makes pictures cheap enough to try to sell them.

Pictures are no longer sold on their merits. An exhibitor can not take his pick of the product of a producer. He has already been forced to buy all the pictures made by one producer.

Is it any wonder that the exhibitor end of the business is falling down day by day, they can not closing every day for lack of patronage?

How long will any business survive where the man who sells the public has no choice in what he has to sell?

The exhibitors had the means of their salva- tion offered to them last year and like fools turned it down. I do not know if this salvation will be offered them again; if it is, I hope every exhibitor who does not support it goes broke. I think some of them who were against the last year’s business, when if they would have supported this measure they would undoubtedly now be see- ing much of the same business, instead of small gross every month.

No business can survive very long under the conditions that now exist in the movie business. The small town theatre will be a thing of the past. The cities will be overseated to such an extent that they will not make a profit in any case and the distributors will have to go broke and the large business will be one of the minor instead of major industries.

If we think this letter is worthy of some space in your valuable magazine you are welcome to reprint it; it might open up some discussion on the subject amongst the exhibitors.—H. G. STETTMUD, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.

Has Own Music Device

SARGENT, NEB.—To the Editor: I would hate to miss even one issue of the Herald-World. I consider it our paper as it carries our name and is not called the Pro- ducers. I have thought of the idea that if more of us would write personal letters to the columns given us we could all pick out something were working on. This is a small town and what would help us would be of no use to a city.

In regard to music, I have made an outfit which will play a little music and can be made for about $250 or $300 and think it will compare with any of the musical combina- tions, both in tone and volume which I have listened to. If any of the other exhibitors want to make something like this I will send them the names of the parts I used and where they can be obtained. Unless too many write, or if the Herald-World wishes it, I will send a list with a diagram of the whole machine. A traveling salesman asked me the other night where I had purchased the parts asked where the pipe organ was and who played it. This solves our music problem. This music can be made of rubber or whatever will be the new name. If this will be of help to any of the boys I will be pleased.

Write your ideas. Perhaps someone would like to know what you have ideas of or do think of and what you’d do for.—J. C. SCHNEER, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.

A Section on Vaudeville?

BUSHNELL, ILL.—To the Editor: Just a suggestion. You are writing articles on every other issue. Why not give us the low down on vaudeville. Name a sec- tion on “What the vaudeville did for me.” Theatres play vaudeville too, you know. Not even in the “Billboard” can you find anything of what the exhibitor thinks of a roadshow or vaudeville act. Why?—C. M. ALBRECHT, Rialto theatre, Bushnell, Ill.
Columbia

SUBMARINE: Jack Holt—December 16-17. Here is a feature that is entitled to good business in any one's home. Much better than many of the so-called specials that you have to mortgage the house to get. 40 accounts of bad weeks nan; reason it stopped at the B. O. for us, but it sure isn't the fault of the picture. Honestly believe it pulls 99 per cent. Step on it and raise your admission to what you charged for "Wings." Nine reels.—W. H. Silver & Son, Grand theatre, Princeton, N. J.—Small town patronage.

THE WAY OF THE STRONG: Special cast—19%. December 30. Another story of the underworld. Good picture but did not draw special cast.—Estella Hulds, J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SALLY IN THE ALLEY: Shirley Mason—January 1-2. Not big but the kind that pleased the great majority and that's the kind we need more of. Also the kind we can profit by. Presents on Rialto theatre, Hebron, No. Dak.—Small town patronage.

FASHION MADNESS: Claire Windsor—25%. October 1. I'd call this a howling success. Your patrons will do the howling and you will be a success if you stay away from this kind. Its only saving grace is a bit of a good scenery in the last reel. The women might like it, but it will soon be the men who will be bored. Columbia usually gives us worthwhile pictures, but I suppose this is just one of those things that happen. Just so it doesn't happen again! Six reels.—John E. Wallan, Orpheum theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

AFTER THE HURRICANE: Hobart Bosworth—95%. December. A very good sea story with plenty of comedy to make it interesting. Bosworth is a good drawing card. ’’Took me a While’’ was a hit for Rhyner, Lee Roy theatre, Wallace, Neb.—General patronage.

AFTER THE STORM: Hobart Bosworth—49%. December. As usual from Columbia and many pictures that we feel sick every time we have to run one. However, this one is as good as the average, photos like a cross between 'The Blessed Ship' and 'Hell Ship Bronson.' Bosworth is good, but he can't do much when he is surrounded by a bunch of palooses and dumb-borans. The patrons liked the fight in the first reel, and the storm scene in the last reel was quite realistic. Just average business, but everyone seemed pleased. Six reels.—John E. Wallan, Orpheum theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

STREET OF ILLUSION: Special cast—December 16-27. As usual, another good one from Columbia. When it comes to genuine acting, I really don't believe you can beat Ian Keith in this one. He portrays the part to perfection, especially at the last of the film where the dramatic ending. Some patrons may object to the dramatic ending but Ivan Keith puts it over to the satisfaction of those that enjoy real acting. Seven reels.—W. H. Silver & Son, Grand theatre, Princeton, Mo.—Small town patronage.

BEASTLY YOUTH: 23. Brew good house on Christmas night and pleased, according to comments received, about 96 per cent. We used the 1927-28 Columbia product and were well pleased, and bought the 1928-29 product and it also looks like a real buy. We will have the right in a row from Columbia, and they have all been as good as any company's product, and you can't beat Midwest in Kansas City for service. Seven reels.—W. H. Silver & Son, Grand theatre, Princeton, Mo.—Small town patronage.

GETTIN' HOTTER

A new batch of votes have turned the tide in the "My Favorite Players" contest, Joan Crawford giving way to Clara Bow as the leader of the feminine players, and Richard Dix going into a tie with Lon Chaney for the male head position. What will next week bring forth?

An especially interesting feature of this interesting contest is the effect the votes of the younger members of the family are having. This week Hoot Gibson comes into the race because of this influence. Adult votes usually being confined to the "formers," older players or those of the greater, movies. Moreover, stars are not cornering the market, as a glance through the results will show, while theballoting also proves that the lesser known players may also attract loyal admirers. Again readers are urged to send in their votes, being careful to place the name of each voter above his or her choice, the name of the theatre and the town. Exhibitors (including partners) and members of their immediate families are eligible to vote. Employes may not vote. Below is the standing thus far:

THE SCARLET LADY: Lya de Putti—40%. A very good feature, one that your patrons will enjoy and that will sell you pictures in the lobby and meet your patrons. Eight reels.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.

FBO

DOG JUSTICE: Ranger—December 31. Everybody’s favorite for the second night’s showing. Harry Rhyner, Lee Roy theatre, Wallace, Neb.—General patronage.

SINGAPORE MUTINY: Special cast—75%. December 25-26. Not much of a picture for the ladies, but the men liked it. Plenty rough.—D. A. Ryhner, Rialto theatre, Hebron, No. Dak.—Small town patronage.

HELL RUBE: Special cast—65%. December 16. The little punned us for a while but when we saw the picture we praise it too highly. It is a true story of survival of life and lots of thrills. Good you gripping your seat all the time. Poor roads. Seven reels.—Harry Schroeder, Lee Roy theatre, Walla, Neb.—General patronage.

THE PERFECT CRIME: Special cast.—Fair picture. Good work by Brook, but why do they keep putting Irene Rich in pictures? She drives half of the people away from the show and gives the other half a pain. Seven reels.—J. B. Weddies, Walton theatre, Lennoxburg, Ind.—General patronage.

TROPIC MADNESS: Lestrice Joy—December 18-19. Good acting, pretty scenery and just a good program picture. FBO pictures are all clean. Have yet to find one with smarty writing or suggestive scenes. Seven reels.—John Cocner, Sun theatre, Shar- gent, Neb.—Small town patronage.

First National

THE HAUNTED HOUSE: Chester Conklin—Good special place to feature.—W. Y. Smoots, Vine theatre, Mt. Vernon, O.—General patronage.

SYNONYTH SIN: Colleen Moore—40%. December 31-January 1. A good picture with a nice entertainment.—H. V. Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE WAVE CASE: Forest—Awful picture. Shelve it.—Roy Olley, Pastime theatre, Medicine Lodge, Kan.—Small town patronage.

DO YOUR DUTY: Charles Murray—November 28. Average Murray picture.—Roy Olley, Pastime theatre, Medicine Lodge, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE SCARLET LADY: Lya de Putti—40%. A very good feature, one that your patrons will enjoy and that will sell you pictures in the lobby and meet your patrons. Eight reels.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.
DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

Following out an old custom of ours, and following another old custom of long standing, we broke the dam thing before we had our sheets on, for when we looked out of the window we found that a blizzard from Medinee Hat had arrived with the evident intention of putting a crimp in everybody that didn't have any more sense than to step out of doors.

If there is anybody who knows just what a nice, juicy blizzard can do to a suffering public, it is a guy from Nebraska, and that's our home state. There are three kinds of blizzards, one that blows the snow up your pantlegs, one that blows it down around your collar and one that blows it both ways and meets in the middle. This last kind is the Nebraska variety—that's why we adopted union suits years ago. Then another reason why we are not going out today is that nobody else is working, not even the bootleggers—they closed out their stock last night—and to work on the first day of the New Year would be setting a bad precedent for the other 364.

And now we have broken another resolution. It just seems like we can't stick to a resolution no matter how good it is. We resolved not to attempt to write any poetry during 1929, and this morning we got a letter from our old friend Bill Brenner of the Coy theatre at Winchester, Ind., saying that the Y. W. C. A. of his town was going to give a dinner and had invited him to be present and read an original poem at their after-dinner literary program, and if we thought he had been there, we were sure that his subject was to be a cat. He insisted on sending us something he could read at this dinner, and not wishing to go back on an old friend, we sent him the following:

The cat scratched around in the kitchen all night, And the fuss that he made was simply a fright The folks all supposed that the poor thing was hurt When all that he wanted was a

We sent this to Bill and told him he could supply whatever was necessary to finish out the verse, anything he thought would fit the occasion, just so it would rhyme with "burt," that possibly he might use "tabby cat flirt," or if that didn't sound just right, he might say "box of fresh dirt," but to be sure that it completed the rhyme. We told him also that if he put considerable feeling in this when he read it he would undoubtedly bring the house down.

After one breaks a good resolution he might as well go through with it to a finish, so—

This day has been a gloomy one, The storm is keeping us inside; We long in vain to see the sun And feel its penetrative hide, But there's no such luck in store for us, So what's the use to make a fuss.

Some folks go out and lap up boozes To drown their troubled minds in gin, But that is when they're sure to lose, For then their troubles will begin, They've got less sense, as you will note, Than the good Lord gave a Berkshire Amit

But speaking of parties, did you read about the parties Chicago pulled off last night? Today's Tribune says that some 3,500 guests attended as high as 3,000 guests, with a cover charge of $10 each. Gosh, it must have been chilly up there. Looks like that would have bought all the blankets there are in the whole state.

Down here in this part of the "Sucker State" one could have gotten a lovely headache as he could have in Chicago for only 75 cents, and some of 'em did, but then you know that Chicago is Chicago, and that's why Bill Thompson was mayor so long, otherwise he wouldn't have been mayor.

Tonight we saw Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel in "GLORIOUS BETSY," a Warner Brothers picture with Vitaphone. We paid 50 cents and got double our money's worth. The picture by itself is plenty good enough, but with Vitaphone it is superb. It is our opinion that Conrad's voice registers over the Vitaphone better than any we have yet heard. We like him both ways, still andentity extended run.

Bye-bye, doves—Dillio, "Dove—No comment. Audience did not reflect anything on this, and as so many pictures are pulp or built on old themes, we do not expect more than a day's run. The other films are: The Giamco Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

LILAC TRAIL: Billie Maynard—November 1-2. Good picture but all Maynard's are.—Roy Culley, Pastime theatre, Medicine Lodge, Kan.—Small town patronage.

HARD BOILED HAGGERTY: Milton Billings—Some scenes, but not as good as H.-V. Smoots, Vine theatre, Mt. Vernon, O.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—A big picture in every way, but Colleen Moore has passed the peak here.—Roy Culley, Pastime theatre, Medicine Lodge, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MOTHER MACHREE: Belle Bennett—50%. December 17-23. Another good Fox picture that went hay-wire. Paid entirely too much for it and lost money. Fox picture don't bring them in for me. Eight reels.—E. C. Arahart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

MOUNTAIN: Roy Beall—50%. December 25-29. A good Western picture, good action, good dialogue, and pleasing to all classes.—John A. Schwall, Rialto theatre, Hamilton, O.—General patronage.

THE LILAC TRAIL: Billie Maynard—November 1-2. Good picture but all Maynard's are.—Roy Culley, Pastime theatre, Medicine Lodge, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE WHEEL OF CHANCE: Richard Barthelmess—39%. December 4. Little better than programs.—B. Wilson, Rex theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE STOLEN BRIDE: John T. Dillio—No comment. Audience did not reflect anything on this, and as so many pictures are pulp or built on old themes, we do not expect more than a day's run. The other films are: The Giamco Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

J. C. JENKINS - His Colum

costume for the entire high school nowadays. It just seems like the more mamma attends whist and poker parties the higher the girls cut 'em. Isn't it the truth? For—

They've all got to cuttin' 'em so doggone high
That the boys get dizzy when the girls pass by,
It's about thirty inches from their skirts to their feet,
And they don't have to histe 'em when they cross the street.

All of which foregoing proves that we have a weak and vacillating nature and can't stick to a good resolution when we make one. Isn't it the truth?

We are very much interested in the discussion now going on through the columns of the HERALD-WORLD regarding a new name for talking pictures. In this matter, as well as all other matters of general interest, the HERALD-WORLD leads the field, just as we have contended all along. We have never been in favor of the phrase "talking pictures," for pictures can't talk, and what puzzles us is that someone hasn't hit upon the proper word to intelligently describe them. Finding the proper word is about the easiest thing we know of. It's so easy in fact that we dislike to take the money, but to help out a suffering industry we will submit "CINEVOICE" as the one word that will choke the box office and relieve the industry of a lot of worry. This isn't Greek, Latin nor Swede, and it is a word they can pronounce without strangling or losing their false teeth. It's a combination of "cinema" and "voice." Get it, folks, and these pictures are in.

Any premiums of cabbage, cauliflower or Bermuda onions can reach us through the HERALD-WORLD office at 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, care of Eagle Eye Joe.

GALESBURG, ILL.

There, we knew there was a storm brewing when we picked up last week's HERALD-WORLD and read that poetical effusion of "Fibby" Phil Rand of Salmon, Idaho, and the storm struck here last night. When they start writing poetry there is just one thing to do, call in the hoard of insanity. The burden of Phil's well song is Marion Davies, and when Mrs. Rand reads Phil's love sonnet, if it sticks, we think of a repetition in the Rand household, then you needn't look for any more free and happy news coming out of Hollywood—there won't be any. It is just such onraths as his that keep divorce courts active, and any court would grant any amount of alimony asked for.

Phil complains because he says he paid 50 cent more for Harold's pictures than he was entitled to. Don't get discouraged, Phil, you are not as lonesome as you imagine, there are something like 16,000 others, we know, for we've met all 'em. One man told us that he heard Harold say at the California convention that he would see to it that his pictures were seen by every child in the United States if he had to furnish them to the theatres gratis. Wasn't that just lovely? How could you be so crooked, Phil? Don't jump onto a fella that has one foot in Hollywood and the other in the United States mint. Have a heart, Phil, have a heart!

We can always tell when Logan creek is frozen over and stops bullhead fishing. It is when E. E. Gailey of the Crystal theatre at Wayne, Neb., starts sending in reports on pictures. It never fails.

He noted his report on "Wings," and he said it was so long that when the last reel was off the screen, the audience, not a few, were already going out. "We started a runway in the Rand household, then you needn't look for any more free and happy news coming out of Hollywood—there won't be any. It is just such onraths as his that keep divorce courts active, and any court would grant any amount of alimony asked for.

We are glad to note a number of new faces in the "WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME" department. It must be that those two fellows who tossed up their delinquencies in this regard recently had some influence on you chaps. If a lot of you fellows will pay more attention to your typewriters and less to unimportant matters it will enhance the value of this department a hundredfold. A hint to the wise ought to come in time. Now let's make this department the best ever.

Before closing we want to say just a word to exhibitors. You guys know that we have been fighting your battles from Grindstone, S. D., to Tombstone, Ariz., and back, and that we have stood up for you a lot of times when the evidence was all against you, and now here is a chance for you to reciprocate.

As you already know they are hunting for a word to take the place of "talking pictures," and "talkies," and we have submitted "CINEVOICE" as the best descriptive expression of ferred to date, and if you think so—and many doggone well it is—we want you to say so. Don't monkey around and let 'em adopt some jaw-breaking word that will require a dictionary in every box office.

Of all the words, we're free to state, that have been offered up to date, None just seems to fill the bill.

And through all we have been railin' kept still. But now we must submit our choice—

The proper word is "CINEVOICE."

J. C. JENKINS, The HERALD-WORLD Man.
Gotham

The SATIN WOMAN: Mrs. Wallace Reid—39%. November 4-6. Just another reason why our ex-husbands are clamoring for entrance into the nut house. Why we ever played this on Sunday I am beyond me. We booked it as a special, paid a special price, told the public what a knockout it was, and went into hiding to escape mob violence! I could name them in the first day, and then a lot of bum acting by a bum cast and a punk print and back projection between them over the sound. Do you see what foolish, boys! Seven reels.—John E. Wallau, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DREAM OF LOVE: Joan Crawford.—Just a good program picture. Some of the large settlement good.—Edwards & Case, Opera House, Paw Paw, Ind.—General patronage.

OF LIVING DAUGHTERS: Joan Crawford.—I was a little afraid of this and the name meant very little to me, so I did not draw. Nevertheless I liked it. My wife liked it and my daughters and sons liked it, and everyone who saw it also. Joan is fine support and I believe I will perhaps run it again soon as roads were bad, lots of flu and several have told me they wanted to see it who did not.—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

OF LIVING DAUGHTERS: Special cast—89%. December 39-31. They haven’t made pictures that satisfy our audience better than this picture yet, I can honestly report. Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE CAMERAMAN: Buster Keaton.—December 28. Mighty good, and did good business with it, and the certain look in his eyes at the finds the first sight. Second night a larger crowd and hardly a laugh. Just a difference in people, as there was one. In the kind of picture. Funny, sure, but the best of it all was there was very little love making in it and just one little kiss—and that was deserved and lasted only a fraction of a second. Public will like this, I am sure and exhibitors—all of them—will be satisfied. —H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE CAMERAMAN: Buster Keaton—49%. December 19-20. One carrier, past and present, said he knew it was so strong—did not put out any extra advertising. If you are strong on Buster, bill it heavily, but I would not. I ordered it again and billed it very strongly but it took only a week and a half to run. Had more laughs in general on this show than I have had for some time—comedy all the way through. Not silly but clever. Eight reels.—E. F. Hosack, Strand theatre, Pella, la.—General patronage.

BABY MINE: Dane-Arthur.—I played this picture here in August, 1924, and liked it so well I ordered it again and played it December 29th and cleaned up. It’s the best picture of its kind I ever saw. It has the most hilarious knock off line ever seen, but in a country town it’s a big hit.—A. W. Pruett, Robert Lee, Tex.—Small town patronage.

EXCESS BAGGAGE: William Haines.—This was a good program feature and well liked by all.—Support was also good.—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

NO WAY AT ALL! II: B. Grice of the Atik Mills theatre in Bath, S. C., sent in the tote of his family for the “My Favorite Players” contest this week, but left out his own. And this is his reason: “In justice to several stars, I shall not vote for anyone as my favorite, I especially like Colleen Moore, Clara Bow, Irene Rich, Alice Joyce, each in her own field, and of course, many others. You shouldn’t be so cruel to exhibitors and actors as to stage such a contest. I am glad! There’s a host of male stars, too, but I’m hopelessly lost in just one choice.”

CLARA BOW

Paramount

THE CARDBOARD LOVER: Marion Davies.—19%.—December 22. Good comedy, good photography, but a little too long in footage. Eight reels.—O. A. Posse, Community theatre, Ridgway, la.—Small town patronage.

ANNE LAURIE: Lillian Gish—65%.—December 15-24. Metro wouldn’t cancel this one, so we played it and did a great business with it. Which goes to show it isn’t always the hot ones that make the money. Pleased about 54-55.—E. C. Arburt, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

UNDER THE BLACK EAGLE: Flash.—Seemed to please. Six reels.—Giacomo Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

SPIES: Foreign cast—December 21. Nine reels of celluloid wasted. A bunch of junk. Many walked out. Christmas night is always my best night of the year, and I did not make expenses. About the poorest picture I ever ran. Keep your hands off this one. M G M pictures are too much drawn out. Too many reels. I don’t think their 1928 pictures are nearly as good as their 1927, and I saw them all. Nine reels.—George J. Ebsworth, Auditorium theatre, Marblehead, O.—General patronage.

THE BUSH RANGER: Tim McCoy—38%.—December 30. A good Western, better than many of Tim McCoy’s. Seemed to please all classes. Seven reels.—George J. Ebsworth, Auditorium theatre, Marblehead, O.—General patronage.

AVALANCHE: Jack Holt—Another Zane Grey story. Good western but as little action as we ever saw with Holt. Six reels.—Edwards & Case, Opera House, Paw Paw, Ind.—General patronage.

AVALANCHE: Jack Holt—59%. December 28-29. Little different than an ordinary Western.—H. V. Winship, Vine theatre, Mt. Vernon, O.—General patronage.

THREE WEEK ENDS: Clara Bow—December 28-29.patrick said it was not much, but we do not have the same results. Give us some more, Clara. —Carl Voeth, Palace theatre, Malta, Mont.—General patronage.

THE atmospheric eight: Stella Meligan—December 22, Another small house due to the flu, but a good picture that received many favorable comments.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

DOCKS OF NEW YORK: George Burewotz—December 25. Well, Burewotz is cool, but I can’t make the people in this town believe it. I showed it on Saturday to my regular Saturday crowd but it did not do big business business. It’s too much like a picture of life and the fault of the picture. This one is wild and woolly, has plenty of action and should go over anywhere. Eight reels.—C. M. Morin, Ritz theatre, Brusnell, III.—General patronage.

WARMING UP: Richard Dix—Dandy baseball story that should schedule well in the winter.—Roy Culley, Partime theatre, Medicine Lodge, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN FACES: Clive Brook.—December 30-31. If a person cannot enjoy the acting of Clive Brook in this one, he is hard to please. Nothing but good commercial stuff. We gave it a good house first night, but business off the second due to a blizzard the first of the year. Eight reels.—W. H. Silver & Son, Grand theatre, Princeton, Mo.—Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN FACES: Clive Brook.—Very good. Our patrons enjoy it.—L. Jeter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.
How They Voted

Following is the list of voters in the “My Favorite Players” contest, with their respective choices for male and feminine players (in parentheses) and arranged by theatres. The first voter’s name is that of the exhibitor, the next of his wife (except when conditions are otherwise), and the rest those of the children. No attempt has been made to arrange the list in any special order, although the position of each theatre is approximately according to the time the ballot was received.

United Artists

RAMONA: Dolores Del Rio—96%. December 23-29. May be, but anyway it went over with a bang, and that's what counts in this game. United Artists promised us a lot on this one and charged us a lot for it, but everyone was well pleased and we were tickled to death. Just a bit slow in spots. Might be cut to seven reels. Some beautiful scenes, and some touching ones that will put the tears in your eyes unless you're awfully hard-hearted. It's wonderful! Eight reels—John E. Wallin, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

SORELL AND SON: H. B. Warner—Good production, but we think it is too long. Acting good. Played to regular business. —J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

DRUMS OF LOVE: Lionel Barrymore—24%. January 2-4. Good for the type—willacted, but this type of picture does not go over for me. Foreign costume. Nine reels—E. P. Honeck, Strand theatre, Falls, Is.—General patronage.

THE IRRESISTIBLE LOVER: Special cast—December 19. Did not get to see this picture, but it was reported to me as pretty good entertainment. The opening was in terror, but business was good, and the department is to get through the projector, which of course dented some reels. —W. H. Silver & Son, Grand theatre, Princeton, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE SINGING FOOL: Al Johnson—December 25-26. Five boys, boys, boys, you can't beat it, and some bull-busines for a change. —Guerin Brothers, Grand theatre, Paulding, O.—Small town patronage.

UNCOLTOM'S CABIN: Special cast—September 18-26. You have not yet seen "Uncle Tom's Cabin" if you haven’t seen this production. It went over big for Guerin Brothers, Grand theatre, Paulding, O.—Small town patronage.

MAN, WOMAN AND WHITE: Special cast—December 24. Gave excellent satisfaction. Played to good business. We depend on Universal here for good consistent box office pictures.—Maynard Madden, New Virginia theatre, Harrisonburg, Va.—General patronage.
producers are of having a chance to enter the kingdom of Heaven. Slow and uninteresting. Eight reels.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.

Serials

HAWK OF THE HILLS: (Pathe) On seventh episode and not holding up. Not enough action.—E. C. Arendt, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

TARZAN THE MIGHTY: (Universal) Special cast—Now on the sixth chapter and cannot understand why this does not draw, as we expected it to after reading reports of success in other small towns. We have given it special advertising, but it doesn’t seem to mean much to most of our patrons. Guess they don’t care for serials here.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE TIGER: (Universal) Jack Daugherty—Best serial ever run here from a standpoint of drawing power—and how!—Carl Yeath, Palace theatre, Malta, Mont.—General patronage.

Short Features

EDUCATIONAL

HOLD THAT MONKEY: Collins-Guard—Good title and good comedy. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

MAKING WHOOPEE: Harold Goodwin—Very good. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

MISPLACED HUSBANDS: Dorothy Devore—Just fair. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

NEAR BEANS: Big Boy—A funny comedy, lots of beans. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greensville, Mich.—General patronage.

PRETTY BABY: Monte Collins—Fair. One reel.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

THE QUIET WORKER: Jerry Drew—A pleasing two reelers. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

SPRING HAS COME: Monte Collins—Fair single reel. One reel.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

FRO

MICKY, THE DETECTIVE: Mickey McGuire—These are good and I can prove it by the kids.—D. A. Rhynie, Rialto theatre, Hebron, O. Dak.—Small town patronage.

MICKY McGUIRE COMEDIES: Even the kids whoo these things and the adv. patrorn asks what they’re supposed to be.—Carl Yeath, Palace theatre, Malta, Mont.—General patronage.

MY KINGDOM FOR A HEARSE: Al Cooke.—A real good comedy that pleased my crowd. Good print. Two reels.—L. Deyo, Miers theatre, Schobaria, N. Y.—General patronage.

FOX

ANIMAL COMEDIES: You can’t run some of these animal comics by “saints but not yet.” May not be so full of high powered laughs as some, but for entertainment they are hard to beat. A regular circus. Two reels.—John Conner, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.—Small town patronage.

MGM

THE BOY FRIEND: Max Davidson—Listen, Mr. Roach, where’s the snap your comedies had last year? They are still good, but not away in the lead like they used to be. We’ve had four in a row that were off. You can’t travel forever on momentum.—W. H. & W. S., Screenland theatre, Nebraska, O.—Small town patronage.

CAME THE DAWN: Max Davidson—Good.—E. P. Honeck, Strand theatre, Pella, Ia.—General patronage.

CALL OF THE CUCKOO: Max Davidson—Good for kids, too silly for better houses. Two reels.—O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

GROWING PAINS: Our Gang—Our Gang always good—about the average Gang picture.—E. P. Honeck, Strand theatre, Pella, Ia.—General patronage.

EARLY TO BED: Sam Hardy.—Good. Spooky picture—general miscue. Kind of a bust.—E. P. Honeck, Strand theatre, Pella, Ia.—General patronage.

TWO TARS: At last, a real funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greensville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL PANTS: Charles Chase—No matter what it’s like, it sure brought the laughs. Two reels.—O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT

BELIEVE IT OR NOT: Pretty fair. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

FACE VALUE: I win. I found one to beat “The Fantasy” of Paramount. All right, Brown, send it along, but pack it good as it wasn’t break and run out.—D. A. Rhynie, Rialto theatre, Hebron, N. Dak.—Small town patronage.

GOSPEL LOVE: Billy Dodson.—Just fair. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

Lay On Mcfadden: Jack Duffy.—Not so hot. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS NO. 42: Paramount News is getting better, but they don’t put enough athletic events in them to suit my audience. Not enough events that are of interest to people in this section and too much foreign events.—C. M. Albrecht, Rialto theatre, Bucknell, Ill.—General patronage.

TIERED WHEELS: Krazy Kat—Good cartoon filler. Good print.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

VACATION WAVES: Edward Everett Horton—A good, funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greensville, Mich.—General patronage.

PATHE

HUBBY’S WEEKEND TRIP: Good comedy. Two reels.—Ralph Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SLIPPING WIVES: Priscilla Dean.—One of Hal Roach’s star series and is pretty good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hubbs J. Green, Green theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

A BIG BLUFF: “Keeping Up With the Joneses”—Steen Brothers had a one-ber line full when they added, “Our comedies are not to be laughed at!” We see the motion. Most of them are just a waste of time, carbon, electricity, and several dollars! Two reels.—John E. Wallan, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

COLLEGES: First and second series were fine. Bought third and fourth. Am now starting on M G M shorts. Hope they live up to the reports.—B. H. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

COLLEGES: Special cast—Very good. Everybody said it’s like meeting old friends after seeing the first series a year ago.—D. A. Rhynie, Rialto theatre, Hebron, Ne. Dak.—Small town patronage.

COLLEGES: Special cast—Good. Plenty comedy, yet a good college story. The motor boat race fine.—E. P. Honeck, Strand theatre, Pella, Ia.—General patronage.

COLLEGES: The first series was fine and built up quite a Following, but it seems that they’ve run out of cupboards in the second series that we’ve been trying to dope out is, why should Dot, who was a blonde in the first series, suddenly blossom out as a full fledged blonde in the second? Ask us another! Two reels.—John E. Wallan, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

HOT HEELS: Glen Tryon.—Entertaining program pictures.—Seltzer, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

HALF-BACK BUSTER: Buster Brown.—A rather poor imitation of Roach’s Gang comedies. Sterna don’t seem to realize that you can’t take a bunch of kids and make another Our Gang just like that. Drew some laughs of course, but lacks the true snap. Cut out the mob stuff and let Buster and Tige do their stuff. Good print and photography.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS: Getting a newer news and is pretty good. One reel.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Green river, Utah.—General patronage.

OSWALD CARTOONS: These are the best cartoons available. Everyone has been good. The kids eat ‘em up! And the grown-ups also seem to get a kick out of them.—John E. Wallan, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

SODAS AND SHEBAS: Arthur Lake—No good at all. Fair condition print.—One reel.—L. Deyo, Miers theatre, Schobaria, N. Y.—General patronage.

WOODEN SOLDIERS: Oh lord! Another “novelty”! Mr. Laemmle says Public likes these, but we’ll tell the Public we don’t. However, suppose circumstances still alter cases. This one was better than the last, but our farmers simply won’t fall for them.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J.F.

JACK KNIGHT, supervisor of Balaban & Katz theatres, has left the circuit to manage a group of office buildings. The outstanding success of Knight in his work for B & K over a period of seven years resulted in offers from office building operators some time ago, but it was thought that he preferred theatrical work. His resignation was turned in to take effect immediately.

It would be difficult to find a man to take his place, and according to present plans of B & K, supervision of theatres will be by Lester Dalley and C. F. Strudel, Dalley taking the Loop and South Side, and Strudel the North and West Sides, neither being over the other.

Here's some monkey business for you. Two Chicago University professors are writing a scenario for a six-reel picture, to be called "Evolution of Man." The learned scenarists are Fay-Cooper Cole, head of the anthropology department, and Harvey B. Lemon of the department of physics.

Misfortune hit Pathe in a heap last week. First Harry Lorch was knocked over by the flu on Monday, after conducting a hotel sales meeting Sunday. Monday afternoon Sig Decker, salesman, received the same from Old Man Flu and was taken to his home. Shortly afterward Joe Woodward, another salesman, was stricken while at his desk with mastoiditis and was rushed to the hospital. But now things are brightening up again. Joe survived an operation that only one in a thousand get over, Lorch is back on the job, and Decker is hitting the ball again. Woodward will be back at his desk in three more weeks.

Another private showing of Tiffany-Stahl's "Lucky Boy," starring George Jessel was given at the United Artists theatre, Tuesday.

A private showing of "Interference" at the Chicago, January 10, was attended by over 3,000. "Interference" is a Paramount audien starring William Powell. "In Old Arizona" of Fox was also screened.

J. Frank Young of the United Artists exchange was sporting a wonderful necktie last week. Wonderful to Young because it was a birthday gift from his ten-year-old daughter. And it looked mighty fine to us, too.

Sam Horwitz, special representative for United Artists, was confined to bed for a week by illness. He has recovered, however, and is back to work.

F.B.O held a special meeting attended by many executives, at the Stevens hotel, Saturday and Sunday.

B & K and Great States theatres have closed contracts with Tiffany-Stahl calling for the 25 colored symphony pictures. Fifteen are in sound, and 10 are silent. Henri Elman, newly appointed successor to A. H. McLaughlin, received the contract, the first one he has closed for Tiffany-Stahl.

The father of William Krueger of Universal, died last week. He had been sick for some time.

* * *

Sam Jacobson, director of publicity for Universal on the Coast, was in Chicago last week, en route to New York. He remained here for only two days.

Over 2000 people attended the midnight showing of Universal's "Last Warning" at the Chicago theatre on January 12. The picture was a real thriller and kept most of the crowd in a shaky uproar. It must be said that the picture was well produced and directing was up to the standard. The plot was so good that the murder was laid to everyone except the actual slayer. Laura La Plante heads the all-star cast.

The Wallace theatre operated by J. Stern has installed a new DaLite screen in the theatre. The 300 seat house plays straight moving pictures and Saturday and Sunday crowds pack the house.

M G M's foreign picture, "Spies," was given a screening at the exchange last week.

Manager's Wife Injured in Crash

Fellow Exhibitors Help Summerville to Victory

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—The big achievement from the film world's point of view, in the civic election here, was the gaining of a seat on the Board of Control by W. A. Summerville, proprietor of the handsome suburban theatres, the Prince of Wales and Eastwood.

Summerville has given lengthy municipal service as an alderman. An important factor in his election campaign was the cooperation extended by other exhibitors of Toronto in boosting him by running his picture on the screen.

Collegian Splits Award Of Best Picture of Year

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Henry W. Levy, who writes a column, "Cinema," in the New York University Daily News, couldn't decide on a winner in his preview of 209 productions in 1928, so he labeled "The Patriot" and "The Crowd" as superfictions and listed ten others as the next best.

Louisville K A O Manager Promoted to Chicago Office

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 15.—David E. Dow, resident general manager of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum theatres, has been appointed colonel on Governor Sampson's staff. He will make his headquarters in Chicago and will take over his new duties under John F. Royal, manager of the Middle West districts. No definite division has been assigned to Dow as yet.

Projectionist, Hurt in Blast, Sues for $30,000

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 15.—A suit for $30,000 has just been filed in the Ohio county circuit court by George Spanos, projectionist, as an aftermath of the explosion of a motor generator set in the Plaza theatre last June resulting in injuries which permanently will prevent Spanos from continuing as a projectionist, according to his complaint.

Butterfield to Start on Jackson House March 1

JACKSON, Mich., Jan. 15.—The Butterfield 7th-striatal Interests of Michigan report that leases under contracts on the building on the new Michigan theatre have been completed and ground will be broken for the new house about March 1. The house will seat 1,950.

No Manager of Columbia Exchange Yet Appointed

No manager of the Columbia Chicago exchange has yet been appointed, declares Fred Knapel, district manager temporarily in charge of the Chicago branch, in correction of a statement based on erroneous information and published in the January 12 issue of the "Herald-World," that William Brumberg had been placed in charge of the Chicago exchange. Brumberg was appointed country sales manager.
In the "Talkies" too

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film — be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised — the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year — these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

Poor SOUND PROJECTION will be reflected in the box office

Unless Your Theatre is Acoustically Efficient
Talking Pictures will be no Attraction

A THEATRE with poor acoustics is as out of date as it would be with only one projector. Sound films must have proper acoustics, or their effects, otherwise attractive, become mere noise. Theatre owners are finding that audiences will not pay to listen to poor projection any more than they would pay to see the old fashioned flickering.

The correction of poor acoustics in an old theatre or the insuring of good acoustics in a new theatre are both highly technical, scientific jobs. Johns-Manville Acoustical Engineers have been solving the acoustical problems of auditoriums for years. Theatres, churches, schools, lodge rooms, and the like all over the country are testimony of the ability of J-M Engineers to cope with any conditions involving acoustical problems.

No Interference with Decorative Plans
Under the Johns-Manville method of sound control, you need make no special restriction either of form or decoration of your auditorium. The J-M system will not interfere with or spoil the decorative effects so essential in theatre design.

As you know, sound films must be produced in studios that are practically noiseless. Johns-Manville engineers, through widespread experience, can give valuable advice in the construction of such studios. Furthermore, they have developed an interior finish which aids tremendously in the production of good sound films. And with equal success, they can bring about good acoustical conditions in the theatres where these films are to be projected.

You incur no obligation by asking us to have a J-M Acoustical Engineer discuss with you problems of the acoustics of your theatre. Address Acoustical Department, Johns-Manville Corporation, 292 Madison Avenue, New York City.
Sudden darkness in the theatre. The show stops. Money back for tickets. Possible panic could start. And with these dangers, loss of good will. Protection for your patrons is your first consideration.

Modern theatres take no chances. Many of them, such as these pictured here, insure themselves against sudden darkness with Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries. In case the current should fail for any reason, the lights and projector switch to the Exide Battery. This happens instantly and automatically. The show goes on . . . for two hours if necessary. The devices that control and charge Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries are extremely simple and foolproof. Your present staff can care for them without expert knowledge.

Best of all, these batteries are available in sizes to suit your needs and budget. An experienced Exide representative from one of our 17 branches will be glad to consult with you. This entails no obligation. Write.

For You—a 3 Way Profit

To you, as owner or manager, American Theatre Chairs add three factors to the “drawing power” of your house that should never be overlooked. First, American chairs give your patrons a maximum of comfort that brings them back to your house. Second, the beauty of design and finish of American chairs assures perfect harmony with the decorative effect and appointments. And third, the in-built quality of American chairs makes them an investment that yields a steady profit in reduced upkeep costs and more years of durability.

No. 6065—1369 of these chairs were installed in the State Theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich. American Walnut wood parts, upholstered back and dark red Moroccoline seat. Noiseless ball bearing hinge insures silent and easy seat movement. Comfortable, durable and pleasing to the eye.

Thousands in one Year!

O\'HIS handsome chair offers to the average theatre owner more strength and comfort per dollar of investment than any other seat made today. Thousands and thousands of this type of Heywood-Wakefield chair were bought by exhibitors all over the country in 1928!

Such a tremendous, nation-wide purchase of a theatre chair proves conclusively that it has been built from a box office angle. The deep, curved back has a simplicity that will harmonize with almost any decorative treatment. The comfortable seat operates on a quiet, long-wearing steel hinge.

Write to the nearest Heywood-Wakefield sales office for detailed information on this chair, O. C. 608, and other de luxe and semi de luxe theatre seats.

Publix, Merchant of Shows and Manufacturer of Soap

The story of a unique institution—a factory which is a department of the show business. It wasn’t wanted. But Profits is the boss. Here surely is a look behind the scenes, not only of a show, but of modern commerce.

By E. E. MEYER

TAKING, for example, a can of metal polish. What has it got to do with the show business? Now, the performance doesn’t concern itself with such affairs as metal polish. Indeed, its business is to make us forget prosaic affairs in the colors, the lights, the music and the dance, the over-real drama of unreality.

But let’s consider our can of metal polish this way: There are several hundred theatres in which each day must be danced the dance of the life unreal. Each of these theatres affords a setting for the dance. Like the lights and costumes, they too must shine. But where the metal polish comes in—hundreds and hundreds of cans of metal polish for each theatre—for each one of several hundred theatres.

Publix has considered the can of metal polish and considered it well. This great circuit of around 600 theatres has turned brilliant minds and thousands of dollars upon liquid soap, deodorants, rat poisons, fly sprays and scores of other similar accessories to the operation of their theatres, that these 600 theatres may effectively and economically supply a complete setting for the happy illusions of the show. Publix manufactures both, the metal polish and the illusions. Both, in the Publix way of doing things, go hand in hand. Publix products value $200,000 a year, are praised on a basis of cost-price.

It is something of a shock to find an institution which is constantly associated in the mind with the filmy fancies of make-believe, operating a factory on a dingy street, making soap and rat poisons, deodorants and such things. It is more astounding to discover that this factory, complete in itself, is augmented in the manner of any big manufacturing concern by a research laboratory—test tubes, retorts, dreadnought bottles devoted to the business of discovering better and cheaper metal polishes, deodorants and their brethren. At the head of this laboratory is a chemical engineer, representing an expensive profession not ordinarily identified with the show business. And the laboratory alone costs $100,000 a year.

But of course, Publix is not an ordinary institution. And it so happens that this research-manufacturing establishment is the only one in the theatrical world. It has not been established long—two years, which is approximately the age of Publix. But its establishment followed by many years the formation of Balaban & Katz, Publix Chicago subsidiary which devised the venture now directed by Publix and is the immediate director of its operation. It is not of general importance that this unique establishment is the result of Balaban and Katz experience. Its importance here is due to the fact that it is the consequence of the experience through many years of a great, progressive organization of astute showmen.

There were a lot of things that put the idea into the heads of B & K officials. Take once more as an example, our old friend, the can of metal polish. Now, the brass and other metal fixtures in a fine theatre like those B & K operate, must look "just so" all the time. A lot of polish goes on to them in the course of a twelve-month. If the polish is a poor polish, if it scratches or if it eats the metal, it cannot be rubbed off completely without using all the energy of an employee and most of his time, the polish is costing considerably more than it is worth, even if the manufacturer gives it away.

Most polishes, of course, are useable, and if they have their bad points, they have good ones too. But (in theory), a polish that has no bad points, one that does exactly what you want it to? The only answer to that is, "If possible." Finding out that it was possible, concerning this same item as well as others, B & K went into the manufacturing business.

Here’s another example—a glowing example, as it were, not only because it concerns colored electric light lamps, either. Publix uses tens of thousands—perhaps it is millions—of colored lamps, on the stages, marquises and so on. A lamp dipping concern was being paid to dip them in the required colors. The colors were not always right. Always the colored surface easily came off, as does that on most colored lamps. Inquiries were made as to how to obtain a better surfacing. Either nobody knew or didn’t care to tell. Anyway, lamps from which the surfacing would not wear or nick off easily could not be obtained. And it was costing Publix about nine cents a lamp for such unsatisfactory dipping.

That is another reason for the research laboratory and manufacturing plant. A coloring material with a ceramic oxide base was found that would go on a lamp to stay. You couldn’t even scratch it off without a lot of hard work. And the cost of dipping was cut more than 100 per cent.

The first puzzled ruminations on ways and means to get better maintenance and operation accessories and at a lower cost (though quality was the uppermost consideration), went on in the minds of Barney Balaban, head of B & K, and Jack Knight, his supervisor of theatres. Knight had always manifested a good natured yet tenacious dislike for things as they were in this world, especially when he believed they could be made better, and having the genius to conceive ways of making things better, he was the author of a number of important innovations in B & K methods. Barney Balaban was demon-amonst a most excellent director in such machinations, so between them, they got things started.

That was in the latter part of 1926. They had the metal polish being used in B & K theatres analyzed. Yes, there were ingredients that had the undesirable faculty of doing so and so, or, of doing this and that and the other chemical and make a polish that would do just what they wanted it to. The cost was not going to be a problem, let us suppose. Mr. Balaban and Mr. Knight staggered, or if you like, grasped the arm of a chair and sat ponderously down—the cost of manufacture would be such that the product could be sold profitably at retail for half of what they were paying.

Similar scenes might be imagined to picture what happened in regard to other accessories. Products were found to have only eight and nine per cent of the active principle when it was supposed to contain 10 or 11 per cent. And as for the cost of manufacturing compared with the price B & K was paying—and paying on the basis of huge orders—it was such that no time was lost in associating, for the first time, a manufacturing plant with an amusement enterprise.

The factory, warehouse and laboratory are housed in a large building of several floors in a manufacturing section of Chicago. The establishment, of course, is under the ultimate supervision of Publix, which owns 87 per cent of B & K stock. Going into the warehouse department, one sees a great room divided into a score of ceiling-high apartments with shelves on which are row upon row of cans, bottles, containers of all kinds and sizes, all labeled as one might see them in the drug store, and all bearing, as a brand name, the trade mark of Publix.

There are cleaners of several varieties, liquid soaps of different strengths, two kinds of fabric cleansers, disinfectants, bowl cleaners, fire extinguisher fluids, varieties of metal polishes, furniture polishes, adhesives, cement and stones of products never to be associated with a concern dealing in symphonic music, chorus girls and playmaking the show—and read this list:

An Exclusive SOUND SERVICE
That Is Indispensable

BETTER THEATRES has just arranged with noted engineers, men whose experimental and development work in radio and sound has brought them high rank in the electrical profession, to serve exhibitor readers and solve for them the problems arising through the introduction of sound in the motion picture theatre.

This exclusive service will be available on both synchronized and non-synchronized installations.

It will cover every phase of sound, including installation, operation improvement, amplification and the numerous difficulties—many minor but important—which are apt to arise in the handling of sensitive equipment.

This exclusive service is gratis to exhibitor readers of BETTER THEATRES. It is an invaluable service, both in its educational and in its practical value.

Perhaps last evening your sound equipment was not functioning as you believed that it should. Write to the editor of BETTER THEATRES and explain your difficulty.

To expedite matters, and the solution of your problem, be sure that your letter is detailed—make of device, type, number, placement of amplifiers, number of amplifiers, type of amplification, speakers, kind of current, etc.

This exclusive service will start in the next issue of BETTER THEATRES. Problems requiring a more immediate service will be handled by mail.

This service is yours for the asking.
New Service Launched by "Better Theatres"

We direct your attention in this issue to the inauguration of a new service for the theatre owner.

Hereafter Better Theatres will publish each month the solutions to your sound problems. Some of the foremost experimental and development electrical engineers in the country have offered to advise exhibitors on sound matters.

This service will cover every phase of sound—installation, amplification, loud speakers, current, etc., all of which are apt to give the exhibitor difficulty if he does not know the intricacies of sound equipment.

This service is another evidence of the manner in which Better Theatres is constantly abreast of developments in the motion picture theatre.

Announcement of this new service is made on page 15.

The Equipment for Your Theatre

Theatres using non-synchronous sound devices are now able to obtain sound effect records especially made for the various sounds and effects in motion pictures. These records are double faced and contain more than 30 sounds, such as aeroplanes, gunshots, trains, fire engines, auto horns, etc., and also musical accompaniment. The records are electrically recorded and made of high grade and endurable materials and bring to the small theatre using a disc device realistic phonographic music. Some of these records sell in a dozen or more lots, while others are rented.

One of the most important features of non-synchronous machines is the amplifying system, which gives adequate sound effects and quality of tone. There are a number of these amplifiers and loud speakers, and in these pages are the names of manufacturers who have been serving the motion picture theatres and whose product has met the test for reliable service.

Product advertised in the pages of the Herald-World or Better Theatres can be highly recommended to you at any time. Whether you are in need of an organ, sound equipment or other equipment for the theatre, you may consult the columns of these two publications. The Herald-World has made it a practice, since its inception, to give an unrivaled service in both the theatre equipment field and the field of motion picture productions, as well as stage entertainment.

A thousand years before Julius Caesar invaded Gaul, a thousand years before St. Augustine retold the story of Christ to Britain’s tribes, a great people was creating itself in a world which neither Christian nor Roman dreamed existed. This people was the Maya, their world America, which is ours. And on their ancient American culture has been based the architecture, the design, the beauty of the new Fisher theatre in Detroit. Graven and Mayger were the architects.

Modern America Inherits the Beauty Of It's Own Antiquity

If the works of the ancients are needed to inspire beauty for modern theatres, America has them. Graven and Mayer discovered that upon discovering the Maya. The Fisher theatre is the result created in the walls and chambers of this modern establishment.

We obtained the effect of the stone used by the Maya by using construction blocks and sandblasting them. There are something like 400 Mayan carvings reproduced, on these stones in various parts of the theatre, and each was made by making a mold, casting the block, and sandblasting it.

Everything decorative in the house is Mayan, the result of painstaking research work on our part and of the assistance of archaeologists.

The theatre is housed in the huge Fisher Building at Grand Boulevard and Second, in a new business section of Detroit.

In the main lounge on the basement level we have built a fountain dominated by the figure of a Mayan god. The pool is laid with variegated tile and in it swim scores of goldfish. The fountain seems to set in a native Mayan garden, for around it are plants brought from Guatemala, earliest scene of Mayan civilization. These plants have to be bathed in violet rays each day so as to give them the effect of intense sunlight. Similarly are bathed six macaws, Central American birds frequently mentioned in Mayan lore. These birds are kept on steel perches, to which they are chained. The perches and chains have to be of heavy steel, for they have powerful beaks and spend most of their time chewing their fetters.

All carpets were specially woven from Mayan designs. Bordering the prosenium arch are panels which show the hieroglyphic symbols for the 18 Maya months. Over the prosenium arch are sculptures in the mask-panel motif, while on each side of the proscenium are two massive figures copied from monuments in Quirigua, city in Guatemala, where are still to be found relics of the Mayan culture which began its rise about 3,000 years ago. A mural painting running around the fourth cove of the auditorium ceiling is based on an original found in the Temple of the Jaguars at Chichen Itza in Yucatan, sanctified site of the chief Mayan god. This painting of the battle, though done by an American race flowerishing 3,000 years ago, is intensely spiritual in manner.

On entering the main lobby, or foyer, one can't help noting two seated figures at the top of the grand stairway. They represent Xochipilli, the gods of feasting and flowers. In the mezzanine are serpent columns done from columns recently excavated from the Maya site of Chichen Itza.

The auditorium, which seats 2,750 on three floors, main, mezzanine and balcony, is in itself a mammoth Mayan temple. The ceiling is broken up into four large coves, each concealing the sources of red, green, blue and amber lights, operated on a Major automatic motor-driven system. These coves are broad of curve so as not to interfere with perfect acoustics. Above the proscenium arch there are more such coves, arranged in a series of step-offs. Acoustic plaster was used wherever necessary to insure excellent acoustics. The seats are set 36 inches from back to back, and patrons may pass between rows without forcing those seated to get up. All the seats were specially made with metal work and upholstering in Mayan design, by Heywood-Wakefield. They have spring backs.

Equipment, of course is of the most modern types and facilities cover every branch of theatrical operation. It might be well to mention that the stage has $75,000 worth of elevators, of all sizes, so that any part or all of the platform can be raised to any height desired. In conjunction with the dressing rooms are both tub and shower baths.

Because to know something of this people is to know a great deal about the design and beauty of the Fisher, I quote the following from a specially prepared paper on the Maya by Sylvanus Griswold Morley, associate in American archaeology at the Carnegie Institution of Washington:

"Three thousand years ago, while yet our own ancestors of northwestern Europe were living under conditions but little removed from ignorant, brutal savagery, a thousand years before Julius Caesar had brought Roman culture to the barbarian tribes of greater Gaul, a thousand years before St. Augustine had carried the light of Christianity to the pagan peoples of Britain, there began to develop in the New World a native American culture, which was destined to become the finest flower of American achievement—the Maya civilization of Central America and southern Mexico.

"Thirty centuries ago, the Maya (pronounced my-ah) were to have been found living in the subtropical forests of the Gulf coast plain of southern Mexico, particularly the region between the Panuco and Grijalva Rivers.

"At this time they must have been only simple hunting and fishing folk; gathered in small social units, probably only a few families in each group. In addition to chance supplies of fish and game, they lived on fruits, nuts, roots and such wild plants as they were able to find growing in the great forest about them; their humble houses were scarcely more than shelters built of saplings and roofed with a thatch of palm; their clothing, skins and woven grasses.

"Somewhat later, though well before the beginning of the Christian Era, the Maya began to move southward, perhaps were pushed southward by the pressure of barbarian tribes behind them, and finally penetrated the virgin forest of what is now northern Guatemala. Here they established themselves not very long before the Birth of Christ, founding the Old Maya Empire, 100 B. C. to 680 A. D.

"During these centuries the Maya priests and astronomers were gathering from the stars the secrets of time and its accurate measure; their mathematicians were devising a calendar and chronology, which was without peer on this continent, and excelled by none in the Old World at that time; their builders were developing an architecture at once unique, dignified and beau-

A Marvel

WE have seen and visited theatres in many sections of the country, but never, in my memory, did we receive the impression of marvel-ousness that we did when we entered the Fisher theatre in Detroit. The gorgeousness of its decorations and furnishings, the motif of its design, a motif decidedly unusual yet not gaudy, give to the theatre an individual personality.

When you talk with folks in Detroit you hear this: "If you haven't seen the Fisher, don't leave the city until you have."

"Never were truer words spoken. It is a great architectural achievement, and in the accompanying pages of pictures and description there is sufficient evidence.

These temples were the sanctuaries where their gods were worshipped, where the first fruits of the harvest were offered, incense burned and occasions of great importance or dire need, human sacrifices were made. The Maya built the first astronomical observatories in America—round towers of cut stone raised on high terraces, so that their observation chambers would be above the level of the surrounding forest and command the distant horizon.

ber, entirely without the aid of metal tools, all their carving having been done with stone chisels and mauls. Nor had their sculptors such fine-grained cutting stone as the Parian and Carraran marbles of Greece and Italy, the limestone of southern Mexico and Central America being of an inferior quality in comparison. Yet competent art critics have pronounced

Maya sculpture as one of the world’s greatest examples of the plastic art.

“Sculpture among the ancient Maya, as it was in ancient Egypt and Greece, was always painted, and the Maya palette was composed of more than a dozen colors: several shades of red, several blues, several yellows, a jade green, orange, brown, white and black. In addition to coloring their sculptures, the walls of their temples, both outside and inside, were painted with elaborate scenes—battles, human sacrifices, religious processions, daily occupations, such as grinding corn, cooking, boating, swimming and fishing, all set forth with a sureness of brush and a simplicity of delineation strongly suggestive of the modernistic movement in art.

“In addition to these major arts, the Maya had many minor crafts in which they were extraordinarily skilled. They excelled in the carving of jade, their most precious material, fashioning this hard and glassy stone into beautiful earrings, pendants, beads and pectorals. They wove gorgeous robes and cloaks of feathers, the iridescent a maximum of labor to remove the excess grease. The benzine polish works the easiest, but has the two disadvantages of leaving a coating of powder in the scratches and depressions or corners, and leaves no protecting film of any kind. The water solvent type containing an ammonia soap works freely, leaves no powdery residue and does leave a thin film of oil (soap) to protect the surface.

“Fundamentally all metal polishes are made not only to give a polish but also to clean, and to some types to leave an extremely light protective coating after the lustre has been produced.

“The ideal polish is one which is easily applied, acts quickly, removes grime and incrustations, imparts a high lustre, dries out and does not scratch, is harmless to the metal as well as to the hands, and which leaves an invisible protecting film after the polishing has been completed.

“Some polishes on the market are very quick acting, even on heavily corroded metals, but frequently the abrasives are coarse or sharp, and for this reason cut the corrosion rapidly, but at the same time the surface of the metal is also cut and scratched. On the other hand, a polish containing a very fine abrasive, while it will not scratch or cut the metal, acts slowly on incrustations or corroded metal.

“It is necessary, therefore, to choose a polish suited to the work in hand. If the metal to be cleaned is badly corroded and coated, and the main purpose is to remove this, a rather gritty abrasive will answer, but for keeping a high lustre on metal surfaces that are cleaned daily, or very frequently, only a very finely divided and soft abrasive will produce the desired results.

“Our No. 3 Metal Polish is of the water type and flows readily from a can or bottle, making it easy to gauge the amount desired, spreads readily on the metal, wipes off easily and imparts a high lustre without scratching. In addition, the polish contains an oil soap which remains as an extremely thin protective film after polishing and wiping, and this property tends to delay atmospheric tarnishing. In using this polish, apply with a soft cloth, rubbing always in one direction, and polishing only a small area at a time. If a circular or cross motion is used in polishing, a much less brilliant lustre will result. After rubbing well for a time, wipe the metal clean with another cloth and finish with a third cloth, which will remove the last traces of polish left by the second cloth.”

“The anomalous position of Publix in the manufacturing field, it is interesting to note, is analogous to that of the general who sent a message to headquarters saying, “All’s well here. We have the enemy bringing up their big guns to prevent us from retaking what they won yesterday.” Publix doesn’t like its position—would like to get out of it—but until it can, it makes the best of it. Like its recalcitrant employees, the circuit has been coerced into making such a large number of its supplies. Over the highest officials is the big boss, profits, supreme chairman of the board of every commercial organization.

Publix officials say that they would gladly give up manufacturing if they could buy as good material at prices somewhere near

The advent of “talking movies” with its sensitive sound recording instruments, imposing a restriction for absolute silence in the studio; and the demand for greater economy in the lighting of studio-of-studio sets—has resulted in the development of a new form of Klieglights for motion picture photography, in which high-candle-power incandescent lamps are used for the light source. These new Kliegs furnish brilliant evenly diffused light, high in actinic qualities, permitting photography with clearness of detail, full color values, sharp definition, and freedom from sound interference. They are absolutely noiseless in operation and cause no disturbance in the recording of sound photography. They are efficient in light control and utilization; afford complete command over the direction, diffusion, and divergence of the light beam; are light in weight; can be easily and quickly handled; operate on the service line, whether a. c. or d. c.; and introduce economies in current consumption, production time, and labor requirements. They are modern in every respect, adapted to present-day studio conditions, and furnish the kind and quality of light required in this new era of motion picture photography.

Write for Bulletin No. 101, which fully describes and illustrates these new Klieg studio lights—and explains how they are used in motion picture and sound photography.

those which their present costs represent. In fact, they say, several items have been discontinued as a result of the agreement of manufacturers to furnish them at a satisfactory price. They insist that their attitude toward vendors is simply one of “show us and we'll buy.”

The theatres furnished with supplies regularly number about 600. All of them are owned wholly or in part by Publix and subsidiaries, or are affiliated under some financial or other agreement. It is the latter portion which provide a constant check-up on the quality and prices of Publix supplies, for they are under their own management and can buy any brand of supplies they wish to. They are furnished Publix products at approximately the cost of manufacture and distribution.

The major distribution point is Chicago, where the central warehouse and the factory and laboratory are located. Other points of distribution are Dallas, Atlanta, New York and Boston. But from the Chicago warehouse supplies go out to about 400 of the 600 houses.

The theatres of B & K are considered the best adapted in the circuit as a testing ground for Publix products, because of their concentration. B & K houses, including those of its subsidiaries, Lubliner & Trinz and Great States, number somewhere in the vicinity of 150, all of them in Chicago and other parts of Illinois. The distance between them and headquarters is short, and trials and reports can be carried out accurately and swiftly. Thus it is that the research laboratory and factory are under the immediate supervision of B & K.

There are 15 employees in the laboratory, factory and Chicago warehouse. The warehouse is under the management of W. F. Nortman, while G. L. Masse is in charge of manufacturing.

* * *

The manufacturing department and warehouse are a part of the Chicago Purchasing division. The headquarters, of course, is at the Publix home office in New York. Frank Meyer, ass’t secy. of Famous-Lasky-Players and general director of purchasing, heads the department. An important feature of the Publix purchasing methods is the functioning of a committee composed of Meyer and Publix executives, called the “standardization committee.” This committee meets at intervals to discuss various products on the market and to decide which are the best, so that buying may be concentrated on them in order to be able to buy in large enough lots to get a sizable discount. The Chicago purchasing department alone handles about 150 orders a day, which amounts in dollars to about $100,000 a week, and total Publix purchases amount to several times those figures.

It is a story of our time—this story of Publix Products. An organization gets so big that it can do things for itself better and more cheaply—it is the way of modern business. So perhaps it is not so strange after all to find the word “Publix” as a brand name on a can of metal polish. But it’s an interesting thing to think about when watching a Publix show.

Caution Is Necessary In Entering into Leases

By LEO T. PARKER

SINCE many theatre owners enter into long term lease contracts with privileges of erecting a theatre on the leased property, the recent case of Patterson v. Butterfield, 221 N. W. 293, presents unusually valuable information. Here it was disclosed that a landowner leased to a theatre organizer certain lots for a period of 99 years. The important clauses in the lease contract are, as follows:

"Said lessee (theatre owner) does hereby agree that he will, within a period of ten (10) years from and after the commencement of this lease, remove the building now on said premises, and will erect or cause to be erected on said premises a building of first-class modern fire-proof construction, and shall be adapted for mercantile, apartment, store, hall, hotel, or theatre purposes, or any combination of any one or more of such purposes. The said lessee (theatre owner) further covenants and agrees that the total cost of said building to be erected shall not be less than one hundred twenty-five thousand dollars ($125,000)."

"Before any contracts shall be let or work commenced for the construction of said new building said lessee covenants and agrees to furnish lessors competent detailed plans and specifications of said new building prepared by a competent, reputable and licensed architect then employed by or in the employ of the lessee, together with an estimate of said architect of the cost of such building, which said plans and specifications shall be and become the property of said lessors."

"Lessees further agrees that said new building shall be well and substantially built and erected and constructed and finished in a good, thorough, and workmanlike manner."

"It is mutually agreed that the lessee will not materially alter, tear down or destroy any buildings at any time upon said demised premises without the consent in writing of the said lessors except as herein otherwise expressly provided." * * *

The landowner contemplated that the theatre organizer would erect a theatre upon the land without delay. One year afterward, the theatre organizer began preparation to proceed with the erection of a theatre building, but soon thereafter certain events occurred which affected the theatrical situation and which caused him to abandon for the time being the construction of the theatre. In the same year, this theatre proprietor entered into a sublease with the owner of several oil and gasoline stations under which the latter was permitted to construct a gasoline and oil station on the leased property. This lease was for five years with the privilege reserved to the theatre proprietor to terminate it after one year. The sublease immediately began the construction of the gasoline station. The owner of the lots instituted legal proceedings and asked the Court to grant an order restraining the construction on the premises of any new building or other structure except as specifically provided for in the lease with the theatre organizer.

The theatre proprietor contended that by the terms of the lease he was free to use the lot for any purpose for the ten year period specified in the contract provided he constructed the theatre building specified in the lease, within the ten year period. It is interesting to observe that the higher Court held the theatre proprietor within his legal rights in subletting the land for the erection of a gasoline station for the first part of the ten year period, saying:

"It is a rule of construction that all grants must be construed reasonably and in the light of the surrounding circumstances. The object to be arrived at is to ascertain clearly the intention of the parties. But in applying these rules, due regard must be had for the rights and obligations of the respective parties as set forth in the express terms of the instrument. The intent of the parties to a written lease is to be found by an examination of the lease, and parol evidence of the understanding of the parties is inadmissible to vary its terms. This lease was carefully prepared by able attorneys who represented the respective parties. If the lessors had in mind that it would be to their advantage to require the lessee to construct the new building as soon as he removed the one then on the premises or within a limited time thereafter, it would have been a simple matter to have so provided in the lease: but there is no such provision. And such a construction ought not to be placed on this lease because it would not only add to the contract a provision not within its terms, but it would give to it a meaning in direct conflict with the express provision whereby the lessee is given 10 years within which to erect the new building. The removal of the old building was a part of the performance of the lease; but there is no logical reason for saying that because the lessee has performed to this extent he must 'proceed with reasonable speed to the erection of the theatre building.'" * * *

In this important and valuable department of "Better Theatres," Mr. Parker will offer interesting court decisions bearing upon "The Law of Theatre Insurance." This article will explain important points of the law by which theatre owners will be pre-warned against acts which are likely to prevent payment of policies.

Mr. Parker's monthly review of higher court decisions affecting the motion picture theatre and kindred undertakings are published exclusively in "Better Theatres."

Seller of Equipment Bound To Return Minor's Purchase Money

Few persons realize that a minor may cancel the other party's acts to fulfill the obligations, whereas the minor if he desires to do so may refuse to carry out his assumed obligations.

For illustration, in Roeper v. Danese, 221 N. W. 506, it was disclosed that a woman and her minor son entered into a contract whereby they leased a motion picture theatre from their owner. They also signed a contract of sale to purchase certain equipment for the theatre at a stipulated price of $2,500 upon which $2,500 was paid in cash. Seven hundred seventy-nine dollars and sixteen cents of this $2,500 comprised the purchase price of the equipment and the mother who paid the amount, giving a mortgage on the equipment for the balance. The sellers foreclosed the mortgage given by the mother, to recover the balance due, and repossessed the theatre and the equipment.

Soon afterward the minor decided that he wanted the $779.16 returned to him and he brought suit to disaffirm the contract to purchase the motion picture theatre and to recover the money paid by him on the purchase price, saying:

"The actual consideration by the minor to the purchase price was $779.16, which comprised his savings bank account. This was contributed by transferring the same to the defendant, his mother, who gave her own check to the defendants (sellers). There is no evidence to show actual notice to the defendants of the amount of the minor's contribution. The evidence

The S-M dynamic speaker, now announced for the first time, establishes still more firmly the superiority of S-M sound amplifying equipment. A speaker supreme in its ability to handle without distortion an amazingly large amount of power from S-M top-quality amplifiers like the one in Mr. Dorau's Princess Theatre. A cluster of four to six S-M speakers mounted on a suitable baffle, supplied by an S-M 690 amplifier, is the last word in sound equipment for 1,000 to 2,000 seat theatres.

Facts On Sound
A large number of S-M 685 Unipac amplifiers have been used by the U.S. shipping board at county and state fair exhibits.

The two largest manufacturers of theatrical phonographs have standardized upon S-M amplifiers.

One independent telephone company covering an entire state conducted a subscriber-program wire service thru S-M rack-and-panel amplifiers.

The observation car of President-elect Hoover's train on his pre-election trip was equipped with a power amplifier built of S-M products.

The laboratories of the largest telephone makers of the world have found S-M audio transformers to be unequalled (unofficially).

More S-M audio apparatus is sold to discriminating engineers and professional radio setbuilders than that of any competitive make.
SOUND IN THE THEATRE

Here Are Facts To Know About SOUND AMPLIFICATION

By HUGH S. KNOWLES*

Fortunate, in this age of Sound, is the motion picture exhibitor who has had time during the past few years to be a radio fan in at least a small way, for to him the principal processes and appliances involved in sound equipment of the present day are to a large extent "an old story."

This does not mean that sound reproduction as we know it in the motion picture theatre of today is an "offshoot of radio" as is often alleged. A better way to put it is that theatrical sound reproduction and radio broadcasting are both outgrowths of the same all-importance— the vacuum tube. As a matter of fact, vacuum tubes were used by the telephone companies long before they found wide application in radio transmission and reception.

The difference of opinion existing among theatre owners on the sound question is aptly illustrated by two stories recently told. One man operated a theatre which had exactly 330 seats. Becoming "sold on sound" he bravely signed a contract for one of the standard synchronized systems at a cost slightly over $11,000. When the time came to deliver this equipment, 30 of the 330 seats had to be removed from the theatre in order to make room for the sound installation—thus reducing to exactly

Fig. 1. A small amplifier of moderate cost, suitable for houses up to 600 seating capacity.

300 the number of seats available to meet the increased "nut!"

Another view was taken by a New York exhibitor according to the tale printed a few weeks ago in a trade paper. Operating a theatre double the size mentioned above, he installed a non-synchronized turntable machine with a good amplifier and a microphone in his office. Calling upon his own histrionic prowess, together with that of his pianist and an obliging neighbor, and making careful observation upon the principal synchronized productions as they made their appearance in large Broadway houses, he put into practice (according to the story) a highly profitable policy of speaking all the "talking" into the microphone in his office, and thence into the same loud-speaker which could also be operated at will from phonograph records.

Without for a moment undertaking to recommend the second of these two policies, any more than the first, it may not be amiss to remark that the canny exhibitor will do well to take counsel with the best radio service man or custom-builder in his town before mortgaging his home to get "sound."

At the outset, it should be made clear that whatever the source from which amplified sound proceeds—whether from a phonograph pickup, or from a microphone from a radio set detector tube, or from the photo-electric cell of a film-track device, the process of sound amplification is essentially the same. It is, moreover, essentially the same as has been commonly carried on in radio receivers and telephone-line amplifiers, ever since the vacuum tube came into use.

True, there have been various types of coupling devices employed between the two or three or more "stages" of amplification—resistance coupling, transformer coupling, and other types. There has been, also, great improvement in transformer design, and it is to this improvement, together with better loud-speakers, that much of the present success of sound amplification is due. Fundamentally, however, we repeat—it is worth repeating—that the function of a sound amplifier is exactly the same, no matter whether the source of electric current which carries the sound vibrations is a microphone, a radio receiver, a phonograph, or a strip of film. Equally true—and equally important—the required characteristics for a first-class sound amplifier are exactly the same whether the sound is synchronized with a motion picture or not.

The first of these requirements, it may well be said, is good vacuum tubes—well designed and well manufactured, and having the necessary ample power capacity to fill an auditorium without the distortion which happens when the tubes are "overloaded" through forcing them to deliver more than their proper or rated volume. Until recent months, there was not generally available to the public any good reliable power tube of sufficient power capacity to be of much use to the theatre man. Since the amount of loudness or sound intensity which can be obtained with any amplifying system without ruinous distortion is limited absolutely by the size and number of the tubes employed, it will be seen that this was a very important obstacle to the general use of amplified sound. Recently, however, there has come upon the market a power tube commonly known as the "250 type," which is of sufficient power capacity so that one such tube will deliver enough volume to fill a small motion picture theatre quite satisfactorily, while two such tubes (connected in what is called the "push-pull circuit") so as to provide about three times the power of a single type will give adequate coverage of good-sized houses.

The amplifier itself is then simply an electrical device into which one may feed the weak current developed in the input device (microphone, phonograph, phonograph pick-up, etc.) and which will amplify it through one or more preliminary stages, so that when finally fed into the power tubes, it will be strong enough to operate these tubes to their full capacity, without having lost its original tone values during the process. It is this last requirement which mainly distinguishes a good amplifier from a poor one.

The musical notes, in a typical score, consist of sound vibrations varying in frequency from about 50 for the lowest notes produced on a double-bass or tuba up to 3,000 or more per second for the overtones or harmonics which give beauty to vocal and instrumental tones of all pitches. Thus, reducing the problem to its simplest terms, a good amplifier is one which amplifies all notes equally from the lowest to the highest. This ideal of perfection is, of course, never absolutely obtained in any amplifier, and it would be useless to obtain it unless corresponding perfection were possible in loud speakers, since it is equally the function of the loud speaker to be exactly as sensitive to the lowest note as it is to the highest.

In most sound installations the amplifier is superior to the speaker in this matter of equal response to all frequencies. Fortunately the ear is a very imperfect mechanism; it will tend to supply notes that are missing, and smooth out reasonable inequalities in the reproduction. Were it not for this the quality of ordinary telephone conversation would seem terribly poor since it can be demonstrated that this is very inferior to a good sound installation.

There are admittedly large variations in the quality secured in different installations. These are due to variations in the "pickup," amplifier, speakers, and in the acoustics of the theatre itself. It is important, first, to see that the different components are designed to work together, and second, that the equipment is what the theatre calls for. The latter point is frequently underrated.

The reproduction is influenced by the volume of the house (that is, number of cubic feet), the total seating capacity and average number in the audience, the nature of the walls, ceilings, floor and draperies, and by the volume or "loudness" used. The first factors influence the "loading" or damping of the house, and affect to some extent the relative output of high and low notes. The "loudness" helps determine the fidelity, since the ear is accustomed to hear a certain sound intensity, and when this intensity is raised it affects not only the intensity, but the quality. What should be striven for is natural volume. Many an otherwise good installation is spoiled by having the operator adjust it for excessive volume.

The actual appearance of several types of amplifiers employing the moderate-priced and readily-obtainable "250 tube" is shown in the three photographs. Fig. 1, representing the Silver-Marshall 678PD Phonograph Amplifier, illustrates one reasonable solution of the sound problem for the small house, where profitable purchase of high-priced synchronized equipment is out of the question. The amplifier is contained in a steel case about 3½ inches wide, 6 inches high, and 17 inches long. Projecting from its top are the three tubes required. The two large ones are the 250 power tube and the rectifier tube necessary to provide it with power from ordinary A.C. lighting systems. The small tube in the middle is the first-stage amplifying tube. For use with it there is required one dynamic speaker (see Fig. 4) which can be mounted on a large wooden board or on a suitable drop near the motion picture screen, the board serving as the baffle necessary to bring out the power of the low notes. The 678PD amplifier has plenty of power for a second speaker if the house requires it; this will be preferable in all but the smallest theatres. If only one speaker is used, it should be of the "110 volt D.C." type. For example, the Silver-Marshall type 851. If a second speaker is used, it should be of the A.C. type, a good example being the Silver-Marshall 850. The difference is due to the fact that the first speaker used requires no rectifier or choke—the small amplifier being especially designed to take care of these requirements within itself. Besides the amplifier, the tubes and the one or two speakers, all that is required is a phonograph pickup. These the exhibitor can readily secure. The small amplifier does not contain any volume control, the control being on the phonograph pickup being ordinarily all that is required in a small installation. It can be adapted for pickup from a radio receiver instead of phonograph, in a few seconds time, by changing a single wire to another binding post. It is not designed to take microphone input direct.

The fact should be made clear that tone quality is not sacrificed to cost in this small amplifier. The same grade of parts is used in it, the lower cost being due to the smaller volume of output obtainable.

For houses seating from 1,000 up to 3,000, the Silver-Marshall type 690, illustrated in Fig. 2, has just been announced, and is believed to represent a very important saving in cost over any first-quality equipment previously available. It amplifies through three stages instead of two, in order to work up the weak input obtainable from a phonograph pickup to the large output capacity of the two 250-type tubes used. A three-position switch is built in, allowing instant change from record pickup to microphone, or to radio receiver. If a double-throat, horn-type machine is used, its own switch takes care of changing from one turntable to the other, though if preferred, two of the three positions of the main switch may be used for phonograph pick-

A complete service for theatres using non-synchronous instruments

The demand of movie fans is for better MUSIC! To answer this demand, the makers of Brunswick Electrical Records have inaugurated a complete service to take care of the musical needs of theatres equipped with non-synchronous instruments. This service includes:

A special Record Library of 500 Brunswick Electrically Recorded Records. (The same selection on both sides of each record so that long use is assured.)

This library includes HURRIES, GALLOPS, MYSTERIOSOS, SOUND EFFECTS, ETC., ETC.

A special record for every emergency.

A cue sheet for every picture feature.

A cabinet in which to file all records.

A cue box, felt-lined, to hold records called for on the cue sheet. This has separate numbered compartment for each record.

Theatre owners! Send today for all information on this new Brunswick service. The attention to detail, the originality, the musical perfection that make the name BRUNSWICK mean good music everywhere, guarantee you PERFECT SATISFACTION in this important matter. The coupon below, filled in and mailed today, will bring you WITHOUT OBLIGATION all information about Brunswick’s great Library and Cue Sheet Service. Mail it now.

Theatre owners in every section of the country are faced with the problem of obtaining equipment for modern sound reproduction and supplying better music. This problem is now successfully met by the creative genius of Peter L. Jensen, who has had more than twenty years of experience in designing and building reproducers and in acoustic engineering.

The new Jensen Auditorium Speaker reproduces with tremendous volume and with a brilliance of tone quality never attained before. For exceptionally large theatres more than one reproducer may be necessary, but in any case a full round volume of sound is always assured—something unobtainable with small type dynamic cones.

Regardless of the amplifier you use, make certain that your theatre is equipped with the new Jensen Auditorium Speaker. Write or wire our nearest factory for complete information.

A SOUNa picture record cabinet, designed to minimize effort in the projection of sound pictures, has been announced by the Chicago Cinema Equipment Company. The cabinet contains 14 trays, each tray holding one disc. According to the company, the trays are so provided as to insure non-warping.

Dimensions of this steel cabinet are, 36 inches high, 18½ inches wide, and 17 inches deep.

ups instead of providing for radio reception. The knob seen at the upper left-hand corner in the photograph, directly above the switch, is a "fading control" by which the volume can be instantly adjusted to any degree of loudness or smoothly "faded" in or out.

Speaker equipment to handle the entire power output of this amplifier and to cover a 3,000 seat house may consist of from four to six dynamic speakers of the Silver-Marshall 850 (A. C.) type, mounted together on a single large baffle or drop, behind or near the screen.

The 690 Amplifier is built complete on a beautifully finished aluminum panel, which can be mounted if desired upon a standard Silver-Marshall "PA" rack. The situation on turntable and pickup equipment is just as described above.

Houses running above the 3,000 figure in capacity will in most cases require a more elaborate installation. For such theatres, as well as for amusement parks and other enterprises requiring coverage of crowds up to 30,000 or over, installations are provided of the so-called rack-and-panel type—each one designed to fill the exact requirements of the location in question, and built up of a suitable number of panels of various types.

It must be recognized that figures given here for house seating capacity as covering the size of sound amplifier required, are very rough, and not to be relied upon for any particular theatre; each house must be considered a separate problem in itself. But the data here given should be sufficient to give a general idea of equipment required to any exhibitor considering sound installation.

SOUND EFFECTS?
Brunswick Offers New Library

THE Brunswick Company has just placed on the market a library of 500 records of sound effects and musical accompaniment for disc machines.

The scope of this library is told in the subjoined announcement of the service:

"The Brunswick Company's announcement of a complete record and cueing service to theatres using non-synchronous instruments comes at a most opportune time. This service will greatly simplify the use of the numerous instruments already installed in theatres throughout the country and will break down a certain resistance which manufacturers of such instruments have met in selling their product heretofore.

"This library of 500 records includes such things as sound effects, burrs, gallops, mysteriosos, agitators, furies, etc., as well as innumerable fox toots, waltzes and theme songs. This enables the theatre to accompany any motion picture with appropriate music, and it does away with the necessity of playing just certain parts of records, as all of the Brunswick records can be started at the beginning and played through until the change of action or title.

"Furthermore, there are no vocal effects in any of these 500 records, and from time to time new theme songs and other necessary records will be added to this catalog to keep it right up to the minute. These additional records, however, will be listed on the Brunswick as 'Optional Substitution,' and all pictures will be cued by the Brunswick Company with the records in the original library of 500 records, thus allowing the theatre owner to use the new records or not, at will. Thus, the theatre purchasing the complete library is sure of having the records needed for all pictures.

"The Brunswick Company has gone back one year on picture releases, and will furnish cue sheets on any picture, providing the theatre gives them two weeks advance notice of the actual showing of that picture.

"This complete library and cueing service can be purchased on a cash or deferred payment basis...the records becoming the property of the theatre. It is interesting to note, here, that the Brunswick Company has been working on this library and on their Cueing Service, for the past four months, and has been recording various special effects needed for motion picture theatres, during that time. They have experimented by showing pictures in various houses, cued with their non-synchronous library, and have worked out a cue box to contain the records needed for the picture being shown, and a complete stock cabinet to contain the entire library with additional spaces for two hundred and fifty records, which is by far the most satisfactory filing and cueing system so far designed.

"Realizing the unusual wear these records will be subjected to in theatre use, the Brunswick Company geared their recording machine in such a way as to build up a thicker wall between the grooves, which will add to the life of a record.

"Furthermore, they have recorded the same selection on both sides of each record, thus giving each individual record double playing value, and making it much easier for the operator of the instrument, as he does not have to look closely at the title on the label of the record to ascertain which selection is needed. The Brunswick label is light yellow in color, the top half of which is left blank for the operator to mark in with soft pencil the cue number as given on the Brunswick cue sheet. This record, if numbered 'No. 1' is placed in the 'No. 1' compartment of the Brunswick cue box, the second record on the cue sheet is numbered 'No. 2' and placed in the 'No. 2' compartment of the cue box, etc. This cue box is a light portable rack felt lined and numbered from one to forty, and is intended to be placed on or near the non-synchronous instrument.
DUPLEX-O-PHONE

The feature of having six turn tables adds to the scope of the instrument. The four center turn tables are worked automatically—no operator being necessary, which feature alone is worth the price of the instrument. The instrument is also equipped with the two single turn tables, for cueing the picture.

On the DUPLEX-O-PHONE, you can play six different records within a second's notice, fading out one and bringing in the next tune instantaneously.

MASTER CONTROL

By this device, you can control the volume from the softest to the loudest tone. The DUPLEX-O-PHONE is also arranged to handle from one to four dynamic speakers, and each can be controlled individually from the other. This is a very important feature. By this control, the sound can be modulated to suit the show house. The instrument is equipped with a powerful amplifying unit, built to handle four speakers.

ELECTRIC COMPANY
ST. LOUIS
OFFICES IN THIRTY CITIES
ONE of the popular disc devices on the market is Motio-Tone, manufactured by the Gates Radio and Supply Company.

In describing the equipment, the company says:

"The Motio-Tone theatre dynamic speaker is not the ordinary commercial dynamic speaker, but is specially constructed for theatre purposes. The large baffle board, 24 by 48, is composed of special ingredients to get all the tones that are audible to the human ear, and we want to say to you that we would just like for you to hear the very lowest bass coming out of this speaker, and then jump to the very highest note on the scale, as clear and distinct as if the original were there in person, and we are not exaggerating it at all.

"The Motio-Tone power plant will handle any number of speakers. There are controls on the panel for six reproducers, also the volume and frequency are under control of the operator. No matter what the acoustic conditions or construction of any theatre, regardless of size, this power plant, together with the theatre dynamic reproducer, will give them the proper results.

"The motor board illustration shows the true Q device that is used exclusively on the Wonder Electrograph. The dial is graduated in quarter-inches for either 10, 12, or 18-inch records, making it simple for any operator to almost synchronize a picture from this True Q Device. All that is necessary is for the operator to know the records, and he can place the pick-up on any score desired.

\[ \text{Cramblet Company and Three Concerns Merged} \]

Announcement has been made of the merger of Cramblet Engineering Corporation, manufacturer of the Evenheeter and the Silent Flasher, with three other companies. The new corporation will be known as Time-O-

Stat Controls Company. The main office and factory will be at Elkhart, Ind., where the company owns a large tract of land and fine new buildings.

This new organization has increased resources for the continued development, accurate manufacture, and efficient marketing of its many products. The sign flashers formerly known as Hotchkiss Silent Flashers, will, in the future, be known as Time-O-Stat Silent Flashers. Evenheiters will also be a featured product.

P. K. Cramblet, formerly president of the Cramblet Engineering Corporation, is one of the vice presidents of the new company. Clifford Hotchkiss, originator of the flasher, and R. A. Grant, who has been in charge of sales, will also continue with the new company.

For the time being Time-O-Stat Silent Flashers will be built and distributed by the Cramblet Engineering Division of the new company, located at 256 Milwaukee Street, Milwaukee, Wis.
What Goes Into a Modern Theatre And What Each Item Costs

Not that your theatre needs to have all this theatre has. Just take out of these figures what you don't want. They still will give you a pretty accurate idea of what your investment will be

By GEORGE SCHUTZ

THE town had about 30,000 inhabitants. The theatre was to be a deluxe house, costing in the neighborhood of $350,000. As a matter of fact, its total cost proved to be only $329,553, which is making costs pretty much of a certainty. And because the costs were figured out, in both amounts per item and percentages of the total cost, it is possible to present a complete financial survey of an average theatre project, from which may be reckoned fairly closely what any other theatre might cost.

The architect of the house under discussion was John Eberson of Chicago and New York, and the figures to be presented are his. The theatre, designed in the usual Eberson manner, is highly decorative, carrying out his idea that theatres should be what the performance is, a medium of escape from the humdrum routine of real life. There is a stage of ample accommodations for metropolitan productions, lounges and similar deluxe house departments, besides space for shops. The theatre was to seat about 1,500. It came to seat 43 more than that.

The area of the lot available was 18,360 square feet. In the end, the amount used was 17,398 square feet.

Such, then, were the conditions under which the architect had to work. The figures to follow show the result. They represent a complete theatre, actually existing, and were compiled after the project was finished. They are thus an authentic accounting of the costs of a modern motion picture theatre, and by rejecting or accepting certain items, according to the needs of the proposed theatre, the prospective builder may determine pretty closely what his project is going to cost him.

The following figures further contribute to the general picture of the house under discussion:

- Floor area, rentable (stores and apartments), 4,627 square feet.
- Volume of theatre, 858,852 cubic feet.
- Number of stores, 5; number of apartments (11 rooms), 7.
- Number of seats on main floor, 1,123; in balcony, 420.
- Cubic feet of theatre per seat, approximately 495.

Figures in the financial review of the theatre are as follows:

- Cost of entire building, $254,440.
- Cost of equipment, $56,450.
- Architects' fee, $18,054.

Adding these figures, one gets the grand total of $329,553, as the ultimate cost of the project. Of that amount, $221,138 represents the cost of the theatre, and $33,311 the cost of the commercial part.

These figures immediately become applicable to other projects by reducing them to their respective relationships to the whole cost—this is, by showing the unit costs of each department of the project per cubic foot. These figures, in dollars, are as follows:

- Theatre and commercial section, .298.
- Commercial section alone, .350.
- Theatre section alone, .290.
- Theatre equipment, .274.
- Theatre section and equipment, .364.
- Theatre section, equipment and architect, .385.

The following figures are for the cost per seat:

- Theatre section, $143.150.
- Theatre equipment, $36.500.
- Theatre section and equipment, $179.650.
- Theatre section, equipment and architect, $191.000.

The figures given in the tables show the cost in dollars for each item of construction and equipment, and each item's percentage of the total cost.

"SOUND...EFFECTS"

dramatized by the

KILGEN WONDER ORGAN

Rare indeed is the motion picture patron who does not manifest a keener appreciation of the photoplay that is ‘synchronized’ by an artist whom they can see perform. The living organist has a greater ‘box office appeal’... his music is clearer in tone... living and vibrant... and the sound effects at his finger tips enable him to follow every screen movement realistically, and with startling animation. Among the effects dramatized by the Kilgen Wonder Organ are...

1. The Storm Scene —with crashes of thunder, driving rain, howling winds; so natural that your audience quivers in its seats!

2. Military Scenes
Marching feet, bugle calls; the scream of shells and bursting bombs, ‘No-Man’s Land’ with all its horrific sounds.

3. Church Bells
For wedding, funeral, or religious scenes. In a clear, ringing tone that no ‘sound’ picture could ever record.

4. Fire Engines
Theremotor’s snort, the shrill siren, the ominous gong. Unusual thrill effects for the Kilgen organist.

5. Hunting Scene
The trumpeter... the riders rushing through the brake... the baying of the hounds!

6. Symphony Orchestra
Every instrument... with a grand ensemble rich in power and beauty... on the Kilgen.

It took ‘sound’ pictures... and expensive, unsatisfactory equipment... to show you the possibilities of your own Kilgen Wonder Organ. A never-failing attraction to those who love musical perfection. For them, nothing can ever replace the Organ.

THE BATTERIES Vital Sound Equipment Unit

By F. H. RICHARDSON

[I am indebted to the Electric Storage Battery Company and Mr. John McGuinness for much of the data herein contained.]

It occurs to me that we have not yet treated of one hugely important unit in sound equipment, namely the storage batteries. I say "hugely important" because of the fact that unless the batteries function 100 per cent efficiently, then the rest of the apparatus cannot possibly do so.

Your storage batteries are nothing more or less than a subsidiary or secondary power source. By their use a dependable, steady and quiet source of current is assured which, on discharge, is entirely independent of the electric power supply.

Electric power has, of course, got to be put into the battery before any can be taken out. Putting electric power into a battery is called charging. Only direct current can be used to charge a battery so that if the power supply is alternating current, some device must be used to change the alternating current to direct current. This is usually done with a device called a rectifier.

What goes on in a storage battery is simple once you get the principle of the from the generator and cause a current to flow from these lead plates by connecting these two lead plates to a wire circuit.

He further found that the current he could obtain from the lead plates gradually diminished until it eventually stopped. By again connecting his two plates of lead to the generator as before, he found he could, after the generator had run for some time, again cause current to flow from these two lead plates.

This was the first storage battery as we know it today and it incorporates the fundamental principle of all so-called lead-acid batteries.

Now what went on inside Planté’s first storage cell? He found, after he had connected the two lead plates which were in the sulphuric acid and water mixture to the terminals of the generator and after the generator had run for some time, that a compound known as lead peroxide had been formed on the surface of the plate connected to the positive terminal of the generator, which he called the positive plate, and that the surface of the other plate, which he called the negative plate, was pure spongy lead.

He further found that when he disconnected his two lead plates from the generator and connected them to an electrical circuit, not only did current flow from the battery, but also the lead peroxide on one plate and the pure, spongy, lead of the other plate had reacted, chemically, with the sulphuric acid of the solution and that he had two plates with a coating of lead sulphate on them. He found then that the lead plates were completely covered with lead sulphate.

When again he connected these sulphated... plates to the generator, he found that, although the two lead plates were back again in their original condition, one being covered with lead peroxide and the other pure spongy lead.

From the above we learn the principles of the lead-acid storage battery, which are as true today as the day Planté discovered them in France over 40 years ago.

He reasoned that when he connected his two lead plates to the generator, it was the electric current flowing from the generator which had made the lead peroxide to form on the positive plate and made the other plate pure spongy lead.

Then when he disconnected the generator and then connected these two plates to an electric circuit, the current which flowed was caused by a chemical action in the battery. That is, the sulphuric acid combined chemically with both the positive and negative plate to form lead sulphate on each. The electric power was given off as this chemical reaction went on and when the chemical action stopped, due to all the lead peroxide of the positive and pure lead of the negative plate being converted to lead sulphate, the electric power also stopped.

We can, therefore, understand that the current which flows from a charged battery through an electric circuit, is produced by the chemical action which goes on in a battery; that is to say, the chemical formation of lead sulphate in both plates. The battery is discharged when the current ceases to flow, which means that the chemical action in the battery has stopped. We can now reverse the procedure, force current through the battery and convert the plates back again into their original chemical condition. This is called charging.

When the current has been forced through the battery long enough, the positive plate is again in the chemical form of lead peroxide and the negative plate is again pure lead. In other words, the lead sulphate which was in the plates when they were in their discharged condition, has been driven out of the plates by the electric charging current. The battery is then called charged.

I might say that in practice we never let the battery discharge until it will give no more current. We find that if this is done, injury is done to the plate, hence we always stop the discharge at a point which has been found safe.

Now a word about charging. Only direct current can be used; never alternating current. When the power supply is A.C. it is necessary to change it to direct current for charging purposes, either by means of a motor generator set having a D.C. generator or a rectifier.

In practice, we have found that we cannot charge at too high a rate. We can only carry on the chemical action called charging just as fast as the plates will respond. A high rate will do no good. On the contrary, it will heat up the battery plates and work injury to them. The charging rates to be used are always given by the manufacturer. They should not be exceeded.

Now as to the actual construction of a commercial battery, such as is supplied to theatres for use with sound equipment. Now, inasmuch as the amount of current which is obtained depends upon the amount of chemical action between the positive and negative plates immersed in the mixture of sulphuric acid and water, called the electrolyte, you will see that the more plates and the more electrolyte we have the greater is the current that we can get. The more current we will be able to obtain. So we join together a number of positive plates and call it a positive group. We do the same for the negative plates. We now have available more plate surface and therefore more opportunity for chemical action, hence we have a battery with greater capacity.

Of course it is necessary to insulate the positive plates from the negative plates when they are put together as shown in Figures 2 to 7, in the battery itself and it would discharge internally, or else we would have a short circuit. Figure 7 is the complete unit of positive and negative plates which interlock—a positive plate between each two negatives. We do this by putting thin pieces of wood, called separators, between each other. Sometimes a mixture of sulphuric acid and water, which is the electrolyte. The storage battery cell is then connected to a charging source and charger until it is charged. Then converted chemically to lead peroxide for the positive, and pure spongy lead for the negative. The storage battery cell is then ready for service.

Now, a word about specific gravity readings as taken with a hydrometer syringe. There are very good reasons for taking these readings, because from them we can tell exactly what state of charge or discharge the battery is in. Here is the explanation:

Chemically pure sulphuric acid has a specific gravity of 1.835, water being taken as the standard, with a specific gravity of pure water 1. There is almost twice as heavy as water. Electrolyte in a battery of the type you use is about 1.285 to 1.300 specific gravity. This specific gravity will be changing from pure acid of 1.835 specific gravity with water of 1.000 specific gravity. The resultant mixture being about 1.285 to 1.300 specific gravity. This change can be caused by the sulphuric acid of the electrolyte of a battery is heavier than water. Now, on discharge, the sulphuric acid is converted to sulphuric acid and electrolyte mixture acts on the plates. In other words, sulphuric acid leaves the electrolyte mixture to combine with the positive and negative plates in the same way that the sulphuric acid was the heavy part of the electrolyte, the mixture will, on discharge, get more like water. That is, the specific gravity of the electrolyte will be lowered.

From specific gravity readings, therefore, we can tell just how much sulphuric acid has combined with the plates and can tell how much of the battery is discharged. Of course it follows that we can also tell when the battery is fully charged, because the specific gravity reading will then be indicating that all the sulphate has been driven out of the plates into the mixture.

If the directions and instructions herein contained are faithfully followed by the projectionist in charge, there will be little or no battery trouble. The batteries are well and ruggedly made. There is but little about them to cause trouble. Battery trouble is almost invariably the result of carelessness or neglect in some form.

You cannot mistreat or neglect storage batteries and expect to have them serve you well, provided you serve them well. If you do not, then they have a way of getting back at you, and they will do it, too. I emphasize this matter because of the fact that battery trouble is almost invariably the fault of the projectionist.

True, there is always the possibility of some individual cell having a structural weakness, but under the rigid inspection and tests all parts are subjected to before being assembled in a battery such a case is so very, very rare that they almost may be said to not exist.

Care of batteries is a simple matter, but it must be done thoroughly and well, and must be done before trouble has a chance to start. Once it has started—well, that is another story.

Moral: Do your duty by the batteries and they will do your duty by you.
Care of Batteries

First—BATTERY LOCATION: In the process of charging, storage batteries give off hydrogen gas in considerable quantities. This gas is inflammable, and when mixed with air is explosive. It is, therefore, extremely hazardous to be in the vicinity. It therefore follows that batteries must be located in a well ventilated room, where the gas can escape. They must be so located that they will be readily accessible for examination and care. As has been said, the battery gives off quantities of explosive gas when charging. There may be more or less of this gas in the cells when they are not on charge. It therefore follows that any system which is opened will be accompanied by a spark, such as a candle, match, lantern, lighted cigar, cigarette or pipe near the batteries. This is particularly true while the battery is on charge, or for half an hour thereafter.

The man who attempts to examine the water level of a cell, using a lighted match or other open light source, has no one but himself to blame if there is an explosion and he is badly burned or blinded for life.

If possible, batteries should be located on a table or shelf about the height of an ordinary kitchen table. If possible, have this shelf or table near the entrance to the room where it is lighted. Plenty of light and convenience in location makes for frequency and regularity of examination and care. If the batteries are located away from the entrance to the room, they almost certainly will not get as good care as they would if placed where the location conseguir was well lighted. That last is just plain common sense.

SECOND—SPECIAL LIGHT SOURCE: Even though the battery be located in a well lighted place, a light source will be needed to examine the water level in the cells. This may properly be (a) an incandescent lamp attached to a cord of sufficient length to permit of its use at each of the cells. This lamp should have a glass or porcelain opaque or semi-opaque shade to direct the light downward—glass or porcelain because the lamp shade would set up danger of short circuiting the cells by coming into contact with the connecting bars. It will be well to wind the lamp socket itself with Insulation tape or to use a porcelain socket. (b) A concentrated beam flashlight, with all its metal parts wound with rubber or cloth or asbestos tape, so that if it be inadvertently laid down on top of a battery no harm will be done. This lamp should be attached, by means of a light chain, through a light rubber hose for insulating purposes, to some nearby stationary object. This is so that when the lamp is wanted it will be there. An incandescent lamp, as above described, is best, however, because a flashlight may be found to be dead just when the lamp is most needed, with consequent postponement of needed inspection or battery care.

THIRD—CLEANLINESS: It is said that cleanliness is next to Godliness. I don’t know about that, but certainly cleanliness around storage batteries is next to good service by the batteries, and dampness and dirt is "next to trouble" in a thousand.

The man who permits dust and dirt to accumulate on his battery tops, or who spoils water on the tops of his batteries, is asking trouble. It is to remain there, is issuing an engraved invitation to Old Man Trouble to step in and sit down.

Keep the tops of your batteries scrupulously clean and dry. If in filling a cell you accidentally slop water on its top, wipe it off perfectly dry as soon as possible. EXAMINE THE BATTERY TOPS AT A REGULAR SET TIME EACH WEEK. By that is meant that some certain day should be set apart as "BATTERY EXAMINATION DAY." Clean the battery exterior thoroughly, particularly the tops. Draw a cloth under all connecting bars to remove accumulations of dust and moisture.

A DIRTY BATTERY TOP SPEAKS IN ELOQUENT TERMS OF A SLOPPY, NEGLIGENT MAN IN CHARGE.

Accumulations of dust, dirt and (or) moisture on the battery tops will set up current leakage, which in turn sets up an effect in the amplifiers made manifest at the horns in the form of noise. The noise is referred to as "surface noise." This is equally true of any and all systems of reproduction.

CLEANING SOLUTION—A cloth dampened with ordinary household ammonia is excellent for cleaning battery tops, because not only is the ammonia cleaning, but also it serves to neutralize any battery acid (electrolyte) which may be there—drops from tip of hydrometer syringes, etc. An equally efficient liquid having similar action is a solution of bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) and water in the proportion of a pound of soda to a gallon of water.

WARNING—In using ammonia or soda, be careful that none gets into the battery. The action of both, as I have said, is to neutralize the acid, which would, of course, weaken the electrolyte, and this amount entering. Don’t wet your cleaning cloth soaking wet. Just dampen it well with the ammonia or soda solution, and you will have no trouble.

After cleaning with ammonia or bicarbonate solution, wipe off the battery with clean water and wipe dry.

IMPORTANT—Should any amount of electrolyte be spilled out on the battery top, first having made certain that all filling plugs are tightly in place, wash it off with the ammonia or soda solution, wiping the top afterward with water, and then wipe perfectly dry when you have done.

Fourth—BATTERY TERMINALS: When a new battery reaches you its terminals will be smooth and to be coated with vaseline. This is to prevent corrosion. It should not be disturbed, except there be signs of deposit. If deposit appears, wipe off all vaseline. Disconnect the terminals. Soak the battery with all deposit, until the metal is clean and bright.

Next, having made sure the stud and interior of the clamp is clean, wipe it with a clean rag. Then apply ordinary ammonia or soda solution, grease stud and interior of clamp with vaseline and bolt the two tightly.

Coat the whole terminal with vaseline and the joint is the best that any clamp and nuts once each week to be sure they are tight. A terminal not perfectly tight makes itself manifest in the form of noise in the theatre horns. Sometimes these terminal connections loosen up, so go over them regularly and tighten them up if necessary.

Fifth—ADDING WATER: Observe figure 6. The maximum water level is just below the lower rim of the filling hole, as shewn in the figure. As to battery water, there is a marked difference between the fact that water may be used from the water mains of many cities, even though the pipes be of iron, and the water from the New York City water mains is safe for battery use. The water from the Borough of Queens, however, is artesian water and is not fit for use in batteries. The water from your own authority service may be safe, also it may not be.

Here is the rule: If you are in doubt about the water, write The Electric Storage Battery Service, Alleghany avenue and Nineteenth street, Philadelphia, Pa., and they will advise you definitely, asking for a quart sample of water for analysis is necessary. This should be checked up once a year thereafter.

The rule with regard to water is: USE ONLY DISTILLED WATER IN THE BATTERIES UNLESS YOUR CITY OR OTHER WATER SUPPLY HAS BEEN TESTED WITHIN ONE YEAR AND PROCLAIMED SAFE FOR BATTERY USE. This may be supplemented by the statement that rain water from a shingled roof is always perfectly safe to use. In collecting this water, allow time for the roof to be washed clean and collect the water in glass or porcelain vessels.

The foregoing advice comes from the Electric Storage Battery Company (Exide) engineering department and frankly upset all my own ideas concerning battery water. I had always heretofore been taught that battery suicide to use any water which had been in contact with metal. This, I now learn from unquestioned authority, is not true. As I have said, water from iron pipes may be all right—also it may not. IT MUST NOT BE USED UNTIL ANALYZED AT A LABORATORY AND PROCLAIMED SAFE.

Never permit the water level to drop below the tops of the plates. In glass jars fill to the water line. With rubber jars, fill to just below the lower end of the plates.

To allow the water to drop below the tops of the plates permits as much of the plates as are exposed to the air to dry out and thereby that water is lost. There is no chemical reaction, hence be dead. This will, of course, reduce the battery capacity in direct proportion to the percentage of plate area exposed.

Once rendered dead in this manner, the surface can only again be made active by an elaborate process at the factory, and since this would be prohibitive in cost, the effect is that the battery is permanently disabled. Moreover, there is a permanent deterioration of that portion of the plates which has dried Lonely air-mail beacons now light themselves!

You may have read that Kohler Electric Plants, as installed in many theatres for emergency lighting, "cut in" automatically, without anybody's having to visit the plant, the moment the city current fails. You may have wondered how any machine could be so humanly intelligent.

Yet that's nothing to a Kohler Electric Plant. Isolated beacons that mark the U. S. Air Mail routes over uninhabitable mountains and deserts are lighted by Kohler plants that start at sunset and stop at sunrise, "untouched by human hands." The remarkable Kohler automatic switch, a small starting battery, and an astronomical timing device work this modern miracle. One hundred Kohler Electric Plants thus equipped have just been purchased for the air mail by the United States government, to be added to hundreds already in this life-guarding service.

No less dependable is the protection, tested and proved, that the Kohler Electric Plant will bring your theatre—a sure, automatic source of brilliant, unflinching light that will "save the show" should storm, flood or accident interrupt the regular current supply. Here is insurance against loss of revenue and danger of panic—and the premium is low indeed compared with the risk.

Kohler Electric Plants are approved by the National Fire Underwriters' Laboratories. They generate standard 110 volt currents; have no large storage batteries. There are models for theatres of all sizes, including rural houses where there is no central-station service. The coupon below will bring full information.

January 19, 1929, out, and this will in time operate to kill the battery.

Time to Add Water—It is best to add water just before charging, because in the process of charging the water becomes thoroughly incorporated with the electrolyte. Never use a battery immediately after charging. Let it stand for at least half an hour. When charging there is bubbling and throwing off of gas. This process continues sufficiently for some time after charging has ceased to set up noise in the horns. Half an hour is sufficient to permit all gas to pass away.

Warning—Never add water immediately before or during the running of a show. If you do the theatre horns will quickly advise you of your error.

Sixth—Hydrometer Readings: A hydrometer reading is a reading of the specific gravity of the electrolyte. It really is a reading of the percentage of acid which has been removed from the electrolyte and incorporated in the plates in the process of use. It is a reading of the relative weakness or strength of the electrolyte.

Hydrometer readings should be made carefully. It is not a question of moving the syringe tip in, sucking up some electrolyte and giving the scale a hasty glance.

In taking a reading, of course you must fill the syringe with electrolyte sufficiently to float the hydrometer bulb therein contained clear of the bottom. Be careful, however, not to draw out sufficient liquid to cause the bulb stem to touch the top.

Release all the pressure on rubber bulb when taking the reading. If the water level is so low that you get enough liquid out to float the hydrometer bulb, then add water, but do not make a reading until after charging the battery. A reading taken immediately after adding water would be entirely worthless. In fact it would be worse than worthless, because it would be deceiving.

Careful—Never over-discharge a battery—permit it to run too low before recharging. As has been explained, lead sulphate is formed both on the positive and negative plates in the process of discharging a battery—while it is working, producing power. This sulphate occupies more space or volume than either the lead peroxide of the positive plates or the pure lead of the negative plates.

Provision has been made in the plate construction for taking care of a part of the necessary expansion this condition compels, but if the discharge be carried too far—the battery run too low—sulphate in excess of the provision will be forced into the plates and they will thus be permanently injured and their life shortened. NEVER PERMIT YOUR BATTERIES TO FALL BELOW THE HYDROMETER READING SPECIFIED FOR YOUR PARTICULAR BATTERIES. IF YOU DO THERE WILL BE PERMANENT INJURY IN PROPORTION TO THE DROP BELOW THE ALLOWABLE MINIMUM.

Seventh—Electrolyte: As has been explained, the electrolyte is a solution of pure commercial sulphuric acid and approved water "Approved" water, distilled water, rain water from a shingle roof or water which has been tested and found free from impurities injurious to batteries. The proportions 133/3 parts of acid to 1200 parts of water by weight, or 25 parts of acid to 120 parts of water by volume. This is given you merely as information. Do not attempt to mix your own electrolyte. Secure from the battery manufacturer a bottle of electrolyte of the same specific gravity as that which was originally in the battery and keep it on hand in case of accident resulting in the spilling part of the electrolyte from a cell. Should that happen, first change the battery until there is no rise in gravity over a three hour period and add acid from your stock until the level in the cell is just below the filling hole. Acid should only be added to replace any that may be lost by spilling.

Aside from spillage, or wastage as before noted, the electrolyte strength does not vary. It does not become weak with age. The water

Improved Movement

I have an occasional complaint that Simplex projectors leak oil at the inner end of the framing cam, the complainer always asking what, if anything, can be done to stop it.

The answer is that if it is a double bearing movement, then it can be stopped and you should return the mechanism to a service station for attention.

If, on the other hand, it be one of the old single-bearing movements, then the oil leakage cannot be stopped. The base of the trouble lies in the fact that there is no way for the projectionist to ascertain when he has sufficient oil in the oil well. He therefore must fill it until it overflows, and then oil will seep out, which is the trouble complained of.

I would advise those who have this trouble, and who have the old single-bearing movements, to have them replaced by double bearing ones, in which latter means is provided for filling the oil well to just the proper height, whereupon the trouble will cease, or, if it ever does appear, it may be remedied.

What's that? Cost? Why certainly, but uptodate theatre managers understand that advancement is being constantly made in projection equipment perfection, just as it is in other theatre equipment, and it is very unwise to permit a relatively small sum stand in the way of adopting and installing improvements. Managers don't want the beauty of the picture on their own screen ruined by the mottling effect of oil spattered on it. Projector managers, other managers refusing to install an improvement costing a relatively small sum, when such failure resulted in the injury of their own show. All right, turn about is said to represent fair play, and they must remember that their failure to make needed improvements, in such a case at least, must inevitably result in injury to the show in other theatres. Moral: Get busy and install the improved movements.

A Flood and An Unique Action

Well, well, well! I really didn't expect to be buried yet, or to enjoy being buried. I pretty nearly was, though, by what amounted to pretty nearly a flood of Christmas greeting cards, and I enjoyed it too. I've not counted them, but the postman suggested that I lay off him or supply him with a pashcart.

The number was far too great to attempt to send a return card to each, much as I would like to. I must therefore use this medium to express my sincere, hearty thanks to all and each of you for having been thoughtful enough to remember the "old man." It added a glow of happiness to my Yuletide nothing else could have done.

Here, however, is something unique. I would like to name the local, which is a large one, but feel that without official sanction for publicity I have not that right. The following was received from the middlewest three days before Christmas:

"Dear Brother Richardson: At our regular meeting last night the following action was unanimously taken. Please note the 'unanimous,' for the meeting was a large one:

"Resolved: That this local express its thanks and appreciation to Brother F. H. Richardson, Editor Projection Department, Better Theatres Section of the Exhibitors Herald-World for the splendid work he has carried forward for many years for the betterment of projection and the conditions surrounding it.

"Resolved: That this local extend to Brother Richardson its sincere wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

"Resolved: That this action be spread upon our record, and that our secretary be instructed to forward a copy of same to Brother Richardson at once."

During past years I have received several, perhaps I might say many, Christmas cards from locals, or from officers representing local unions. So far as I am able to remember, however, this is the first action of this kind any local has ever taken. Needless to say I was deeply touched and thank the union and its members from the bottom of my heart.

A Pleasant Surprise

In days past I have felt called upon, in the line of what I have considered plain duty, to roast the living tar out of projectionists who were indifferent and careless in their work. I have visited so many projection rooms where it required but a glance to determine the lamentable fact that the man or men in charge were either doing just as little as was humanly possible and still manage to "get by," or were decidedly more interested in arriving on the job at the very last possible minute, and when finally on the job, much more interested in quitting time and in pay day than they were in their work.

Of course it is understood that between that and what I shall presently describe there are many gradations. Some men are mildly interested in their work. Some men

Time-O-Stat Controls Company
A Consolidation of

LEACHWOOD COMPANY
Janesville, Wisconsin

Time-O-Stat Corporation
Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Absolute Con-Tac-Tor Corporation
Elkhart, Indiana

Cramblet Engineering Corporation
Milwaukee, Wisconsin

THE MERGING of these four companies will place at the services of its customers, and the industries which it serves, one consolidated company with ample resources and complete facilities for the development and manufacture of a very complete line of automatic controls.

IT WILL BE THE AIM of this new company to maintain the reputation of making the finest and most dependable products of its kind, to hold the good will of its customers through the fairness of its policies and the service it renders, to sell its products at the lowest price consistent with the quality of the product and the service it renders.

THE COMPANY WILL HAVE A COMPLETE LINE of automatic controls for both domestic and industrial types of refrigeration and for heating of oil, gas, or coal. Also, it will have a diversified line of controls and thermostats for gas, oil, electricity, etc., for time, pressure, humidity and temperature, sign flashers, heaters and other specialties.

IT WILL OWN MANY PATENTS including those covering the manufacture of (light and heavy duty) mercury switches and corrugated bellows. Manufacturing these products in its own plant will put the company in a very favorable position to not only improve its present products, but also carry on the development of new devices embodying such units.

TO ENABLE IT TO BETTER SERVE YOU general sales and service offices have been opened in the Peoples Gas Building, Chicago, and eastern offices will be opened in New York City. The present sales and service organizations of the four companies will be consolidated and considerably increased.

BUILDING CONTRACTS will be let immediately to greatly enlarge the plant and offices at Elkhart, Indiana. A separate building will also be erected for laboratory, experimental and development work. As soon as these buildings have been completed, the businesses of the three Wisconsin companies will be moved to Elkhart.

A LARGE STAFF of engineers and technicians, each a specialist, will have ample facilities in the new laboratory where the company is very constantly endeavoring to improve its products, develop new controls, and do experimental work for our customers.

THE OFFICERS of the COMPANY will be; President and Treasurer, Julius A. L. Wallace, Paul K. Cramblet, E. J. Leach and Roy W. Johnson.

NOTE: Correspondence should be directed to any of the four companies, just as herebefore, until notice has been given that all the general offices have been consolidated and moved to Elkhart, Indiana. Envelopes for pipe organ chambers having and Time-O-Stat SILENT Flashers, formerly called Brickston SILENT Flashers will continue to be handled by Cramblet Engineering Division, 285 Milwaukee St., Milwaukee, Wis. vinced me that R C A is a progressive, permanent fixture in the motion picture field.

Dr. Goldsmith was kind enough to have several R C A pictures screened for examination. While they were running he talked freely of the performance.

The kinder, gentler people. I saw films containing quite a lot of pronounced scratches and "rain," with very little perceptible effect on the sound. This was indeed a surprise.

Of course, however, just to what extent film abuse or wear may affect sound cannot be justly judged from one demonstration. We shall see what we shall see concerning this point when R C A gets into more and larger installations. Incidentally, it may be remarked that many installations have already been contracted for. Our friend Arthur Gray, Boston, will, by the way, supplying a few R C A's. He will be very glad to have his reaction to the equipment after it has been installed for say a month.

This department will, as soon as practicable, post you thoroughly upon R C A apparatus, which differs in many respects from Western Electric. Incidentally, R C A will have a projector of its own, as well as supplying a sound head for all makers of professional.

It might be remarked that the R C A method of recording, reproduction and sound distribution differs radically from that employed by Western Electric. The Photophone film runs interchangeably with Movietone film. In other words, if you have Movietone you may also use Photophone films, except that I will here note the fact that instead of placing the theatre horns behind the screen, as with Western Electric, there are groups of four relatively small, cone-type loud speakers, at either side of the screen, being pointed in various directions and making up the whole sound distribution throughout theatre auditoriums.

It is interesting to note that not being aware of the fact, the management of a theatre in Boston, which has a large auditorium and a large screen I cannot, of course, say. Presumably, however, the R C A equipment must have determined this point to their own satisfaction.

And now a word of explanation. As you doubtless all know, the editor of this department, Mr. Frank S. Hildreth in his Bluebook Bulletin, in which he has, and so long as his connection with Movietone continues, will continue to expend every possible effort to serve Movietone interests fully and loyally by doing everything possible to enable projectionists to place its products before the public in the best possible way.

However, that fact in no way affects my loyalty to the EXHIBITORS Herald-World or to the projectionists and projectionists of this and other countries. As editor of this department and an author of the Bluebook of Projection it is my duty to deal impartially with them and all others. All methods, insofar as affects projection, and that I shall continue to do in the future as I have done heretofore.

Movietone, when we consider its "youth," is nothing short of an amazingly perfect method for recording and reproducing sound and image. It has truly been and am proud of my connection with it, and of the further fact that the connection of 25 years is continuously maintained. Movietone has been pretty thoroughly tried out, and most emphatically has NOT been found wanting.

That fact, however, does not necessarily mean that there may not be other excellent methods, and in common honesty I must say that R C A looks like one, though the future must decide that matter. Its equipment is now going out into theatres and it is up to you to see and have it and make every possible effort to handle it efficiently and well, in which you will, have been assured by Dr. Goldsmith, you can have every possible friendly assistance.

For Press

Consumption

The editor is in receipt of several requests from local unions for matter which they can supply to local newspapers which will direct attention of the public to the importance of projection to the said public. Lately I have also had several requests from individual theatre managers for articles to be used for the same purpose, though presumably from different reasons. Here is one of them, the name and location being of course suppressed.

Dear Mr. Richardson: I am manager of one of the three largest picture theatres in our city. I employ the best projectionist I can secure, give him everything within reason he asks for and pay much attention to perfect projection. The other two managers don't. They get the cheapest man they can. One now has what amounts to a boy for projection. They are so bad the cannot put on a good picture. I am sure of my efforts for perfect projection, but the other managers who have not the same ability, it was I would deeply appreciate it if you would send me an article suitable for publication in our two local papers. I have told you the facts and leave it to you to use your own judgment as to the composition of the article, for which I am very willing to pay you what you may think right.

I think I can sell several stones with one bird, or vice versa, by declining your offer of pay, publishing an article which others who have asked the same thing may use in the papers of their own cities. Here it is:

FAR NORTHER THEATRE—Brother G. T. Balsay, projectionist, Marvel theatre, Wilkie, Saskatchewan, which is about 253 miles north of the north border of these United States of America, sends us a photo of the theatre. Thought you'd maybe like to have a rubber at it. Br-r-r-r, I bet it's chilly there this January fourteenth. If you threw a green leaf at one of these trees it 'ud try to bite you! Well, anyhow, cheer up! It's not so darned hot right here in lil' old New York just now.

Importance of Perfect Projection to the Theatre Going Public

People go to motion picture theatres to be entertained and amused. They pay their money in at the theatre box office for that purpose, and have the right to presume the management will give them the very best that can be given with the production available.

By this is meant that the theatre patron has the inherent right to the best service. The theatre management will make every reasonable effort to cause the pictures they have paid to see placed upon the screen in the best possible manner.

This usually is done, but unfortunately an occasional theatre manager does not have sufficient sense of what we call "showmanship" to realize the importance of high class projection in his theatre.

In the first place, modern projection is not expensive to be calculated by any other than a thoroughly capable motion picture projectionist. If it is, then the audience will be the "goat," insofar as concerns the theatre managers. It is not that people is not trained to handle the latest appliances, some projection light sources representing the expenditure of as much as six to seven thousands of watts of electric energy. Such a light source is a source of some amusement at the highly brilliant "spot" of light concentrated upon the film. So fierce is that they enter the spot, as may occur, it would be ablaze in less than two seconds. You will therefore see that knowledge and expert skill in the projection room is a decided factor in safety to audiences.

Modern motion picture projection calls for the expert handling of electric current equipment. The last quantities, some projection light sources representing the expenditure of as much as six to seven thousands of watts of electric energy. Such a light source is a source of some amusement at the highly brilliant "spot" of light concentrated upon the film. So fierce is that they enter the spot, as may occur, it would be ablaze in less than two seconds. You will therefore see that knowledge and expert skill in the projection room is a decided factor in safety to audiences.

Modern motion picture projection calls for the expert handling of complicated optical systems—systems which it took expert optical men years to understand and design. And the theatre projectionist must himself assemble and adjust these systems to give the maximum results, without which truly expert adjustment, it will be impossible to secure maximum results in projection in any theatre, and without maximum results the value of the "goods" theatre patrons buy is appreciably reduced.

I can hardly be otherwise.

Modern motion picture projection is not merely the matter of "operating a machine or machines. It is very, very much more than that. To handle modern projection, and do it efficiently and effectively, the projectionist must have a good grounding in electric action, and be able to handle electrical devices and light sources of considerable capacity and power. He must have a very good grounding in fundamental optics and be able to select and expertly adjust very complicated optical systems. He must be able to handle and adjust mechanisms having tolerances of less than one ten-thousandth of an inch. He must be able to handle emergency situations practically instantaneously, and without error, because human life may depend upon it, to say nothing of possible very serious property loss.

I therefore say to you that modern motion picture projection, and I am not in this article, dealing at all with, or even considering the projection of sound in synchronization with motion pictures) approaches the digiti of the profession. * * *

Some of the more common, more readily recognizable projection faults which lower the beauty of the picture are: (a) Oil on the film, which has not been properly prepared. (b) Gray illumination of the picture. (c) More or less frequent discolorations of the light. (d) Jumps or movement of the picture, as a whole, upon the screen. May or may not be due to local faults. May be caused by abuses the film has been subjected to before it reaches your city. (e) Our old friend flicker, which is always chargeable to local fault, meaning some fault in the projection procedure in the theatre in which it occurs. * * *

And so I might go on, gentlemen, pointing out various things but it may all be summed up by the statement that the modern picture can and should be projected so as to be practically rock steady upon the screen, evenly and well if not brilliantly illuminated all over its surface, free from flicker, with no recurrent discolorations of the light, without the most minute blotched appearance imparted by oil smeared film, and with moving objects moving with naturalness of speed.

Your local papers may do much to insure excellence in projection by occasionally giving the local projectionist a bit of credit for his work. He is out of sight, back in a dark room, and gets absolutely no recognition from anyone, no matter how excellent his work may be—though he gets a call-down, if not a blowing up, from the management if anything at all goes wrong. He thus has every reason to feel that no one cares a (deleted) about either his work or his reputation which very much of the entertainment value of what every theatre patron buys depends, as I have pointed out, upon its excellence, and upon his care and skill. Most appreciate and respond to praise of BT battery, but just praise for work well done. Try it out on your local projectionists. I venture the assertion that it will make them more careful and more inclined to strive to give you the highest possible value in entertainment for the coin you pay in at ticket box office. Try it!

Screen

Has Promise

F. F. Sturges, sales manager, Da-Lite Screen Company, Chicago, was present when I dropped in to say hello to Joe Hornstein, manager of the New York City office of the National Theatre Supply Company yesterday.

I was glad of it, because friend Sturges showed me a sample of a new screen surface, called “Da-Tone X,” designed for use with sound.

Mr. Sturges makes large claims for this surface, some of which I am inclined to discount a bit, but just the same it is by far the best looking proposition I have yet seen for a sound screen—and I’ve seen some few already, too.

It consists of a substance which looks like some form of rubber, but which Sturges says is not. It is claimed to be completely waterproof and really looks as though the claim is justified. It also is claimed that it may be washed without loss of reflective power, but while it undoubtedly can be washed, I will have to have it demonstrated to me that any surface rather than cloth, glass, porcelain or something similar can be washed and retain 100 per cent of its reflective power.

The surface, however, as I have said, looks good, and I believe will show good results. Sound interference is another thing, though, and one must presume to avoid hazard a guess at. I saw a letter from Electric Research Products, however, which seemed to indicate that the surface had been tried out and found satisfactory. This would of course include the matter of sound interference.

The surface is about one sixty-fourth of an inch thick and dead white. It unquestionably has high diffusion powers. Each inch of the surface has seven rows of holes, each alternate row being staggered. That is to say, the holes of each row are halfway between the holes of each adjoining row.

These holes I have not measured exactly, but estimate them at one thirty-second or a bit less in diameter. This proportion of the surface is thus punched away I cannot say. Whatever it is means lost light, of course.

However, Mr. Sturges assures me this surface gives almost 50 per cent higher reflective power than does the sound screen now approved by Electrical Research Products.

S. M. P. E. Officially Recognizes Projection

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has officially recognized projection and its importance by the appointment of a projection committee. This action is particularly significant of the standing projection has assumed in the minds of the film production authorities, those who have composed that distinguished body, because of the fact that aside from a committee on theatre lighting, it is the only committee of the Society other than the business of the Society.

The committee consists of Lester Issacs, supervisor of projection for Marcus Loew, Harry Rubin, assistant supervisor of projection for Buellx Theatres; Arthur Gray, projectionist, Boston; Chauncey L. Greene, projectionist, S. W. Swash, L. M. Swash & Son, Philadelphia; Herbert Griffin, International Projector Corporation; J. H. Kurnerla, Brenske Light Projection Company, Detroit, and F. H. Richardson, your editor.

Considering this committee as a whole, I believe we may expect it to function well. All the men named are able men. Many of them hold responsible positions, have had wide experience in projection matters and all know its needs.

In the name of the profession I extend thanks to President L. C. Porter, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, who made the initial move resulting in this committee.

Upon your editor President Porter has wished the job of chairman of the committee. I shall be more than glad to hear from such of you as may have some idea or idea of the functioning of the committee—just what we may undertake with some assurance that good will result to the profession.

breast of the humming bird, the red, yellow, blue and green plumes of the macaw, the shimmering, green, tendril-like tail of the high-maya quetzal, said to have been reserved exclusively for their rulers, and now the national bird of Guatemala. They inlaid elaborate mosaics of turquoise, shields, crowns, pendants and earrings. They smelted gold and copper, working these metals into a variety of ornaments—bells, basins, discs, pendants, earrings and finger-rings. Their pottery ranks as one of the great ceramic arts of antiquity—exquisitely painted cylindrical vases, depicting religious ceremonies, which reveal the finest products of the Greek potters.

"The Maya religion was polytheistic (worshipped more than one god). Their pantheon contained few gods and goddesses, who, like the Grecian and Roman deities, presided over different phases and aspects of life.

"The head of the Mayan Pantheon, the Mayan Zeus or Jupiter, was Itzamna (eel-zam-na), the god of life and learning. He was the personification of the East, the rising sun, and thus, by association, of light, life and knowledge. He was the founder of the Maya civilization, the first priest of the Maya religion, the inventor of writing and books, and the great healer of all ills. He is represented in the hieroglyphic manuscripts as a wise old man, with a strong Roman nose, sunken, toothless jaws.

"Scarcely less important was Kukulean, the Feathered Serpent, the personification of the West. He was regarded as having been a great organizer, the founder of cities, the framer of laws and the teacher of their new calendar. Indeed, his attributes and life history are so human, that it is not improbable that he may have been an actual historical character, some great ruler and giver of laws, the memory of whose benefactions lived long after his death, and who was eventually deified. He is represented in the manuscripts with a long, curling nose, almost a small trunk, and filed, upper front teeth.

"The most hated and feared of all their deities was Ahpuch (au-pooch), the Lord of Death. He is associated, not only with death in general, but with sudden death in particular—human sacrifice, suicide by hanging, death in childbirth and death in war. He is always represented in the manuscripts as a skeleton with small bells fastened to his skull and around his wrists and ankles. Even his hieroglyphic shows his eyes closed as in death.

"Worship consisted of fasting, prayers, chants, incensencing, dancing, offerings of food and ornaments, blood-letting rites and even human sacrifice. At Chichen Itza, in times of excessive drought, as the dramatic culmination of an impressive ceremony to appease the offended rain gods, the fairest maidens of the Hia nation were hurled into the depths of a dark and sinister sacred pool, an enormous natural well, 200 feet in diameter and 100 feet in depth, together with the most precious ornaments belonging to the citizens. Dredging operations in this Sacred Well have brought to light a wealth of this material, gold and copper bells, pendants, beads, rings, basins, discs, jade earrings and jade beads, carved wooden weapons, bowls of incense, even the skulls, bones and cotton clothing of the sacrificial victims.

"But after this lengthy digression, in which lack of space has permitted only the briefest outline of ancient Mayan achievement, let us trace the closing chapters of their history.

"As early as the fourth century of the Christian Era, pioneers from the Old Empire, pushing northward, had founded a chain of cities along the east coast of Yucatan.

"The causes, which brought about the abandonment of the Old Empire and the colonization of Yucatan (the New Empire) during the fourth to the seventh centuries, are not clear. Certain it is, that by the middle of the seventh century all the Old Empire cities had ceased building activities and the erection of hieroglyphic monuments, and the eastern part of the New Empire had been gradually occupied."

"A variety of explanations has been brought forward to account for this great Mayan exodus: earthquakes, civil or foreign wars, recurrent epidemics of disease, social and political decay and all their attendant ills, climatic changes and exhaustion of the lands by the agricultural methods practiced.

"Perhaps the most plausible of these several suggestions is the last; what may be called the 'high cost of living' explanation."

"The Maya practiced a very simple form of agriculture for all their intellectual and artistic brilliance. Cultivation, as we understand the term, was unknown. They did not rotate their crops. They used no fertilizers. But most serious of all, they had no means of turning the soil, no ploughs, spades, shovels, picks or hoes.

"At the end of the rainy season in January or February, the Maya farmer selected a patch of the forest, and with his stone ax or knife cut a groove in the bark of the larger trees, entirely encircling them. The trees, thus grooved, died under the fierce sun of February and March, and by April they were sufficiently dry to be burned. Sections of the forest were thus cleared of vegetation, and when the rainy season began in May, with a simple wooden planting stick, the Maya farmer made holes in the ground, dropped in his grains of corn and left a prodigal nature to do the rest.

"Bitter experience had shown him howver, that if he planted the same field two years in succession, the yield of the second year would be only about half that of the first year; indeed, in practice, he waited anywhere from five to ten years before planting a field a second time. Rather than plant the same field two successive seasons he would select a new piece of forest, and repeat this laborious method of clearing the land.

"This system of cultivation, if such primitive methods as these may be called that, was at least two obvious defects. In the first place, most of the agricultural land at any given moment was lying idle, waiting for the return of sufficient woody growth to permit burning off again; and second, these repeated burnings gradually destroyed the forest and discouraged its return. Finally there came a time when the forests were largely replaced by perennial grasses; when that condition had been brought about, agriculture, as practiced by the ancient Maya, was at an end.

"Toward the end of the Old Empire, the situation must have become so acute as to have caused general dissatisfaction with, and indeed probably outright distrust of, gods, rulers and priests, who would permit such a condition to continue unchecked. The increasing difficulty of obtaining sufficient supplies of food, the high cost of living in a very real sense, and toward the end, the actual threat of stark starvation staring them in the face, finally brought about the abandonment of the Old Empire and the colonization of the lands both to HEAT YOUR ORGAN CHAMBER CORRECTLY!

The Prometheus Organ Heater protects the delicate mechanism of the organ by heating the lower part of the chamber in a scientific way. Unlike other devices which send heat upward, thus neglecting the equally important base, Prometheus deflects the warm air downward. The heat naturally rises throughout the organ chamber giving a constant, unvarying degree of temperature. Proper heating avoids expensive repairs and maintenance costs due to destructive cold, moisture and climatic changes. It also keeps pitch accurate.

THE PROMETHEUS ORGAN HEATER

For Heat and Climate Control

Prometheus, a company founded in 1929, was known for its innovative heating solutions for organs and other musical instruments. The text describes the Prometheus Organ Heater, which protects the delicate mechanism of the organ by heating the lower part of the chamber in a scientific way. Unlike other devices, Prometheus deflects the warm air downward, maintaining a constant, unvarying degree of temperature. This prevents destructive cold, moisture, and climatic changes, ensuring the organ's pitch remains steady.

New York Cue Service

Adds to Musical Staff

Owing to the volume of business that followed its announcement, the opening of offices, Motion Pictures Synchronization Service, Inc., New York City, has been compelled to increase its musical staff by the addition of several experts. These new members of the staff will work under the personal direction of the company's chief composers, Serp Morscher and Maurice Nitek.

The company offers a cue service for nonsynchronous machines direct to the exhibitor, showing which photograph record to use for every feature played by the exhibitor.
MUSIC IN THE THEATRE

GET BUSY!

Build Novelty Programs

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

It is very evident that sound effects and sound equipment are to become a very important part of the small picture houses, just as the dialogue pictures are becoming a very important part of the deluxe cinema theatres.

A number of years ago, when the phonograph first made its appearance, the public as well as the musicians and artists became alarmed that the mechanical device soon would put them out of business. Almost the same year was held against the radio a few years ago. However, those who have watched the progress of both know that instead of hurting them they have been benefited. This can be easily understood when you take into consideration the huge amount of royalties that have accrued from phonograph recordings and salaries paid to musicians and artists for broadcasting.

Today there exists almost a similar condition in the amusement world, a condition that has been caused by the talking and sound motion pictures. Some two years ago when these films first introduced many thought it was merely another novelty and that they would soon fade into oblivion. However, if you have followed the developments in the field of motion pictures you know now that they are revolutionizing the motion picture theatre business.

Perhaps a few realized that this sudden demand of talking and sound motion pictures was caused through a continued neglect on the part of the musician as well as the organist. Perhaps those who are not aware of this act will wonder what the musicians and organists had to do with the development of such mechanical means of portraying musical effect. And for the benefit of those who have missed reading previous articles on this subject, both in this section and in the Herald-World, we will say that the chief reason for the development of a mechanical device to furnish music in the theatre is the fact that those who at one time had the opportunity of presenting this type of accompaniment failed to see the possibilities that the motion picture on the screen offered to the individual musician. When we assume this attitude we do not necessarily mean that each and every musician, including the musical conductor and the organist, had entirely neglected the importance of cutting and synchronizing the proper type and music for the individual film, for a great many of them made it their business to do it with each photoplay, but a great many more of them considered photoplay accompaniment not important enough and therefore left the scoring to some other member of the musical aggregation, who, in most cases, was not able, let alone capable, of furnishing appropriate music. And so this thing went on for years until theatre owners and theatre executives realized that they were in the motion picture business and that the most important thing that brought the patrons into their theatres was the motion picture.

Naturally, musical accompaniment and added stage features assisted in the drawing power of these films, but it was always the film that was the feature. Then, too, motion picture producers at one time were not making as much use of these features as they now, and that also meant that something else had to be added in order to put the film over in the theatre. When they investigated the situation in the motion picture house it was found that many musical directors and organists were capable, let alone willing, to assist in putting over the photoplays. The only thing this problem had to come out and find the ways and means to overcome this handicap. The answer is the talking picture with sound effects. Can you blame the producer in this case, who must take the move? If you want to be honest about it you must admit that it was the only way for them, as they had millions of dollars at stake.

Naturally, this new progress has relieved many a musician of his job in the smaller class theatres. And while this policy exists it has also eliminated many organists in the deluxe field. However, to the best of our knowledge, there is no representative organist who comes under the class of soloist who has been a victim of this development. And as for the musical conductors, those who have been taken out of one theatre have, in most cases, been assigned to another, so that in reality a comparatively few good musicians are out of work. It has, without any doubt, eliminated a great many of the mediocre organists, and the class C and D musicians who were practicing this profession part time and probably employed at another trade for the balance of the time. This condition exists in thousands of small theatres all over the country, and rather than contend with this condition the managers and owners of these theatres thought it advisable to try and compete in a smaller way with the larger theatres in their communities.

That accounts for the hundreds of theatres who are presenting their motion picture program with sound effects. As we stated before, in previous articles, it is only a matter of time when the better class theatres will realize that there is definitely a demand between a small theatre and a deluxe house, for, according to the entertainment programs of both, there is a considerable difference. Most of the problem is the return of the pit orchestra, which will, in the future, supply the motion picture music and a featured organist in a semi-deluxe house in this place of an orchestra and furnish the appropriate photoplay synchronization. That, and in addition stage presentation, more of a motion picture nature, will eventually put the deluxe motion picture house in the proper sphere. But until that time, of course, and it is very hard to say how long it will be, theatres will present sound effects.

There is no question that talking pictures with dialogue sequences are here to stay, but everybody knows that some radical change must be made in the musical accompaniment of these photoplays. Until that time musicians will have to prepare themselves to furnish this type of service to the theatres and the organists must now convince the theatre owners that they can supply the necessary element that is now lacking in mechanical photoplay accompaniment.

Talking and sound pictures have not only hurt the musicians, but also the music publication departments. With movies now, before this new development came a music publisher received most of his exploitation in theatres through the co-operation of the organist. This sort of exploitation was the chief means of popularizing his songs and creating a demand, not only for the sale of sheet music, but also instruments. Since this arrangement exists only with the deluxe theatres and those who still retain their featured organists.

Naturally, something had to be done to replace these valuable means of exploitation, and Leo Feist, Inc., has found one, called the Slide-on-ophone. Those who read the lead editorial in the presentation section several weeks ago are aware with this new device. However, for the benefit of those who missed it and are not quite convinced of its possibilities we will give you a brief mention of it here.

The Feist Slide-on-ophone is a special synchronized record containing Feist songs exclusively with vocal and instrumental sound and background effects. These records, which are supplied in unit forms, can be placed on any turn-table machine or amplifying system. They contain ultra modern slides with an explanatory cue sheet and are carefully packed ready to be returned after they are used. They practically offer a miniature song presentation with well known artists who can be heard but not seen and can be presented with an organist as a special solo. Both make an ideal combination. However, the Slide-on-ophone is really meant for small theatres that are presenting a program of nearly 100 per cent sound effects. The first unit presentation called "I'm Sorry, Sally," has met with considerable success throughout the country and two more units will be released this month.

Those who read the article on adding human voice to the organ in this department last month will also realize that it is now possible for personality organists to purchase a device such as Vocalone. This is considered an important step in the organ field, inasmuch as it will not only enhance the values of an organ in a theatre, but also add to the popularity of a good organist. Albert F. Brovner, a well known featured organist, used a similar device last week at the Marbro theatre, Chicago, and proved that with such an instrument the organist has unlimited fields. It is understood that a complete outfit of this type will soon be placed on the market for organists at a very reasonable price.
The Portable Console

By FRANCES S. FARNEY
Organist, Kimo Theatre, Albuquerque, N. Mex.

The ideal portable console is one that is as complete as possible and still light enough in weight to be practical. I have built and use extensively a complete one-manual, five-octave console that plays every instrument in any relay type organ, from the pedals on up to the percussion and piston changes, being almost as complete a control as the regular organ console itself. Its possibilities are far above those of any portable I've ever seen or heard about. Its weight is only 28 pounds and the whole layout costs only $30 for materials. Of course, some mechanical ability and hard work is required to build one.

I used 15-1/2 feet of cable, each wire having a little "snap" on the end that hooks on to the relay contact like a tie clasp, thus doing away with tedious soldering and speeding up the connecting in.

The instrument handles 15 piston changes, which is plenty for the gauges it's used for. The big stunt with a console of this type is strapping it over your shoulder and going up and down the aisles playing requests right under the noses of those who ask for the numbers. I use the stunt frequently, both with slides and without, the console being equipped with a booth buzzer. The whole thing is all in a half-inch cable and is handled as easily as an accordion. The organ effect is nearly as good as can be got at the big console.

Those who are lucky enough to have portable consoles may try this gag, and I'll guarantee they will bring plenty of applause. If the portable is not as satisfactory as the one I have mentioned, I will tell anyone how to make it so, gratis and with pleasure, if the desire is made known, either through Herald-World, or by mail directly.

Those who have portable consoles are missing a big boost for themselves. If enough interest is created on this subject, I'll be only too glad to help write up complete instructions as to how to go about constructing such an instrument—the parts needed and method of hookup. Thanks to Herb Koch, I believe it was, who gave me the idea, which I have enlarged upon to some extent.

The provision for the necessary amount of life insurance to supply the cash immediately—for cash and cash only will do for the surviving shareholders and surviving heirs what the articles over their signatures agree to do and want to do, for, without the immediate cash provision, the agreement is only an admission of a liability without the one provision necessary to its prompt fulfillment.

Concerning the stock or share purchase agreement it is considered desirable to purchase the stock or share of a deceased member, thereby reducing a portion of its liabilities fully as much as when creditors are paid and so long as the state or creditors or stockholders are not in a position to object the corporation may proceed for the purchase of its own stock. (Note: "In the following states the statute expressly forbids the purchase of its own stock by a corporation: California, Kentucky, Vermont and Wyoming"—National Service Publications—"in all others it is permissible").

You will realize that at the death of a principal active shareholder and in absence of an agreement of this sort his holdings go direct to his heirs or estate, by will or in absence of a will—and that the title to his share in the company passes on to his heirs—whose only interest in your company may be in how large the dividends are that you turn out each year themselves contributing nothing towards the earnings of your company and, which often happens if their share is large enough, proceed to throw the monkey wrench into the otherwise efficiently operating machinery, cause discord and dissatisfaction among the surviving active shareholders, who may find their efforts frustrated by ill-advised interference, causing confusion and disruption to such an extent that more time will be spent in friction than in promoting the business.

In view of the above and for other good reasons it would seem to be a distinct benefit to the corporation to have this plan in force and fully as much so to the heirs of the deceased member, who immediately receive the full stock value in cash, thereby enabling them to pay to both state and government inheritance estate taxes and all other outstanding liabilities and to do so at once, thus avoiding penalties attached to deferred payments.

Since it would appear to be of sound business principles to retire such stock or interest, what in your judgment is the most desirable means of providing the cash to do this?

1. Is it most advisable to take the money out of the capital or reserve?

2. Is it more desirable to borrow the capital, and later repay both the principal and interest?

3. Or, is it more economical to acquire the principal and thereby use the interest (Insurance premiums) and never have to repay the principal?

In substance, the object is the purchase of a deceased's stock or interest.

THE METHODS ARE:

1. To pay Cash.
2. To borrow the money.
3. Or Let the Insurance Company pay it.

By letting the insurance company pay for it I mean the insurance company pays for the life of a shareholder—the proceeds of which are payable to the company or to the corporation at his death and used by the company to purchase his holdings. The cost of this insurance, all things considered, is nominal, often in the neighborhood of 3 or 4 per cent, the result of it being that the capital sum, by virtue of its character, is acquired by the corporation automatically. Dunn's consider generally that the current assets of a business should be 2/3 times the current liabilities in order to make an average credit risk.

To illustrate the workings of such a plan let us consider for example:

The business has capital and gross assets of say $100,000 and that the earnings are in the neighborhood of $15,000

Now since, money is normally worth only 6% then that part of the earnings attributed to capital and assets would only account for 6% on the $100,000 or $6,000

Then, as you will no doubt be aware, the difference between the gross yield of $15,000 and the net yield of $6,000 represents the yield attributed to the business and experience plus the good will or a total of—$9,000

You can readily see that the MAN POWER has produced a yield of $12,000 as against the Capital and asset yield of $6,000.

The above will illustrate the value of two kinds of capital; i.e., the Capital of Money plus the Capital of Men, and it is often with that idea of capitalization of man power in view that a corporation takes out insurance on the lives of its valuable men in order to replace temporarily the money value of those men to the company and the total amount of insurance may vary from a policy covering the amount of five years' salary of a man to one of and a half times the annual net profit of a company sound enough to cover the loss of the company credit suffered by the company during the reconstruction period.

I have a case in mind handled through my company recently wherein the corporation insured the life of its president a few months ago for the reasons above mentioned and, just a few days ago, the amount plus a post mortem dividend was turned over to that corporation, its president having passed away in the meantime.

A concrete illustration of a normal corpora-tive plan:

1. The stockholders, their positions, ages and stock interests are as follows:
   James D., President, 55 years of age
   Richard R., Vice-Pres., 50 years of age
   Fred S., Secy-Treas., 40 years of age

2. The business has been in existence 7 years.

3. The business is capitalized for $160,000 consisting of 1,000 shares of common stock of $100.00 par value.

4. The present balance sheet gives a surplus of

5. making a total book value of $120,000

6. A statement of the profit and loss for the last three years shows average net earnings which were applied to annual dividends of 15,000.

7. All of the share-holders have families (wife and children) dependent upon them.

The interests of each depend largely upon his holdings in the company and which represents the largest part of his estate.

The book value of the stock of the above company is $120 per share, but that amount does not take the item of goodwill into consideration. This will be done by using the capitalization method as applied to earnings. This value is obtained by capitalizing the net yield or earnings which at the rate of 10 per cent on the $15,000 annual return would be $150 per share on 1,000 shares.

Since there are 1,000 shares outstanding, a total of $150,000 will be necessary to retire the stock of this company, based on this valuation. The amount will be apportioned as follows: James D., $90,000; Richard R., $50,000, and Fred S., $15,000.

The problem is to provide the total sum necessary with a minimum of cost and at the times when needed.

For example, $90,000 will be needed at the death of James D. Suppose that he should die tomorrow of an accident or illness. How could Richard R. and Fred S. raise that amount of money necessary and at once?

In the third and last article I shall discuss some of the tax problems, together with the sole ownership question and replacing the loss of a valuable man.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 15—The first public exhibition of Biophone sound equipment in Cleveland was held recently at the Variety theatre, under the direction of Paul Fine, of the Biophone Corporation of New York, and Bill O'Brien of the Ohio Biophone Corporation. The trial was said to be very successful, and greatly impressed spectators.

Sees New Stage Effects Result Of Talking Film

CULVER City, Jan. 15 — Many new stage effects will be stimulated by the talking pictures, says Willard Mack, playwright, now directing for M.G.M.

“Because of the talking picture you'll see more new effects on the New York stage in 1929 than for all the ten years preceding,” declared Mack.

“Everybody seems to be worrying about the effect dialogue pictures are going to have on other films. There will be no effect, except that photoplays will have a much wider range of expression. The important thing to me is the effect on the stage. This new competition is going to be a wonderful thing for the regular drama. We have come to think that we couldn’t do certain things on the stage. The ‘talkies’ will force playwrights and stage directors to think harder.

“Once stage playwrights thought it impossible to succeed one scene with another on the stage without a wait for new scenery. The movies provided the stimulus for a new idea. Now we find as many as four sets on a single stage, and the action changes from one to the other merely by a shifting of lights. In addition to this I think you will see a greater use of revolving stages.”

A Theatre in Which a Modern Art and Art Moderne Prove Partners

Vision and acoustics, which furnish the criteria by which motion picture theatres are ultimately to be praised or damned, are excellent in the Pickwick. Modernistic art had much to do with it.

By JAY M. SHRECK

WHEN the architects of the new Pickwick theatre in Park Ridge, Ill., began contemplating possible designs for that structure, they found themselves in a field in which there seemed to be "nothing new under the sun." And, for certain professional reasons, they were determined to create a building that wasn't "just another theatre." Park Ridge, which is a suburb of Chicago about 13 miles from the Loop, is the scene of a great deal of building activity, and if the Pickwick stood as a prominent testimonial to the uncommon ability of its creators, it certainly wouldn't do them any harm when architects were needed for future projects.

But what was there that hadn't been done—ever "done to death"? The Spaniards had contributed all the ideas they had conceived from the Moors to the Inquisition. In scores of theatres had been revived the Italian Renaissance, while antiquity labored with modernity in Egyptian, Persian and similar houses almost everywhere. The architects, Zook & McCaughy of Chicago, were fond of their own age, anyway, and since the psychology and manners of America today had been given little expression in theatre design, they decided that modernistic art could yield them a theatre that looked the way they wanted it to.

The result is a theatre that not only has the "looks," but which is eminently adapted to the business of presenting motion pictures, both silent and synchronized. The modernistic treatment worked out in the Pickwick in a way. Modernistic art is especially devoted to designs composed of straight lines and angles, which leads to a shape and decoration of the auditorium most capable of producing excellent acoustics. The design also led to an arrangement of seats that economically provided for excellent vision. Basing his exploitation on these facts, the owner, William H. Malone, calls the Pickwick "The Perfect Motion Picture Theatre," which may be a great deal of sheer advertising, but is advertising with at least some foundation in truth.

That the architects were not wrong in appraising the value of a monumental theatre is shown by the way the project was received. It was viewed as a great community affair. Malone was called a public benefactor. "All Chicago," declared the Greater Chicago Magazine in an issue devoted largely to Park Ridge, "as well as Park Ridge, has been watching with interest the building of the Pickwick theatre, now bursting into splendor, as the last stones are set in the great tower rising a hundred feet above the sidewalk."

The Pickwick is in a two-story building with shops along the two sides abutting on the street, the entrance to the theatre being a little eccentric and capped by a tower, which is an adaptation of the modern skyscraper idea. The top of the tower is formed by an ornamental lantern 15 feet high which throws out red and green lights and is comparable to similar aviation beacons on top of skyscraper office buildings. In fact, the Pickwick beacon has transplanted to a large extent the official beacons erected at aviation fields in the neighborhood of Park Ridge and serves to guide the mail planes on their way. The top of the lantern is 100 feet above the street.

The building is made of Indiana limestone of different hues, with a granite base. On the first floor are 11 store-spaces, while space for six more stores and four offices are on the second floor over the streets. An automatic elevator augments the stairway. All the shops lead from an arcade as well as from the street.

A considerable saving was effected in the construction of the roof. The location of the building permitted semi-fireproof construction, so Hololite was used for the roof skeleton, and overlaid with Celotex in two thicknesses of one-half inch each. The lighting of this material made possible a satisfactory roof without the use of much steel. The metal ribs are composed of 24-gage zinc sheet, reinforced with steel and the ribs are rolled as a self-contained unit. Engineers declare that such a roof is incombustible and permanent.

The marquise, which is rectangular in shape, juts out from the building line above the marquise a few feet. About 35 feet above the marquise it begins to converge in a series of step-backs carefully worked out so that each plane is easily visible from the street. It was found that if the step-backs were not at least 2 feet in height, the tower would seem to converge in one curve, instead of in many straight lines, thus defeating the desire of the architects to achieve a modernistic effect. The tower is floodlighted with 12-inch Westinghouse lamps.

Towards the rear the rest of the building conceals a large part of the tower. On the other three sides are stained-glass windows, 35 feet high, lighted up from within. These windows are not visible from the lobby beneath it, though the lobby rises to a great height within the tower. Where the tower converges to a point is the beacon previously described. The walls of the tower are two feet thick but appear much thicker and were raised on cantilever beams, a method of construction which permitted the achievement of deep reveals or breaks in the walls. Hollow tile was used for backing. The marquise beneath is unusually heavy, being actually made of the material that most marquises represent themselves to be—that is, of iron or steel. This marquise is made of cast iron and is finished in bronze.

The lobby presents the first glimpse to the patron of modernistic treatment in decoration as well as in architecture. Lights, art work and other decorative features are in the essential manner of Art Moderne. The floor is made of art marble, with an eight-foot base of Pyrenees black and white marble all around the chamber. The walls are done in zenitherm of a golden sienna. The radiator grilles are in modernistic figures. This room is 30 feet high, directly beneath and inside the tower.

The foyer floor is carpeted with a Wilson rug of soft gray background and black and tangerine modernistic figures. There is a ten-inch border and base of black marble. The walls are silvered and overlaid with a slight touch of apricot. The ceiling is highly decorated in ornamental plaster figures of modernistic design and painted in solid pastel shades. All the wooden doors here as well as elsewhere in the theatre have diagonal patterns carrying out the modernistic motif.

The auditorium is of a general modernistic design, with decorative details further expressing this theme. The shape, to which the modernistic idea readily lent itself, is along the lines of that suggested in the last issue of "Better Theatres" as being one particularly fitted to serve the purposes of the motion picture theatre—that is, it is a shape pronouncedly adapted to the requirements of comfort, good vision and good acoustics. The shape of the Pickwick auditorium may be seen at a glance by referring to the floor plan presented in conjunction with this description. It is a triangular wall, opened on the proscenium arch, walls continuing outwardly to the rear, with the base at a slight curve.

No acoustical treatment of the walls has been resorted to. There are, indeed, no hangings, and the walls are of the usual fireproof material hard in surface almost entirely reflective. Yet, especially when the auditorium is well occupied, the acoustics are, so far as may be determined by the patron, absolutely perfect.

Vision also is excellent from nearly every point, a condition achieved without the waste of space through the shape of the auditorium. From almost every seat the picture may be viewed without distortion, because sight is pretty consistently close to the 40-degree angular limit.

The wall treatment of the auditorium consists in a base all around, rising 12 feet. This is done in lavender and silver. Above the base is a four-foot band of ornamental plaster, which conceals the indirect lighting fixtures. The latter are operated on a Major dimmer system and are capable of casting a glow in different colors and color combinations on the auditorium. Above this band, the walls are modernistically arranged in step-offs rising upward and forward, in planes of straight lines, to the ceiling. On the latter is a huge painting depicting an allegory by the architects, of the arts.

The proscenium arch is unusual in its depth. Made of fluted pilasters and with step-offs leading into both the walls and the ceiling, it is approximately six feet in depth and gives the stage the effect of being much larger than it is. Modernism actualized this procedure, "good looks" was the object. But it so happens that the depth of the proscenium arch has proved an acoustical asset, for it acts somewhat as the bell of a horn in throwing out the sound waves from the stage.

The auditorium has only one floor, though provision has been made in the steel work and concrete footings for the installation of a balcony when needed without halting performances. There are 1,600 seats.

The ventilation system is of the down-ward type, the fresh air being blown down by fans from grilles near the ceiling and taken off through mushrooms on the floor. Only about 150 mushrooms are required in this system for the Pickwick. The air is not recirculated.

The theatre presents pictures and stage productions, synchronized attractions, organ solos and symphonic music.

Must Keep Equipment
In Good Repair

It is well established that all owners of theatres, public parks, and other public places of amusements, are bound to keep the premises and other accessories in repaired condition.

For example, in Asplind v. Pearce, 221 N. W. 679, it was disclosed that the operator of a roller coaster at an amusement park was sued by a patron who was injured while riding in the cars. The patron contended that the owner was negligent in permitting the apparatus to be operated at a highly dangerous rate of speed when certain parts were not in good condition.

The testimony proved that the injured patron suffered an injury to her back when the apparatus neared the foot of the first 50 foot descent or incline. She testified that the movement of the car in which she was riding down this incline, at a speed estimated at about 50 miles an hour, raised her out of her seat and that the handrail in front of her, to which she was holding, was not rigid, but moved upward an inch or two, causing her to be raised from her seat. As the car reached the bottom of the dip and took the upward grade, she was thrown violently down and back against her seat and seriously injured.

The higher Court, in holding the injured patron entitled to recover damages, stated the law, as follows:

"It is urged that the evidence is insufficient to justify the jury in finding that this handrail was in such a condition that it could move, and that, even if the jury were justified in so finding, the moving of the handrail an inch or two was not such a defect as to constitute negligence, and was not shown to have been known to defendant (park operator) or such that defendant should have known and remedied the same; also, that it was not shown to have been the proximate cause of the injury. The record has been examined, and, while the evidence as to the handrail moving and being in condition to move is not abundant, there is direct testimony of that fact ... the use of the car in such condition was negligence and a proximate cause of the injury. ... Where there is a general charge of negligence, and a charge that there is negligence in the construction and operation of an amusement device of a particular kind, and the operator is charged with the highest degree of care, evidence of the happening of other accidents, with the same apparatus and under identical conditions of the operation, would seem to be permissible."

cent case of Muller v. Harms, 221 N. W. 898, presents valuable information.

In this case it was disclosed that the owner of a theatre leased it to a tenant for a term of three years at a monthly rental of $175. Soon afterward the owner died, leaving the building to his two minor sons.

At the expiration of the lease the theatre operator interviewed the administrator of the decreed property owner, and also the latter’s wife, to secure a new lease offering an increased monthly rental of $50. The administrator, with the consent and approval of the wife of the deceased, accepted the theatre operator’s offer and entered into another lease of the theatre for a term of five years at a monthly rental of $225. After the accounts of the deceased were all settled, the administrator was discharged by the former’s wife who became the sole guardian of the two minor sons.

The theatre operator paid the monthly rents for a few months when he served notice that he would vacate the theatre building within 30 days. The wife of the decreed theatre owner brought suit against the operator to recover the monthly rental due for the balance of the term of the lease contract.

The theatre operator contended that he was not liable because the administrator, with whom he had entered into the lease, had no power to make the lease.

The lower Court dismissed the case, but the higher Court reversed this verdict, saying:

"He (administrator) entered into the new lease for the benefit of the two minor devisees, with the approval of their mother, the natural guardian. After execution of the lease, and the discharge of the ad-mistrator, while defendants (tenants) were in possession of the property as lessees, the guardian and the county court elected for the minors to take advantage of the new lease, thus enhancing the value of their patrimony. This election was a proper exercise of power committed by law to the guardian and the county court... After the administrator was discharged the new lease was effective for the purpose of enabling defendant (theatre operator) to retain possession of the property for their own benefit beyond the period fixed by the first lease. By paying to plaintiff (theatre owner) for several months the increased rent as stipulated and by continued occupation of the leased premises, defendant (theatre operator) recognized plaintiff (wife of property owner) as the guardian, as the lessor and as the administrator's successor. The lease was thus accepted by both. Plaintiff (wife of property owner) received her rent and defendant (theatre operator) continued to occupy the pre-misses as tenants. Without the consent of plaintiff the lease was not open to rejection when they gave notice that they would terminate their tenancy."

Theatre Operator Ousted

From Leased Theatre Building

Generally speaking, a person who holds a rented or leased building after the day the rented or leased period expires, is in both bound and entitled to retain possession of the property for the remainder of this period.

For instance, a person who leased a building for one year failed to vacate it on the day the lease expired. The owner sued the tenant and recovered the full rent for the second year.

Moreover, a tenant cannot retain possession of a theatre building against the
The: The owner, for a longer period than he period for which the last payment of ent was made.

For example, in Blume v. Lightle, 10 S. W. (2d) 45, it was disclosed that a theatre operator rented a theatre building from an owner for a term of five years, at a monthly rental of $50. The owner of this theatre building died before the lease was paid by the operator expired in 1922. Nevertheless, the operator continued to occupy the building until 1923, when he vacated it so that he had moved into another building erected.

The theatre operator moved into the new building when the same was completed and though the parties were unable to agree upon the rental price, the operator in the meantime paid $150 each month as rental. Afterwards, the operator’s heirs were offered $250 per month for the building from the theatre operator. The heirs informed the original tenant of the offer and gave him the preference of renting the building at that price. However, the original theatre operator refused to consider renting it at the increased price, and the heirs wrote him a letter advising that the building had been rented to the other parties and demanded that he vacate the same.

The heirs finally instituted legal proceedings against the operator to eject him from possession of the motion picture building. The original theatre operator contended that he had no right to eject him on such short notice. However, the Court held that the operator had moved into the building and have remained in possession of their property at the end of the last month for which rental was paid.

Pedestrian Entitled to Recover Damages for Injury

Generally speaking, a person injured as a result of stepping into a hole in a sidewalk is entitled to recover damages, particularly if the pedestrian exercised caution before sustaining the injury, and the defect in the sidewalk has remained un repaired or a considerable period.

For illustration, in Howard v. City of Waterloo, 221 N. W. 812, it was disclosed that a pedestrian was slowly walking along a street in front of a theatre talking with companions, when her foot entered a depression in a sunken block of a sidewalk. Her toe was caught by protruding cement which caused her to stumble and fall, sustaining injuries for which she brought suit to recover damages.

The walk consisted of three sections. One of the blocks of the middle section had cracked about two inches from the corner, the crack being irregular in shape and leaving a triangular piece with a rough and jagged edge. The portion of the block adjoining the triangular piece had sunk below the level of the remainder of the walk. The defect had been permitted to remain in the sidewalk for two years.

In view of this evidence, the Court held that the injured pedestrian entitled to recover damages for the injuries, and stated important law, as follows:

"While the city is not bound to maintain perfection in its sidewalks, it is bound to exercise reasonable care to maintain its sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition. It is shown by the record that the defect complained of existed for a period of more than two years prior to the time of plaintiff's (pedestrian’s) injury. All that is required to constitute pedestrian's due care is to exercise that caution which an ordinarily careful and prudent person would exercise under the same circumstances. The plaintiff was not bound, at her peril, to discover the defect. Pedestrians, intent on other matters, and looking out for their general course, with no prior knowledge of the dea human sense also. Zook & McCaughey have been practicing mainly in the high grade commercial building and residential field. The Pickwick is their ambitious introduction to the field of deluxe theatre designing.

R. Harold Zook peddled newspapers before he became an architect. He earned his way through Armour Institute, learning to be an architect as a guard on the Chicago elevated lines. Graduated from Armour in 1916, he became an instructor at his alma mater and also at the Chicago Art Institute. He later worked for such architects as Howard Shaw, W. G. Uffendall and Eric Hall and was a partner of Charles Morgan, the famous delineator. He has also served many architectural firms in an advisory capacity.

W. F. McCaughey, who is a Virginian transplanted to the North country, went in 1916 to the Hawaiian Islands as a member of a railroad surveying party. This was enough engineering to serve, in combination with his natural artistic bent, as the final argument in favor of architecture as a career. He received his degree in architecture from the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, in 1916. In the same year he became associated with Howard Shaw as an architect and draftsman. Followed several years on the faculty of the architectural department of the University of Illinois. After serving, in 1918 in the army, he became an assistant professor at Armour Institute, Chicago, and also served as a designer for several firms. He won the Paris Prize, final competition, in 1920, and holds other awards in architecture. He was given the Beaux Arts Certificate in 1920. He became associated with Zook in 1923.

The Proper Control of Light On Your Screen

Picture films vary as well as current conditions. Your projectionist can adjust his screen to always give you the best picture from any projection you may have. True perfection will result if you equip with PERFECTION. Current saving also is a result of PERFECTION equipment, for he need not use full current till the actual projection is started.

In the women's retiring room, where milady may find all the accessories of the older forms of luxurious comfort augmented by those of Queen Nicotine.

Where milady may powder her nose—several ladies and as many noses at once. This is the cosmetic section of the women's lounge where toilet equipment is complete.

Corner of the men's lounge, furnished with paintings, statuary and tapestries to interest the male mind and with cushioned seats to rest the male body.

LOUNGES FOR MODERN EYES AND NERVES IN BROOKLYN-PARAMOUNT
The women's rest room, a part of the women's lounge. This view shows particularly well the modernistic treatment given the Brooklyn-Paramount's lounges in general.

Corner of the spacious main lounge, where the patron may treat himself to all the essential comforts of a club. The entrance to the women's lounge is shown.

The main lounge. The Spanish gates and fixtures were specially made in Spain. Paintings, antiques and furniture pieces were likewise gathered from other countries.

Features of the new Brooklyn-Paramount's luxuriousness are its lounges. They stress a watchword of exhibiting—Service. These rooms differ from the rest of the house in being somewhat modernistic. Rapp and Rapp, Chicago and New York, were the architects.

An 800 Seat House Built in Spanish Motif

WHEN the Clifton theatre in Circleville, O., opened recently, it presented to the citizens an 800-seat house, constructed in up-to-the-minute style. The entire house is Spanish, from the curtain to the back of the theatre. There are doors set deep in narrow archways. The pilasters are of a neutral shade and finished with colored ornamental plaster. Between the pilasters wide panels of a dull shade of old rose are set. The panels are shaded to look like lights coming from the stage.

The indirect lighting is furnished by bronze chandeliers suspended from round gratings.

The center grating is a part of the ceiling decoration, which is effected by polychromed moldings and fresco work wrought into a rosette design.

All the woodwork in the house is finished in antique bronze, and where the medium colors are used on the walls and ceiling, the finish is stippled. Especially attractive are two Spanish grilles toward the front of the theatre, just over the two exits. From behind these grilles metal pipes eaves of the pipe organ.

Behind the seats, which are of soft red leather, is a plate glass partition. A modern stage with three automatic curtains is installed for presentation acts. The stage is 25 feet by 50 feet, and two large dressing rooms are fully equipped for the artists. Flood and colored lights are installed.

The lobby of the house is of marble. The foyer rail is tinted in beautiful Spanish colors and is topped with plate glass.

At the right of the foyer is the women's rest room, and to the left is the men's smoking room.

The operators' booth is 12 feet by 40 feet and is absolutely fitted and furnished with specially designed shutters which drop over the Simplex machines in case of fire. Adjacent to the operators' room, is the office, tinted in a buff color. Two large windows overlook the nearby surroundings. The building is heated by twin furnaces, over which air blown by fans passes. Automatic regulators keep the temperature of the theatre uniform at all times. Two huge blowers furnish the building with pure air constantly and can be used in the summer as a cooling system.

One of the most beautiful parts of the theatre is the marquee, which is in Spanish design. Above the marquee is an electric sign containing 490 bulbs.

The front curtain and valance are made of heavy cardboard red velour. The upper valance is made with a projecting center banner and it has festoons draping off to each side of the stage. The center banner is made richly of velour and satin, upon which is a large embroidered appliqué ornament, the whole being trimmed with ornamental rosettes and a metallic gold fringe, with the banner hanging from a wooden pole effect.

The front curtain proper, which is worked automatically, is also made of red velour trimmed with a heavy bullion fringe and several ornamental bandings in keeping with the rest. Stage settings consist of a cyclorama and a draw curtain. The cyclorama has a draw curtain in the rear of the stage, also the entire sides and the borders above. These pieces are made of a very rich combination of red and gold cloth that gives a two-tone effect under the lights. This setting can be reversed in order to get an entire gold setting.

The draw curtain which works in front of the picture sheet is made of a silver and green cloth, which also shows up beautifully under the lighting effects. The automatic curtain is controlled from the picture box by a motor that will open and close by merely pushing an electric switch.

The stage is illuminated with fourteen 100-watt footlights with the ceiling of the stage having thirty-six 200-watt white bulbs. The entire lighting system may be controlled from five different points in the theatre. The house is equipped with an inter-communication telephone system of five telephones.

The theatre is owned and operated by Harry Clifton, who is also a prominent automobile dealer in Circleville. The house was erected in record time, having been built in three months.
Safe and At Ease With SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL

All through the ranks of Exhibitors, the most successful and most at-ease are those who comprise the Army of 2000 who have equipped their theatres with SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL.

They know that their audiences and employees and investment are wholly safe from the hazardous threat of film-fires.

SENTURY SAFETY CONTROL

The positive fire preventer can be attached to any projector costs only a few cents a day.

BETTER PROJECTION

By F. H. Richardson

Give Your Work Careful Attention

A short while since I was in a large theatre in which sound has been in use for some while. A sound picture started, but the sound was enough to make the proverbial cow laugh. It bellowed forth, sank to a hum, then sounded like several well lit up chaps tackling "Sweet Adeline."

This continued maybe 15 seconds, which seemed to me to be an hour, when suddenly there was a blast of sound which I think would almost have knocked me out of the chair, had I been seated instead of standing talking with the manager. The sound then quickly settled down to normal.

"That's terrible!" the manager remarked, "and it has happened before. The projectionist says it is in the film. I would suppose they would cut that sort of thing out."

I merely answered that I would see what was wrong, and mounting to the projection room asked the men on duty what was the idea in leaving the sound gate open, to which came a somewhat sheepish answer to the effect that accidents would happen.

"Yes," said I, "but your manager tells me you have done the same thing before and laid it to the film."

"No," was the reply, "it only happened twice before and then it wasn't the gate. Once Bill (the other projectionist) and once I forgot to light the sound lamp."

I then read them a sermon about laying their own blunders to film fault and advised them that if ever such a thing again happened, to return the fader to zero before lighting the sound lamp or closing the sound gate, as the case might be, afterward again advancing the fader slowly to its cue or regular setting. Thus the cyclone of sound would be avoided, and if it be the sound lamp there would be no ill effect except the loss of the sound accompaniment of the film already projected before the fault was remedied.

They promised faithfully to observe those things, which is here set forth for your own information.

Shall you ever accidentally leave the sound gate open or the sound lamp unlighted, when you discover the fault, don't, DON'T light the lamp or close the gate until you have first Brought the Fader to Zero. If you do you will cause the theatre horns to emit a blast of sound calculated to make the audience think the war is on again, and in full blast at that.

RECORD THE FADER TO ZERO, CLOSE THE SOUND GATE OR LIGHT THE SOUND LAMP, AS THE CASE MAY BE, AND THEN SWING THE FADER SLOWLY —MARK THE SLOWLY—UP TO ITS CUE OR REGULAR SETTING.

Requirements Necessary For Installation and Maintenance Engineers

The editor of this department is continually called upon to answer letters from men who desire employment installing or maintaining sound reproducing apparatus.

The Electrical Research Products, Inc., which is a subsidiary of the Western Electric Company, handles the installation and maintenance of the Western Electric Sound Projector Equipment associated with the reproduction of sound pictures. Although there are always positions open for men of outstanding qualifications, the number of new men being taken on at present is not large.

Due to the popularity of the work there have been upwards of 100 applicants for each position to be filled. From this you will realize that you will encounter stiff competition in making an application for this work, since only men exceptionally well qualified for the work can be considered.

The qualifications necessary include a thorough background of elementary electrical theory, both A. C. and D. C., fundamental theory of vacuum tubes as applied to rectification and audio-frequency amplification and preferably some experience in installation of communication equipment. The ability to meet people and handle situations diplomatically is also of great importance.

In view of the above therefore it will be obviously a waste of time to apply for such positions unless you have the qualifications listed.

New Inventions

The list of patents published in this technical department of "Better Theatres" is furnished by our patent reporter—

WILLIAM N. MOORE
Washington, D. C.

1. In a photographic shutter, the combination with an exposure mechanism, a master member, a connection between the master member and the exposure mechanism for effecting the opening and the closing of the shutter by the movement of the master member in one direction, a pivot for holding the exposure mechanism against closing, a latch pivoted to the detent, and an actuating lever controlling the movement of the master lever to bring the detent into detaining position, of means moved by the exposure mechanism for holding the latch out of cooperative relation with the actuating lever when the shutter is closed, so that the actuating lever may be moved to control the master member in order to bring the detent into detaining position, said latch controlling means being moved by the exposure mechanism to cause the latch to move into the path of the actuating lever upon the opening of the shutter, so that the detent may be moved out of detaining position through such latch upon the next movement of the actuating lever.

1,696,281. PHOTOGRAPHIC COPYING MACHINE. Arthur W. Capo, Kansas City, Mo., assignor to Photostat Corporation, Providence, R. I., a Corporation of Rhode Island. Filed June 24, 1926. Serial No. 39,732. 13 Claims. (Cl. 38—24.)

1. In a photographic copying machine, the combination with a camera body embodying a casing and a lens, and a reversible copypaper arranged outside of the casing in the form of the lens, of a reversible sensitized sheet holder within the casing adapted to be moved into and out of the focal plane of the lens and gearing connecting the sheet holder and copypaper to effect joint movement thereof.

1,696,412. CAMERA ATTACHMENT. Ernest J. Crockett, Los Angeles, Calif., assignor to Mack Sennett, Inc., Los Angeles, Calif., a Corporation of California. Filed Feb 2, 1925. Serial No. 6,204. 4 Claims. (Cl. 88—16.)

1. A camera attachment comprising a lens having multiplying facets, one of the facets being at the axis of the lens and parallel with the opposite face of the lens, another of the facets being at an angle to the opposite face, and means to rotate the lens in line with the objective lens of a camera.

1,696,774. SOUND-REPRODUCING APPARATUS. Maximilian Wall, New York, N. Y. Filed Oct. 1, 1925. Serial No. 59,783. 23 Claims. (Cl. 179—190.1.)

1. A unit for attachment in lieu of the tone arm base upon the motorboard of a phonograph, said unit comprising a support having an opening in its lower face registering with the amplifier inlet in the motorboard, said support constituting a base for the tone arm mounted thereon and including a passageway therein merging with the tone arm to said opening, said support also mounting a telephonic reproducer and having a second passageway therein merging with said first passageway at said outlet aperture.
1,698,739. COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY. Clifford Le Roy Treleaven,Jackson Heights, N. Y., assignor to Color Cinema Productions, Inc., New York, N. Y., a Corporation of Delaware. Filed June 2, 1926. Serial No. 113,316. 2 Claims. (Cl. 85—1.)

1. An optical system of the character described comprising, in combination, two mirrors crossing each other at a common line parallel to the center line of the incident component of the system, the portions of these mirrors anterior to said line being silvered in parallel strips disposed perpendicular to said line of intersection and having intermediate transparent strips, the portion of each mirror posterior to said common line being reflecting overall, and a reflecting mirror parallel to each of said posterior reflecting portions, spaced therefrom and positioned in the path of rays reflected therefrom, said mirrors constituting means for dividing the incident beam of light into two beams which are geometrically alike and follow like optical paths.

1,695,744. STEREOSCOPIC CINEMATOGRAPHY. Lawrence Francis Savage, London, England. Filed Jan. 25, 1927. Serial No. 162,333, and in Great Britain Feb. 6, 1926. 4 Claims. (Cl. 85—164.)

1. An optical system for the production of stereoscopic cinematographic effects comprising in combination a set of separated objective lenses of equal focal length, another set of lenses in alignment with the said set of objective lenses and disposed in the focal planes thereof, said lenses being adapted for the reception of aerial images produced on the respective focal planes of the said objective lenses, a set of re-photographing lenses in alignment with the lenses of the respective sets before referred to and at a determined distance from the aerial images, and a super-imposing lens disposed adjacent to the set of re-photographing lenses, substantially as described.

1,695,921. TELEVISION APPARATUS. Samuel M. Kintner, Pittsburgh, Pa., assignor to Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, a Corporation of Pennsylvania. Filed Oct. 15, 1926. Serial No. 141,726. 3 Claims. (Cl. 179—6.)

1. In a translating device for picture transmission, a rotatable member of approximately disc form and a series of reflecting devices disposed in rotative sequence on said rotatable member, each of said reflecting devices having its reflecting surface a surface of revolution, whereby such reflecting device is capable of producing a point focus.

1,695,114. TALKING-MOVING-PICTURE MACHINE. Lee De Forest, New York, N. Y., assignor to De Forest Phonofilm Corporation, a Corporation of Delaware. Filed Dec. 7, 1923. Serial No. 679,240. 18 Claims. (Cl. 179—100—1.)

2. In a light slit assembly for a sound picture attachment, a supporting plate with an orifice therethrough, a light slit plate positioned in front of said supporting plate and formed with a slot therethrough extending to the area of said orifice, a slidable slit forming member mounted in said slot, and means for moving said member in said slot to adjust the size of the slit formed thereby.

1,695,256. APPARATUS FOR PROJECTING LIGHT. Harold A. McConagle, New York, N. Y., assignor to Arlits, Inc., New York, N. Y., a Corporation of New York. Filed Apr. 21, 1926. Serial No. 163,546. 6 Claims. (Cl. 249—1—L.)

1. An apparatus of the class described including a source of light, an optical lensing system for projecting a beam of light from said source, a light shield associated with said lensing system and including a centrally apertured support through which the aperture the light beam is adapted to pass, a plurality of plate-like members carried by said support about said aperture, and means for independently adjusting said members relative to each other.

RAMON NOVARRO'S Greatest Performance Since "Ben-Hur"—

THE FLYING FLEET is without doubt the best aviation picture thus far

IF YOU'RE AN M-G-M CUSTOMER IT'S ONE OF THE MANY SMASH HITS OF YOUR SEASON which include:

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS (Crawford), EXCESS BAGGAGE (Haines), WHILE THE CITY SLEEPS (Chaney), MASKS OF THE DEVIL (Gilbert), WHITE SHADOWS, SHOW PEOPLE (Davies-Haines), WEST OF ZANZIBAR (Chaney), A WOMAN OF AFFAIRS (Gilbert-Garbo), ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE (Haines), THE BELLAMY TRIAL and plenty more!

METRO-GOLDwyn-Mayer

"THE TRAIL OF '98" LEADS TO THE BANK!

S. W. Williamson, Majestic
Camden, S. C.

"Flying Fleet" is a corking picture and I don't mean maybe. Tell your exhibitors to get behind it with all four feet and guarantee to every mother's son in their territory. It is a real picture and will go over anywhere.

Warner Bros. because of their pre-eminent position in the talking picture field naturally have the choice of stage and screen stars. Look at the galaxy of Warner Bros. stars and see if you can match it in any other assemblage of entertainers on any one payroll.
The movie fans of your community know all about the stars and supporting players Warner Bros. bring to your screen. Now Warner Bros. stars are being made the more poetically attractive to your patrons by the enormous advertising campaign in the papers and on the air.
WARNER BROS. ARE SPENDING ALMOST TWO MILLIONS OF dollars to advertise Vitaphone Pictures to 100 million people in the leading newspapers in every important American city. The merits of Warner Bros. Vitaphone Pictures are being extolled via radio over the Columbia Broadcasting System of 28 stations to over 65 million listeners. They are being proclaimed in movie fan magazines to additional millions. The definite purpose of all this is to pack your house and create new customers every time you play a Warner Bros. Vitaphone Picture!
THE PICTURE THAT FOODEd EVERYBODY!

No. 622—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation

I have to chuckle with every mail that brings glowing accounts of the showing of “Uncle Tom’s Cabin” here, there and everywhere.

I can’t even resist the temptation to chuckle publicly and in print, because when a picture fools the whole moving picture industry with mighty few exceptions, it seems to prove something or other.

You never in all your born days had so much advice shot at you as I had when I first talked of making a great production of “Uncle Tom’s Cabin.” I was told it was old, passe, as full of holes as a Swiss cheese, a terrible gamble, an awful mistake, a gigantic blunder and what not.

This advice came from exhibitors and from most everybody in the industry. But I knew one thing they did not know—namely, that there was a terrific interest in this famous old story in the hearts of the people who pay actual money to enter movie theatres.

Vast numbers of letters had come to me direct from movie fans, many of whom are regular readers of Universal’s weekly advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post. When the first few letters came to me, I must confess that I was not inclined to pay much attention to them outside of answering them. But as the stream came steadily, steadily in, I took the matter more seriously.

It finally dawned on me that those of us who think of nothing but moving pictures are likely to lose our perspective. So I encouraged the writers who suggested making “Uncle Tom’s Cabin” and asked them why they suggested it. The invariable answer was “because it is so human and is such an everlasting love story” or words to that effect.

Well, a story which can rip the people in this day of jazz is good enough for me or for anyone else.

So I started on one of the biggest ventures of my moving picture career.

And now you know the result. “Uncle Tom’s Cabin”—pictured as it never was pictured before—is doing a land-office business for exhibitors in all parts of the world— even in countries where I had no idea there would be any interest in it.

It is this sort of thing which keeps the business alive and gives it a much needed jolt. It is this sort of thing which keeps the movie fans coming. It is this sort of thing which shows how wise it is to listen to the voice of the people instead of the voice of the too wise “experts.”

So why shouldn’t I chuckle?

THREE times George Jessel digs right into your heart in "Lucky Boy." The Jessel personality, undeniably there, does it with the aid of "My Mother's Eyes," a theme tune, and a title and carries an emotional lack of multi-sized proportions.

Likewise does wimp, over flash of fictions, worthy over all and, to sum total is all, providing you with an hour and a half of real entertain-ment. It's a Jessel furtive. He holds center stage, down stage and all other headline spots at one time. All of which is a job for an experienced trooper. But Jessel is that and does his stuff well.

never should be silent in pictures. He has one of the best recording voices in the world, a voice with a clarity and resonance that carries with it a greater effectiveness to us than in his stage appearance. In "Lucky Boy" his work is remarkable and if more vehicles can be found we would not be at all astonished if he were to outdistance Johnson. Jessel has overcome the smart alecks of youth without losing the youth and he has the emotional soul of a singing artist.

Lucky Boy

A Real Tour Jerking Melodrama

(Revised by Freddie Schader)

TIFFANY-STAHLM have turned out a box theater in "Lucky Boy" which has George Jessel as the star. Now don't fly off the handle and say that George Jessel didn't mean a thing to you when he was in Warner Bros. pictures. This one is different, and, George, who has to have made

The jazz singer, for he played it originally, has finally obtained a chance to redeem himself. He certainly does now. He's the picture and while it may not put all the weight of "The Swee-heart" on it, it has a lot on the ball and in to it. It is certainly going to make a go of itself as far as talkie pic-tography is concerned.

Bertha Bushnell, George Jessel and William K. Stennies playing George's mother and father respectively, manage to score nicely.

The tale takes George from the Amazia to the Pacific. His dad wants him to be a jeweler but he has his heart set on the stage. He tries to make good in the Bronx but proves a flop, so he takes off for San Francisco where he makes good on an evening stage and is carried off by a rich entertainer. Here he meets the girl of the story, Betty, from New York. Back in the Bronx George's folks listen to him on the radio, and the father comes down to the song doing his broadcasting and they wise him up to the fact that his mother has been training a boy, which is also carrying the girl friend back home. Once has ended the comic and sentimental barriers between the cafe singer and the boy and George becomes a Broadway star.

A DREAM PICTURE. IT'S ALL JESSEL—DIALOGUE— AND THAT MEANS ENTERTAINMENT AT APPLIANTY. WIDED HOUSES HAVE A PROFIT OF $500.

Cast:...The Jessel personality dominates. It's the Jessel arrogance as well. Margaret Quechy is the same as Jessel. And all good, include Rosa Roser, George Jessel, Stenies, Stennies, Teller, Gauve Whitman and Anoah, etc.

Comedy degree of a personality is Jessel, the show. It is not a comedy, but comes through, as you will see, the Jessel as the main man, nothing to get excited about. Neither is it true that George is the star. The latter of all is even more been entertained, just getting too much fun at your heart.

We ask you what in the space of a week, wimp and does all of the stuff. It's better at the end of a musical comedy and in the main, but the Jessel as the star. The theme song is a job well done and brings a flavor, sound, music, rhythm, etc.

"Sweeheart" RCA system used.

T. W. Wilson, very good. Author, managed by his own producing company.

AS SIMPLE AS TWO

Variable Area System Safeguards
Pathe Sound News From Camera To Screen--Its Quality Guarantee

Separate cameras for sound recording are an exclusive advantage of the "variable area" system over all others. They permit the use of special film for sound track and give unlimited range in picking up sound. Picture cameras are operated separately.

SIMPLICITY of method and mechanical perfection guarantee consistently high quality in PATHE SOUND NEWS every step of the way from the camera, through the laboratory onto the screen.

It can't go wrong! It's blunder proof. It's sure-fire in sound. It's perfect in picture.

Separate cameras and separate film record sound and scene. A special fine-grained positive stock is therefore used for the sound track—safeguarding right at the start against disturbances and "ground noise". The mobile recorder in the cameras, and a stationary recorder in the sound truck double-check against error or accident. The pictorial cameras work independently and without handicap.
Laboratory Advantages

SIMPLICITY and safety continue in the laboratory. Separate developing. No duping with its sacrificing of picture to better the sound or vice versa, as in the single negative method of other systems. Sound and picture receive the highest degree of care necessary to their technical perfection. The "variable area" sound track expresses itself in solid tones of black and white—as simple and sure in recording, processing and reproduction as a screen title. One half of the sound strip remains clear, clean area—another sure safeguard against reproduction disturbances, as contrasted with the many delicate "shadings" of grey, dark and black of the "variable density" system which cover the entire sound track and require extremely careful and accurate attention during the laboratory processing.

Variable area in black and white. That is the reason—as simple as ABC and as sure as the answer to two times two—for Pathe sound news perfection in its every issue.

The black and white sound track of the "variable area" system, simplest and surest of all sound recording methods. Note the clear area of the track as against full covered sound strip of the "variable density" methods.

Without the necessity of duping, sound track and picture, made separately, are brought together as one film strip, the qualities of each undamaged by laboratory processing.

Mr. John Cabourn

In the death last week in London of Mr. John Cabourn, proprietor and editor of The Bioscope, the world industry of motion pictures lost one of its most distinguished leaders.

Mr. Cabourn has bequeathed to the industry a long and honorable record. The record of The Bioscope under Mr. Cabourn's direction was one of conscientious and loyal service to the business. This publication, always courageous, sincere and dependable, has exerted a vast influence upon the British industry, and this influence, upon many occasions, has widened out and left its mark upon motion picture affairs elsewhere throughout the world industry.

Amidst the changing conditions in the British industry during the past few years, Mr. Cabourn's personality, business acumen and sound judgment have been a powerful helping hand to every worthwhile movement and enterprise. His shrewd conservatism and thorough dependability have contributed mightily to the advancements which the British industry has achieved during the past few years.

Mr. Cabourn possessed a militant patriotism, yet at the same time invariably displayed an understanding attitude toward the ambitions of foreign producers in the British market. In every threatened crisis between British and American film interests, Mr. Cabourn was a factor for conciliation, better understanding and mutual helpfulness. He was able consistently to be vigorously pro-British without being antagonistic. In this way his influence for better understanding and better cooperation between the British and the American trades, although never blatantly exploited, has been great.

The HERALD-WORLD extends heartfelt condolences to The Bioscope upon the passing of this fine gentleman and able editor.

Ghosting

The apprehension persists and widens to the effect that perhaps after all sound pictures are only to be a passing fancy with a part of the public and that another part of the public shall steadfastly refuse to become interested or impressed. Evidence of this apprehension is to be found in the present attitude of a number of exhibitors. Some of these declare that their public does not want sound pictures and others of them say that their public has lost interest after seeing a few sound pictures. In certain instances, theatres already have made announcements that sound pictures will be withdrawn.

In answer to all of this it may definitely be stated that regardless of what the future may disclose there is not a jot of proof at this time to support the apprehension above noted.

The only reasonable doubt is how far the sound picture will go. Whether talking pictures will eventually supplant entirely the silent picture remains to be seen. Authorities in the industry are by no means unanimous with respect to either viewpoint. It may reasonably be contended that if talking pictures are not of better quality as entertainment than the majority of those now available, they certainly will never supplant silent pictures. But in the same vein, it may be argued that if all of the product of the industry, whether it be audible or silent, does not consistently improve in quality, there will be no industry and, therefore, no occasion for arguing the question of talking or silent pictures.

It would be ridiculous to assert that audiences will not become greatly improved over present standards. The medium is yet new. Great technical problems remain to be solved. The industry's preparedness to make audiences must be brought to a higher state of perfection. But, with the efforts, brains and money that are now being invested to this end, who can doubt that great progress will not be made?

Box office records demonstrate beyond doubt that a great part of the public already is heartily interested in talking pictures. Thousands of new enthusiasts are being recruited daily. It is true that the record is not of uniform satisfaction, but uniform satisfaction is hardly ever obtainable in the amusement business. With better pictures, better reproduction and wider use of synchronization, a constantly greater audience for talking pictures cannot help but be gained.

We feel that it is a rash and unwise move for any exhibitor, at this early day, to exhibit any lack of confidence in the talking picture to his patrons. To announce the elimination of talking pictures is a step that eventually will have to be retracted.

The Michigan Case

The friction in the Michigan exhibitors' organization generated by a divergence of views relative to affiliation with the Allied States association has attracted national attention.

It is unfortunate that the question has been brought to issue at this time. Later on the basic issues involved will stand out to all concerned in higher relief and arrival at the best solution will be less difficult.

We have long pointed to the Michigan association as a model state organization. It seems very unlikely that there could be two model organizations in any one state, so the hope is that regardless of current friction there will be no formal division in the ranks of the Michigan theatre owners.

Produce Epic Silent Pictures, Hays Caution on Coast Visit

Quality Production Will Solve Censorship. Producers Told

Calls Super-Productions Even More Magnificent If Sound Possibilities Are Used

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—Will Hays' visit to Hollywood today took on the aspect of a physician's arrival upon the scene of an epidemic. On no other visit has he issued such numerous or such positive precautions. Hays has entered the production colony during a period when employers and producers were found in an almost hysterical state regarding audience production and he has attempted to quell the excitement with a few words of wisdom.

For instance, he called all the producers together this week and suggested to them that massive epic non-dialogue with huge sets and huge casts and elaborate photography be turned out each year. He suggested non-dialogue pictures on the order of "The Ten Commandments," "The King of Kings," and "The Big Parade" be produced.

"These epic pictures must and will continue to be made," Hays declared, "and will be yet more magnificent, using still further the values of the new sound possibilities to increase their quality and magnitude."

Praises Laemmle Experiment

He raised Carl Laemmle for announcing he is making the "version" of "Broadway" as well as a talking version. Hays will appoint a judging committee to decide which version is better than the pictures play in New York next April.

Hays also took the opportunity to go into censorship at a meeting of producers. The subject was discussed in its relations to audiences.

"Coincident with the realization that the motion picture industry must resist the attempt to censor speech from the screen," he said, "is the renewed determination on the part of the industry to make certain that its pictures are of such quality that no reasonable person can claim any need of censorship. This attitude that the industry must take is not only for itself but in the defense of the whole right of free speech."

"The particular part which the studio has in this effort is the most important job of all and that is care as to the quality of productions. We are attaining public confidence in this regard."

"Educators and leaders of thought are realizing what censorship of pictures really is now that censor boards are presuming actually to censor speech," Hays declared. "News as heard from the screen, the speeches of the greatest public men of the greatest occasions, are being subjected to censorship. The whole industry and the great development which is imminent of speaking films for educational purposes is endangered because of the ridiculous possibility of their being cut to pieces by censors."

The organized picture industry itself has made no strenuous protest against such censorship as has obtained, knowing that it would not spread beyond the few states which established it as a part of the war psychology and a phase of the desire of some to regulate everything, and knowing that too the American people would take care of the matter in due season.

Censorship Un-American

"Now as the direct question of free speech is involved and those few who, with more realistic judgment, insist on censoring speech itself, the industry of necessity for itself and defending the whole right of free speech must challenge that purpose. If they can censor speech from the screen so they can and will soon try to censor the speech from every rostrum, from every editorial column, from every phonograph and from every radio. The whole principle and purpose is as un-American in conception as it is ineffective in execution."

$700,000 Theatre Wrecked by Explosion

Aimed at an Adjoining Furniture Store

DETROIT, Jan. 22.—An entire business block, including the Roosevelt theatre, a neighborhood house, was wrecked by the explosion of gasoline and chemicals here late Friday night, following the show. The blast was set by bombers, police say, and was directed at a furniture store operated by John Garsi at 8351 Gratiot Avenue. The theatre adjoined the furniture store. Three men have been arrested and two of them are in a hospital with injuries.

One of the drums was driven completely through an 18-inch brick wall and was found in the theatre auditorium. Only one wall of the theatre was left standing by the blast. The owner, James N. Robertson, says he will rebuild the house.

The Roosevelt cost $700,000 to build. It was insured, $250,000 of the insurance having been carried solely against bombings.
In the Underworld of Paris

INTERESTING is, these many centuries, has been the furtive movements beneath the streets of Paris, from whence came the name "underworld." And again, as it will be yet again, this world furnishes a story, this time in Warner Brothers' "The Redeeming Sin," This production stars Dolores Costello, with Conrad Nagel, Georgie Stone, Lionel Belmore, Philippe De Lacy and Nina Quartaro in support. Howard Bretherton directed.

Miss Costello, Nina Quartaro and Georgie Stone

The Broadway sector of the motion picture industry is a proving-ground for rumors. They fly across the White Way like so many bullets across No Man's Land. This battlefield is lined with sharpshooters, ready to fire a rumor at somebody, at anybody. That rumors are heard and discussed, passed back and forth, whispered at the luncheon table or flung across the card tables, is not to be wondered at. Surprise is one of the elements of showmanship and if you can say something startling, no matter how far-fetched or fantastic, somebody will be eager to listen and even to believe.

That unverified rumors are printed is rather more surprising. A whispered conversation, a half-hearted phone call, and the most astonishing things appear in print. Whether they are true or not makes what is known in the newspaper business as a "second-hand story." Print any old thing today, and deny it tomorrow. Don't even seek authority for a wild statement, because the voice of authority might kill the story.

Some of the things that appear in print put the pinkest tabloids to shame. After all, the tabloids amuse or disgust, depending on the way you look at it. Wild stories in the motion picture industry actually do harm. They hurt business. They send stocks up and down. They injure prestige, lower morale.

Curiously, wild stories that are denied over and over again, in obvious good faith, do not injure the prestige of the man who writes them or the paper that prints them. They come and go, to make room for more. But the company injured feels the damage.

LAST week representatives of the trade press were called into the office of Nicholas M. Schenck. Present, of the Loew organization, which includes, of course, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, were Schenck, Arthur Loew, David Loew, David Bernstein, J. Robert Rubin, and Howard Dietz, representing a working capital of the company.

In obvious good faith, they separately and together denied that Loew's was to be sold or had been sold to Fox or anybody else. They insisted that the company was doing very nicely, thank you, and that published rumors of dissension in the ranks were groundless. They said that the rumors did not deserve a denial, but that they actually hurt business and therefore should be stopped once and for all. The figure of speech that transformed a rumor into a bullet is not so far fetched after all.

THE Schenck denial put the Herald-World into a rather awkward position. The rumor was never printed in this magazine and therefore the Herald-World was facing a request to deny something that had never been affirmed. The request was granted, however, in order to give the most widespread publicity to the Schenck statement, as a matter of interest to the trade.

News concerns things that actually happen. It is not good business to print wild tales. It is not a sign of friendship to retail rumors, peddle unverified reports, announce fantastic statements. It doesn't make you a good sport to print this junk.

Conjecture might better be left to soothsayers, mind-readers, lobby politicians, and those who would like to be in on conferences but are not. Reports of actual happenings are still the backbone of reporting, whether published in daily papers or in weekly magazines.

PETER VISCHER.
Exhibitors \textbf{prefer} Federal Regulations to Being Driven Out of Business, Says Statement

By Jay M. Shreck

Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, which has chosen to remain in the background since its recent organization in Chicago, is now in the open with an offensive and defensive program which it will undertake on behalf of its members.

The fact that Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel, was not relieved of his post as chairman of the federal trade commission until January 15, made silence a necessity.

No sooner, however, had his resignation from the federal board become effective than the business of conducting an exhibitor's organization was taken up. Myers caught the first train out of Washington to preside at the first meeting of Allied, held in Chicago, January 17.

It was at this meeting that the policies of the organization were formulated and the program determined upon. All sessions were executive, and not until Myers' return to Washington was any information available.

Briefly, Allied, through its president and general counsel, will concern itself for the present with the following questions:

\textbf{Block and blind booking.}

\textbf{Government regulation.}

\textbf{Arbitration.}

\textbf{Insolvent exhibitors.}

\textbf{Music lax.}

In his first statement on policies and program, Myers, while not specific in his references, drew upon the Michigan branch to speak for local exhibitors and the southern branch to speak for southern exhibitors.

Allied Will Cooperate

Allied, he said, would cooperate with other branches of the industry, but where there would be interference of a public nature, that is, an interference with the public relations of the industry of the entire country, then it was only proper for Allied to take the lead.

To the producers, he issued a warning that Allied was determined not to interfere in the legitimate activities of other branches of the industry, nor would it brook interference from them.

Myers' statement follows in full:

The Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors has been formed to meet the obvious and pressing need for an organization to promote and protect the interests of the only unorganized branch of the motion picture industry.

The functions of the several branches of the industry are distinct, even when they fall under common domination or control. The exhibition of motion pictures is a branch of the industry. Its control is vested in the exhibitors. The exhibitors control their income and the way they receive it. They control the hours of the theatre, the purposes for which it is used, and the actions of the staff.

The exhibitors are the custodians of the entertainment of the public. It is they who make the programme, and it is they who determine the number of pictures, their character, and their time to be exhibited.

The exhibitors are the agents of the pictures, and it is they who determine the manner in which they are to be distributed and advertised. They are the agents of the producers, and it is they who determine the manner in which the pictures are to be exhibited and the method of presentation.

Fox Movietone News to Release Four Complete Issues Each Saturday

New Service Starts February 2—Four Theatres in Same Territory Will Each Be Able to Play Exclusive Reel Weekly

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Fox Movietone News takes another great step forward. On February 2 it inaugurates its fourth weekly issue, and from that date four complete issues will be released each Saturday.

FROM its inception Fox Movietone News has met with success, and its popularity will doubtless continue to grow every day. It has proved a tremendous box office draw in every part of the country.

With the addition of the fourth weekly issue even greater showing will now be possible. Where there are two competing theatres with a split-week policy in the same territory each house may not be supplied with two issues weekly, allowing each house to change its Movietone News with the change in program.

Where there are four theatres in the same territory each with weekly changes, each theatre may play an exclusive Movietone News each week. There are many booking combinations possible for competing theatres whereby each theatre may play exclusive issues each week.

Typical of the scope and interest in Movietone News are the three issues of January 16, in which are presented shots from Italy, Florida, Madison Square Garden, a history of Dartmouth, France, Columbia university, the "Los Angeles" Zeppelin over the Gulf of Mexico, Portugal, Texas Guinan's night club, St. Moritz in Switzerland and others.

These three issues for this same week present such personalities as Al Smith, American Legion Commander, McKnight, Post Master General New, and Texas Guinan.

It is interesting to note that Movietone News is now giving its cameramen and sound recorders the bottom of each title announcing the next news event the name of both the cameraman and sound recorder who photographed sound record of the event is given. It is not at all unlikely that cameramen and sound recorders will build up reputations and names for themselves, just as do cameramen and sound recorders of other departments of this innovation in giving the men credit for their work.

The continuation of the popularity of Fox Movietone News, six theatres within the Times Square theatre district in New York run Movietone News. The Roxy uses part of all three issues each week, the Mark Sired, Capitol and Gaity use issue A, and Loew's State uses A and B for the split week program. Loew's Forty-Second is the sixth house.

A M P A Makes Woodhull Honorary Member; Frolic Slated for Astor, Mar. 2

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—R. F. Woodhull, president of M P T O A, became an honorary member of the A M P A at a gala meeting last Thursday. In honor of the occasion, Michael Comerford of the Comerford Circuit; Martin Smith of Ohio, past president of the M P T O A; and William Benton of the Benton Circuit, president of M P T O A, presented Woodhull with an illuminated certificate of honorary membership. In presenting the membership, President Harvey emphasized the fine co-operation of both the exhibitors' and publicity men's organizations in fostering constructive movements for the betterment of the motion picture business. Harvey was recommended by the M P T O A to the A M P A to send a member to address the national convention at Toronto.

The annual frolic of the A M P A will be held at the Grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor on March 2, under the title, "The Hollywood Masque Ball." This year the "Naked Truth Dinner" has been laid aside.

For the first time, the general public will be admitted. Nils Grenland, the famous "T. C. O. broadcasting fame and a member of the A M P A, will be master of ceremonies and will arrange the entertainment. One of the most beautiful chorus girls. John Flinn, vice president of Pathe and an employee of the A M P A, has arranged with George Le Maire to give the winners a contract for $200 a week to appear in one of the new all-talking comedies which Le Maire is producing for Pathe.

The entertainment committee, under the chairmanship of Alex Moss, includes Lou Rydell, Leon Bamberger, Jack Harwood, Ed McNamara, Bernard Randall and Dave Bader. The ticket committee consists of Jim Beechroft, chairman; P. A. Parsons, Al Selig, Jim Ringle, Harvey, Herbert, S. Berg, Harry Blair, Bert Adler and Rutgers Neilson. An effort will be made to sell 2,000 tickets at $10 each.

Slayer Electrocuted for Killing Theatre Manager

(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22.—Charles F. Mellor, convicted slayer of Max T. Harrison, assistant manager of the Cross Keys theatre, in the city, escaped from the jail at midnight. Mellor, a youth of 23, was the leader of the bandits in one of the most daring holdups staged in this city. On March 23, 1928, Harrison was killed in the robbery of the day's receipts from the theatre to the bank, and Miss Martha Yetter, a 17-year-old bystander, was wounded and later died.

Oregon Censors Demand Showing of Whole Film

(Special to the Herald-World)

PORTLAND, ORE., Jan. 22.—Discussing sound pictures at the monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Censor's Board, it was agreed that such pictures would have to be viewed in theatres so equipped.

Exchanges were asked that in future they specify whether the entire film to be viewed was a silent or sound production, and that hereafter speaking pictures would not be passed simply by the script being read, but the entire film would be heard, so that the voice reproductions, must be shown.

Theatre Saved from Fire Razing 4-Story Building

(Special to the Herald-World)

HAMILTON, OHIO, Jan. 22.—Destruction of the Rialto theatre seemed imminent for several hours during an early morning fire which last week destroyed a four-story building next door.

Cinetone Sells for $395 Complete; Has Steel Baffle Board

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—With a steel baffle board as one of its features, the Cinetone is one of the latest non-synchronous musical devices to be put on the market. It sells for $395 complete and is the most compact of its class. It consists of a Samson baffle unit and two Bodine motors, Webster pickups, (Erla pickup is furnished on request) and Sonochorde dynamic speaker. The cabinet is enclosed in an all-metal cabinet with a baked gold finish, although any color will be furnished. A small cue sheet stand which fastens on the cabinet is also furnished. A microphone may be supplied as additional equipment.

A special feature of the cabinet is the hinged top which may be left horizontally upon which to place records, or it may be lowered to a vertical position where it rests in the cabinet. The A. C. current supply is controlled by a single switch. When this switch is thrown, current is supplied to the amplifier, field winding of dynamic speaker and motor turntables. However, each motor is also controlled by separate switches so that either motor or both may be stopped or started by throwing the motor switches.

When desired, the equipment may be purchased on two months' deposit, remaining $205 to be paid within six months.

Sees 7 Shows in 2 Days, Then Ready to Go Home

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—After seeing his seventh moving picture show in two days, Robert Wright, a 14-year-old Philadelphia boy, told a New York policeman he would like to go home. The boy explained that instead of going to school on Monday he decided to go to New York on $5 he had earned running errands for a butcher after school hours.

He spent two of the five dollars to reach New York by bus. Then, after attending four picture shows, he walked into a hotel and wandered upstairs to an unoccupied room, where he spent the night unnoticed. The last of his money was used in seeing three more shows. When his father arrived in New York he yielded to the boy's plea to see one more show before he brought him home.

First National Offers Imposing Product with Vitaphone a Star

Ten Pictures Will Be Released Between Feb. 10 and April 14

Same Productions in Silent Form Will Go to Exhibitors Between January 27 and March 31

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—With Vitaphone as one of its biggest stars, First National has announced for release during the next three months the most imposing list of pictures for such a period in its history.

Beginning February 10 with the release of "Weary River," the 50 per cent dialogue and singing picture starring Richard Barthelmess, 10 pictures will be released between this date and April 14. The same pictures in silent form will be released between January 27 and March 31.

This releasing list was effected by a re-division of the schedule so that exhibitors might have immediate benefit of the arrangement between First National and Vitaphone, according to Ned E. Depinet, First National's general sales manager.

Following are the First National-Vitaphone productions:

"Weary River," February 10, starring Richard Barthelmess, is a more than 50 per cent dialogue and singing picture which opens January 24 at the Central theatre, New York, at $2 top. It gives Barthelmess the most appealing role of his entire career and is expected to be a sensation both with and without sound.

Mystery Melodrama

"Seven Footprints to Satan," February 17, is a mystery melodrama, called better than "The Haunted House." The cast includes Thelma Todd, Creighton Hale, William V. Mong and Sheldon Lewis. There is no dialogue, but a creepy, spooky succession of sound effects.

"Children of the Ritz," February 24, features Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill. This Vitaphone production is strengthened by a peppy musical and sound score. Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill are called one of the most popular teams on the screen.

"The Divine Lady," March 30, stars Corinne Griffith in the alluring role of Lady Hamilton. It has spectacle, romance and drama, all enhanced by the Vitaphone score. Talking sequences are not used in "The Divine Lady" because the story does not lend itself to dialogue.

Another Sills-Mackaill Vehicle

"His Captive Woman," March 10, has Milton Sills and Dorothy Mackaill and is a George Fitzmaurice production. Both dialogue and sound add to the effectiveness of this story of the South Seas. In an entirely different type of role, Miss MacKail and Sills are declared fully, as effective as they are in "The Barker."

"Why Be Good," March 17, is made from a story especially written to suit Colleen Moore's personality, and is enlivened by music and sound effects. "Why Be Good" will show the star at her peppiest.

"Love and the Devil," March 24, with Milton Sills, is a colorful romance of Venetian night life in which Sills is supported by the exotic Maria Corda. Vitaphone effects are a feature of this production.

Adapted Stage Play

"Saturday's Children," March 31, is an adaptation of the famous stage play, in which Corinne Griffith is supported by Grant Withers.

"The Man and the Moment," April 7, with Billie Dove, is a George Fitzmaurice production. This is an Elinor Glyn story in which the famous author weaves an exciting romance around the fast young set of today.

"Hot Stuff," April 14, has Alice White in a jazzy story that promises to surpass both

Three Radio Hookups for "Weary River" Premiere

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Three national and international radio hookups have been effected by First National for the premiere of Richard Barthelmess' Vitaphoned "Weary River" at the Central theatre Thursday.

The first was the singing of "Weary River" Sunday over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Company. The second was last night in the Warner Jubilee Hour. The third is for the night of the premieres W2XAL and a rebroadcast by ZLO in London, AFT in Berlin and FL in Paris.

Among those who have accepted invitations to the premiere are:

Countess Castell, Count and Countess Forticelli-Gueli, Count and Countess Dr. De Magistr, Count Borsowsky, Count Carl Arne, Jula, Baroness von Schon, Countess de Pronk, Lady Molton, Baroness BempeL, Mrs. Richard T. W., Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Goldschlag, and Mrs. William Co. Demarest, James Wolf, Mr. Rafael Dias, the consuls of France, Germany, Italy, China, and the vice-consul of Great Britain.

Finds Town Unfavorable To Sound Films and Drops Them, Says 3-Column Ad

Decision of the Strand theatre at Huntington, W. Va., to discontinue sound and talking pictures, was announced last week in a three-column newspaper advertisement.

This ad, a tear-sheet of which was mailed to the Herald-World by the Smith Amusement Company, carried this unusual statement:

"Important announcement from the Strand. Realizing that sound and talking pictures are not being accepted generally by the people of Huntington and being anxious to please our patrons, sound and talking pictures have been discontinued. Beginning Monday, January 14th, on the main matinee and evening performances pictures will be accompanied by an orchestra of real live artists under the direction of Prof. Gaither, former assistant conductor at Roxy, New York."

Rosenzweig Names Three RKO Branch Managers

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Charles Rosenzweig, general sales manager of RKO productions, (FBO) announces three new changes in the personnel of RKO branch managers, W. E. Matthews will go from San Francisco office to manage Seattle, replacing A. H. Huot. E. A. Lamb will go to Portland, replacing W. T. Withers, while George Seach has been appointed acting manager in San Francisco.
For Community Work, Take Cases of Joe Franklin and Ray Tubman

These Ottawa Theatre Managers Have Plenty of Irons in Fire at All Times And It Doesn't Hurt Attendance

(Special to the Herald-World)

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—For community workers and boosters, it would be hard to beat in Canada at least, a pair of exhibitors here in Ottawa, Ontario. Although their activities are along parallel lines, their community endeavor does not clash or overlap in any respect.

These two excellent boosters are J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's theatre, and Ray Tubman, manager of the Regent theatre. They are both busy trying to obtain tourists and industries for the Canadian capital. He is a director of the Ottawa Humane Society and does some real work in that direction. When Rotary decided to help the crippled children or the orphans, Franklin says, "I'm for it." His special Christmas show for the poor children played to a noisy audience of future youngsters.

When there was a big scare about Ottawa's water supply, Joe Franklin was an active member of the special committee of the Board of Trade that investigated the question and brought in a recommendation for a new water system that was later adopted. When Rotary entertained a crowd of visitors from the British Isles or the United States, Joe Franklin places his theatre at the disposal of the club and the city's guests are his "guests at a performance." Then, he is the art collector of note.

Helps Boys' Work

Take Ray Tubman. The Kiwanis Club needed some money for boys work. Tubman put on a midnight show at the Regent that netted the club a tidy sum and didn't do him any harm. Ottawa Kiwanians put on a gigantic ball and cabaret, drawing a patronage of 5,000 revellers. Ray Tubman who staged the celebration, working on it when he might have been enjoying sleep. For the Christmas holiday, Tubman held his special performance for poor children at both the Regent and Imperial theatre—and it was Tubman who did practically all the work.

Aliens Sports Organizations

The Kiwanians put on their annual club show at another local theatre and Tubman is one of the committee chairman, of course. The Cyber Club of Ottawa wanted to do something for needy boys and it was the natural thing for them to seek Tubman in the matter. Result, a special morning show at the Regent. When sound pictures came along, Tubman and Franklin conducted occasional military features when units of the local garrison parade to the individual theatres, giving the troops a treat. Franklin and Tubman are frequently "mentioned in dispatches" in the local newspapers for their cooperative community work. Both are natural-born boosters and cooperatists, whether it means direct business to them or not, but they have become so popularly and widely known because of their sincere attitude toward common interests that it can't help but boost their theatres too.

Marks Brothers-Paramount Antitrust

Suit Settled "Amicably" Out of Court

Marks Brothers' antitrust suit against Paramount, Balaban & Katz and others, was brought to a close in Chicago last Monday, January 21, by agreement of counsel. Efforts to settle the case out of court, renewed in New York last week when a deposition from Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, was called off, culminated Monday in an agreement which both parties describe briefly as a settlement.

Specific terms of the adjustment were withheld according to a contract stipulating the information obtained could be given to the state. A suit which was brought last June by the Chicago circuit against the Paramount interests and six producer-distributors, charging conspiracy with the object of preventing Marks Brothers from continuing in business, was settled to the satisfaction of all parties and a money consideration.

Besides Paramount and subsidiaries, the other defendants involved in the settlement are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, First National, Pathé, United Artists, Universal and individuals associated with the companies named.

Hundred Wisconsin Exhibitors Meet on Joining Allied States

(Special to the Herald-World)

Four Brooklyn Robbers Pay Way, Then Hold Up Manager and Get $1,100

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Brooklyn's second motion picture theatre robbery within two weeks took place Sunday night when four armed men held up Irving Berman, manager of the Capitol, and escaped with the $1,100 day's receipts. The men paid their way in and went directly to the manager's office. In leaving they were seen by the house policeman, who, however, did not become suspicious.

Two Sundays previous, eight bandits held up the Fox Foley theatre and after a running gunfight escaped with $3,000.

Pathe Sound News Will Become Weekly Release On February 3 Schedule

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Pathe Sound News will become a weekly release with issue number 7 which is on the Pathe short feature schedule for the week of February 3. Other subjects to be released on this program are "Calling Hubby's Buff," a Mack Sennett, and "Aspen Falls," "Sweet Adeline," a Grantland Rice sportlight, "Mild and Mighty," Chapter 7 of the serial, "The Tiger's Shadow," entitled "The Tiger's Chivalry," Two episodes of the Day No. 6 and Pathe Revue No. 6.

Schenck Hits Loew-Fox Rumor As Deliberate Misstatement
Declares Loew and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Will Continue As Progressing Unit in Industry—Denies Reports Published in Some Trade Papers

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The huge Loew organization, and with it Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will continue to be a progressing unit in the motion picture industry. Nicholas M. Schenck, president of the company spoke with pride of the growth and strength of the organization here today.

Schenck vigorously denied rumors to the effect that the Loew organization has been sold to Fox, or that negotiations for a sale are underway. His denial was supported by Arthur Loew and David Loew; David Bernstein, and J. Robert Rubin, all present at a meeting in the Schenck office. Schenck said that the group represented a working majority of the stock in the company.

Rumors of some change in the Loew organization brought this outspoken statement from Schenck:

"It seems incredible that articles affecting the affairs of a great company can be published in some of the trade papers upon anonymous information and more amazing that they can be republished after an official denial.

"It seems unbelievable that an utterly false rumor, such as the one of an arrangement by which Fox is about to purchase Loew's, Inc, can be so credited by a trade paper that it Food is an imminent fact.

"While it is not my intention to dwell too long on the methods of printing news which come from anonymous sources, it is my intention to make one final and unqualified statement regarding the alleged deal. It is this: There is not a particle of truth in any rumors that any of the interests that bear the name of Loew or that are connected with the great business built up by H. W. Loew are for sale, or that they are a party to any merger.

"There has been never been negotiation with Fox or any other corporation or individual, looking toward the sale of Loew's, Inc., or Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Any story to the effect that the Loew interests are to be merged or sold is a deliberate misstatement.

"It is true there has been an in which rumored big deals in the motion picture industry were denied in advance only to be consummated after all, but this is not such an instance and I repeat there is no foundation for the story that Loew's is selling out.

"Many of these rumors have stated that banking interests representing the companies involved were making the arrangements. Let me state with all the emphasis in my power that there are no banking interests authorized to speak for the Loew company. Our interests are our own. We are self-controlled and have no representatives.

"It has been said to me also that Mrs. Marcus Loew plans to sell her stock in the company. This is not so. Mrs. Loew will not dispose of her stock. I hope that you will cooperate with me in putting an end to these false reports."

Chain Launched to Dot Japan with Elaborate Motion Picture Houses

TOKYO, Jan. 12.—[By Mail].—A corporation has been formed here for the purpose of erecting large motion picture theatres in principal cities, and to buy and distribute films. It is called the Nihon Eiga Kogyo Company, Ltd. and has a capital of 3,500,000 yen, all of which is paid in. It is planned to increase the capital later.

First theatre venture is "the most gorgious motion picture palace in the Orient," to be located here in a nine-storey building. It will have a capacity of 3,800.

What Exhibitors Are Saying About Exhibitors Herald-World

"Not since the days of the 'dinosaur' of 'The Lost World' fame, have I had occasion to correspond with the only real paper in the field, other than to renew my subscription. And now—I return to the fold in the interest of house organs.... This is also my first opportunity, though a little late, to congratulate you on the mergers or combinations in the H. W. M. greatest sector of this business. Packed houses, fair crowds or 'bops,' we at least have the Herald-World to look forward to each week."

"When I stop and think of the little, thin pink 'World' we used to get back in 1909-10, two dollars is a small price. Wouldn't do without it for $5 a year."

Four Vermont Measures Call for Seat Tax—Laxness of Theatre Owners in Organization Interest Despite Proposals Before Lawmakers Charged by Biechele

State legislatures are swinging into action with their winter sessions and in at least four to date the interests of exhibitors are directly concerned. In Vermont three bills call for a 10 per cent admission levy and a fourth would lay an assessment on all admissions of 50 cents or more.

In New York state a bill has been introduced to provide for one day rest in seven for projectionists. Laxness of organization interest of exhibitors is charged by R. R. Biechele, president of the M.P.T.O. of Kansas-Missouri, just as the Kansas legislature is taking up the matter of a 5 per cent amusement tax and censorship of talking pictures and Missouri theatre owners are facing the prospect of introduction of several inimical proposals.

Four Seat Tax Bills
Up to Vermont Solons
(Special to the Herald-World)

MONTPELIER, VT., Jan. 22—Exhibitors of Vermont are uniting to oppose four bills introduced in the Vermont legislature here this week, which propose taxing the gross receipts of all theatres to aid in raising funds for re-construction of old buildings. These roads were washed out in the floods more than a year ago.

Four separate bills have been proposed, under which Vermont would propose to levy a four per cent tax on all admissions. The fourth would levy a tax on all admissions charged of 50 cents or over.

Public has sent Myron Shellman as counsel to oppose the bills in its behalf and to act for independent exhibitors who care to join in the opposition. Shellman has established his office at the Playhouse in Montpelier. Already many Vermont exhibitors have notified him of their hearty cooperation.

Many Vermont theatres are small houses, some operating only two or three days a week. It is pointed out that imposition of a 10 per cent tax would wipe out many, if not all, of these theatres. Since the flood, many theatres have had a struggle to continue operating.

One Day Rest in Seven Asks for Projectionists
(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 22—The first legislation of interest to the motion picture industry to receive consideration from the New York State legislature made its appearance here last week when Senator John F. Williams, of Troy, introduced a bill seeking to amend the state labor law to the end that projectionists be given one day of rest in seven. The measure was drafted last week by the state bill drafting commission at the request of Harry Brooks, of Troy, for many years president of the projectionists' union in his home city.

Inquiry among exhibitors of Albany and Troy as to the attitude they will take on the bill revealed there will be found a very strong opposition to the measure from exhibitors throughout the entire state. Exhibitors are not opposed to giving operators one day's rest out of seven, but they are of the opinion that if this bill becomes a law, it will add materially to the overhead expense of projection.

Furthermore, the theatre industry, theatre employes four projectionists, another two and a third employs one, the three theatres paying a total of $410 a week for the projectionists, the unemployment fund running from $40 to $75 a week. The exhibitors figure that with the passage of the bill and its becoming a law they will have to add another man who will receive about $50 a week, and who will be a sort of "swinging man," going from theatre to theatre in order that the regular operator may be relieved. This would mean an additional overhead of about $16 a week to each of the three theatres.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 22.—With injurious legislation in both the Missouri and Kansas legislative bodies this one day's rest to projectionists is coming on the heels of a new tax bill to affect the theatres in Kansas-Missouri. The M.P.T.O. of Kansas-Missouri is confronted with another problem even more serious, a laxness in organization interest of exhibitors, President R. R. Biechele of the M.P.T.O. K.-M. announced this week.

"While the Kansas legislature is endeavoring to pass measures requiring a 5 per cent amusement tax and legalize the censorship of talking pictures, there is a woefully small number of the 500 exhibitors in Kansas, to say nothing of that in Western Missouri, who have not paid their dues in the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri," Biechele said.

"I am not making any effort to pose as a hero, but I have been necessary for me to take money out of my own pocket to go to Topeka, Kansas state capital, and fight injurious legislation there. I exhibited Kansas and Western Missouri are of the opinion that they can sleep quietly in their respective home towns and have their interests protected at the state capitol, they are due for a sad awakening."

"Suppose the proposed 5 per cent amusement tax on motion pictures becomes a law. In a comparative few days that tax would amount to more than one year's dues in the exhibitor organization. Suppose Kansas legalizes the bill, they make a fine time of talking pictures. What kind of a muddle is going to throw the industry into?"

"The fact that a lot of theatre owners still believe in a figurative Santa Claus. They think some guardian angel will look after their interests without one whit of cooperation on the part of the exhibitors. Many theatre owners won't fight until after they have been cracked between the eyes with a hammer and then it usually is too late."

"There are several detrimental bills to be introduced in the Missouri legislature, I am informed, but the emergency problem right now is first. The exhibitors, Kansas tax and talking censorship proposals."

New Saenger at Biloxi Opens with Sound Film
(Special to the Herald-World)

Biloxi, Miss., Jan. 22.—The new Saenger Theatre in this Mississippi amusement place, operated by Saengers Theatres, Inc., of New Orleans, was formally opened last night before a capacity audience of 2,500 people to present a first feature film program. The exercises were presided over by Rev. E. A. De Miller, rector of the Church of the Redeemer. The invocation was given by Rev. Father Keenan of the Church of the Nativity. Addresses were delivered by civic leaders.

Public All Washed Up With Machine Music, (Says Musicians' Head)
(Special to the Herald-World)

FORT WORTH, Jan. 22.—The public is sick of mechanical music in theatres—all washed up with it. This is no kidding, either—at least it was not intended to be by Joseph Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, who said things to that effect at a union musicians' dinner given in his honor here last week. He said:

"Even if it does prove a success," he said, "theatres will be the graveyard of music rather than the center for its development." In other words, even if it's good, music lovers won't like it. Continuing, Weber said, among other things:

"We leave it to the public. Mechanical music is like a photograph—it carries none of the soul of the musician. Already people are beginning to rebel against it, and the novelty is hardly worn off. I have seen this all over the country."

R K O Regional Sales
Meeting Takes Up Sales,
Distribution Problems
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—A regional meeting was held by R K O (FO) Productions, Inc., this week to discuss the sale of sales and distribution problems. Charles Rosenzweig, general sales manager, and Myron Schnitzer and Lee Marcus addressed the sales force. Others from the home office who attended were Joseph S. Skelly, manager of the advertising department and A. Tuchman, accessories sales manager.

The branch managers who were present were George E. Athabas, Atlanta; William H. Gardiner, Boston; H. T. Dixon, Buffalo; William Conn, Charlotte; C. B. Ellis, Jacksonville; John J. Lane, New Haven; Cleve Adams, New York; Jerome Safron, Philadelphia; A. H. Schnitzer, Pittsburgh, and F. L. McNa,me, Washington.

Police Defeat Holdup Plot
By Arrest of Youths, Girl
(Special to the Herald-World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 22.—Confession of a 16-year-old youth led to the arrest of a young man and a girl companion here Tuesday night in connection with a holdup at the Apollo theatre. The youth told detectives that the three planned to rob the manager of the theatre when he started to the bank with the theatre receipts. The two young men were ushers at the theatre. It was decided to arrest the two rather than permit them to proceed with their plans and walk into a police trap.

Kunsky Is Recuperating
After Appendix Removal
(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Jan. 22.—John H. Kunsky, head of the theatrical chain here bearing his name, is recuperating from an operation for appendicitis at a local hospital, it was reported last week. He appeared at his offices as usual on Tuesday, January 15, and the operation was performed the next day. Physicians say this is a satisfactory and that he is now convalescent.

Fire Destroys Cozy
(Special to the Herald-World)

VILLISCA, Ia., Jan. 22.—Fire that started in the early morning on January 19, destroyed the Cozy theatre. Total damage was not determined.
Off for the West Coast to begin production of Sono-Art audiens. Shown leaving New York are: O. E. Goebel, president; George W. Weeks, vice president; Eddie Dowling, star of the first picture, "Broadway Bound"; and Thomas A. Lynn, secretary and treasurer.

Darryl Francis Zanuck, for some time studio supervisor for Warner Brothers, who has been appointed associate executive.

Joseph J. Schnitzer, president of RKO Productions, receiving the signatures of Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, co-authors of "The Front Page," stage hit now running in New York and Chicago, to contracts to write for the 1929-30 program.

Vice presidents all. Lee Marcus, former general sales manager for FBO and newly appointed vice president in charge of distribution, is shown while on his recent visit to the Coast, in front of the studio with William LeBaron, vice president in charge of production, and Vice President C. E. Sullivan.

MPTOA president honored by motion picture advertising men. James Beecroft, chairman of the ticket committee for the AMPA "Hollywood Masque Ball," presenting ticket to Pete Woodhull after he was made an honorary member of the AMPA. At right, M. E. Comerford of the Comerford circuit.
Oh, East is East and—But not we shall not pull that one. Besides, its accuracy has been sorely questioned—is questioned, in fact, in the new Fox production, "Let's Make Whoopee," which Raymond Cannon directed. Conrad Nagel and Bo Ling, Chinese actress, are the players shown. The cast includes June Collyer, Sharon Lynn and Arthur Stone.

Another Bow for the screen. William Bow is shown with Cousin Clara, in whose next Paramount production, "The Wild Party," he will make his debut in pictures. Dorothy Arzner will direct.

What the wild waves are saying, as translated by Wesley Ruggles and typed by La Rayne DuVal—or perhaps some new ideas for the Paul Whiteman production which he is directing for Universal. If so, surely there is inspiration on both sides of him. Miss DuVal is in Ruggles' previous production, "The Haunted Lady."
The dramatic language of love. "I love you" or "Ich liebe dich"—whazza difference? The result is the same—ecstasy, heart-aches, newspaper headlines, novels, photoplays, all for the laudable purpose of making life more interesting. This contribution is from Joe May's new UFA production, "Asphalt." Betty Amann and Gustav Frohlich are the players shown in this scene.

Right: A memorable feast for the eyes. But Marie Wells also lends an exquisite voice to the Warner Bros.' operetta, "The Desert Song."

There have been "Out of the Ruins," "The Wheel of Chance," "Scarlet Seas," "Weary River" and others, one almost right after another. So Richard Barthelmess has been in New York vacationing. The First National star is shown above out for a stroll down Park Avenue with Mr. Barthelmess and a favorite friend of the family.

Business brought Leslie C. Wicks, First National sales manager in Australia, back to the States, but pleasure was unavoidable as arriving at the studio, he was greeted by Doris Dawson, contract player.
Buffalo Prefers Talking Films
But Wants Silent Shown, Too
Five Out of Six Oppose Limiting Sound in Pictures to Effects and Music, Straw Vote Reveals to H. M. Addison at Great Lakes Theatre
(Special to the Herald-World)
BUFFALO, Jan. 22.—Most Buffalo folk prefer talking pictures to silent but the majority of them would not have the silent films entirely eliminated. This is apparent in a straw vote just completed by H. M. Addison, managing director of the Great Lakes theatre, among the patrons of his playhouse.

On the other hand, the vote shows practically all the music-loving population of the city, long noted for its activity in singing societies, particularly Polish and German organizations, prefers orchestral music with its show, despite the splendid musical organizations which have been drafted to play the synchronized scores for pictures shown at the Great Lakes theatre.

Five out of six of the persons who participated in the vote are not in favor of limiting sound in pictures to sound effects and music, as would be indicated by the vote on talking picture patronage in Buffalo, but are divisionally divided on the proposition of all and part-audiences.

All declared their interest in talking pictures has increased but five out of six admitted attendance at talking motion picture performances did not lessen their attendance at legitimate shows. The vote as compiled by Addison was:

Do you prefer talking pictures? Yes, 1927, no, 1300.

Do you prefer silent films eliminated? Yes, 654, no, 1365.

Do you prefer orchestral music to synchronized score? Yes, 1941; no, 52.

Would you limit sound in motion pictures to effects and music? Yes, 351; no, 1635.

Do you like part talks? Yes, 901; no, 1001.

Is your interest in talkies increasing? Yes, 1950, no, 43.

Is your interest waning as the novelty wears off? Yes, 32; no, 1961.

Do talks lessen your attendance at stage plays? Yes, 100; no, 1003.

The vote on favorite talking picture actor and actresses was so split up that no count could be made, it being of interest, however, that four favorite actors and actresses, playing small parts, but possessing good looks and a good voice, received a large number of votes.

Allied States Comes Into Open; Myers Tells Aims

making the argument to settle such differences within the industry.

The exhibitors do not want government regulation for the sake of regulation. If they can accomplish their legitimate ends without regulation, they will be entirely satisfied. But they are not unmindful of the fact that the industry now operates under many forms of government regulation from which it has been relieved by the amendment in the Northwest theatre industry, and they do not take lightly or forget the possible effect of new legislation. The exhibitors do not wish to hold back the progress of the industry, and they are willing to abide by the law, but they do not want to lose the advantages enjoyed by some of the other industry branches because of the government interference.

The exhibitors would rather not be regulated; but if they are, they are remaining in business subject to regulation, and being driven out of business for lack of regulation, they would choose the former.

Interchangeability

The burden incident to the readjustment to sound pictures is a matter of distribution among exhibitors. One manufacturer of sound equipment, claiming basic patents, has agreements with the producers of film that such film shall not be leased for reproduction on machines not made or approved by him. The reproduction equipment of this manufacturer is expensive and the company is far behind in its installations.

Meanwhile the theatres having such equipment have an incalculable advantage over those that have not. There is room for the suspicion that the interest exercised by those who have the agreements is not over-anxious to terminate it. There are other reproducing devices which are immediately available, but have been pronounced unsatisfactory, and are cheaply made, and exhibitors having such installations are having difficulties in the way of securing data because of the restrictive covenants in the license agreements. In numerous cases the film has been absolutely refused.

From such study as I have been able to give the matter in the short time that has elapsed since I took active charge of the Allied States Association, I have come to the conclusion that the holding up of the industry is being held up by the Motion Picture Patents Company and the United Shoe Machinery Company, and the United States Supreme Court.

The situation appears to call for action by the Government in the public interest. Such a proceeding, if affecting general relief, should be sought for by the affected general interest. Several instances of refusal to lease has occurred, and no equipment whatever is to be submitted to the proper authorities in the expectation that the Government will act. It appears that the Allied States Association will cooperate with individual members in an effort to find a prompt solution of their individual difficulties.

Arbitration

Public policy favors arbitration and so far as I am aware there are no objects to any system for the prompt, economical and fair adjustment of disputes, and the interests of the industry may be furthered by the arbitration of such disputes. It is possible for the industry to bring the arbitration of contracts which are lacking in the United States of America v. Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, No. 45-100, in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. Numerous exhibitors with whom I have discussed this case have found serious fault with the answer filed on behalf of the defendant. The support of their criticisms will be collected and sifted, and, if a settlement is found impossible, a petition for leave to intervene will be filed if that course shall seem advisable.

There is a fundamental objection in exhibitor circles that there should be more equity and less law in the practice of arbitration in the industry. The inequality that has existed between exhibitors and distributors in the matter of rights and preparation will be in a measure overcome through the agency of the Allied States Association. However, the rule that the arbitrators shall not depart from the strict letter of the contract really takes the practice out of the field of justice and into that of simple injustice. The rule that the arbitrators shall not depart from the strict letter of the contract really takes the practice out of the field of justice and into that of simple injustice. The rule that the arbitrators shall not depart from the strict letter of the contract really takes the practice out of the field of justice and into that of simple injustice. The rule that the arbitrators shall not depart from the strict letter of the contract really takes the practice out of the field of justice and into that of simple injustice.

In such a case it is hard to discover what part arbitrations have achieved that have been understood and employed, has played in the matter.

Music Tax

Regardless of considerations of justification this tax proves to be a distinct disadvantage that will affect the charge imposed on the exhibitors of motion pictures. The exhibitors have called the question with some care and announced that it could not be accomplished under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law because interstate commerce was not affected. The sole support claimed for the tax is the copyright law, but the claim that this law supports the tax in its present form, and, assuming it does, whether or not the copyright law ought to be amended, are questions which will be carefully studied.

Present at the January 17 meeting were W. A. Steffes of Minnesota and North and South Dakota; Col. H. A. Cole of Texas; C. Ritter and Glenn Crof of Michigan; Joseph Seider and Sid Samuelson of New Jersey; Charlie Canavan of Chicago, operating theatres in Indiana; B. D. Cockrill of Indiana; E. P. Smith of Iowa; and Herman Blum of Maryland.

Others Believed Represented

It is believed that other states were represented, but which ones is definitely known.

Seider and Samuelson attended as observers for New Jersey. While nothing definite can be said, there are indications that other states will cast their lot with Allied.

The question of Wisconsin joining Allied has not been settled, although some action is expected soon.
Do You Use "Talkie," or—

Herewith are presented in the Herald-World campaign, some additional names which the industry believes should be adopted to supplant such incongruous names as "talkie," "squawkie," "squeakie," etc.

Ocean Liners Plan Sound Equipment
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The North German Lloyd trans-Atlantic steamship line has booked Universal pictures for showing at sea. "Give and Take" and "Home, James" have already been shown on board the S.S. Columbus and the Dresden. The ships can show only silent pictures, but plans have been completed for the installation of sound equipment on the Bremen and Europa.

"Had a very effective newspaper campaign. A tie-up with our local paper got me about 150 in. of free space. The contest was as follows:

A black and white reproduction of Al Jolson was used and this the kiddies were to redraw at twice the size. Each kiddie that turned in a drawing received an Al Jolson dancing toy. About 450 drawings were received. This was very inexpensive and created talk.

Ziegfeld Will Make Movietone "Follies"; Hits at Imitators

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Florence Ziegfeld is going to produce the "Ziegfield Follies" himself in Movietone, he announced from Palm Beach.

"I will enable the entire world to see the supreme original revue that so many other producers have attempted to copy and which even now is being announced in a sound picture by a film organization that has made no arrangement with me," Ziegfeld said.

"I will spend $5,000,000 to make my movietone 'Follies' the perfect record of the perfect revue that has so many ineffective imitators."

Third Stage Going up at M G M

(Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Jan. 22—A third stage, now being built at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, will be 454 feet long and 86 feet wide, with a floor space of 13,400 square feet, and will make it possible to have three feature talking pictures in production at one time.

With the Metro Movietone short novelties which are being made both at the West Coast and in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Eastern studios, the talking production of the company, long prepared for, is now under full headway.

Music Placed in Every Audience Made by Christies for Paramount

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22—Music in some form or other is being used in every Christie Talking Play for Paramount, whether the dialogue runs continuously or not, under a policy adopted in recognition of the unprecedented popularity of music attained largely through the radio, records and popular orchestras.

Some studios have added a music manager to try out orchestras and singers and select fitting music, as well as to check up the publishers' lists for availability of numbers, and to arrange, as in the case of Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, for individual numbers to be used. H. D. Lawler, formerly with the Victor concern, is doing that work for the Christie company.

How It Works Out

How music becomes an integral part of each talking picture is illustrated in the following examples from the current short Christie Talking Plays. In "When Caesar Ran a Newspaper," the opening scene discloses Caesar's entrance into one of his palatial offices. The start of the picture is accompanied by the martial march, "Fomp and Grrrrr," heard when Marc Anthony does his burlesque dances, a nubian slave turns on the phonograph and plays bits from the "Peer Gynt" suite of Grieg, going into this theme for a bit as the end title is fading out.

In the "Melanchole Dame," a novelty is presented, From the very start of the main title the audience sees a negro singing a number "Melanchole Mama," specially written by Sterling Sherwin for the picture. This continues on through the credits and cast sheet, when the picture starts with a hot jazz band in a colored cabaret. In this case the title material is double exposed over the picture of the singer, and gives the audience something to hear and look at while the sometimes uninteresting matter of the credit and cast titles is on the screen. This same stunt is being done in "Music Hath Harms," with a colored girl singing "Tain't So Honey."

In this picture, a couple of darbies are strumming their banjos in "Bud Peager's Barbecue Lunch and Pool Room," while the music of the scene is going on. Moshby's Blue Blowers play for the scenes in the hall of the Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise, where the grand concert of the Over the River Burying Society is on tap. This is the Octavius Roy Cohen story which revolves around Professor Roscoe Griggers, Aleck Champine, Sam Gin and Willie Trout, those redoubtable musicalites, "the chieftains of the nebenet player, so off course this music is an integral part of the story.

In "Movietone in the Shrew" a colored quartet will be singing while the main titles are on, and Evelyn Preer, wellknown colored actress, will also sing a number as incidental business of the picture. For this is a new number "No Fool Man Can Make a Fool Out of Me," written by Carlton Kelsey, Val Burton and Jack Stern for the Procter & Gamble Co., and sung at a logical spot in the picture.

Chorus Girls Do Tap Number

For "Jed's Vacation," with Charlie Grapevine and Anna Chanee, an opening has been arranged for the former vaudevillian sketch, in which theatre orchestra music will be played, in which chorus girls are doing a tap number, starting with the main title and fading into the jazz stage opening of the actual picture. This is added music because the original play was only a talking sketch on the stage.

In the picture, "Dear Vivian," to be made with Raymond Hatton and Sam Hardy, a musical background will be played by an orchestra all through the picture while the dialogue is going on. Numbers are being selected which, through their wellknown title phrases, will correspond humorously to the action of the dialogue sketch. For instance, "Carte My Baby Don't Go Man," "That's My Weakness Now," "The Prisoner's Song" and "Kiss Me Again" all carry a special sing-song dialogue and action with the thought put over in the dialogue.

In the pictures which are all dialogue and in which there is no other opportunity for music—orchestra, singing or record numbers are always used during the main titles and at the end fadeout of the pictures, as "Every Little Movement" for the introduction and end of "A Bird in the Hand"; Fred Allen, "Three O'Clock in the Morning," for the opening and fadeout of "Post Mortem" in which Raymond Griffith is the bridge-playing nocturnal burglar.

R.C.A Equipment Used

For "Moulin Rouge" Sound

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—"Moulin Rouge," directed by E. A. Dupont and introducing the Continental screen star, Olga Chekova, will be the first World-Wide picture released with sound accompaniment. R. C. A. is now synchronizing the production under the direction of Joseph Littau, with the "Roxy's," with the Photophone Symphony orchestra. It will be released also in a silent version.
Pacent Officers Deny Producing Talking Equipment for Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Reports of new, low-priced audiaphone equipment manufactured by Pacent Electric Company, which appeared widely in recent issues of Eastern trade magazines and newspapers, have been officially denied by that concern. Officers state that they are producing no sound equipment for theatres and that they have no intention of so doing.

Unfounded statements have been made, declares the Pacent concern, that the company, backed by the Warner Brothers-Witaphone interest, would soon place on the market a new type of low-priced sound reproducer for talking motion pictures. Newspaper accounts of a similar nature again linking Pacent with the production of new reproducing equipment for theatre use drew an immediate and emphatic denial from B. H. Noden, secretary of Pacent Electric Company.

Noden stated that the company was not engaged in the manufacture of such equipment, adding that the concern is entirely off the field. He also denied the report that any outside concern was producing sound equipment for Pacent, as reported by Hartford and New Haven newspapers. It was pointed out that the only type of electronic equipment manufactured by Pacent is for the radio trade, but which found applications in the motion picture field.

He stated further, according to the announcement, that Louis Gerard Pacent, president of Pacent Electric and prominent in research work, had conducted personal experimentation on talking motion picture equipment and that this activity in the new field may have been responsible for the rumor that the company would soon produce and market reproducing apparatus for talking motion pictures.

It was said that such research work as L. G. Pacent had conducted was entirely of a personal and private nature, and that it had no connection with the manufacturing activity of the Pacent Electric Company. Noden pointed out that the company's entire recent activity has been centered on the manufacture of radio and phonograph devices. No move is contemplated, he said, that would take the company into the production of talking motion picture equipment.

Columbia Gets Set on First All-Audien, "Donovan Affair"

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—Harry Cohn, Columbia vice president, is clearing the sound channels for a new Columbia picture, "The Donovan Affair." All but the final cutting has been done for "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" and "The Younger Generation." "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" is only part-audien. Bert Lytell plays the "Lone Wolf," Gertrude Olmstead is the featured femine lead.

"The Younger Generation" has considerably more dialogue throughout than "The Lone Wolf's Daughter." Its talking cast is headed by Ronald Reagan, Lyle Talbot, Joseph Cotten, Patsy Kelly, and featured by Ann Sheridan, Lisa Basquette, Ricardo Cortez, Rex Lease and Rosa Rosanoff. "The Donovan Affair," from the play by Owen Davis, is to be Columbia's first one cent talking picture.
Shooting Capacity Doubled in Week At Metropolitan

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22—Shooting capacity at Metropolitan Sound Studios was doubled last week by the addition of extra channels with the arrival of extra recorders from Electrical Research Products, so that now four companies can make pictures instead of two, using a 24 hour a day schedule if necessary.

Laying of the cables and making the necessary hookups for the extra recording channel has been going forward for some time and is now complete. At the same time extra recording crews have been trained, and 21 sound specialists are engaged on the recording end alone, under the direction of H. W. Bergman. Two experienced men are handling the important post of "mixer," Lodge Cunningham and Robert Harper; while Dodge Dunning, inventor of the Dunning process which is well known in Hollywood, is engaged in supervising the film handling through the laboratory. Practically all production is being done with the picture and the sound track on separate film, thus making possible the best development of each, before cutting and printing is done for release.

A large cutting staff has been assembled with Arthur Huffsmith as head cutter of sound film, and a special sound camera staff is headed by G. C. Peterson. Since the Metropolitan Sound Studios went into active production November 1, three complete talking features have been filmed there and ten all-talking short features which approximate two reels each.

More Stars Signed For Warner Films From Stage, "Vaude"

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Charlotte Greenwood and Fannie Ward are only two of a number of stage stars who have just been signed by Warner Brothers for Vitaphone productions. Charlotte Greenwood was the star of "So Long Letty." Miss Ward is internationally known in "legit" and vaudeville.

Phil Baker, accordionist and master of ceremonies in many Shubert revues, is making a Vitaphone short subject. Other names annexed by Warner Brothers include Jay Velie, Miss Marcelle, Jimmy Duffy, Fred Ardath, The Ryan Sisters, Jan Garber and His Orchestra and Mal Hallet.

Davey Lee's first starring picture will be "Sonny Boy."

Texas Guinan's first all-audien, "Queen of the Night Clubs," will have its first showings early in March.

6 Fox All-Audiens And Unit Program Out Before April 28

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Between January 20 and April 28 Fox Film Corporation will release six all talking pictures and one unit program of two talking films. Pictures and release dates are as follows:

RKO Dolls Up; New Name and New Faces; Next Is New Stages

Gillstrom's First Audien is "Melancholy Dame"; Leni to Direct "Bargain at Kremlin"

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—FBO changed its name this week and immediately announced it had also determined to change its makeup and character. Not only will we know it as Radio Keith Orpheum but we will know it as a studio with a million dollar dress on.

The stages are to be fixed up with new equipment and modern fixtures. Sound stages will soon be under way. Three new projection rooms are included in the project. One of the present stages is already being proved for sound. Sound recording apparatus is in transit from Joseph Schnitzer's New York office.

Waring's Pennsylvanians will christen the all sound projection rooms next week. The number these former presentation charmers appear in is made by Robert Kane. It is called "Syncopation."

Gillstrom May Point with Pride

The name of it is "The Melancholy Dame."

It's the first and therefore we may look at it years hence with amusing curiosity. But it's the first and therefore we will also look back at it proudly because it is a pioneer of its kind.

It's an Octopus Roy Cohen story about Florian Slappey and his Alabama friends. Cabaret theme. Short. Comedy as humorous as Cohen's writing. Some romance in it. Much typically negro dialect and typical domestic complications between Permanent William and Jonquil, his wife.

The voices of colored singers are either more suitable to synchronization than the voices of whites or Gillstrom, the director, choose good voices for his cast. Although I dare say I believe colored folk record more perfectly than whites on Movietone or Vitaphone, I also hope that the statement will not be confusing to casting directors. I should dislike to see the Barrymores and Chaney's replaced with the less Nordic type of film star.

But getting back to the subject, Arvid Gillstrom's work for the Christie Brothers is an achievement. He has learned many tricks and turns in his recent visit to the Western Electric Company's Eastern laboratories. He has already produced a thing that is a pride for the Christies and he is signed to direct a series of the Cohen stories. Incidentally, a lot of credit is due, as is usually due, Alfred A. Cohn, scenarist who prepared the script for Gillstrom's work.

Broadway Sends a Crusader

From the Great White Way has come Rheba Crawford, the "Angel of Broadway," to introduce to Hollywood the gospel of the Congregational church. She is a go-getting gal who Christianized a lot of tough ones in Gotham from her pulpit in the Gaiety theatre. She is a full fledged Salvation Army sister who hopes to find equally as great success in Hollywood among picture people as she did among Eastern theatricals.

Before reaching here she employed this town's most astute and competent publicity director.

Grant L. Cook, secretary and treasurer of the Tiffany-Stahl company, arrived here this week to attend the company's sales convention. He is also in a series of conferences with John M. Stahl and M. H. Hoffman.

Schrock in East to View "Stagies"

Raymond Schrock has abandoned us for a few weeks to look over stage plays in New York. Which reminds me that the term, stage play, has a great number of characteristics similar to the terms suggested for audiens. Has the public that wishes to understand the "talkies" ever dubbed stage plays "stagies"? If that public has overlooked something perhaps this is its opportunity to shorten something—and to describe stage plays more characteristically.

Anyhow, Mr. Schrock is expected back from his visit next week with dialogue rights and screen rights for several "stagies."*

Leni to Direct "Bargain in Kremlin"

Paul Leni will direct "The Bargain in the Kremlin" for Universal. It was originally planned as an Edward Sloman production; but Sloman withdrew from the lot a few days ago. Leni is the director of "The Man Who Laughs."

Dave Epstein Not Only Suggests But Uses It

Dave Epstein, competent publicist—if there is one—has modestly laid down his suggestion on the copy desk and walked silently away. He suggests a new word for the replacement of "talkie." It is "audition." It's unlikely, say we. He has used it in copy regarding Lucien Littlefield not only to say that Lucien has appeared in several "Auditions" but also to say that Littlefield has moved to the Fox lot following the Goldwyn decision not to add "audition" to "Children Fifth Avenue."
Sound Stage Razed
By Fire, but PFL Doesn't Stop Work
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—Despite the fire which destroyed a new sound stage of the Paramount Hollywood studio, production was resumed two days later on three of the company's films, due to Clara Bow's first all-talking picture, "The Wild Party," Maurice Chevalier's "Innocents of Paris" and Emil Jannings' "Eccentric." The entire personnel of the studio, including actors, directors, technicians, writers and humble prop men, returned to work with renewed energy to fulfill the production schedule exactly as planned before the fire, in accordance with a statement issued in Hollywood by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president in charge of Paramount production. "Production will continue exactly as scheduled and we will fulfill every contractual commitment made to exchanges and exhibitors," Lasky stated. "All of the production that was to be launched on the new sound stages of the annual Motion-Picture Exposition is now in use as the recording apparatus was housed in another building and was therefore not touched by the fire." The starting date of all pictures will be carried out to the letter and without a single hour's delay. No negative or film of any kind was in the structure at the time the flames swept away, as all of this material is kept in the laboratories, a mile from the studios. Our production assistants will take care of the increased production just as they did when the new building was under construction.

Big-Time Acts Assure
Big Time for Wampas
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—More than 20 big-time acts (with returns still coming in) have promised to assist the Wampas in their annual frolic at the Shrine auditorium, February 12, according to Charles Judels, who is assisting the advertisers in arranging their program.

Duell Again Sues Gish,
This Time for $3,200
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—Charles Duell has sued Lilian Gish for $3,258 in two suits which are merely combinations of the five million dollars suit brought a few years ago.

Dix and Carroll to Attend
Paramount Pep Club Ball
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Richard Dix and Nancy Carroll, two Paramount stars will attend the annual Motion-Picture Ball of the Paramount Pep Club at the Astor Hotel on February 9.

LeBaron Signs Lazarus
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—William LeBaron, F. B. O., has signed Sidney Lazarus to do the adaptation and continuity of "Boating Hollywood," under supervision of the picture will be by Luther Reed.

"Golowin" to Paramount
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Paramount has acquired the rights to "Golowin," a novel by Jacob Wasserman. The picture will go into production under the title, "Black Eagles." Fay Wray and Gary Cooper will co-star.

No Choice? Well, Maybe They're Both!
(Washington Bureau of the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The question has arisen in many minds: Just what is a newspaper reporter of Hollywood doing? But although most film folks have their own private opinions, never until last week was the question broached officially. In trying to exterminate their expenses in an income tax inquiry, a picture actor and his actress wife, named only as Mr. and Mrs. "A," set forth that such reporters were necessary for publicity and, being so, had to be entertained and were therefore legitimate expenses. The Internal Revenue has replied negatively. Thus they are neither guests nor expenses. So what are they? Perhaps the choice lies between calling them pests or luxuries. And maybe there isn't any choice.

FN Finishes Billie Dove Film;
RKO's Brief Shutdown Is Over

Corinne Griffith's First Attempt to Talk for Microphone in Sequences Directed by Seiter; Alan Hale Loaned to Warners; Dwan Signed by Fox
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 23.—First National completed two productions this week, both boasting feminine stars. Billie Dove is in the main role of one, "The Man and the Moment," which has been in production six weeks. Corinne Griffith is the star of the other, "Saturday's Children," which has been in production since November 1. Gregory La Cava passed the megaphone over to William Seiter the first time. Seiter directed the picture by shooting talking sequences.

It will be Corinne's first attempt to talk before the camera; useless to say, the trade is interested.

Miss Dove is believed to have an excellent vehicle in her latest production, although no preview has been held. She has worked under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. His next job will be on the United Artists lot, incidentally. In her cast is Rod La Rocque and Gwen Lee.

RKO Starts Production

RKO studios, (FBO) and that sounds odd, began "The Voice of the Storm," thereby propelling the lot after a slight quietude. Karl Dane and Martha Sleeper in addition to Brandon Hurst are in the leading roles. Production has begun on "Thru Different Eyes," Fox-Movietone, based on the play by Milton Gropper and Edna Sherry. Warner Baxter, whose outstanding performance as The Cisco Kid in "Old Arizona," first outdoor Fox-Movietone feature production, won him a long term contract with Fox Films, in co-feature in "Thru Different Eyes," with Mary Duncan. Other prominent players in the cast are Gavin Gordon, Natalie Moorhead, Earle Fox, Donald Gallaher, Florence Lake and Sylvia Sydney. John G. Blystone is directing and A. H. Van Buren, who staged many recent New York successes, is stage directing.

Hale to Warners for "Sap"

"Thru Different Eyes" is a mystery drama, centering about the murder of one "John Winston." The title is self-explanatory, the story being that the boy in the eyes of a defense lawyer and the prosecutor, the latter being revealed by a mysterious girl. With "The Sap," featuring Edward Everett Horton under the direction of Archie Mayo scheduled for early February filming, Warner Brothers are already assembling a cast for Vitaphone all-talking production. Negotiations were completed today by Darryl Zanuck, associate executive, for the loan of Alan Hale from Humphrey Pearson, role. Zanuck also announced the engagement of Edna Murphy to one of the leading feminine roles in the picture. Frankly, they are all-talking stars.

"The Sap," based on the stage play by William Grew, is being adapted by Robert Lord. It will be one of the second series of four pictures produced by Warner Brothers in the current season.

Dwan Signs With Fox
After an absence of 18 months from Fox Films, Allan Dwan has been signed to a new directorial contract by Sol M. Wurtzel, general superintendent of Fox Films. Before the ink was dry on his contract, Dwan was actively engaged in the making of "The Far Call," which will be his initial activity under the new connection.

"The Far Call" was written by Addison Marsh and was serially in Good Housekeeping before it made its appearance as a novel. The story has as a background an island around which is a protected area for seals.

Walter Woods is adapting the story and Dwan expects to be in production within 30 days. Dwan's last directorial effort was "The Man of the Iron Mask," starring Douglas Fairbanks. He made a number of Glorla Swanson pictures for Paramount and is well remembered for his Fox Films productions, prominent among which were "East Side, West Side," "The Music Master" and "The Joy Girl." James Gleason, actor and star of "Is That So?" and "The Shammons of Broadway," and his wife, Lucille Webster Gleason, have been secured by Al Christie to play the sketch.

ON A LOT OF THE LOTS

By FRAZIER —

Regarding:

Ray Flynn — Baclanova
Margaret Smith — Clive Brook
Tom Mix — Neil Hamilton
H. Myers — Rex Bell
Daniel Roche — Ray Cannon
Paul Sloane — Lois Moran
Roland V. Lee — Frank Gay
George Bancroft — Nick Stuart

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22—As an assistant director, Ray Flynn of Fox studios, should be triplets. He is working on "The Veiled Woman" with his brother Elbert as director, and "The Sin Sister" at the same time. Also he is attending his duties as a director of the Second Division Association of World War Veterans, a post to which he was recently elected. He was host to the commander, Major General John A. Lejeune, at a dinner party last week on a few hours of his "spare" time.

Margaret Smith, well known in theatrical circles in New York, has been given general management of the Actors Equity Ball, which will be held Thursday January 31, at the Biltmore hotel. Miss Smith, with the aid of a number of capable assistants, is planning many novel surprises in conjunction with the dance. Tickets will be sold to members of the association only.

"The Godless Girl," "Strange Cargo" to be Released on March 31

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—Cecil B. DeMille's "The Godless Girl" and "Strange Cargo," Pathé's first all-audience, have been set for release on March 31. "The Godless Girl," which is personally directed by DeMille, has been held back from release in order to add dialogue and sound. "Strange Cargo," the first all-audience picture, in which the story was adapted from the play stage "The Missing Man" and was written by Benjamin Glazer and Nelscher Lengyel.

Robert V. Lee, Paramount director, will have the hits of the studio for the year of 1929, according to indications. He recently completed "The Wolf of Wall Street," 100 per cent talker, starring George Bancroft, and is now starting "A Woman Who Needed Killing," also a complete talking picture. Baclanova, the Russian actress with star, is starring opposite Neil Hamilton, has been cast for one of the most important roles. The balance of the cast has not been announced.

Rex Bell, former Fox Western star, is making his first appearance, on the screen without his horse and gun. He has been cast for an important role in Raoul Walsh's next production, "Joy Street." The story will feature Lois Moran in a modern youth setting, from an original scenario by Frank Gay and Charlie Condon. The cast also includes Nick Stuart and Jose Crispo.

Many of the film players, especially the free-lance ones, are finding the field more rosy since they have been working in talking films, even the extras. In most all instances at the present time the companies are making two versions of the screen play, silent and dialogue, which often takes weeks of rehearsing. The actors are paid during the time they work on the picture, from the starting date of their first call. Looks like the hard winter was about over.

R K O Theatre Managers Work for Trophy for Best Exploitation on "Wings"

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—The Radio-Keith-Orpheum house managers in New York sections were in competition this week for a valuable bronze trophy. The prize was offered by Major Leslie E. Thompson, divisional manager, to the local theatre managers who showed the greatest ingenuity in the exploitation and box-office results during the engagement of "Wings."

The territory will be divided into two sections: Bronx and Westchester. In each section one first prize winner will be selected by the judges.

"Meet the Missing Man," the Christie talking plays which will be released by Paramount this spring. The all-talking play was written by Kenyon Nicholson, author of "The Barker," and other popular stage plays. The Gleason's played in it on the stage.

James Gleason came to Hollywood to write dialogue for the talk picture and starred equally well known as author and star. Lucille Gleason has been playing in "The Shanons of Broadway" on the Coast. As soon as her health permits, Miss Gleason's "All-American" play will be produced by the Christie's at their sound studios. It is scheduled for release by Paramount in April.

Norma Will Speak

Norma Talmadge's next picture for United Artists will be 100 per cent talking. It will be "The Sign on the Door" by Channing Pollock. George Fitzmaurice will direct and production will start in the near future.

These announcements were made at the United Artists studio following telegraphic advices from Joseph M. Schenck, head of United Artists, who is in New York, and they end months of speculation as to whether Norma would sign another talking film.

George Scarborough is writing some of the dialogue for the screen version of Pollock's stage success, and C. Gardner Sullivan is busy at work on the scenario. Miss Talmadge and her mother, Mrs. Margaret Talmadge, are expected back in Hollywood soon. They have been in Europe, where Norma went immediately after the completion of her current United Artists release, "The Woman Disputed." Selection of the leading lady for the "Sign on the Door" will be announced soon.

The famous star's first talking picture is scheduled as a George Fitzmaurice production.

Audiens Replace Theatre Orchestra, Projectionists Walk Out with Musicians

(STOCKTON, CAL., Jan. 22—The theatre operators in this section walked out yesterday afternoon in protest of the management's action in replacing their projectionists with audien offerings, and the doing away with an orchestra of eight musicians.

Leo W. Allard, president of the Motion Picture Operators' local, and Carroll W. Kirkham, president of the Musicians' Association, declare that West Coast Theatres, Inc., has violated a labor agreement entered into last September. A. M. Bovles, northern division manager for West Coast Theatres, Inc., says no agreement with the musicians has been entered into other than an agreement as to wages.

THE SHORT FEATURE

Williams Announces 12 Audiences To Be Made by New Organization

A series of twelve two-reel talking pictures, based on Owen Wister's book, "The Square Deal," and just announced in New York by J. D. Williams, will be made by a new company, Greater Union Films, Inc., and will be distributed through Educational's exchanges.

The subject matter of the series is the debunking of the many misunderstood, controversial, historical episodes between Great Britain and the United States which, perpetuated in inaccurate histories, have resulted in international distrust which Wister characterizes as "the ancient grudge." Williams stated that the pictures are to be designed primarily for dramatic entertainment. He is negotiating for the services of several leading directors and scenario writers, and one of the highest production executives in the industry is to be in charge.

"Through the new science of talking pictures the screen can now get over the message of the great good will that forward looking statesmen, educators, and publicists in both countries have for years labored with little effect to tell," says Williams. "I can think of no greater mission for the screen and the industry than bringing back, honestly the great figures and events of the Anglo-American family drama with the assured effect of convincing the world, after all, blood is thicker than water. And talking pictures, entertainingly produced as an appealing show, will do the job as nothing else can."

Fourth "Colllegians" Series Starts With Dialogue and Sound

(Special to the Herald-World)

UNIVERSAL CITY, Jan. 22—Universal's fourth "Colllegians" series, with dialogue and full sound effects, is now in work with Carl Laemmle, author of the four series, supervising as well. There will be 10 two-reelers, with release starting this spring.

The same director, Nat Ross, and the same principals who have won public favor in the preceding "Colllegians" have been signed for the new series. They are George Lewis as the college hero and champion athlete, Dorothy Hull as the college maiden, Edgar Phillips as the heavy, Churchill Ross as the "grind" and Hayden Stevenson as the coach. Harry Fraser prepared the continuities.

All the excitement and vociferous noise making of a lively college crowd at a big football game or other college athletic event, all discrimination between the glee club concerts, the student singing, the frat dances and other college sounds are being planned to supplement the collegian wisecracking and other dialogue.

Stage Offerings Must Harmonize With Pictures

Biggest Theatre Business Foreseen by Fox Detroit Manager

(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, MICH., Jan. 22.—The tendency today is towards a closer harmony between screen features and stage presentations, in the opinion of S. J. Stebbins, manager of the Fox theatre here. The stage presentations at the Fox are under the direction of Mr. Stebbins, and each week, since the opening of the house some four months ago, he has attempted to have some portion of his stage presentation act as a prologue to the feature picture.

"The stage presentation has long since developed beyond the status of 'supplementary stage shows,"' Mr. Stebbins said. "And the so-called 'independent acts' that are seen in the course of the prologue presentation are no longer the independent vaudeville acts they once were.

"Every unit in the modern stage entertainment that accompanies the screen feature is an integral part of a carefully planned and balanced program of entertainment. The screen feature should, and does of course, form the principle unit in the entertainment. Not only that, but its plot and thematic material are followed in the stage presentation. Its costumes, in many cases, inspire the designing of the stage costumes and its theme song.

"Although the term prologue is still employed to describe the stage presentation, it is no longer accurate. So closely blended have the stage and screen programs become, that one fades into the other almost imperceptibly.

Stebbins Foresees 1929 as Bigger and Better Year

"The trend in the coming year, I believe, is toward the further harmonization of motion pictures and stage presentations, an ideal that is now made much easier of realization by the advent of the music and speech of the sound and talking pictures."

Mr. Stebbins also said he believes the year 1929 will witness the most successful motion picture theatre business in the history of Detroit. He said that the prosperity that is being predicted for the coming year by financiers and industrial leaders presages a year of record-breaking business in the field of motion picture entertainment.

Fisher Is Cuba Bound

Mark Fisher, the well liked and popular singing master of ceremonies who has been enjoying a long run at the new Paradise theatre, Balaban & Katz, potent Chicago house, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation in Cuba. Mrs. Fisher accompanies him.

Very Good Eddie

After seeing a huge success in Ontario, Canada, and Detroit, as master of ceremonies, Eddie Loughton has been selected to preside over the stage activities of the Capitol theatre in Hamilton, Ontario. Judging by the past and present results he may be at this house for many months.

Lou Lubin

Lou Lubin, featured member of Lubin, Larry & Andre, is the best example of determination, sincerity, and righteousness, three very important features in the show business, or any other business—Lubin was one of the first black-face comedians who saw the possibility for the type of his offering many years ago, and stuck to it under all sorts of conditions. The result is that he has established a trade-mark by his originality and has created a demand for his talents and services by establishing a reputation for integrity and reliability—ever one who has dealt with Lubin has found him to be a man of his word and every promise made has been fulfilled. At present Lubin and his associates are completing one of their many tours of the RKO circuit.

RKO Resumes Units

The new unit idea has again been put into working order by the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuit. One of the first units offered is presented by Rosalie and Lee Stewart, featuring Mel Kline.

The cast also includes Barton & Young, Al Brooks, Grace and Coly Worth, Kay McKay, Harry Weber's Pomposus Revue, Patry Ruth Clark, and Jack Gelder's Girls.

Plot Form Units Prolong Life Of Stagebands

Story Gives You the Chance to Place the Band in the Pit

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

To hear some people talk one would gather that the stageband policy is dying out. This sort of rumor has been going on for more than two years and always comes from those that get more or less panicked on any phase of entertainment. People who will always find something wrong with everything and never offer any constructive suggestions are generally the ones who are incompetent to blaze any trail of endeavor as pioneers. All worth while achievements have never been accomplished by whining individuals who lacked the vision and courage to see the opportunity and to stay with it until it became a success.

Some time ago we offered through this department suggestions that would enable theatre circuits as well as producers to overcome the problem of stereotyped bands. We have constantly tried to convince these people that a deluxe picture house is merely trying to offer a miniature musical comedy with motion pictures at popular prices. Unless the type of stagebands offered in them differ from the ones in the vaudeville theatres or what are better known today as combination houses, they are not presentation theatres but merely copying the old style of variety entertainment.

As we have stated many times before, it is not at all necessary that every deluxe house with a stageband be compelled to offer the same type of stagebands each week. The monotony could be relieved by transferring the orchestra into the pit now and then so that the entertainment may be unfolded upon the stage as a musical comedy. This has been accomplished successfully at the Oriental theatre, Chicago, recently by Brooke Johns, and it does not seem to have taken away any of the popularity of the master of ceremonies.

If you insist on keeping your orchestra on the stage, then it would also be wise to inject some sort of a plot so that your weekly programs may not be a repetition of a band number, a blues singer and a comedy dancer. This seems to be the favorite lineup of these shows lately and although there are new faces in the spot each week, the turns and routines are nevertheless similar.

It is natural to assume that too much of one style is bound to tire the theatregoers, and when you feel your audience slipping it is time for you to act. All band leaders cannot be huge favorites and cannot be expected to carry the entire show each week for an indefinite period, merely on their personality. They must have some cooperation and support of the production department. Costumes and scenery add to the success of any stage show but the elaborateness of these features alone will not always send your audience away, feeling that the stage show is not up to its mark.

The recent inauguration of a new stage policy at the Chicago theatre, Chicago, proves that too many theatres in one city offering the same policy cannot exist unless each theatre puts a new wrinkle into the stage offerings. Balaban & Katz have brought back to Chicago their former policy of putting on the show that makes up their loop theatre the talk of the amusement world. Now that Jack Cambria, the father of their lavish prologues is back at his former post, there is no doubt that the Chicago theatre will soon climb up to its former place.

In the short space of five years motion picture theatres have practically revolutionized the amusement business to a point where almost any type of entertainment can be seen at a popular house. And to maintain up this position they must find a logical system to continue, instead of going along in a haphazard way of presenting talent and box office names. When this has been accomplished, and we are quite sure that the industry has capable men guiding its destinies, then the public will know that the new form of entertainment can furnish them with the same amount of amusement and satisfaction as the motion picture theatres can at popular prices.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: As a point of information, I can say that in RKO time at the last show I put a little article in your paper mentioning the fact that we have just put out, in slide form, our song entitled "A Love Supreme." Thanking you, and with best wishes. Sincerely yours, Bernard Plunkett, Sherman Clay & Co., Eastern Representation.

Northwest Resumes Publix Units Again

Balaban & Katz will produce two stageband units out of Chicago for the weeks of January 21 and February 4, that will open in Denver. Louis McDermott will stage these units.

The purpose of this stunt is to fill the open weeks made necessary by resuming the Publix units at Portland and Seattle. Until the present show now on the road rotates and will be regularly rotated just these two units will be sent out of Chicago to play the balance of the Publix southern tour.

Healy Bats for Mark

In keeping with the policy of Balaban & Katz they have secured the exclusive services of Ted Healy for one week at the Chicago for the week weitere this week. Healy will officiate as master of ceremonies in place of Mark Fisher, who is on a vacation.

On the same program with him, in a featured capacity, are Sally Tilden and Arthur Nealy.

Kosloff Has Accident

Lou Kosloff, popular Chicago band leader for Balaban & Katz, not with a serious automobile accident last week which would have kept him in hospital at least three weeks.

While he is recuperating at the American hospital, Al Morry, formerly at the Harding, will take his place at the Tower. Eddie Perry, formerly of the Chicago theatre, will replace Morry at the Harding.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Chicago

Week Ending January 19

The one and only Ted Lewis, with his hot tunes, snappy songs, clever dancing, tricky hat and what else was in town for six days and played to an immense crowd that packed the Chicago theater doors night and day. Lewis was better than ever, and the audience showed their appreciation with a three minute applause. His ten piece orchestra was red hot, and no doubt the patrons could have sat for six more hours listening to them. Lewis's hat had never been better. As the show opened, Ted Lewis appeared in front of a drop telling the audience he was a "blue" lover. He next introduced his orchestra, who played a hot tune while Lewis led with a hot clarinet.

"The Hat With a Silver Lining" was given in a dramatic Lewis fashion, of which he showed his usual hat was his silver lining. It received a bursting applause.

"The St. Louis Blues," the song that did a lot for Lewis or, we might say, Lewis did a lot for "St. Louis Blues." It was played in a new and different style and was a corks Lik. "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," another popular hit song that got a nice a band. A solo dancer gave a little dance, using Lewis for her man. Other songs that were introduced by the orchestra were "Tiger Rag," "The Curtain Goes Down," all of which any song publisher can be proud to say Lewis played for them.

Three minutes after the curtain went down the crowd applauded, and applauded the fellow they called king of the blow, Ted Lewis.

San Francisco Warfield

Week Ending January 18

Horace Heidt and his Californians, successors to Rube Wolf, landed at the Warfield theater this week in a epic of music, comedy, and fun, although it must be said, knowledge that it inclined strongly to jazz. The landing was so perfect that there seems no doubt about the popularity of this outfit with the San Francisco public. Of course, it was largely a case of a home band coming home, since every member of the organization has been a student at the University of California, but it was performance that won the hearts of the opening week.

The screen attraction and the acts were not to be sneezed at, after all has been said and done. It was Heidt's California Carolinians, or Campus Cacophonists, as they are sometimes called, that walked off with the honors. Everyone in the band is a soloist, and there are some clever dancers and acrobats in the lot, so they could easily put on an entire act.

The curtain went up on the band in a campus setting, with the good old college song, and all the scenes of college life were given. The dance director of the band occupied one of the chairs and barked at quite the proper moment.

Fanchon and Marco's "Good News" chorus offered a song and dance and one Jones, whose feet seem electrified, won laurels for the colored race, being called back repeatedly.

Babe Kane, star of the "Good News" show, and announced as originating of the Varsity Drag step, sang a little ditty about a cookie jar but no cookies.

She hasn't much of a voice but won the crowd when it came to stamping out the Varsity Drag.

The Caroling Californians demonstrated that they can really carol and offered a selection from the "Prince of Pilsner," following with "I Love You, California," Ronald and Ho-Peep Karlin sang "My Troubles Are Over," and Ho-Peep did an adorable dance.

Gillum and Allerberg, celebrating their fifteenth year in the freshman class, offered a novelty act filled with delightful acrobatic feats that are a pair far above the average in entertaining ability.

The acrobatic drummer of the band surprised all with some clever dancing and tumbling, and Babe Kane tried another song, redeeming herself completely with her lively style.

The band of Heidt deserves watching. It's wonderfully well trained. It's thoroughly collegiate and it can make good music. And Horace Heidt himself is a splendid master of ceremonies, with a good voice and an easy manner.

Detroit Michigan

Week Ending January 11

Mac Murray, blond and vivacious screen star, made a personal appearance at the Michigan this week, in addition to the regular Publix stage unit "Stars," Miss Murray, who played a small part in the film, danced a little, recited "pieces" and offered advice to her audience, all to the throbbing of a marimba band which was supplied by her this year round of the "Good News" chorus posed.

This band of Heidt deserves watching. It's wonderfully well trained. It's thoroughly collegiate and it can make good music. And Horace Heidt himself is a splendid master of ceremonies, with a good voice and an easy manner.

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending January 5

A Publix unit entitled "Bubbles," proved to be an around useful, nicely placed offering with plenty of comedy. Whenever there is an abundance of comedy these offers seem to go over better than ever. It's what the audiences have been asking for with comic dances and a bit of everything is involved.

The Davis Gould Girls (ten in number) offered several pretty dance ensembles. The opening number in which the girls in witch costumes, bo peep and candle lighters to represent bubbles was prettily and realistically done.

The Gatanos, acrobatic Apache dancers, put on a rough dance which went well. These dancers are no novelty, however, this one carried a wallap inasmuch as the male member of the team showed great strength and skill with the manner in which he handled the two other partners in the stage.

Gene Sheldon performed cleverly on the banjo and also with tap dancing. This fellow is a real come on and he handles his every appearance.

Ruth Petty scored when she sang "I Want to Be Like You" and offered to the number to Teddy Joyce, popular M. C. here.

Ross and Edwards with some duets and duet dance went well, as did also a Marta Kay, classical dancer.

The symphony orchestra, under the direction of Elias Broskini, offered selection from "The Desert Song."

Salt Lake City Pantages

Week Ending January 5

The Pantages vaudeville bill this week was headed by Dorothy Breyson and twelve debuts in a classical dance novelty, which was very artistically presented. Tedak and Dean offered a new type of comedy patter, which was well received, and Heras and Wallace furnished their share of fun.

The Marcus Sisters and Charlotte Brothers open the bill with a classical exhibition of clever dancers.

The picture offering was "Submarine," and tremendous crowds were entertained.

St. Louis Missouri

Week Ending January 11

"Gypsyland" was the title of Eddie Peabody's stage show for this week. Nat Speeter, a comedian, Wallter and Dwyer, songsters, and Bubbles Crowell were prominent in the entertaining. Milton Slonner offered one of his clever organ solos. The picture offering was "Submarine," and tremendous crowds were entertained.

Kansas City Pantages

Week Ending January 11

1. J. Irving's "Flapper F reshie" were given a prominent place on the stage program at the Pantages. The act consisted of vocal and dancing numbers with a hint of dialogue and comedy thrown in, being more or less in the nature of a review.

Niko and Spencer were seen in a comedy act titled, "Go Wait, Boys," the number including comedy dialogue and vocal numbers. The Silks and Satins Revue saw some attractive looking girls who knew how to dance, as well as sing, the act being on the revue type, Al Garribe, Louis Gainor, Mary Gorgas, Dorothy Breyson, Madge Whitfield and Lucie Hoting being featured.

Elsa Stralis, Australian soprano, offers a trio of vocal numbers, concluding with a popular number that leaves the audiences in a receptive mood. The Hickman brothers have a turn in which comedy and a bit of everything is involved.

The Charnikins and his Pantages orchestra offer popular selections as the overture.

Minneapolis Minnesota

Week Ending January 19

"The Beaux Arts Frolic," a series of eight pictures plus with various selections of the dance, and dialogue—provides the entertainment this week on the Minneapolis stage. The tableaux opens on a street in the Latin quarter of old Paris. A group of art students sound the keynote of the presentation. At a certain a place the girls are given a free to that of a garret studio where Al Mitchell and the

The next picture came back again to the beautiful with the Gamby-Hale girls in "Pastiche." The lower stage was again employed. The chorus, dressed in long full white lace costumes and carrying white ostrich plumes, represent a Watteau picture which pose they held for several minutes until the audience becomes aware of the fact that they are looking upon flesh and blood creatures instead of a picture. The chorus descends to the lower stage where it does a two-piece in perfect harmony.

Handers and Millie bring back the ridiculous again with their ludicrous talk and cut-ups. The boys took three encores.

Bryant, Rafnos and Young put on an acrobatic dance spectacle that became a usual standard of the Publix dance acts. The dance between these two young women and young man was entitiled "Legend Fantastique."

Chicago Stratford

Week Ending January 12

The subject this week of the Stratford will be the "loss of Ted Leary" in the least amount of time possible. Ted Leary is gone from the Stratford and as far as it is known he will be located on the coast. The Stratford is a nice house that is located around the vicinity of 63rd and Halsted street and has plenty of opposition. Now, without the weekly jokes of Leary it will have a tough time getting the people. He was the sort of a fellow that was born right in the hearts of that bunch and they're going to miss him.

Understand that the new m.c. Bob Hope is all right, in fact, as far as is known he will be a permanent addition to the house. Anyone will have a hard time trying to please the patrons if they come in after Leary. For three years Leary has been their main standby and he has proven it. Last year Leary was taken away for a while. The show didn't do as good, at least from the people's judgment. They brought him back. He appeared on the stage and the crowd applauded him for nearly three minutes. They liked him, they wanted him but he's gone now. This may be wrong but, the Stratford will not go on now as it did before. Ask anyone who they like for the m.c. and you'll see 99 out of 100 will say Leary.

The show this week had another celebrity from the radio world, none other than Art Linklet. Art is the former m.c. for KFWB something like that, who used to sing over KFWB. He was a trite older than this reporter imagined. He clicked and he danced.

Other acts that appeared on the stage with Maurice Riblom and Richard Millie were: Marana and Newman, a poor opener. They were not what the people liked. The female part of the act selected a poor song to sing and the people laughed when they should have sobbed.

Proper and Merit, those two fellows who are known to invent the slow motion acrobatic stunts, proved a big hit with the patrons. The pair had everything wanted for this act. They took an encore.

Lane and Parker had a few laughters that got over. The girl's voice was fair and in all the act was a success. Not anything extraordinary but, passable. They also had a dog helping out.

Bob Hope, the new m.c. sang a song and he danced. The people liked his personality and he put over his dance with a bang. More would have been taken by the audience.

The finale number played by the orchestra and entire assembly was supported for a bow. Nice show, not much but still it pleased.

Brooklyn Paramount

Week Ending January 18

"Cheerio," Paul Oserad's production, featured Paul Ash and a notable cast. Thoroughly smothered in the snow storm, the show was reported last week, due to the many changes, it is being reviewed for a second act.

The opening was the same. Arma Jackson sang "Cheerio" to a grotesque head, as the Gamby-Hale Girls danced. A notable change followed. One of the boys of the orchestra announced that Paul Ash had not arrived and that Wally Jackson would lend the band in a comedy song. Jackson, in comedy costume, led the boys and toward the end, Ash entered and Wally went into his nimble and l J oin- jointed dance. This stopped the show. He encored and stopped the show again, and finally was forced to beg off.

Barba Verizon sang a cute song to Ash, then went into a snowy tap routine that won her a fine hand. Arma Jackson that she was "The Cream in His Coffee" as they walked off. (Incidentally this introduced the next band number.) The Gamby-Hale Girls then did their best and while routine followed by a special arrangement of "The Man I Love." This band number was well before, never fails to get a good hand for its efforts.

Bert Tucker came on next and sang his own special song, "I'm Always Following My Mother Around." This was received well. Bert then did a song and dance, called "Sugarp Foot Stomp," which also won a fine hand.

Grace and Marie Eline followed with their burlesque impersonations and comedy songs, that earned them an encore. The girls are a perfect comedy team, each with their own specialties, so songs "Cheerio" as the entire ensemble entered for the finale.

Omaha Riviera

Week Ending January 17

"Wonderful Girl" was the stage show at the Riviera during the week, resembling a miniature musical comedy more than an acrobatic display. In addition to the 12 Guild Girls who constituted the chorus, there appeared George Riley, Broadway comedian; James Davis, organist; and musical comedy "Sally!"; Marie Pauli in bits of song; Willard Hall and Ed Hill, comedians, and the Paragon Quartet, who made a name over the radio.

Jay Mills, stage master, interpreted "Raccoon" to the satisfaction of all, while Herbie Koch at the organ and Harry Brader with the pit orchestra contributed to the success of the week. Combining the acrobats with the "Wonderful Girl" with "Albie's Irish Rose" in sound, Manager Raymond Jones offered a show which drew big houses.

Seattle Seattle

Week Ending January 17

One of the final Fanchon and Marco stage presentations, "The Saxophonica Idea," brought back Rudy Wanderle, who put over some wonderful saxophone numbers and demonstrated his specialty in a most entertaining number.

Joe and Willy Hale followed, proving themselves high class trick comedians. Marie Strikler, a former Ziegfeld dancer, has not forgotten how, and with her to share honors was James Knight, the dancer.

Others who introduced dance specialties were Ruda, Indian dancer; Raunka, Bohemian dancer; and the Miller dancer. Eugenia Reynolds, soprano, reached the high notes with ease, accompanied by Rita Danz, contralto.

The Saxophone has become more and more popular. This week Don took the balance of the applause with some lively numbers on the instrument.

Fanchon and Marco's future presentations will appear here at Fifth Avenue theatre and be replaced at this house by Publich shows.

Jersey City Stanley

Week Ending January 18

Charlie Nelson and His Gang made "Whoops" in Indian Week last at the Publix Blues, H. W. Cruul production. This was not one of Cruul's best productions but it pleased this audience, and that is all that has been asked. Nelson won the boys in the Oriental number as the Ten Marmen Girls offered an Oriental Fantasy.

Ada Cornell, with her body painted in gold, received a fair hand for her acrobatic efforts in her "Dance of the Golden Idol." Jean Kray sang "The Song I Love" in a clear and pleasing soprano voice. "Tootsie" Novello, a young and exceedingly limber fellow, then offered a gem of acrobatic and escextend dance that was well received.

Joe Wong, an Americanized Chinaman, sang popular numbers, danged and were. He earned an encore, in which he played a "Uke," sang and danced. He then brought in another dance that he begged off.

Charlie and the boys then played "Dignity Doo" as the girls offered a toe routine that needed much more training. The house liked them and Charlie left the show towards his next engagement.

The Ten Marmen Dancers next offered a Burman dance as an idol on the background: pedestals comes to a close.

The Idols are Miss Samina and partner. They do an extremely weird and modernistic dance which was well received. This closed the show.

New Orleans Saenger

Week Ending January 18

With Ben Black as personality leader it begins to look like old times on the Saenger stage, both from a production and artistic standpoint, which includes settings and scenic effects. West Point is the title of the Publix unit this week, and if the interpretation is correct the cadets must have a wonderful treat for the finale. After this film is over on them on the parade grounds would make any building officer fight for the preservation of his country. The entertainment begins with our own Lethil Howel in the "Jewel Song," cleverly done with the assistance of Don Philipini and his wonderful orchestra.

The curtain rises disclosing a section of West Point, with the stage deck disguised as a real military organization, with the regulation uniforms, which make the boys look real fierce, though everybody in the

MARQUETTE THEATRE, CHICAGO
Radio-Keith-Orpheum Featuring "Wings," With Prologue

One of the most magnificent spectacles ever produced on the Keith-Orpheum circuit was a sumptuous dramatic presentation staged by Arthur Vogeitin. "Verdun" is now appearing in conjunction with the photoplay "Wings" that is playing the Radio-Keith-Orpheum theatres around the east.

It depicts the great war and those unforgettable days in France are unraveled before the very eyes of the spectators. The presentation was first presented at the New York Hippodrome and it so impressed the circuit officials that they decided to let the prologue accompany the film.

Vogeitin first won his fame as a producer of these spectacles when he staged the "Wars of the World," "Under Many Flags," "The Yacht Club on Parade: Around the World." The present prologue displays a whole section of "No Man's Land" and in addition to offering the horrors of the World War, portrays a vivid and dramatic love story.

The chorus staged a paraded dance in which singing played a prominent part. Another number followed by the band. The Daisy Brothers then starred an act of eccentric dance and elop steps, carrying on a play on words during the dance. This received a good hand from the patrons.

The act closed with Jackie Norton and his hajio. His imitations were clever and his well trained voice added to the bill.

Brooklyn Fox

Week Ending January 11

"Hello 1929"—billed as "A Happy New Year Frolley" was staged by Harry M. Hanno. The first scene was of a Zeppelin with captain and the ballet as the opening number, the orchestra sang the introductory song, as the orchestra played from the pit. As the passengers disembarked and the "Zep" rose, it disclosed a sketche scene with many revelers singing and dancing.

Americia and Neville then offered a sketche Argente tango, which was received well. A prima donna next sang, in a good soprano voice, some operatic number, then she turned around and it was a man singing in a good bass voice. This phenomenol person was John Mxwell, the man with a double voice. He was very well received. The Stroud Twins followed with gags and some very good tap dancing that earned them an encore. The Esther and Leonie Girls did a cute routine as the Fox Choral Ensemble sang amid the falling of many balloons.

Kansas City Mainstreet

Week Ending January 19

Because of the exceptionally long length of the featuer picture at the Mainstreet, Davison's Louisville Looen, playing an extended engagement at the state's stage orchestal attraction, and Harlan Chris- tie, master of ceremonies, had a real opportunity to show their goodwill.

Only one act, Paul Pevelle and Partner, was included on the stage program besides the Loom and Christie. Paul Pevelle and Partner are a couple of wisecracking comedians attired in rube costumes, but they know their banjo music and refrain from using anything other than brand new jokes, which is an oddity in itself. They occupy the stage about fifteen minutes. The theme is still the same: the Loom rendered several musical numbers, which varied from semi-classical to the jazziest of jazz.

Christie sang several songs and proved that he is more than capable of stepping out of his usual role as master of ceremonies when required to do so. The close of the stage program was "In a Melody Shop."

Indianapolis Indiana

Week Ending January 12

The state show "Blue Revue" is rife with anima- tion, it offers a musical revue that ends with a quartet revue. The band plays "Swetheart on Parade" and "Four or Five Times" with so much infectiousness that the audience insists on further symphonies. The quartet sang amusingly. The case of Lubil players that is offered is a strange mixture of the Loom's singer who has new ideas about "The St. Louis Blue" and other popular madrigals of the day.

There are two dancers who bowl it vigorously and well and a pair of acrobats are excellent. The Gamby-Hale girls perform the accepted union dances.

audiene knows it is just make believe, the most deady implement of war being the saxophone of Johnny Detroit.

Eight chorus men, in full war trappings, looking for all the world like the wartime article, with excel- lent voices, render several selections, reinforced by a bevy of fifteen well formed (and they are not ashamed of their figure) girls who in a tap act of toe dancing which would do credit to many of the high salaried feature acts which occasionally come to this city—but not often.

Joseph Griffin is the feature, and he sings well and received much applause. The Groody, members of the stage band and singers, come in for their share of appreciation with "I Can't Give You Any- thing," but "Lover," followed by Ted Parenti and Johnny Detroit in solo bits on the deadly saxophone. One other act on the bill, an eccentric dance was not fortunate enough to get his name in the paid advertisements or the local criticism, and even Ben Black in his introduction said his name so low after the second and third performances that nobody heard it. It was probably just as well, as he would never pack the house on his name on a second billing.

New York Capitol

Week Ending January 18

A Mort Harris production, "Reflections," graced the stage this week and it opened to a neat setting in which Dave Scholder led the "Capitolians" as Sonny sang pleasingly, "Love Talk of Alvaro-Lar- raine.

The fine arrangement was by Tony Gains, pianist in the orchestra.

The Charle's Follies in all their pretty costumes, then offered a snappy routine to the tune of "You're the Cream in My Coffee," Rosemany, leaned by Ziegfeld for this particular bit. It was followed by Ted Parenti and Johnny Detroit in solo bits on the deadly saxophone. One other act on the bill, an eccentric dance was not fortunate enough to get his name in the paid advertisements or the local criticism, and even Ben Black in his introduction said his name so low after the second and third performances that nobody heard it. It was probably just as well, as he would never pack the house on his name on a second billing.

The Chester-Hale girls, in black and white costumes, then did a dance routine. Shaw and Lassie, featured comedians in a Broadway show that just closed after a year's run, had every one laughing and applauding. There were some songs, skits and stories. They earned an encore in which they offered an exceedingly funny dance. Sonny sang to St. Louis girls, in beautiful costumes, did a routine for the finale.

Week Ending January 12

Louise Groody dropped "Hit the Deck," and "Milk the Moo-Dee," appeared in person with Earl Oxford and Wally Christiam in a musical satire "Three in Love," and was the outstanding feature at the Stanley this week. The play in itself was rather innocuous, depending solely upon Miss Groody's personality to put it across. It opened with a dialogue between Oxford and Christiam as Miss Groody stepped from an airdplane, supposedly returning to the United States from Paris. She was elated in a fetching blue tailored suit trimmed with astrachan with a tiny muff to match. After a short dialogue and some dancing by Miss Groody, and Christiam took the center of the stage and sang an elocutionary dance characterized by a loose, rolling motion of all his joints that brought a round of applause.

Miss Groody sang "I Want to Be Happy" in her characteristic manner then gave her impression of "Tea for Two," as she had heard it sung in Paris, followed by the samba as a hard boiled little night club entertainer had sung it in Chicago. For some reason one was inclined to like the latter version best, perhaps because it was given with more vivacity.

Miss Groody's voice, though light, is very pleasing and her charm and naturalness of manner are most appealing. She gave the impression that in spite of her success she has remained unspoiled and un-affected.

There was a Movietone Revue which added nothing to the program.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending January 18

Ted Claire, new master of ceremonies, taking the place of Gene Rodemich as leader of the Pubilc Playboys, was the feature of the show, his clever eccentric dance, pleasant singing and peppy leadership went a long way toward putting the show over. He made an excellent impression in the dialogue which took place.

The revue, "Barcelona," comprised such stars as Joe and Jane McKenna, Lewis McClane and Jackie Netanyahu. The curtain went up on the Public Playboys band, playing a Spanish tango number with a new chorus girls taking the place of the Gamby-Hale Girls. Ted Claire was then introduced and received an ovation. He led the band through a hot number, concluding the act with a few clever dance steps. He then sang "That's My Mammy," revealing an ex- cellently trained voice.
A TEN DAY VISIT TO NEW YORK

BY WILLIE HORWITZ

When I got on that Century and into my compartment I settled back at peace with the world. What with I was going to New York to spend the holidays, see my folks, friends, the subway, etc., and all the remains of those three boys, Donladson, Douglas & Gambel.

One of the first things I did was to see the very talked of Ziegfeld production "Whoopie." This was not so easy as it seems, as we had to look all over town to find a spectator who could be talked into letting me have two tickets for this show. The night I saw the Whoopie show they had about five hundred standing.

* * *

Visited Paul Ash at the Paramount Brooklyn and found him a big hit there. Paul likes the house and the people and the people like him so he should be there for a long time. Henry Murray is organist at the Majestic and sure makes them sing. George Dewey Washington on the same bill killed then the night I was over there.

* * *

Saw Jesse Crawford, who has been in New York so long now that he is used to the town. He continues to be very big at the Paramount in New York. When I caught him his biggest number was "I Faw Down and Go Boom."

* * *

Saw Bobby Crawford at the Astor for lunch which, by the way, is the meeting place for all the big chiefs in the music business. Bobby is very happy about his firm, DeSylva, Brown & Henderson and justly so, as they are rare up on top. Bobby is one of the finest boys in the business and sure deserves this success.

* * *

Saw my old friend Mack Stark, who is now in business with Green and Stept, and they have a real song in "Good Little, Bad Little You." As befitted a little firm with a little song, they are represented in the crop by Lew Butler. By the way, I understand every time Lew broadcasts they put the microphone on the floor.

* * *

Went to the Berlin office especially to see my good friend Mrs. Hume. You know he was spending the holidays in Pittsburgh.

* * *

Harold Lee, who made the trip with me, had me up to his house and his father and mother sure entertained 100 per cent. Wonderful people. Bernie Pullen told us about his first engagement to be worked. You liked her very much. Hope Bernie doesn't see this.

* * *

Went up to see Gene Austin, but found him out of town. Just heard he has become a father, my best to him and the Mrs.

* * *

Was sorry not to see Lew Brown, as I think he is undoubtedly one of America's wittiest entertainers. I can remember Lew quite a ways back, and even then, when he didn't have so much to be happy about as he has now, he was the same. You were always sure of laughs when in Lew's company.

* * *

Jimmy Monaco and Edgar Leslie are now with Donladson, Douglas & Gambel. They started off with "Me and the Man in the Moon," which is already one of the country's biggest hits. They also have several other songs that look great. These two boys have always written hits and have some of their best ideas coming, so watch them.

* * *

One of the most pleasant nights I spent in New York was at Walter Douglas' apartments. A perfect host is Walter and I came to Chicago I will show my appreciation by letting him entertain me again. How's that?

* * *

The Feast firm was getting ready to move into their new professional offices on Fifth Avenue and Broadway. Understand it is the last word. When this firm does anything they sure do it right.

* * *

I had a few laughs with George Plantsdell and Herman Schenck of Shapiro-Bernstein. Two good boys whom I have known for a long time.

ORGAN SOLOS

Albert F. Brown (Chicago Marbon) for the first time in a long while offered a community solo, aided by an amplifying arrangement called "Oragan Phone." This was a very successful experiment. Anthony worked his "Vocalone" at this same theatre work and in conjunction with a considerable difference between the two devices. Charlie Kaley, one of the rotating band leaders, here sang over the microphone "Shin Pappy That Way." Brown oriented the audience, through his talk, to join in singing the song hits of 1928, in which he played "Alabam," "Dreams," "Blue Heaven," "Lazy, Lazy," and "Dream Kisses." The crowd grasped the spirit of the novelty and sang merrily.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford (New York Paramount) offered "Opera Ours" for their concert work this week. Mr. Crawford first played hits from famous operas. For the last number, Mrs. Crawford at the stage console and Mr. Crawford at the pit console, played a duet of "Jesuissiante from Lucia." They were very well received.

Faith Dayton (Chicago Chicago) played some of the best organ music that ever accompanied a picture. A big hit was "Casa of the Lena Smith." So much did it stand out that many people leaving the theatre remarked about the playing. The rhythm, selection and what else is in a good musical score was played, and Thur.-day's playing was something that some organists could learn a thing or two from.

"Hi" & C. Geis (Jersey City Stanley). "Embarks on the Matrimonial Sea." This was an original Geis number, with the title of his solo, but also the truth. "Hi" used special slides and lyrics for all the songs played. He first played "Here Comes the Bride," then a special version of "You're the Cream in My Coffee," "My Blackbirds Now," and "High Up on a Hilltop." He received a rousing applause and well wishes from the people. We also wish him luck and happiness in his new venture.

Mrs. Maurie Hilbloom (Chicago Stratford) offered a community song fest. The songs played were: "Come to the Rainbow," "Marie" and "When You're Smiling," and was quite a success.

John Hammond (New Orleans Saenger) rendered some excellent music this week in conjunction with the Grand Orchestra. The Faust Fantasy offering and accompaniment was beyond criticism.

Ernest L. Houle (Winchester, Va., Capital) presented a special solo last week which proved to be very successful entertainment. It was called "Dreams." He selected five numbers, using a big opening arrangement by himself, playing "Sally of My Dreams." "Dreams" was a trumpet solo on the stage concealed to the audience; "Girl of My Dreams," two violins and trumpet with organ, then a violin solo, all of which was played as a vocal solo with trio of players and organ, playing "Dream House." The lighting effects played an important part in the solo, which added considerable to it. The enthusiastic reception was due to the deluge style and is one of the reasons for Houle's ever-increasing popularity in the Valley section.

Welcome These to House Organ Exchange!

Don Adler, Manager, Empress Circuit, Fairbanks, Alaska.

Terry McDaniel, Manager, Wilson Theatre, Wilson, N. C.

From the Halls of Montezuma to—no, what we started to say was, from Alaska to North Carolina the mails in the past week have brought new applications from exhibitors to enter the House Organ Exchange. From all comes the expression, direct or implied, that the Exchange is serving a valuable purpose in promoting the best ideas and best type of house organ. To all these, new applicants we say: "Welcome! And to all the message is the same: You are gladly accepted as members with the one provision that you exchange house organs with the other members. And for your benefit, as well as that of the others, the complete list, revised, is published herewith.

From Fairbanks, Alaska, and the Empress Circuit, of which A. E. Lathrop is chief and A. J. Hewitt is general manager, Don Adler writes from the manager's office of "America's Farthest North Theatre" as follows:

"Please enroll me as a member of The House Organ Exchange. I will exchange house organs with other members.

And from North Carolina comes this from Terry McDaniel, manager of the Wilson Theatre at Wilson, a Public-Saenger house:

"Attached you will find issue number one of New Wilson's News. We would like to have our name placed on your House Organ Exchange list.

"We are certain this service will mean as much in the publishing of a house organ as the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD means in the proper operation of a theatre."

The first page of the New Wilson News is reproduced herewith.

A. E. Post, handling publicity for the Crown theatre, Laramie, Wyo., is another to whom you older members of the Exchange will send your publications gladly. As Post says, "Let the boys start firing, and I will be ready for them." Here is what Post writes:

"Not since the days of the 'dinosaur' of The Lost World fame have I had occasion to correspond with the 'only real paper in the field,' other than to renew my subscription."

"And now—I return to the fold in the interest of house organs. The Crown Theatre Entertainer will be inaugurated next week with the slogan—'Don't say that we didn't tell you about it.' I will forward copies of the initial edition, 'hot off the press' and would like to exchange with the boys each week, but I am at a loss for a complete list of members of the exchange."

"The exchange seems to me a great thing and I hope that the fellows keep interest. If two members each have one good idea as a starter, and they trade said ideas—then each have two. Would that work out with silver dollars? The house organ should, as a result, become something besides paper and printer's ink.

"Let the boys start firing, and I will be ready for them."

"This is also my first opportunity, though a little late, to congratulate you on the merger, or combine which made the H. W. the greatest sheet in the business. Packed houses—fair crowds or 'flips' we at least have the HERALD-WORLD to look forward to each week."

From Tom R. Clemmons, director of theatres of the Jefferson Amusement Company at Beaumont, Texas, comes the request: Will you kindly place the Jefferson Theatre on your House Organ mailing list?

"Your cooperation, folks, is appreciated by new members and those who are just starting house organs. For example, L. J. Wegener, resident manager of the Rialto at Fort Dodge, Iow., has this to say:

"Wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the sample house organs that you sent to me. I am sure they will be a real help in getting our own publication started."

"And there is the following letter from H. Shugold of the Imperial Chain Theatres in Pittsburgh. We haven't as yet received the souvenir number of Filmdom, to which he refers, and are anxiously awaiting its arrival. Also, Shugold, you say that member of the Exchange! We have just heard you a 'moocher' in asking for exchanges before publication of your own. We doubt that, Shugold. We're all working together on this, and we're confident that when other members receive copies of your publication they'll feel more than repaid for sending you a ball of yarn. Anyway, here's what Shugold writes:

"Yesterday morning's mail has a copy of the Souvenir Number of Filmdom, directed to you.

"We have been so terribly busy with the opening of the theatre, I have not been able to send it to you sooner. I do wish to send copies to the individual members of the exchange, but am not able to locate a copy of the HERALD-WORLD containing this list.

Covers Two Weeks

"You will note that this issue covers the program for the first two weeks, however, beginning with the issue now on the press all subsequent issues will cover programs from week to week.

"Because of the concurrent excitement incident to the opening, there are a number of mistakes in the book which I will correct in future issues. Even at this date I have not been able to give 'Filmdom' the thought it requires for its improvement in content and makeup, but I can see much room for improvement and hope to have a good-looking book before long.

Anxious to Exchange

"I am very anxious to get copies to all the other members of the exchange so that I can at last become an active member. So many members of the exchange have considered me a moocher for wanting to be on their mailing list without having a publication of my own to mail, that I fear I have probably missed out on a number of good things which I might have spied had I received the benefit of their books. But I shall now become a member in good standing and look forward to the steady flow of other house organs.

"Again, thank you for your many kindnesses to me and hope that I may return your favor by becoming a valuable contributor to your department."

P. S. Incidentally, we have received a wonderful response from our patrons. From a mailing of 7,000 copies for the opening we have received and are receiving daily requests through the mail to have the book mailed regularly. We flash a trailer on the screen telling the patrons about the book and ask that they drop their names and addresses into box at the exit. The first two days after opening we received close to 300 names and addresses."

New Manager at Racine Solid With Press From Star.

(Special to the Herald-World)

RACINE, WIS., Jan. 22.—A newspaper which no doubt would be the delight of any theatre manager was accorded Charles H. Collins when he took up the reins at the Capitol here. The article, which ran well over a column said in part, commenting upon a recent tour of the West by Collins:

"Previous to his western trip Mr. Collins owned and operated several motion picture houses in Kenosha, spending about 12 years there. His operation of such theatres also extended as far west as Colorado, where he had charge of several such enterprises."

"His travels throughout the west by automobile did not alter his opinion of Wisconsin. Especially does he like this city and its people, he told a Journal-News reporter today."

"Mr. Collins believes the 'talkies' are the greatest thing going at this time. They are the greatest thing that ever happened, he says, and he has prepared to give Capitol theatre patrons that type of amusement."

Washington
And the Truth
(For Your House Organ)

Truth—and service—seems to us to be the most permanent and beneficent contribution of the Nation's Father to the progress of the nation.

Yes, there are those in this age of skeleton-shaking who think it necessary to dispute the story of the cherry tree. There are those who consider that belauding the good traditions of the past will elevate the whole nation at the expense of succeeding generations. We doubt it. To us it is just an epidemic of muckraking and the best we can say for epidemics is that they reduce populations, and while scientists of economics may have good grounds for believing such a result beneficial we have yet to be convinced that it has any standing from a standpoint of morals or morale. We don't know that even much can be said for the epidemic of muckraking.

Does exploring the Cherry Tree incident make Washington more of a he-man? Do you parents have to go very far back into your memories to recall times when your children have come to you, even voluntarily, and admitted little—or large—misdeeds? And did you lose respect for your children because they did so? What a fallacy really lies in this practice of exposing the past?

We said truth and service is the greatest lesson we draw from the life and trials of Washington. We want to apply those same principles in the conduct of our theatre. When we have a particularly good picture and we tell you so, we want you to know from experience that you can bank upon our statement. That, too, is Service.

The Management.

Contest Put Over Well

Hundreds submitted replies to the John Gilbert-Greta Garbo Love Contest conducted by Manager Rodney Tours of the Lodge's State theatre at New Orleans, where the two stars appear on the screen in "A Woman of Affairs." Most of the replies came not from young people but from the older folk. The love passages submitted as subtitles to the contest judges included expressions of the college set, flappers and drug store girls. Miss Lilian May Hubert and Miss Angelina Selafani head the list of fifteen winners of free tickets.

Universal Man Called to Mother's Bed

NEW YORK.—C. L. Dorise, veteran accessory man with Universal and for the past several years in charge of accessories in the company's Pittsburgh territory, has been called to New York, due to the illness of his mother.
Several exhibitors have requested of "The Theatre" a list of publications which can be used as a reference library for data on stars, producers, and so on, in preparation for house organs. To all exhibitors we heartily recommend for this purpose which will make its appearance in a month. The ALMANAC will contain material on a veritable host of subjects, and, what is equally important, in a pleasing style that will be of particular value to House Organ Exchange members.

Opening on Stroke Of Midnight Is Cue Helping "Awakening"

The Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, sold out its house on New Year's Eve and the story was spread by a bit of clever showmanship on the part of Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., of which the Alhambra is a member.

Through an attractive advertisement the theatre-going public of Milwaukee was ac- quainted with the fact that "The Awakening" with Vilm Banky would open at the Alham- bra theatre on the stroke of midnight New Year Eve. Tickets were on sale a week or more in advance and the type of picture, to- gether with the fact that this was a first-run picture opening on New Year Eve, helped to make it a success.

The "Marie" song composed for the picture by Irving Berlin was the principal source of exploitation in connection with "The Awakening". Insofar as this was a sound picture, this phase of the exploitation was particularly effective. A tieup was made with 30 music shops in the city where the "Marie" song was featured by them in their window displays.

In addition to this, a loudspeaker was erect- ed over the box office connected with a vic- trola inside the theatre. In this manner "Marie" was broadcast to those passing, and aided in drawing visitors into the theatre. The lobby was arranged with attractive cutouts and posters, and the picture did a big business in Milwaukee, holding over one week.

Exchange, Theatre Cooperate and All Benefit From Plan

An effective tieup between the Dallas Para- mount theatre and the Palace theatre, Publix deluxe unit, has been arranged whereby both the theatre and the exchange profit.

In all his correspondence to exhibitors and Paramount clients, Jack Dugger, local branch manager, ends with a paragraph on the weekly "Discovery Hour" at the Palace, conducted by Ray Teal, stagehand leader, for the purpose of finding local amateur talent, and advising exhibitors of the publicity value of such a stunt. He also suggests that outoftown exhibitors get in touch with Teal as to the possibility of getting a hearing for any of their local entertainers to appear on the Palace stage.

The Palace reciprocates by offering to the exchange the theatre for trade showings and the theatre and the exchange derive equal ad- vantages from the cooperation.

Circuit Groups Ad for Striking Effect As Well As Lower Cost

The Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., subsidiary of Universal and operator of seven theatres in Milwaukee, six of which are neighborhood houses, has adopted a new policy in its newspaper advertising which has met with a big success. The new policy pertains particularly to such pictures as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "King of Kings" and "The Man Who Laughs," making their first appearance at theatres outside of downtown Milwaukee.

In connection with the first two pictures a two column ad, six inches deep, was run, calling attention to the fact that this tremen- dous spectacle was appearing for the first time at the following theatres: Downer, Venetian, State, Lake, Juneau and Riviera, and listing in each case the address of the theatre. All these houses are Universal theatres and this grouping of all these theatres, featuring the same picture for the same length of time and ap- pearing in one large ad rather than a series of small ads for each house proved very success- ful.

Combine in Sunday Ad

Following the success of this type of ad and of the regular announcement page of the city's leading daily, the circuit tried another stunt which took. This time they tied up the neighborhood theatres of the circuit as well as three other neighborhood houses not controlled by the circuit and the Alhambra theatre, the circuit's downtown house in a combined ad in the Sunday paper.

The ad, four columns wide and six inches deep, was divided in half and carried the names and addresses of the six Milwaukee circuit houses besides the Greenfield, Egyptian and Theatres of the Downer, Venetian, State, Lake, Juneau and Riviera theatres. The ad announced that the picture was to open January 2, but the circuit learned later that it would not run until January 2. It was too late to jerk the ad and substitute another but the paper volunteered to give the theatres news space.

The newspaper accordingly ran a story to the effect that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" would not open at the theatres as announced on January 1, but would open on January 2.
DEAR FOLKS:

Right here is the place to mark a cross. The cross marks the spot where Mr. L. C. Smith's good typewriting mechanism gives a final gasp and lies still. There's simply no possibility of describing "In Old Arizona" adequately with the tools of written narration. It's got to be heard to be seen, seen to be heard, and heard to be perceived. If you don't witness it don't blame me. I've told you.

"In Old Arizona" is the first long picture I've seen with the sounds altogether on the square. It's made as the Movietone News is made, with no sound-proofing of the overtones. The dialogue is crisp, characteristic, genuine, and it occurs as speech occurred in the open spaces on such occasions as the one pictured. So do the noises of horse, wagon, cracking harness and rumbling wheel, and all the noises of outdoors and indoors. What happened is this: They enacted a play and caught it with Movietone. It's a gem, a classic, all the good things you've felt that a play so staged would be—and by "staged" I mean in the broad sense which does not contemplate four walls.

Good actors and actresses do lots of good things in it, but the foregoing paragraphs pertain to the important thing—that this is the first true audio. Don't miss it.

"THE WEDDING MARCH"

THE exhaustive details of Mr. Erich von Stroheim's efforts in connection with the manufacture of "The Wedding March" interest me not a whit. I've heard the story so many times. But "The Wedding March" does interest me, for it is the best picture I've ever seen under Mr. Von Stroheim's hand and seal. It is also the best picture he has ever appeared in. And it is one of the best pictures ever made.

"The Wedding March," as it stands, is a graphic story of Vienna in 1914, terminating before outbreak of the war. A thoroughly sophisticated officer of the guard loves a wholly naive peasant girl, but does not marry her. He does marry money. That's all there is to it, that with aside, highlights, emphases, all the tremendous trifles an artist employs in telling a simple, strong story well. And this is the first time I've called Mr. Von Stroheim artist.

Von Stroheim, Fay Wray, ZaSu Pitts and Mathew Betz are incomparable in the principal roles. Everybody else in the cast is perfect, too, and I don't care if I never see better entertainment.

"THE CASE OF LENA SMITH"

ESTHER RALSTON dresses and enacts the peasant girl who is Lena Smith. She's good enough as such, so let's consider it an established fact that she can act if she must, then let's put her back in light, amusing comedies, where she's so much better to look at.

"The Case of Lena Smith" is a tremendous effort to show that a poor girl didn't have much of a chance in Austria before the war. It shows this conclusively. If there is interest in this hit of history, then the picture may be interesting. But under no circumstance can it be called entertainment, any more than can the highly interesting information you gain while awaiting and recovering from an appendectomy.

"RED WINE"

MR. CONRAD NAGEL is going to he despised in one of these pictures sooner or later, you mark my words. Here, for the second time in just a little while, he is the upright young husband who goes to jazz places and looks upon the wine and women when the former is red, white and blue. Need I relate the rest? Of course not, but I do need to say that he does it better this time than he has before and the picture is as nice a little comedy as I have seen since Sidney Drew passed into the yarning mystery of the Final Closeup.

"THE REDEEMING SIN"

DIDN'T Nazimova make this picture a not very long time ago? Or was it merely some-thing just as good? No, it must have been something better, for this is pretty thin stuff.

Dolores Costello is, in this, an Apache girl. Conrad Nagel is her doctor sweetie. Apaches are all over the place, talking like perfect ladies and gentlemen, and there is much drayma with a very broad A. Very little entertainment, however, unless one is ill bred enough to find entertainment in the efforts of the players to make entertainment.

"JUST ONE WORD"

"JUST ONE WORD" is a Movietone novelty produced for Paramount by Joseph Santley. It has five characters, who speak one word speeches in turn, thus getting across such an act as used to be done in music revues and—if I may further expose my age—in burlesque shows when burlesque was burlesque. And, of course, in vaudeville. It is excellent in itself. It is much more important, significant and so forth as an indication of what may he done with dialogue under proper circumstances.

"THE LAST WARNING"

"THE LAST WARNING" is the last word in mystery effects. Just about everything in the way of mystery thrills happens, and more than one durn chill crept up my spine before the last flicker had flickered. But I must say all this heaping on of mystery stuff leaves one rather cold after awhile. Things happen just for the sake of happening and not for the story.

The cast is a large and imposing one. There are so many good actors in the plot there's not enough stuff to go around. Even Laura La-Plante suffers from lack of things to do, and is forced to scream much too much, as are one or two others in the cast. Montagu Love walks away with the best performance and most of the footage. Paul Leni has given the picture many good bits of direction, and if he is responsible for the photography, he deserves more credit, for some of it is exceptional.

There is dialogue at the beginning and finish. Bits of it are good, the rest mediocre. Dialogue perceptibly slows up the action in places. However, in the chase after the murderer the shots and explanations of the pursuers add to the excitement without slowing up the swift action.

Fire Guts Childs Theatre

VILLISCA, Ia.—To the Editor: I had a nice week with my family, not forgetting the Cozy, which has stood for 20 years, would be numbered as the first of 5,000 theatres to go out of business. At 2 a.m. Saturday morning, January 12, the rear of the Cozy was discovered on fire. After about an hour trying to get the hydrants thawed out I was notified, and with the aid of a military man and a gas mask we rescued seven reels of film. Lost one reel of comedy. Also saved Mercury arc rectifier and tube and a few dishes. I am looking forward to a livery stable or to buy a Ford and peddle fish.—Dr. F. M. Chills, Villisca, Ia.

New York

NEILLSVILLE, Wis.—To the Editor: Well, sir, boys, have you been following our old friend J. C. in his weekly chats? Particularly his chatlets in the issue of the Herald—World of the 12th wherein he prophesied that by January of 1931 there will be at least 5,000 of them gone to the tender mercies of the Fox. You also noticed that he admits he has followed as closely as possible in the footsteps of the immortal Washington. Knowing this old bird better than most of you boys, having spent a few days fishing with him, I'll admit that he tells the truth about everything except the size of his fish catches. However, whenever he talks about this movie game, you can take heed to what he says for he sure tell him what he is talking about. You will note that I refer to this as a game and not a business, although we have been hopped up to refer to it as a business. Any of you fellows who have been in it more than two weeks will notice that I have not said to you it's a game—and a skin game at that.

However, even before the advent of J. C.'s dire prediction, I started burning the midnight oil in my [name redacted] office, on which I am a partner with a couple [name redacted]. I later found out that the [name redacted] of [name redacted] was really the matter with this game, and what could be done to start my people seeing some of these knockout pictures which the film founs admit are the best on the market. In fact, they even tore the doors down in New Yawk and Los Angeles to see things with my own feebly brain. I thought I would take a run into New Yawk and find out what means they employed to break all these records. I brought along my old friend and also met my old friend, the Emperor of Brazil, as well as the second vice-consul to Tegucigalpa, where I had once met on a tramp steamer in the tropics.

As I shagged up the Main Stem I noticed Paramount's ad on "Interference," it wasn't much over a block long and a few hundred feet high. They had dirted over why they charge $2 a look for pictures on Broadway. Not so much for the picture, but to pay for the juice to run their signs. I was also interested to see that is not entirely possible not to see that show. I had read that "White Shadows of the South Seas" had just finished an extended run an accepted as one of a new opening at the Capitol at popular prices. I had visions of seeing a mobbed show at two bits so I hopped it up there. I laid down $2 for the three tickets and was that welcome of the audience. As I was coming in the lobby, I read $6.60 but thought that was the time of the next performance. So I says to the Grand Warden: "What is the price of a season ticket?" "Oh, no," says he, "that is for one seat, and not a very good one either; and if you wish a ticket for the lady with you (my God, I wish it) it will cost you 13 smacks for the pair." I says, "Brother, I wouldn't pay that much to see the last thing," so he took it, and furthermore, if Bill Rogers isn't any better in this show than he was in the last movie in which I showed him, I wouldn't give you two bits for a couple of box seats." I gave him that dirty dig to let him know I was a big exhibitor from Somewhere in the Thickets. I don't know whether that induced the house to reduce their prices, or not. Probably both.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Verdicts on Films in Language of Exhibitor

Columbia

THE LONE WOLF'S DAUGHTER: Bert Lytell—Dandy entertainment. No business on account of the flu. The way television was used caused a lot of talk.—Paul Russell, Russell theatre, Somerset, O.—General patronage.

SUBMARINE: Jack Holt—December 16-17. Would class this an average story or not. It is. Advertised more than usual but fell way below the average. Seven reels.—Mrs. Halda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

NOTHING TO WEAR: Jacqueline Logan—Nice little comedy. Title drew.—Paul Russell, Russell theatre, Somerset, O.—General patronage.

SAY IT WITH SABLES: Special cast—January 4. A good mystery story and an interesting one. It is. Advertised more than usual but fell way below the average. Seven reels.—Mrs. Halda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

STREET OF ILLUSION: Ian Keith—Slow at start but a bang-up climax. Please and drew.—Paul Russell, Russell theatre, Somerset, O.—General patronage.

SWEET ROSIE O'GRADY: Shirley Mason—A nice little program—failed to draw owing to no 24-sheet poster supplied by Near East Film Distributing Co.—N. T. Mudaney, The Pearl Cinema, Calcutta, India.—General patronage.

SINNER'S PARADE: Special cast—Splendid! Drew well and pleased. A real story, perfectly told. We have used eight of the new Columbists. Not a poor one yet.—Paul Russell, Russell theatre, Somerset, O.—General patronage.

THE WATCHING: Jack Holt—Exhibitors, have you any experience of movies? Then try this picture. It is a magnet—drew crowded audiences in spite of heavy rain. Second Columbia picture, and it was well received.—N. T. Mudaney, The Pearl Cinema, Calcutta, India.—General patronage.

ISLE OF FORGOTTEN WOMEN: Dorothy Seabury—This is an unusual picture—fetched better returns patronages than we expected. Play it, it will grace your booking sheet.—N. T. Mudaney, The Pearl Cinema, Calcutta, India.—General patronage.

RKO (FBO)

TERROR MOUNTAIN: Tom Tyler—January 2-3. Tried to prove that movie actors are he-men. Five reels.—E. C. Arehart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

THE CIRCUS KID: Frankie Darro—Dandy program picture, but not so special as it was sold for. Seven reels.—Harold H. Korte, Sun theatre, Plainwell, Mich.—General patronage.

KING COWBOY: Tom Tyler—December 27. My first Tom Mix. It was good as a Western, but don't think Mix has anything on the other Western stars and can't see where his pictures are worth more money than the col ones.—G. A. Dills, Sun theatre, FarwelI, Neb.—General patronage.

SINNERS IN LOVE: Special cast—Fair. At least some of Sunday nighters walked out. Seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

DON'T WAIT—VOTE NOW! DON'T WAIT—vote now! The ballots are coming in with each mail, the nominations are growing, and eventually the "Favorite Players" contest will have to end. TYRANT OF RED GULCH: Special cast—75%. An excellent picture of its type; the girl registers action and is not as namby-pamby as some. Five Saturday fads.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Amusement Company, Moore Haven, Fla.—General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE GAUCHOS: Special cast—57%. What is a million-dollar theme? By penny-pinching they missed what could have been one of the outstanding pictures of the year. The miserably thin ranks of the army at the battle of Salta and the little band of gauchos, made up of six charging killed a brilliant idea. Only fair entertainment.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Amusement Company, Moore Haven, Fla.—General patronage.

TRACKED: Special cast—65%. Not as good as previous one, but has animal-lover appeal, at that. Some good comedy and fighting.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Amusement Company, Moore Haven, Fla.—General patronage.

HEADING FOR DANGER: Bob Steele—January 2. Good print and very good action picture. Bob Steele is a good hard worker and is very clever. Give this boy something to work on and he will do the rest. Do not be afraid to play this. Very good. Fee: $1.50.—B. C. Klutts, Glades Amusement Company, Moore Haven, Fla.—General patronage.

THE PERFECT CRIME: Clinton Brook—24%. January 8. Just another mystery story. Star and cast are fine. When they see it was a dream and Brooks woke up, the crowd walked out and gorged itself with popcorn.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CHICAGO AFTER MIDNIGHT: Special cast—80%. December 1. If you want to draw 'em in, book it. One of the best underworld melodramas we have had for a long while.—G. E. Cooper, Baldwin theatre, Savage, Maryland.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—Gene Stratton Porter's book's always draw; but there is nothing to this picture except beautiful scenery.—L. C. Doldur, Bijou Theatre, Fowlerville, Mich.—General patronage.

First National

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—53%. December 15. Good Barthelmess production, but a little rough for the ladies. Not as good as 'The Nook's,' but will please the majors. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE NIGHT WATCH: Billie Dove—Good. Of course, you have to hand it to Billie. Her pictures are dependable entertainment.—C. A. Swierdonsky, Majestic theatre, Washington, E. M. A.—General patronage.

THE NIGHT WATCH: Billie Dove—January 1-2. A capital's beautiful wife has been secreted on shipboard, this without the knowledge of the husband. A sensation has been promised, and it's a capital and his beautiful wife had become estranged. The husband is actually the murderer. There are about six reels of trial. The wife finally frees the expected husband by pointing out the real criminal. Billie is always good to look upon. However, this one doesn't compare with some previous pictures made by the same star. Seven reels.—C. V. Hunserley, Princess theatre, Parkersburg, Va.—General patronage.

ADORATION: Billie Dove—57%. December 26. One of the finest picture of Billie Dove's career. A little deep for some of our crowd, but most of
WELCOME

Another new contributor to the department is introduced this week: Ione Rowley of the Ward theatre at Pismo Beach, Cal., having sent in her first positive note, has been selected. Those of the big "What the Picture Did for Me" family means all of us both in practical demonstration and extended welcome statements are the following reports:

FIRST NATIVE—THE Whip: Special contribution, with a saying by "The Whip." Well read and well written, this is one of the best I have ever read.

MELOD-DOLY-MAYER—D a n s i n g Daughters: Joan Crawford. A note for the box office and goes over good in small towns.

THE LOVE MART: Billie Dove—48% December 17-18. It is a costume picture, has plenty of action, and most of the audience the picture, while Billie Dove is a star—and what a beauty! Even on the block she looked up and never was hard to see. Ray W. Muselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE LOVE MART: Billie Dove—December 15. Poor little picture. It is a story where a crowd, they’ll like it—Frank E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—50%. December 1-2. This is a tragi-comedy, one that has a plot and story, fine acting and it will please all classes. Photography is good. W. H. Bolduc, Adams theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—Well liked and did better than ordinary. Eight reels—H. Goldson, Farmers theatre, Chillicothe, Ohio.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—Every word of praise that has been said about this picture is not enough, and I cannot add anything to what has been said other than to say it is the biggest box office picture that I have had in two years.—W. H. Brown, W. H. theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—December 24-25. Very good. Patrons very well pleased, andColleen Moore is just as good as ever.—R. A. Wilson, New theatre, De Witt, Ark.—General patronage.

FOUR SONS: Margaret Mann—December 26. Not only one of the greatest of 1928 but can be included among the greatest ever produced. Direction and acting superb, both well done. Said to be a good. No complaints were heard—but nothing but praise. Margaret Mann’s portrayal of the mother and her change, through the personality of her son, was an old woman whose shoulders were heavily laden with sorrow was excellent. She deserves a niche in the preceding years. H. H. Hodber, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

THE RIVER PIRATE: Victor McLaglen—Another of those unexpected and rather a finely done picture. Small town patronage not very enthusiastic regarding its merits and there were as many adverse words of praise as favorable. The interest of the large cities may go wild over Mr. Murnau’s art, but the people in small towns don’t think much. O’Brien’s, Gaynor’s, Livingston’s acting was good. Ten reels—H. H. Hodber, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

THE LONE STAR RANGER: Tom Mix—Relaxes. 40% December 4-5. Mix always does well here. The only feature in this cast is made up of many money. Six reels—E. C. Archard, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

THE FARMER’S TOUCH: Charles Bovee—Not much plot to this one, but it pulled a fair-sized crowd in out of a stormy night and made a little picture out of it. As such, it is a success, and it is a long list of box-office finals on Fox produce the last year. Chuckles aplenty seemed to pour out from the audience. If you have this one, make sure it is small, like theatre, Ashland, Neb.—General patronage.

WIN THAT GIRL: Special—A fair comedy-drama that began to grow a little thin up to the present football era. Nothing to rave about. No comments. Seven reels—C. V. Hunerberg, Princess theatre, Parkersburg, Ia.—General patronage.

HANGMAN’S HOUSE: Victor McLaglen—Question: When a "giant" (7) picture like this, sold at a prohibitive price, does it make any difference? Not at all. The rental at the box office, why should "Nu Yock" expect to get any more contracts? Ans.: Must be believe extensive appeal. July 7-8, Charlie Chaplin and a "情報 東京"! We are on the last of the old contract and by heck it looks like taking that little picture and make a few days yet, b’gosh!—Becker & Birdsell, Lila theatre, Ashland, Neb.—General patronage.

HANGMAN’S HOUSE: Victor McLaglen—This time we have a picture we can always count on, Charles B. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

MOTHER KNOWS BEST: Special—This is doubtless one of the very best and most outstanding dramas of mother love and motherliness (as regards her daughters) that has ever been produced. The cast is wonderful. You can tell the world about this one and mean it. The flu epidemic knocked our profits on this quiet reel—C. V. Hunerberg, Princess theatre, Parkersburg, Ia.—General patronage.

NONE BUT THE BRAVE: Charles Morton—One of the cleverest little pictures we’ve had from Fox this entire year. Color scenes beautiful. We used it with great profit. We have always been interested in those historic Westerns Columbia exchange at Omaha distrib, as, being a New Year’s offering, a combination that is always a big hit at this time of year. Mr. Hall, our theatre, Ashland, Neb.—General patronage.

PLASTERED IN PARIS: Special—December 24-25, "I Like Your Hair." This is a good one and we have seen it a couple of times. R. A. Wilson, New theatre, DeWitt, Ark.—General patronage.

YOU MAY RETREAT: Special—If you haven’t played this picture do so by all means, and play it two days. The funniest comedy-drama we have shown in a long time. It is the first reel and goes out laughing.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Tom Mix—December 14-15. When we want to beat competition we book a mix picture. Despite a double header Diamond Handcuffs: Special cast—December 26. A good one to run while everyone has the holiday. You will not have as many to cut as you would fancy. As a means of cutting down expenses, you can take your handful of patrons and pictures and watch a picture or two from them. This will save you the cost of the keeping the house warm on that night. H. C. Stettnund, Jr., H. & S. theatre, Chandler, Oklahoma—Small town patronage.

While the City Sleeps: Lon Chaney—The best from Lon Chaney for some time. Chaney is good card, but sub-zero weather kept majority away. Those who did venture out left well satisfied.—Marion F. Bodwell, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

Excess Baggage: William Haines—January 7. A very fine picture. Due to its failure to arrive until the day following its show date. On that account we lost but it is not the fault of the picture. You can bet that it will please. Eight reels.—Paul R. Hoffman, Lexton theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Four Walls: Special cast—December 11-12. A good program picture of the underworld with these two characters doing very well. Several good comments on this picture. Seven reels.—C. V. Henseberg, Princess theatre, Parkersburg, Ia.—General patronage.

Detectives: Dara-Arthur—There has been a lot of criticism on this one. I wonder why. It pleased here and some came the second night to see it, as we are able to report favorably. Six reels.—C. V. Henseberg, Princess theatre, Parkersburg, Ia.—General patronage.

The Adventurers: Tim McCoy—85c. As good as any McCoy I have shown. Story and acting good. Five reels.—C. E. Robinson, Town Hall theatre, Carmel, Me.—Small town patronage.

UNDER THE BLACK EAGLE: Flash—45c. December 24. Well liked by my people. Not a common action film. Flash is not advertised as he should be. Seven reels.—Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

UNDER THE BLACK EAGLE: Flash—45c. If your audience like dog stars, don't fail to play this one. Flash has gottin him biased by 25 cts. Very favorable comment on this picture. Flash is at his best in this and is ably supported by a good cast. Seven reels.—C. E. Robinson, Town Hall theatre, Carmel, Me.—Small town patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD: William Haines—Played this running last night. All of Haines' pictures go good here. Eight reels.—Earle Eveldan, Twin City Opera House, McConnelville, O.—General patronage.

WYOMING: Tim McCoy—Another good one from Mc Coy. There are Indians, the U. S. Army and a bit about the history of the town. Six reels.—C. E. Robinson, Town Hall theatre, Carmel, Me.—Small town patronage.

The Cardboard Lover: Marion Davies—Married a week and it broke all records to see her. The picture is good, as are all the rest. Seven reels.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

No Limitness Preferred: Cody-Pringle—December 11. This one on our 16c night (thank the Lord). The fact that I played it of the Metro color classics with it saved the prestige of the house. Absolutely nothing to it. A very weak sister. Six
High in Contest Vole

The Mysterious Lady: Greta Garbo—January 9-10. In this one Greta Garbo takes the part of a Russian Spy. Her work is very good, as is the work done by Napper. It should entertain well anywhere shown. Nine reels.—C. V. Hunerberg, Princess theatre, Parkersburg, Ia.—General patronage.

Buttons: Jackie Coogan—December 18-19. A good picture.――Youth is quite as prominent in this as in others made previously. Coogan always pleases the kids. Seven reels.—C. V. Hunerberg, Princess theatre, Parkersburg, Ia.—General patronage.

Buttons: Jackie Coogan—Jackie is quite grown up, but he still pleases. A very good picture.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

Morgan's Last Raid: Tim McCoy—16-20. A good picture at any time. Tim McCoy was good here, but this McCoy does not take at the B. O. I liked the show myself, but he just failed to pull for me.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, la.—General patronage.

The Thirteen Hour: Lionel Barrymore—I can't explain, but this picture, played on one of the poorest days of the year, (Christmas Eve) for me, pulled the biggest crowd of the week. A fine mystery story.—Earle Evedal, Twin City Opera House, McConnelsville, O.—General patronage.

Laugh, Clown, Laugh: Lon Chaney—55-75. It is heavy drama in the extreme, and while some rarely satisfy, this is one occasion when they liked it. Very pretty made and some nice acting by Lon. Eight reels.—Ray W. Musseman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Cossacks: Special cast.—Some great horsecast, including good cast, in fact excellent cast. Gave more or less satisfaction but on the whole considered an excellent production. Ten reels.—Glencora, bro., Crystal theatre, Tomalotin, Ariz.—General patronage.

Rose-Marie: The Cossacks: Special cast:—Here are a couple high-priced box office "duds" on last year's Metro lineup we just gotta tell about. Just played "The Cossacks" three nights (Saturday included, mind you!) and, with comedy added, the dozen others didn't bring in film rental, let alone a multitude of other expenses an exhibitor is up against. Personally, we consider John Gilbert one of the most finished actors in the world's picture. He is a true artist. Very good.—A. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Parma, Neb.

Wings: Special cast—Good entertainment, well directed and it pleased crowds on four nights. Our only objection was that Paramount (spuriously) said the show was a very good revolver in the form of a couple of checkers who seemed willing enough to extract the tickets from our backs in order to sell this uninteresting Fredric March picture. After the switch was reached, exploitation expenses, with no results, and too close a split caused us to record a poor showing at the box office, hence our "net" wasn't much, and "prestige," that intangible and illusionary film peddler prate about, fails utterly to provide befevetee for our tables.—Becker & Birdsal, B. B. theatre, Ashland, Neb.—General patronage.

The DRAG NET: George Bancroft—Extra good picture of its kind, but a little too rough for Sunday. Here are the facts:—H. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Plainw, Mich.—General patronage.

The DRAG NET: George Bancroft—A good picture. Five little pictures, romantic comedy of the society type. Not much action. Not so good Saturday offering, but will get by a general audience. Bearing in mind that this is Ford's first picture. Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN FACES: Clive Brook—A very good picture. Five pictures, comedy in which Marion F. Bodwell, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

Sawdust Paradise: Esther Ralston—Dandy program picture, but failed to click at the box office.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainwell, Mich.—General patronage.

Take Me Home: Bobbi Daniels—Not as good as others I have run of Bebe.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainwell, Mich.—General patronage.

The First Kiss: Wray-Coope—A good program picture. Something different. The work of Gary Cooper and Fay Wray very good.—Marion F. Bodwell, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

The First Kiss: Wray-Coope—Here's a dandy picture and we ran it as a special, but it has a poor title for this town. Six reels.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainwell, Mich.—General patronage.

The Fleets in: Clara Bow—Good picture. Bow does not draw as she used to.—J. V. Frank, Harvard theatre, Harvard, Neb.—General patronage.

Kit Carson: Fred Thomson—This might have been a good picture, but we had to receive all the reels. But the part we had was good. Chains around it, I believe that it was all about.—J. V. Frank, Harvard theatre, Harvard, Neb.—General patronage.

Moran of the Marines: Richard Dix—Seven reels. Just a dandy. Front and rear of the gang squad on this one and they sold enough tickets to put it over fine, much to the delight of "lone dog." Dix is popular here, or has been previously. Never can tell, though, might be in circulation out of town. He is being largely a matter of uncertainty.—Becker & Birdsal, Ias theatre, Ashland, Neb.—General patronage.

The Patriot: Emil Jannings—January 1-3. An excellent picture that was a complete flop for us. We lost money, and although the film and weather BEGGARS OF LIFE: Special cast—Quite dis-appointed for Beery. Too dragged out. Would have been a fair play program in six reels.—Harold H. Cortes, Sun theatre, Plainville, Mich.—General patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—December 36. A good picture that is seemed to please. Seven reels.—William E. Trangsdorf, Trams theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SPEEDY: Harold Lloyd—Harold Lloyd is a favorite with many patrons and played them all to exhaustion. Seven reels.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

SPEEDY: Harold Lloyd—78%—A good picture but Paramount wants too much for their shows. Eight reels.—C. E. Cooper, Baldwin theatre, Savage, Minn.—General patronage.

MORAN OF THE MARINES: Rich Dix—Weak long drawn out. But all I can say for it is that Dix was in it.—Paul Russell, Russell theatre, Somer- set, 0.—General patronage.

AVALANCHE: Jack Holt—January 5. A good Saturday night picture of outdoor action stuff that will go well in the winter season. Six reels.—E. Hoffmann, American theatre, Holyrod, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SOMEONE TO LOVE: Brian-Rogers—34%—December 19. Just one of those little love affairs that the patrons ask for. These two films are sure to make far better pictures than this one. Seven reels.—0. A. Halstede, Cozy theatre, Dushene, Utah.—General patronage.

THE HUNTING TOWER: Sir Harry Lauder—40%. December 12-13. This is a much better picture than I expected it to be, and I heard no poor comments. Six reels.—0. A. Halstede, Cozy theatre, Dushene, Utah.—General patronage.

VARIETY: Buddy Rogers—Not such a bad program offering. Did as well at box office as average stuff of late has produced.—Becker & Birdall, Island theatre, Somerset, 0.—General patronage.

THE FIFTY-FIFTY GIRL: Bebe Daniels—35%—December 10. It is a good picture, has a lot of action and comedy. That's what it takes and this picture is full of it. Don't be afraid of this one.—Ray W. Muselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

We want to have a little private conference with the exhibitors. Boys, you remember back in the days when we bought our film service by the week and it cost us from $18 to $24 per week, with a change each night, and we could have anywhere from six to 12 reels if we wanted them? In those days we charged ten and 15 cents and filled our houses about the same.

We bought new stage settings, a new screen, piano, two new Powers machines and otherwise dolled the place up and had the money to pay the bills. We got our service from General, Mutual, Vitagraph and Universal. In those days a star that could command $250 per week was rare. As we understand it, Henry W. Wallath was drawing only $300 per week when he played the Little Colonel in "THE BIRTH OF A NATION," and that was a pretty good picture, as you will remember.

About this time producers began to have visions. They had pipe dreams. Each one wanted to control the industry, and to do so they had to corral all the stars, which naturally put goofy notions in the stars' heads, and they had to have a business manager and a press agent, both of which had to be paid in good United States money, and this has been going on until nowadays a star that doesn't pull down a thousand a week is considered an "extra."

While all this was going on, film prices mounted by leaps and bounds, and you exhibitors stood the raise, just as you had to do, and the money came in so fast at the home offices that they thought there could be no end to it. The business was loaded down with an army of clerks, a new staff of legal services, press agents, managers, and the like.

The one question that is uppermost in the industry today is, "What's the matter with the business?" You can blindfold Mike Sweeney and give him six drinks of squirrel whiskey and ask him what's the matter with the business, and this is the gist of what he will say:

"When they took the public's popular amusement out of the popular price column and dolled it up with a lot of film-flam and tried to get it to consort with grand opera, they headed the thing toward the rocks."

Mike knows his onions, don't think he doesn't.

In fact, the business pulse today about a flush to float a $50,000,000 bond issue in a 'merger' as it would for a star to buy an all-day sucker, and while you are asking "what's the matter with the business," just put this question with it, "Whose behind these bonds and whose paying the bills?"

Mike will tell you that it is the exhibitors who are also acting as the fiscal agent, and if this is true it would look like poor business to weaken this agency.

This town of Galena has a population of around 27,000, and there are four theatres here—one closed and the other three in operation. The Keith-Albee house is operated by Mr. Thorpe, and the other two by Mr. McSpalden, both high-class gentlemen and both real theatre managers. There are approximately 9,000 people for each theatre to draw from. If these theatres can't play to capacity, which they do not, how can it be expected that theatres in towns of 3,000 and under can exist as conditions are today? Put this question up to Sweeney, and he will tell you they can't, and again Sweeney is correct.

The business concerns that are making a success today are those that turn a large volume of patronage. It is a lost art to have the customers that buy $5 worth of your goods a month than to have only one customer that buys $500 worth a month, because some day that guy might come down with the mumps or go bankrupt.

It never pays to disguise the truth. We tried that once when we told our father that we didn't smoke. He caught us out back of the barn with an old cob pipe, and thereby hangs several tales. That's why we said in this column of intelligence once before, that unless something unforeseen happens in this business before long, there will be 5,000 less theatres in operation two years from today than there are at this time. You don't believe it? Of course you don't. We didn't expect you would, but if you will get out and cover 14 states as we have, and inquire into conditions as we have among these theatremen, you will revise your opinion. It is a waste of time in an office and say that business is good when they fail to draw your Saturday night check, you are going to rear up and say, "What in hell's the matter here?" And that's what is going to happen to a lot of 'em when these 5,000 theatres close.

Telling the truth and spreading the bull are two separate and distinct occupations. There is too little truth and too much bull in the business already, and if we didn't tell the truth as we see it, we wouldn't feel that we were earning our seven-fifty per week—and we sometimes do feel that at that.

What's the remedy? Ask Sweeney, he knows. When our wife wants to make both ends meet, and we want her to make one end ice cream, she gets hold of the pruning knife and starts in on the family budget, and her pruning knife has kept the firm of Jenkins & Co.

pany out of the bands of a receiver, at least up to date, though we don’t know for how long.

* * *

We are going to record the flat-footed statement without any whiskeys on it, that good pictures can be made and sold for 30 per cent less than they are today. If you ask us how this can be done, we will say that our advice costs money, so we will suggest to you that there is some talent in this country that has hitherto been undiscovered.

We might suggest, however, as a thought for consideration, that the pruning knife be applied to that army of useless chair-warriors, and that salaries of officers and stars be cut to a point indicated by sanity. We might also suggest that the removal of 5,000 theaters for their product is likely to have a depressing effect on their bank accounts and lessen the security behind their bonds. These are merely suggestions. If we were going to outline a program, we would expect pay for it, and of course, could be loaded on the exhibitor along with the balance of the needless expense, and everything would be jacked up as long as he could stand up under it. There’s no damn sense for his existence, anyhow.

Buying pictures is like buying a barrel of apples. You will always find the good ones on top. It is always a good plan when you are buying apples to have them open the bottom of the barrel, for the price is governed by the top layer. Sometimes if you take all the rotten stuff out of some of these cases, there won’t be any left—it depends on who packed the apples. It never pays to depend on a brand. We have seen some mighty rotten apples under a high class brand—in fact, we have seen some barrels that wouldn’t even make good cider, but they wanted top price for them, nevertheless.

It has been said by those who claim to know, that railroads fix their rates largely on inflated values, much in excess of their actual cost, which is no doubt necessary to take care of the interest on their bonds without regard to Jones, who pays the freight.

We have had a great deal of sympathy for that guy Jones. If it wasn’t for Jones this country would be in a hellus fix. Jones wears the overalls and furnishes the sinews of war, and when Jones turns the keys on those 3,000 theaters, there will be an exodus of lieutenants and “powder monkeys” looking around to see what’s the matter with Jones.

An orchard that never saw a pruning knife bears nothing but a lot of little, scruffy apples that will never sell on the market. We paid a fellow $125 once to prune our orchard of six acres, and the returns we got from the crop justified the expenditure many times over, and that’s why we are strong for the pruning knife, and that’s why we give that piece of enthrall the spotlight position in our column this week.

Maybe you haven’t been following us. Maybe you haven’t made ourselves clear. Maybe we have been going around in circles. Maybe we are crazy, and maybe you don’t believe a word we have said, all of which cuts no ice with us nor chases any shots out of our cabbage patch, for we are still a firm believer in George’s hatchet story and that chery tree stuff.

HORRORS, HORRORS, HELP, HELP! Word comes to ns from the office that Eagle Eye Joe has adopted bell-bottom “browsers,” butterfly neckties and a “Harold Teen” hat. This indicates that he is entering upon that adolescent stage when a boy thinks that every girl he tennis is no more trouble than a little better looking than any other girl.

It is the most dangerous period he passes through, except when he places the ring on the third finger, and from then on it’s just one datming after another. We can’t think that the office force has been so derelict in duty as to permit Joe to wander from the paths of rectitude and into the quagmire of puppy love. No, sir, we just can’t think it, the thought is too horrible.

CLARINDA, IA., JANUARY 13.

We skated and skidded in here last night in a snowstorm, and after putting Marie in a garage, we went into the hotel and wrapped on Adonis form around a radiator until we had the icicles thawed off our nose, and then we went over to the Armory theatre and called on our old friends & Mrs. Van Tassel. They were in from Alaska glacier. Van said we looked like our circulation needed fixing and invited us into his office. After that we felt better.

Van has been considering the advisability of installing CINEVOICE in his theatre, but as yet is undecided. Maybe you don’t know what CINEVOICE is, it’s a current word for talking pictures, and should Van do this, it will push Clarinda up into the front ranks.

(Editors note: It should—are a swell word like that!) We are also hearing from命令 and Mr. Pennington of the Rialto theatre. The Rialto was playing “WEST OF ZANZIBAR,” an M-G-M picture with Lon Chaney, and if Metro don’t stop putting our favorite star in such gruesome pictures, we are going to file a complaint with the Board of Health. Stop it, Louis, stop it!

OMAHA, NEB., JANUARY 14.

Every time we cross the Missouri river beaded west we feel like shouting “HURRAH FOR THE AMERICAN EAGLE AND GOD BLESS THESE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA FROM A TO Z.” And now, Gertie, don’t forget to put out that fire.

WE AMERICANS: Special cast.—They gave us an extra night to play this, and while it is an entertaining picture, didn’t prove so very strong at the box office tonight. The boys all did well, but Miss Shipall, Lis and theatre, Ashland, Neb.—General patronage.

SILKS AND SADDLES: Special cast.—January 2. Not much to this picture, very poor entertainment. Film and print fine. Not the first good thing to this picture except the film. I cannot give percentage as I did not have enough people in to see this picture to give any percentage.—IL. A. Blea, Royal theatre, Oak Harbor, O.—General patronage.

GIVE AND TAKE: Special cast—40%. January 2. They don’t make them any better to please them all. Clean and interesting.—E. S. Cottrell, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE MICHIGAN KID: Conrad Nagel—19%. December 14-15. A good picture, and the patronage will like it if the exhibitor does not raise his admission price, but if he does raise admission in proportion to film rental of program pictures, then they may have a kick coming. I paid three times the program price, and it was not worth it. Seven reels.—O. A. Halstead, Cozy theatre, Duchess, Utah.—General patronage.

RIDING FOR FAME: Hoot Gibson—39%. January 2. A very good picture, and the patronage might like it if the exhibitor does not raise his admission price, but if he does raise admission in proportion to film rental of program pictures, then they may have a kick coming. I paid three times the program price, and it was not worth it. Seven reels.—O. A. Halstead, Cozy theatre, Duchess, Utah.—General patronage.

CRIMSON CANYON: Ted Welts—72%. This went for this one. Better than average.—C. C. Eley, Top Amusement Co., Monroe Haven, Fla.—General patronage.

A HERO FOR A NIGHT: Glen Tryon.—Here was a cooing good comedy that kept the house in an uproar from start to finish and was just what the people want, clean, wholesome comedy. Six reels.—Giacomo Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

UNCLE TOM’S CABIN: Special cast—55%. November 19-20-21-22-23-24. We, E. L. Lees, Jr., Dreamland theatre, Sterling, Ont.—General patronage.

GUARDIANS OF WILD: Special cast—40%. Forrest ranger romance with wild horse theme. Just average.—C. J. Klotz, Glen Amusement Co., Monroe Haven, Fla.—General patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Glen Tryon.—January 5. One of the best comedies you can buy. Don’t miss it. Quite a number in our patrons no money and make it clash.—Frank E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—General patronage.

THE GRIP OF THE YUKON: Special cast—99%. December 29. A very good picture. It is the kind of a picture that will make money for exhibitors. The strongest picture we have ever seen like it. Six reels.—Alfred Lundquist, Palace theatre, Grand Marais, Mich.—General patronage.

JAZZ MAD: Jean Harlow—50%. December 15. A good picture. Well liked by most of my patronage. Weather was bad. Did not do as well as I would have done. Six reels.—Alfred Lundquist, Palace theatre, Grand Marais, Mich.—General patronage.

THE BIG HOP: Buck Jones.—Buck, let’s stay in Westerns. Another one like this and you will lose your following. The same old story, a cowboy gets the aviation fever and enrolls in the trans-Pacific hop and his plane fails, he is rescued, he comes home to surprise his mourning dad and his mustache, and everything ends happily, even for the villain who escapes a drubbing by departing for parts unknown. Very little action, no suspense. Just a picture. Buck shouldn’t be in Westerns. Set the boy there—H. H. Redberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

TARZAN THE MIGHTY: (Universal) Here’s the one that every man has been waiting for. It is a sure box office bet. I ran the last chapter this week and wish there were 15 more.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, DeWitt, Ark.—General patronage.

Short Features

EDUCATIONAL

CAMEO COMEDIES: All Cameo comedies are good. One reel.—Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

EDUCATIONAL COMEDIES: Good two reel comedies which put many laughs.—R. A. Wilson, New theatre, DeWitt, Ark.—General patronage.

FELLOW TEACHER: Big Boy.—A good kid comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE GLOOM CHASER: Big Boy.—Good kid comedy that was pleasing to both old and young. Big Boy seldom fails to bring out the giggles. Two reels.—H. H. Heidberg, Amus-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

HOP OFF: Good comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

LITTLE RUBE: Dorothy Devere.—And they laughed heartily. This is a good comedy. Two reels.—C. A. Swierscinsky, Majestic theatre, Washington, Kan.—General patronage.

THE QUIET WORKER: This two reel comedy rates by. Very good. Two reels.—E. A. Eley, Royal theatre, Oak Harbor, O.—General patronage.

THE SKY RANGER: Reed Howes.—It was a very good show. All the children went wild over it, so I am booking the whole series.—G. E. Cooper, Baldwin theatre, Savage, Md.

SWORD POINTS: Lupino Lane.—This like costume features—it's got small-pox, and they can't see any thing funny to laugh at. Two reels.—C. A. Swierscinsky, Majestic theatre, Washington, Kan.—General patronage.

RKO (FBO)

RKO COMEDIES: They have put Al Cooke in half of their products. People here want to know if I am related to him, because I get him so often.—Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

A KICK IN THE DARK: Cooks-Guard.—Last of "The Wiscrackers," and the kids are asking for more. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

Mickey, the Detective: To whom this may concern: Don't spend your time and money for any of these Mickey comedies, as they are not good. Two reels.—E. A. Eley, Royal theatre, Oak Harbor, O.—General patronage.

OKMNX: Barney Google series. Fair. Two reels.—E. C. Arehart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

WHAT A WIFE: Toots and Caricar series. More waste of celluloid. Two reels.—E. C. Arehart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

CAME THE DAWN: Good comedy with plenty of laughs. Two reels.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

EDISON, MARCONI AND COMPANY: An extra good Gang with an extra poor print. We worked three hours to get it in shape to run, and then we had four breaks.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainview, Mich.—General patronage.

HABEAS CORPUS: Laurel-Hardy—I think these two men make the best comedies on the screen. My patrons wait for them. Two reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

THE HEART OF ROBERT E. LEE: These technicolor specials are to your program and are all good. Two reels.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

LAUREL-HARDY COMEDIES: These comedies are liked best by my people.—H. Goldson, Plaza theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

SCHOOL BEGINS: Our Gang.—The best Our Gang I ever had, and has plenty of comedy. The school room is a riot.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

SHOULD WOMEN DRIVE: Max Davidson.—Good. Two reels.—L. C. Frank, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

SOUP TO NUTS: The greatest comedy I ever ran. It was a dandy to put with a weak feature, as it will sell in the double bill. They ought to call it "Me Faw Down!" Give us more like it.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainview, Mich.—General patronage.

SOMEBODY ELSE: Laurel-Hardy.—The comedy makers ever. In fact, MGM has the best comedies, barring none.—L. C. Frank, Harvard theatre, Harvard, Neb.—General patronage.

THE SPANNING AGE: Our Gang.—Good.—C. A. Sokolinsky, Majestic theatre, Washington, Kan.—General patronage.

THEIR PURPLE MOMENTS: Laurel-Hardy.—These two comedians always get the laughs. Very good comedy. Two reels.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

TWO TARS: Laurel-Hardy.—The best comedy we have had for weeks. How did they laugh? And the photography was more like we used to get in Bosch comedies, except part of the first reel, which was a little dark. Good print. And, O, lad, what a laugh! Two reels.—H. W. Wolfe and Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT

DANCING TOWN: No laughs whatever in a Paramount comedy. Played this one twice, as it was repeated on us. Either have a repeat or mix out altogether.—J. V. Frank, Harvard theatre, Harvard, Neb.—General patronage.

KO-KO COMEDIES: Good comedies. One reel.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

KRAZY KAT COMEDIES: Still another good cartoon. One reel.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

LOSE OFF: Good comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Airplanes, airplanes, airplanes.—V. Frank, Harvard theatre, Harvard, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A SHE GOING SAILOR: Dandy comedy. Plenty of laughs.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainview, Mich.—General patronage.

PATH

COLLEGE KIDDO: Right, smart two reeler. Two reels.—Frank E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

DUMB WAITERS: Fairly dumb. Two reels.—Frank E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE GIRLS FROM NOWHERE: This is our first one of the Sennett girls, and I can't say very much for them.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainview, Mich.—General patronage.

NO SALE: Good comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

PATHE COMEDIES: Been using for three years. As good or better than many others. Two reels.—R. A. Wilson, New theatre, DeWitt, Ark.—General patronage.

PRIDE OF PIKEVILLE: Ben Turpin.—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SMITH'S HOLIDAY: Good. Two reels.—L. C. Bolduc, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.—General patronage.

SMITH'S HOLIDAY: Fair comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

TAXI FOR TWO: Fair, just fair. Two reels.—Frank E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

UNIVERSAL

THE COLLEGIANS: These are good.—G. A. Dillin, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGIANS: I sure can't say much for these so far. My last one was "Dear Old Colfard," and I wish I was my last, as it sure was punk. They don't take the place of a comedy, and it makes the show too long to put a comedy with them.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainview, Mich.—General patronage.

THE FOX CHASE: Oswald the Rabbit.—These are good. One reel.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

LOOK PLEASANT: Not so good. You can see better comedy on the screen any day than these two boys play. Terrible. Better pay for same and not play it. Two reels.—E. A. Eley, Royal theatre, Oak Harbor, O.—General patronage.

NEWLYWEDS UNWELCOME: By golly, you fellows that never saw a good Stern's Brothers comedy should get this. Of course, it's "just a comedy," but it filled our house with laughs from stem to stern, and for good production we rate it very good. Sunny McKean is great for the fam-
How They Voted

Following is the list of voters in the "My Favorite Contest," with their respective choices for male and feminine players (in parentheses) and arranged by theatres. The first voter's name is that of the exhibitor, the next that of his wife (except when conditions are otherwise, that are those of the children). No attempt has been made to arrange the list in any special order, although the position of each theatre is approximately according to the time the ballot was received.

Alexander Is To Write

Exclusively for W B

(Hom to the Herald-World)

Hollywood, Jan. 22.—J. Grubb Alexander, whose outstanding achievements for the past twelve months have been underwritten to the extent of $200,000, is to write exclusively for Warner Brothers for the next year. He has been assigned by Darryl Francis Zanuck to write the screen version and dialogue for "The Gamblers," based on Charles Klein's stage success. Michael Curtiz will direct.

New Managers Named

For Canadian Houses

(Special to the Herald-World)

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—Irwin Taylor is announced as the new manager of the Oakwood theatre here, in succession to the late James Craig, who was killed in a traffic accident. He has been appointed manager of the Capitol in Vancouver, B. C., while J. Schubar is the new manager of the Regent and E. Petch of the Victoria, other Vancouver houses.

Steady Growth Evidenced

By Southern California

MPTO with More Joining

(Special to the Herald-World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Steady growth of the M. P. T. O. of Southern California was evidenced at the latest membership meeting at which the following were admitted to the organization: Arthur J. Woods, Graham theatre, Graham; C. M. Donley, Liberty, Long Beach; M. Ray Peterson, Fair Oaks, Placentia; Frank Nagel, Sunflower, Melrose, Los Angeles; W. J. Kellow, Garfield, Alhambra; Paul Davini, Rialto, Bakersfield. Applications for membership and a clearance issue were considered, and arbitration complaints also were aired.

Drops Coin, Robs Cashier

As She Stoops for It

(Special to the Herald-World)

COLUMBIA, MO., Jan. 22.—An unmasked bandit help up the box office of the Missouri theatre the night of January 4 and escaped with about $100 in cash. The robber appeared at the box office window and asked for a ticket, pushing a coin through the opening so that it rolled to the floor. When the girl cashier turned to pick up the coin the robber grabbed her money box and ran. He did not display a weapon of any kind.

Mitchell Lewis at M G M

(Special to the Herald-World)

Hollywood, Jan. 22.—Mitchell Lewis, acting director, has been given the role of Captain Alvarado in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." Charles Brabin is directing the cast includes Raquel Torres, Ernest Torrence, Lili Damita and others.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

MORTON VAN PRAAG, general sales director of Universal, and Ted Sclanger, assistant sales manager, were in Chicago last Friday to conduct a sales meeting. Fred McConnell, short subjects sales director; Herman Stern, non-theatrical representative; and Dick Anderson, International Newsreel sales director, were also here. The meeting was attended by the executives of nearly exchanges.

Grad Sears, manager of First National, and Jimmy Coston of the Coston circuit, took an airplane trip to Detroit. They returned by train, however, and it may be some meaning in that.

W. C. Cook has returned to First National and will cover the North Side territory. Cook was connected with First National before.

Art Fatzeff, formerly booker at First National, is now at the Warner Brothers exchange. S'pose you'd call that merely a transfer.

C. C. Randolph, manager of the Grand theatre in Gary, was in the Columbia office last week, booking pictures. Randolph is one of the oldest exhibitors in the country. He can remember the day when $500 a week was considered immense wages for screen players. And that was a long, long time ago.

Bill Aschmann, manager of the Milwaukee branch of Pathé, closed some deals for Pathé sound pictures in Chicago last week with several circuits that lap over in his territory. Fables, Topics, Sportlights and Pathé News, all subjects with sound, were included in the deal.

Dutch Olisth, manager of the Pathe branch at Kansas City, closed the entire Shanberg circuit of thirteen towns last week for sound Fables, Topics and Sportlights.

Joe Woodward, Pathe salesman, who was operated on last week for mastoiditis, is improving greatly, and according to Harry Lorch, Joe will be back on the job in short time.

Fred Geises and Floyd Trainham, the two crack cameramen of Gene Cour's Chicago Pathe News staff, landed two big stories in the News last week that went for world wide circulation. Couple of fast steppin' youngsters, says Cour.

All the film row in Chicago and especially the Pathe crowd, were glad to hear of Harry Graham's election to the presidency of the Indianapolis Film Board. Graham is a fast worker and makes many new friends daily.

Tom North is stepping out into the high, wide and grassless spaces this week in quest of contracts for sound Fables, Topics, Sportlights and Curiosities. North is carrying two uniforms, one reading Pathe and the other R.K.O., as the VanBeuren product is released through these two agencies.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Q. Dalton January 15. The mother and baby are at the house and several first-run houses doing fine. Dad, Dalton as you know, was formerly director of theatre construction and operation for Marks Brothers. He is now corporation and partnership insurance representative for the Equitable Life Insurance Society of New York. The newcomer has been named Raymond Q. Jr.

Gene Cour, editor of Pathe News in the Midwest last week to that he is addicted to reading film E. H. Richardson's department in "Better Theatres." A smart fellow, this Cour.

The FBO sales force, including Manager Herb Washburn, left Monday on a week's tour of the country territory.

The Alamo, Crystal and Highway theatres are to be equipped for sound very shortly. The Marquette theatre, owned by S. Stern, has already opened with sound. The opening picture was Fox's "Mother Knows Best."

"Spies," M.G.M.'s foreign made picture, after playing for one week at the Castle, was held over for ten more days.

The Capitol theatre in Rockford, a new 1,200-seat house, has been leased by Max Gumbiner and associates for ten years. The theatre will be opened with a new policy about February 2. Albert Goldman, theatre broker, represented both parties in the deal.

Al Johnson, the well-known mammy-singer, was in Chicago on his way to New York last week.

"The Lions Roar," Educational's all-talking comedy with Billy Bevan, Johnny Burke and Daphne Pollard, was booked in many of the 12 theatres in Chicago for a run outside the Loop. "Brides' Relation," another Educational short, was given a screening last week.

Harvey Day, special representative for Educational sound shorts, arrived in Chicago last Thursday to spend a few days.

J. H. Smith, manager of the commerce department of RCA Phonophone, will establish offices in Chicago within the next few weeks, he says.

The Selkirk brothers, Harry, projectionist at FBO; Leo, film buyer for Marks Brothers; Richard, manager of the Jackson Park theatre; and Morris, have been in the film business long enough to have a total for the four of 87 years. Shoot at that!

Max Selnorati and Frank Ishmael, those MGM go-getters, caught arguing in front of the exchange building about who was going to pay the lunch check. The mercury stood frozen at five below. Write your own moral.

street have got to get together and get a confection, or decide on one, that can be installed at a reasonable cost, and one that will hold both the Movietone and disc producers. I think it was producers and big business in the street knew or try to figure out, how many millions they are going to lose in the next year by their narrow-minded, dog-eat-dog policies. I believe sound is our salvation with the above reservations.

Whenever I can get an installation that will meet the above requirements, and if the producers will give me somewhere near a decent break on their product, I will install sound. In the meantime, I have both cars to the ground and both eyes scanning the horizon for relief from the present stagnant conditions.

Firmly believe that within the next few months something is going to pop in connection with this sound business and when it does we must be in a position to use the few brains God promised us in order to determine whether we shall grab it or leave it.

Let each and everyone of us pull the old belt up another notch or two if necessary, and after we get through paying our taxes, shoveling coal and snow, make a vow that we will hit the old line harder during the coming year than we have in the past. In fact, if we don't they will have us all up in the Monkey Hill before the snows are again.

Well, that's all about this for this time from up where the Woodchuck chuckled and the Wild Raspberry calls to its mate in the Springtime.

French Exhibitors Are Producing Own Newsreel

(Washington Bureau of the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The French exhibitors, according to a report to the department of commerce, are making their own news reels. The price asked for news reels has been much less than the theatre man would pay and over 150 exhibitors have called off their contracts with firms and are using S. F. D. films. The price asked is the original figure of the news journal.

Manager's Wife Identifies Man Who Killed Husband

Leonard Shadlow, 23, leader of a band of colored gunmen, was identified as the robber who invaded the Metropolitan theatre, Chicago, a few weeks ago and killed Matthew Taylor, manager. The killer was identified by Taylor's wife, who is the organist of the house.
In the "Talkies" too

The fidelity of sound reproduction with motion pictures is affected by every variation in the film—be it ever so slight.

That is why, in the "Talkies" too, Eastman film excels. The great quantities in which it is produced, the strict supervision constantly exercised—the resulting uniformity from roll to roll, day to day, year to year—these factors of Eastman film manufacture are of first importance to the newest development of the art.

Only LUPINO LANE Could Make a Comedy Such As "ONLY ME"

Twenty-four parts in the picture, and every role played by Lupino Lane himself. Who else could do it? The versatility that made such an astonishingly clever novelty comedy possible, makes Lane the outstanding star in the two-reel comedy field, and as great a box-office asset as you ever had in Short Features.

The comedian takes twenty-four distinct roles and the results are astounding in cleverness—Arthur James—Motion Pictures Today.

Every time we see a Lane comedy we say it is the best we have yet seen — worth preferred position on any program — Associated Publications.

If exhibitors don't give this unusual subject the break it deserves, then there is no sense in comedians continuing to put originality, brains and perspiration in their work — Film Daily.

Monta Bell Converts Popular Magazine Story Into Rousing Screen Melodrama with Dialogue Sequences.

By KATHARINE ZIMMERMANN.

THE wild bells have every reason to ring out jauntily at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer headquarters this week. At the Capitol picked shocktroops are busy dissuading Gilbert-Garbo fans from standing on one another’s shoulders to get a glimpse of “A Woman of Affairs.”
And by the look of things at last night’s premiere of “The Bellamy Trial” the traffic jam outside the Embassy for the next few weeks is likely to wear another furrow into the Napoleonic brow of Grover Whalen.

“The Bellamy Trial” is M-G-M’s celluloid version of the popular mystery story by Frances Noyes Hart. It has been most divertingly translated to the screen by Monta Bell. With one major setting and a handful of incidental ones and with a cast of minor Hollywood celebrities, the director has fashioned a thriller that keeps us in suspense until the hour of the climax when it still manages to perhaps light on the heels of the day.

America is in the grip of a stock market craze! Behind the scenes looms the man who makes fortunes and panics—the Big Operator—the Money Giant—THE WOLF OF WALL STREET. Super-brain, ruthless, loving battle. Such is the mighty figure George Bancroft brings to life in this great picture.

WHAT OF THE WOMEN who wait in luxurious homes while the Gold Gods fight the Battle of Money? What of the jewel-laden Wolf's Wife? Men are her game. Does she abandon the game when the Wolf no longer has time for love? In "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET" that bewitching Russian beauty, Baelanova, shows you!
THE WOLF ON THE SCENT! George Bancroft, star of "Underworld" and "Docks of New York", gives his greatest performance.

DANGEROUS BUT NICE. While The Wolf battles for money, his wife dallies with the polished charms of Paul Lukas. Then the fateful day—!

RUTHLESS IN HIS WRATH. The brute strength of the lion and the cunning of the beast that gives him his nickname—you'll love The Wolf.

WHERE MILLIONS ARE WON AND LOST. All the frenzied excitement of the Stock Exchange is accurately portrayed. Battleground of the money monarchs. Real, fascinating! You hear as well as see it all!

PARAMOUNT offers the GREATEST ALL-TALKING PICTURE yet produced!

GEORGE BANCROFT in "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET"

With Bancroft, Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas and others in the big cast talking throughout. With Baclanova not only talking but singing two songs in her gorgeous voice. Rowland V. Lee Production. Story by Doris Anderson.
MEN ARE PLAYTHINGS. Wizards of wealth are children under her spell. Baclanova, fiery temptress, writes new history on the American screen in "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET." Public and critics will rave.

Another big TRIUMPH in PARAMOUNT’S sensational line-up of TALKING HITS!

WITH "Interference" doing the biggest business of any talking picture ever released—with surefire sound successes as "Redskin", "The Canary Murder Case", "Wolf Song", "The Letter", "Close Harmony", "The Doctor’s Secret", "The Dummy", "Chinatown Nights", ("Tong War") and others on the way—now arrives "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET" to clinch PARAMOUNT’S leadership of this business, sound and silent! Opening long run engagements at the Rialto, New York, and everywhere. Nationally advertised in 700 newspapers, Saturday Evening Post, etc. to 120,000,000 people! "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET" and most of the other knockouts AVAILABLE SILENT AS WELL AS TALKING!

THE FAITHLESS WIFE AT BAY! Surprised in her love nest, she fights with all her dangerous charms to win back her husband. A revelation!

TERRIBLE TITAN OF THE TICKER. Only two things he loves—the race for gold and the arms of his beautiful wife. His enemies attack both!

"YOU ARE THE REAL SUCKER!" Nancy Carroll cries. "Your wife is upstairs in the arms of your best friend. I dare you to go up and see!"

ALL-DIALOG OUTDOOR SENSATION
IN OLD ARIZONA
The first all-dialog outdoor feature. An action-packed tale of love, hate and adventure in the West, filmed in the great outdoors.
Now in its second record-breaking week at ROXY Theatre, New York, and sixth sensational week at CRITERION Theatre, Los Angeles.

ALL-DIALOG, ALL-LAUGHTER COMEDY
THE GHOST TALKS
Funny rhymes with money, and this all-dialog comedy talks laughs from beginning to end.
Clever, peppy, youthful, fast-moving, merry entertainment with sure-fire audience appeal.
With the youthful stars of the speaking stage, Helen Twelvetrees and Charles Eaton, and Lew Seiler Earle Foxe and Carmel Myers. Lew Seiler production. Story by Max Marcin and Edward Hammond; scenario by Frederick H. Brennan; dialog by Frederick H. Brennan and Harlan Thompson.

ALL-DIALOG HEART-DRAMA
THE VALIANT
A heart-tugging drama with an unusual and powerfully emotional story. The contrasting backgrounds include remarkable scenes of prison life.
With Paul Muni, celebrated Broadway character actor, and Marguerite Churchill, another Fox screen find. William K. Howard production. Scenario by Eugene Walter. Based on the play by Robert Middlemass and Holworthy Hall.

ALL-DIALOG MELODRAMA
SPEAKEASY
An exciting melodrama of New York and its rackets. Fox Movietone captures the actual sights and sounds of the big city—Times Square, Fifth Avenue, the subways, a newspaper office, the race track and Madison Square Garden during a big fight.
With Paul Page, Lola Lane, Henry B. Walthall, Helen Ware and Sharon Lynn. Benjamin Stoloff production. From the play by Edward Knoblock and George Rosener.

ALL-DIALOG MYSTERY DRAMA
THRU DIFFERENT EYES
A murder mystery with a novel idea. The story of a man on trial for murder, the evidence being revealed through the eyes of the prosecutor, a defense attorney and a mysterious girl, the three interpretations forming baffling contrasts. The surprising solution is a smashing climax.
With Mary Duncan, Edmund Lowe, Warner Baxter and Sylvia Sidney, supported by Earle Foxe, Donald Gallaher and Florence Lake. From the play by Milton H. Gropper and Edna Sherry. John Blystone production.

Spontaneous Response to the Announcement of the New Model
Western Electric Sound Equipment for Small Theatres

“Electrical Research Products, Inc., takes pleasure in announcing the development of a standard Western Electric Sound equipment specially adapted for small theatres.

“We are prepared to accept orders now for these equipments for installation after June 1, 1929 for either Vitaphone or Movietone productions only, at a price of $5,500 including installation, and for dual equipment for both Vitaphone and Movietone at a price of $7,000 including installation.”

The foregoing announcement was made through the trade press on Jan. 10. Within the few days which have elapsed a substantial number of orders have been placed with us both by chain operators and by individual theatre owners.

This spontaneous response confirms our conviction that discriminating small theatre owners have been awaiting moderately priced sound equipment of the same reliable quality as that now rendering service in the large first run houses.

In developing the new apparatus Western Electric engineers have built on the successful experience in designing, making, installing and servicing equipment now in use in more than a thousand theatres. The result is a sound reproducing system of equal electrical quality and mechanical durability. In a word, it is Western Electric.

This organization pledges its continued co-operation with producers and exhibitors alike. It will maintain the present high quality of its apparatus, and its nationwide technical staff is at the service of the entire industry.

LET PHOTOTONE SAVE YOU $10,000

SOME DAY you are going to have to come to the sight-sound policy. You would be operating under it now if you didn't dread to spend that $11,000 which you have been given to understand such equipment costs.

Phototone — adopted by thousands of theaters as the best solution to the sight-sound problem, can be installed for as little as $500.

There's a clear saving of over $10,000. In addition, Phototone eliminates the heavy overhead of organs, pianos and orchestras.

For a minimum weekly cost we'll keep you supplied with new cue music, including original musical scores by Thematic Music Cue Service of New York.

Also the special sound records you need, such as growls, mob noises, hoof-beats, trains, airplanes, motors, marching feet, gun shots, etc.

Phototone has the fullest, purest tone of any sight-sound instrument.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We expect to have a practical and efficient synchronizing device to offer to our exhibitors at a reasonable price and announcement of this will be made in the near future.

It can be used in conjunction with Phototones already installed or on any instruments that may be purchased from this time on.

Check the information you want and mail this coupon to The Phototone Company, North Vernon, Indiana.

Calling a Cop

WE regret to note that Mr. Abram F. Myers, president of the Allied States Exhibitors' Association, at the very outset of his administration has rushed to the window and sounded a call for police. Mr. Abrams, hardly before having time to warm the president’s chair, has, more literally, dashed to the Department of Justice with a plea for an investigation of the contracts existing between manufacturers of sound equipment and motion picture distributors.

Mr. Myers herein discloses a weakness attributed to him by his enemies on account of his previous connection with the bureaucracy of Washington and one which his friends were earnestly hoping would not manifest itself.

The effort to bring the Department of Justice in on the trade question of interchangeability at this time is both rash and uncalled for. It will be embarrassing to producers who have driven a shrewd bargain with the manufacturers of sound equipment, and, instead of being a help to exhibitors, it may result to their very serious disadvantage.

With a thousand serious exhibitor problems pressing for solution it is difficult even to guess how and why Mr. Myers has hit upon this question of interchangeability for attention at this time. The plain fact of the matter is that this question stands in a decidedly favorable status, both for the exhibitor and for the producer. Producers have an arrangement which is satisfactory to them. There is no restraining hand holding back the exhibitor from doing anything that appears suitable for the best interests of his business.

Why, then, should Mr. Myers tamper with the question at this time?

So much for the immediate, practical considerations of this business of going to the Department of Justice about interchangeability. There are, however, other features of Mr. Myers’ action which bid for attention.

If Mr. Myers should prove—and this action is a step in that direction—that he is so steeped with the creed of the bureaucracy of Washington, which pretty much believes that business and industry exists in order that it should have something upon which to vent its harassment—then Mr. Myers is likely to become, instead of a constructive force, an evil, both for the exhibitors and for the industry at large.

Those who do not wish Mr. Myers well will find in this action a great deal of ammunition to shoot. They will insist that at the best it is an act of an opportunist who is seizing upon a piece of the government's machinery at Washington, with which he is quite familiar, in order to gain attention for himself and also to build himself into a bogey which will have to be dealt with.

There is no occasion to have a legal test made on the question of interchangeability. The outcome, whatever it might be, cannot improve the existing situation and it is very easy to imagine, in face of the various patent claims that are asserted, that the outcome might be a decidedly unwelcomed eventualty, for both the exhibitor and the producer.

Surrounding the entire matter of Mr. Abrams’ approach to the Department of Justice there is the matter of governmental interference with business.

As a last resort there may be no other course in face of some pressing evil. But governmental interference with business always amounts to a surgical operation in which the life of the patient may be saved, but he is always decidedly the worse for his experience.

* * *

What to Produce?

AT no time in the history of the business has the problem of what to produce been a more complex and difficult one than at the present time. In previous years all of the difficulties natural to and inherent in the amusement business have been present. This year, in addition to these, there are the special and unusual difficulties presented on account of the introduction of sound and dialogue.

While there always has been a pressing need for cooperation between exhibitors and producers on the question of what to produce, this year the question is more pressing than ever. Unfortunately, very little in the way of practical cooperation has ever existed. Virtually the only immediate contact between the film companies and the theatres is when a representative of a sales department seeks to sell him to the exhibitor. In this circumstance there are the natural points of difference between the buyer and the seller. The exhibitor does not seek to offer guidance on production problems and the salesman has his mind on something else.

The HERALD-WORLD urges exhibitors to consider the problem of what to produce for next season, and in urging this it wishes to make plain the fact that in the long run the outcome of production problems mean just as much to exhibitors as to producers. We urge you, therefore, to express your views on what to produce for next season. Communicate either directly with the producers or send your communications to this publication. If they are of general interest they will be published and, at any rate, they will be laid before the producers’ councils.

In connection with the question of what to produce Mr. Will H. Hays in an interview given upon his recent arrival in Los Angeles urges that producers continue to plan for future great “epic” pictures such as “The Ten Commandments,” “The King of Kings” and “The Big Parade”—and such to be made without dialogue, except, possibly, in short sequences.

Censorship Lashed at Session Of National Board of Review

Eminent Speakers Denounce Practice as Foe of Liberty

Resolution to Congress Passed Urging Government According to True American Principles

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Vigorous denunciation of censorship was voiced by many persons of great prominence at the dinner January 26 which closed the convention here of the National Board of Review.

The delegates to the fifth annual motion picture conference held under the National Films Council of the board, and the guests at the dinner, which was given at the Waldorf hotel, where the convention conducted its sessions, heard Mayor James Walker of New York, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Congressman Loring M. Black of New York, David Wark Griffith, Harry Warner of Warner Brothers, J. D. Williams of World Wide, and others strip censorship of every thread of reason that its supporters claim for it.

In addition, the convention passed a resolution to be forwarded to Congress, asserting that censorship "is in fundamental contradiction to the democratic principles which underlie our theory of government and society."

Calls Bills Atrocities

"It is to the credit of Congress that after thorough hearings on the Swope and Upshaw motion picture bills, that the committee debated not to report either bill," declared Congressman Black, adding, "We should have sent these bills to the Smithsonian Institute, bureau of mediocre atrocities, as fine specimens of mental wrecks and thumb-screws. Upshaw and Swope have passed off the political stage and a new joy-killer has appeared in the persons of Congressman Hudson of Michigan. His bill is the deformed successor of the others, and is dying a beautiful death under the political anesthesia of our Committee on Interior and Foreign Commerce."

"The best that can be said about national censorship," said Mayor Walker, "is that it would be more effective and less expensive in each state. At the present time we have censorship in six states. Are we to believe that damnation is rampant in each of the 42 other states?"

Dr. Cadman declared his belief that the best way to insure motion pictures of high character was to leave the matter up to the producers themselves.

Four Paramount Films Piling Up Huge Grosses At Broadway Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Paramount is in the limelight of the Broadway picture parade this week with four films piling up remarkable box office grosses.

"Redskin," the new Richard Dix picture in Technicolor, has been playing to standing room at the Criterion since its opening; "The Gulf of Wall Street" grossed more than $22,000 for Saturday and Sunday at the Rialto, breaking all records.

"Sins of the Fathers" with Emil Janings all but hit the record at the Rivoli. "Interference," equalled the big Louis B. Mayer feature during its first two days, though it just finished a ten weeks run across the street.

In a telegram from Detroit, where he had sudden films forced, David Wark Griffith asserted, "The bigots and fanatics are at work today in America, trying to tell every human being that he can only live and act and speak as they do, and now they are trying to destroy the thing our fathers fought and died for—freedom of speech. If they censor the voice in the telling pictures today, then tomorrow they will censor all forms of speech."

Trying to help the National Board of Review for its work, by the speakers and in messages from those unable to be present. Joseph Kennedy sent a telegram from Palm Beach, saying, "The National Board of Review, with a past record of unselshf service to both the picture industry and the public it aims to serve, is continuously fulfilling a place of constructive relationship which cannot be overestimated."

Mayor Walker praised the board for its lack of sensationalism and its "touch of humanity."

"A Living Protest" is the resolution adopted as follows: RESOLVED, that censorship of the motion picture, whenever applied, is a violation of the right of freedom of speech, to be free of government control over the expression of thought and opinion, and should be abolished. The petitioners declare that they are in favor of the enforcement of federal and state laws providing for the protection of the public welfare and morals, and as a consequence see no necessity for federal, state or local censorship of any kind.

Be it further resolved, that this conference reaffirms its past resolutions setting forth its opposition to censorship as a violation of freedom of expression for the motion picture industry. The petitioners declare that all forms of censorship, whether federal, state or local, are not necessary to protect the public welfare and morals, and as a consequence see no necessity for federal, state or local censorship of any kind.

The resolutions were adopted by unanimous vote of all those attending the convention.

Why W. E. Equipment in R K O’s Hippodrome? Tis Result of Early Contract

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Western Electric sound equipment is being installed in the New York Hippodrome, largest house in the Radio Keith-Orpheum circuit, to be ready for use by February 23, and the question is being asked here, why should an R K O house install Western Electric equipment when the parent company, the Radio Corporation of America, controls R C A Photophone?

The answer, according to R K O officials, is that a contract was made for a number of Western Electric installations before the merger of the Keith houses and R C A, and that the installation in the Hippodrome is merely the fulfilling of that contract.

The Hippodrome recently played the sound version of the Paramount picture, "Wings." One official of R K O said that the picture was played on RCA Photophone equipment. This was later denied by another official, who said that he did not know what device was used, but that it was not Photophone.
New Pictures

Broadway got an eyeful (and an earful) of new pictures last week. Seldom have so many pictures of outstanding quality come along at one time.

***

"Weary River"

First National has a phenomenal Richard Barthelmess picture in "Weary River," despite the fact that he is shown as a gangster and thug and convicts through most of the action. This picture for the first time, in my opinion, made sound and dialogue really part of the picture, not a patchwork.

It has started a spectacular run by breaking all records at the Central. It sold out cold at the Monday matinee and is now hedged in by speculators.

***

"In Old Arizona"

With "In Old Arizona," William Fox has a new picture that deserves to rank with the best, no idle comment in view of the fact that this work promptly proceeded to smash all records at the huge Roxy theatre.

This picture has been so well publicized and advertised that there is no need to retell its interesting history, nor to recall that it is the first real sound picture made outdoors. All that needs to be said now is that it is a smashing success, and will bring crowds to see it wherever it is played.

Fox was so anxious to get this good one out on its way that he didn't wait to give it a New York run, which is the usual custom with big Fox pictures. The wisdom of his decision is easily seen.

***

"A Woman of Affairs"

The Garbo-Gilbert combination packed them into the Capitol to see "A Woman of Affairs," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. This is the picturization of the Michael Arlen novel and play, "The Green Hat," once under the ban of the Hays organization.

The finished product could hardly incur anyone's displeasure, for it is one of the best pictures ever made with that fascinating pair, Greta Garbo and John Gilbert. If it is true that the Garbo is back in Sweden for keeps, it will be a cruel blow to the America picture public, to say nothing of the exhibitor.

***

"The Bellamy Trial"

Metro has another good one in "The Bellamy Trial," which opened during the week at the fashionable little Embassy theatre. This is a corking good picture, done in a particularly novel manner. Dialogue is used with telling effect, so that it becomes obvious to anyone that dialogue if done well need not necessarily slow up the action of a picture. "The Bellamy Trial" has an interesting opening.

Instead of starting like an ordinary picture, with the usual introductions, this one is done in the manner of a new work.

First is shown a shot of the West Point cadets, in the traditional manner. Then comes the good old Pacific Fleet, with appropriate music. Then comes the first Pictures of Famous Murder Trial," and "Crowds Flock to Court-House" and so on.

***

"Redskin"

Paramount has a magnificent picture in "Redskin," done in natural coloring, which came to the Criterion. This picture has Richard Dix in some of his finest work. More will be heard of this one later.

Myers Asks Injunction to Bar Agreements Against Inter-use

Says One Company Has Made Sound Pact with Producers

Declares Restrictions Illegal and Not Greatly Different from Those in Patents Case

[By Washington Correspondent of the Herald-World]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Injunctions restricting sound equipment manufacturers from entering into agreements with film producers that films should not be leased for use on machines not manufactured or approved by the sound equipment companies were asked of the Department of Justice last week by Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, as the first step of his announced policy of dealing promptly with problems affecting the theatre men of the country.

So far, according to information filed with the department by Mr. Myers, there is only one company which has such an agreement with producers, but it is possible that other sound equipment manufacturers may feel it advisable to make similar contracts if the practice is not immediately suppressed.

The agreement submitted to Justice Department officials, according to the exhibitors' representative, included restrictions which, he held, are illegal and not greatly different from those which have been so held by the courts, notably in the M.P.T.O. Patent Company case, prosecuted by the Government when Myers was connected with the antitrust division of the department, and the United Shoe Machinery Company case.

"From such study as I have been able to give the matter, I have concluded that the restrictions in question are clearly outside the power of the parties to impose," Myers declared last week.

Prompt action in the matter was asked by Myers in order that, if possible, the entire situation may be dealt with, but if the department does not deem the contracts submitted to be illegal, specific proceedings will be instituted by exhibitors in some centers.

Entire Group of Liberty Specialty Exchanges Is Taken Over by Columbia

[Special to the Herald-World]

ATLANTA, Jan. 29.—Following a conference, which was held in New Orleans, it is announced that Columbia Pictures Corporation has acquired the entire group of Liberty-Specialty exchanges now operating throughout the South. Under the terms of the deal, Columbia will take over the exchanges February 2 and will act as agents for Liberty-Specialty in fulfilling contracts for film service, although the exchanges will operate as Columbia exchanges. It is understood that Columbia is paying $450,000 for the purchase price.

The Liberty-Specialty Exchange System includes branches in Atlanta, Charlotte, Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas and Oklahoma City.

The company came into existence a few years ago through the merging of Liberty Film Distributing Company, whose headquarters were in Atlanta, with the Specialty Film Company, whose home offices were in Dallas, Tex. It was owned jointly by Oscar S. Oldknow, of Atlanta; W. G. Underwood, of Dallas, and the Saenger interests, of New Orleans.

15 Branch Managers Of First National at Home Office Session

[Special to the Herald-World]

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Fifteen First National branch managers attended the conference called by Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager, for Thursday. Following an all-day session at the Roosevelt hotel, the party were present at the premiere of "Weary River" at the Central theatre.

Most of the business sessions were devoted to a discussion of the marketing of the new First National-Vitaphone pictures to be released during the next three months. Special attention was given to "Weary River" and "The Divine Lady," the latter having its premiere at the Carlyle Circle in Los Angeles today.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Seventeen pictures are part of the Amkino Corporation releases for 1929. The seventeen, listed in an announcement booklet are:

Developments of Week on Allied States

Injunctions to restrain sound equipment managers and sound film producers from prohibiting interchangeability are asked of the Department of Justice by Abram F. Myers, head of Allied States.

Members of MPTO of Michigan vote 2 to 1 in favor of joining Allied States. Sixty Wisconsin exhibitors deallook over question of affiliating with Allied. (Story on next page).

Board of Trustees of MPTO of Ohio discusses death of Allied but takes no action. Consensus is that progress of Allied be watched before taking vote on joining. (Story on next page).

Michigan MPTO Votes 2 to 1 for Allied Affiliation

DETROIT, Jan. 29.—By a vote of more than two to one, the membership of the MPTO of Michigan stands on record as in favor of affiliation with the Allied States Association, thereby confirming the action of the directorate in its earlier decision to join Allied. The meeting was held last Wednesday.

The vote—249 in favor of affiliation as against 101 opposed—showed the active interest of the exhibitors in the question. Only $2 of the more than 400 ballots sent out were not returned.

The directorate voted also to reimburse J. C. Ritter, H. M. Richey and Glenn A. Cross the $10,000 they had pledged to Allied.

New Phototone Device Plays Both Disc and Film Attachment, Costs $18,000

[SPECIAL TO THE HERALD-WORLD]

SUFFOLK, Ill., Jan. 29.—Announcement that a new Phototone synchronous disc instrument is now available for exhibitors has just been made by the company.

The price of the new device is as follows: F.O.B. Near Information Line, $18,000 for both synchronous and non-synchronous, $14,000 for complete disc instrument alone. It is adaptable to both Simplex and Powers projectors. Prices include installation and charges. There will also be available sound on film attachment at $500.

2 Exhibitors Fined for Operating Sunday Shows

[Special to the Herald-World]

MONETT, Mo., Jan. 29.—Supported by merchants of the town, W. W. Williams and E. R. Haynes, exhibitors in this town of 6,000 have started a campaign against blue laws. Each of the exhibitors was arrested and fined $5 for operating on Sunday and they plan to carry the fight to the Missouri supreme court, contending the ordinance, which was passed 12 years ago, is unreasonable and unjust.

During the month of January, the Exhibitors Herald-World carried twice the amount of equipment advertising carried by its nearest competitor.
Wisconsin Exhibitors Deadlock
Over Question of Joining Allied

Protest from Theatre Owners After Board Votes to Affilate Brings New Meeting—Woodhull Speaks— Debate
Heated—Press Is Barred

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 29.—If ever there was uncertainty about whether the Allied States association would win out in Wisconsin, there is today, because over sixty exhibitors met at the Hotel Wisconsin for a special session which ended in a deadlock.

The whole state is at white heat over the problem and so warm waxed the discussions during the day that there wasn’t even time to vote. In fact, a vote would have done no good. There was a deadlock all the way through. There was so much to be said from the viewpoint of both factions that it took the whole day to do it. When the convention adjourned without having taken any action whatsoever, it was predicted by several officers that another special meeting may be called very shortly to settle the question one way or the other.

On November 19, the board of directors of the M PTO met in Milwaukee and decided to back the Allied States organization. And when the Allied States organization was formed in Chicago last month, many of the Wisconsin men were prominent in the proceedings.

Protest Follows Action

No sooner did the result of the proceedings of the Wisconsin board become known than a storm of protest arose throughout the state from members who did not want to break up the present organization.

These protests resulted in several more board meetings being called in Milwaukee, at which it was decided to hold a special meeting of the M PTO and thrash out the problem. Arrangements were made to have representatives of each organization present to debate on the relative merits of the two associations. It was thought that Abram F. Myers, Allied head, and R. F. Woodhull, M PTOA read, might be obtained to debate on the subject before the meeting.

Woodhull Attends

Myers could not be present, but Woodhull was. There were also present W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis, Fred Desberg, Cleveland, and Glenn Cross, Detroit, all of whom were called into the meeting separately and given an opportunity to talk.

The convention was in session about a half hour when a motion was passed that no press representatives be allowed in the proceedings under any circumstances. This resulted in a general exodus of the press as they were discovered by the members of the credentials committee.

In fact all delegates to the convention were very reticent about doing any talking whatever which might be used for publication. However, behind the closed doors there was plenty of talking, as was evidenced later by many heated talks and arguments in the lobby of the hotel.

Woodhull and Fred Desberg spoke for the M PTO, stressing the fact that the present organization could and would function for Wisconsin exhibitors in a highly efficient manner. W. Steffes and Glenn Cross spoke for the Allied States organization and stressed the greater protection which they said membership in the Allied States organization would give to theatre owners in Wisconsin.

One faction of the delegates seemed to think that a point in favor of the Allied organization was the greater protection than the old organization, that it already had an impetus which would carry on to many good accomplishments.

Arguments Grow Heated

About 3 p.m., anyone could see that plenty of friction had been generated. Arguments and discussion became more heated and those who thought that some sort of a deciding vote could be taken at the convention, gave up hope of even taking a vote at all. In fact the decision not to take a vote probably averted an open rupture right at this time. The way things rest right now, it looks as if another meeting will be held sometime in the near future. Things cannot go on as they are.

Already in this state there exist two distinct factions.

Enforcement of Blue Law Promised in Plainview

PLAINVIEW, Tex., Jan. 29.—Rigid enforcement of the Sunday blue laws here and throughout the country has been promised by Royce A. Oxford, county attorney. All soft drink stands, groceries and other businesses affected by the law will be closed.

Ohio Board Decides Against Taking Vote
Now on Affiliation with Allied States

(Copyright to the Herald-World)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29.—The board of trustees of the M PTO of Ohio, which finally met in Columbus, Jan. 22 after several postponements of called meetings, took no action on the question of affiliation with Allied States. The matter was discussed for some time and a number of different views was expressed. The consensus was, however, that the matter would be closely watched to see what progress is made by the Allied organization before affiliating. A number of the exhibitors in Ohio are favorable to affiliating if Allied continues to gain by affiliations of other states.

The board adopted a resolution providing for introduction of a bill in the legislature for a sort of a bill to be pushed in the legislature by John L. Clifton, head of the Department of Education and the censor department, which seeks to raise the fees and give more authority to the censor.

Second Bill Brings New Fraud Charges Against Coneyes and McMahon

Stockholders Submit More Evidence in National Theatres Corporation Suit

Stockholders of the Chicago circuit, the National Theatre Corporation (Coneyes Brothers), through their attorney, Michael J. Ahern, filed in circuit court on Monday, January 25, an amended complaint charging the officers of the corporation to those placed against John Coney, Ben J. Coney and Clement McMahon, directors, last November. The stockholders seek an accounting for certain dividends and stock certificates which they allege in their bill to have been illegally issued and fraudulently appropriated by the defendants.

The suit, which is being accompanied by another action brought to recover the theatres, two of them large deluxe houses, now being operated by the Chicago Title & Trust Company as receiver, also names as defendants, G. E. Barrett & Company and Frederick Peirce & Company.

Barrett, A. Bertele, L. A. Doniger, C. E. Morrow, C. H. Walker, James E. Coston and National Playhouses, Inc., the latter a holding company which, the bill charges, was organized to further an alleged conspiracy to murky the stockholders.

Issue Stock to Architect, Charge

The new charges set forth that stock certificates totalling in par value $930,000 were issued to the names of the Ebersons, architects who designed the firm’s Capitol theatre, to settle certain claims, and allege that this was done in exchange for giving them an interest in this amount of stock. The bill declares that the Ebersons never received these shares, but that they were transferred to the National Playhouses, Inc., a "rubber stamp," then turned into the latter firm’s stock and reissued to the Coneyes and McMahon.

In the near future, the present price of the 222,000 shares is charged, having a par value of $1,116,000.

Complaint between the Coneyes, McMahon and the Barrett and Peirce concerns, among an issue “without the stockholders knowledge,” of $4,000,000 in bonds, resulted in a loss to the stockholders of $1,250,000, it is further alleged.

Charge Stock Purchase Scheme

A part of the directors’ alleged scheme, the bill declares, was to make stockholders better control gain control of the properties for the purpose of selling them, and to enable them to purchase outstanding stock cheaply, it is charged, James E. Coston, who was stock-

Tiffany-Stahl Will Have
6 All-Audien Pictures
Completed February 28

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Tiffany-Stahl will have six all-audien pictures ready by February 28, the company has already completed and ready for showing. They include “Lucky Boy,” George Jessel’s first talking and singing picture; “Molly and Me,” starring Belle Bennett, supported by John E. Brown, and “My Lady’s Past,” starring Belle Bennett.

The other three pictures that are having talking sequences made are: “Whispering Winds,” “Life” and a foreign story not named.
Seven Big Milwaukee Theatres Within 4 Blocks and All Benefit Downtown Houses Grouped On Same Street Provide Unusual Problem—Competition Keeps All on Jump—Proves Excellent Situation for Business

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 29.—When it comes to competition in the theatre field, there is probably no other city in the country which has such an unusual situation as Milwaukee. This is due to the fact that seven of Milwaukee's downtown theatres are within a stretch of four blocks on the same street!

This means that Milwaukee really has a theatre street—Wisconsin avenue—where there has been a film house right next to each other, and who are out for the business. And what a merry chase for business it is. The Wisconsin, Strand and Alhambra are all within one block of each other. The Alhambra is a half a block from the Garden.

The section of Milwaukee between Third and Second streets on the south side of the street was "dead," from a motion picture standpoint a few years ago. Now, however, it is one of the liveliest sections in town. Why? The Garden, Majestic and Merrill are right next door to each other, and are making a mighty fight for business. At these three theatres lots of exploits, brilliant lighting and so on are done in order to get the business. The Garden and Majestic are owned by L. Brin and the Merrill by William Fox Enterprises.

Directly off Third street are the Whitehouse, Miller and Princess. This means that when Milwaukeeans go downtown shows they always come down Wisconsin avenue and the block of Third street, which crosses Wisconsin avenue.

Every single theatre in that district benefits by this congregating in the film district. Milwaukee in this respect has no doubt the most compact downtown theatre district in respect to its major theatres than any city in the country. And this has proved to be an excellent thing for business. Patrons will come out of one show, be attracted by the signs of the house next door and then turn in that show. Full houses at most of the theatres from about 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. show that the patronage is steady. So while there is plenty of competition in this town for business, the location of the houses actually stimulate new business.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO, Jan. 29.—Two bandits held up Joseph Renn, manager of the Jefferson theatre and escaped with $164.

Double's Dumb and That's Where the Difference Is

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The director of one of the screen's most popular actresses was talking in the company's New York publicity office.

"Miss 'Soandso' has a double whose resemblance is perfect. When I meet the double I have to look twice to see whether she's the double or the real goods. In the star's last picture, the double appears many, many times and one block of photographs. But she is dumb, and that's where the big difference comes in."

The publicity man in the office scratched out his notes.

"That's one story we won't send out," he said.

Strides Made in Sound Technique, Says Laemmle
On 23d Year in Industry

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—"Marvelous strides have been made in the past few months by motion picture studio experts in grasping the fundamentals of a new production technique for the making of talk-films," said Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, in a survey of the field on the occasion of his twenty-third anniversary in the industry. This anniversary is being celebrated by a testimonial period of concentrated activity in the Universal organization.

"Despite contentions that it would take many months for motion picture producers to learn to co-ordinate dialogue and pure screen action in picture making, this is already being done and the new art of talking pictures has advanced to a remarkable state of perfection," he asserted.

Laemmle based his assertions largely upon the results attained in the Universal studios the last three months, but also commended the general progress of the new amusement medium—the voice of the screen.

"Weary River" Silent Version Ready April 7

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Following the meeting of First National sales managers, Ned E. Dipinet, general sales manager, announced that the Vitaphone version of "Weary River" will be released to the exhibitors on February 10. The silent print will be made available April 7.

First National Warner Sales Medium Abroad; Schlesinger in Charge

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—First National in the future will distribute in foreign countries of the products made by First National, Warner Brothers and Vitaphone as the result of a contract just closed between Warner Brothers and First National, according to Herman Schaper, president. There will be an amalgamation of companies in all countries, with the exception of England and, at the present time, in Germany. This alliance covers interests and sales activities in France, Switzerland, Belgium, Hungary, Mexico, Australia, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and the Dutch East Indies.

Schlesinger Foreign Manager

In line with this amalgamation, Gus S. Schlesinger becomes foreign general manager of First National with headquarters in Berlin. H. A. Bandy, formerly foreign sales manager of First National, now becomes First National manager of foreign distribution, with headquarters in New York.

Arthur Claverly, Warner managing director in England, will supervise First National sales in that country. Robert Schless, Warner managing director in France, will take charge of all Warner operations in France, Belgium and Switzerland. Harry J. Cohen will be assistant to Schlesinger and be known as assistant foreign manager, operating abroad.

Sales February 6

The combination of Warner Brothers and First National under the same general management assures the best possible service to the continental exhibitors. With Vitaphone and the impressive array of stars included in First National and Warner Brothers pictures, Vitaphone will be inaugurated in all parts of the world on Schlesinger's return to Europe. He will sail on the Leviathan February 6. He will also be responsible for extensive production which these companies contemplate in Germany.

Famous Canadian Theatres Wired for Sound Pictures

VANCOUVER, Jan. 29.—The entire chain of houses from Vancouver to Winnipeg, operated by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, are being wired for "auditions," which are now going over strong in the era Canada. Houses have heretofore housed vaudeville on 12 to 24-week basis.
Competition Over Sound Duplicates Early Rivalry in Silent Films

Three Theatres in Montclair, N. Y., All With Different Devices, Illustrate Problem—Two Advertise Apparatus Almost Equally with Pictures

By WILL WHITMORE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The truth of the old saw that history repeats itself is being demonstrated with a great deal of interest and force in the motion picture industry today. Competition in sound devices is exactly duplicating the early days of the motion picture when every month brought out a new projection machine.

OLDTIMERS like to recall the days beginning way back in 1896 when everyone had the newest and latest in projection machines. There were the Edison Projecting Kinetoscope, the Mustascope, the Biograph and a lot of others. When a new device was developed, dramatic critics declared it was the best yet. Promoters, peep show impresarios, vaudeville operators and almost everyone else in the show business had machines which were supposed to be this and that and to do something else.

Competition in sound devices now is just getting underway, and for the next year or two history will repeat itself with all the glamour of the days when the motion picture was born.

Right now the emphasis is on the mechanics of the various devices. In a few years, the quality of picture and sound will be the chief factor. That was the history of the silent pictures.

If you want to see how the battle of sound is being fought, go over to Montclair, New Jersey. The conditions there are typical of many other towns, and are typical of the conditions which are to prevail throughout the country in the coming year or two.

In Montclair there are three houses playing sound pictures. Each house has a different device. Two of them are playing the devices in their advertising about as much as they are the pictures. The Wellmont, a Stanley-Fabian house, has Vitaphone and Movietone. The Clairidge, an independent, has RCA Photophone, and the third, the Montclair, another Stanley-Fabian theatre, has the new Pacent disc device.

The Wellmont tells its patrons in all its newspaper advertising, lobby front and other advertising that it is the "home of Vitaphone and Movietone."

It is, however, the Clairidge which is playing most heavily on its device, RCA Photophone. "Home of the realistic and marvelous RCA Photophone," reads its newspaper ad. The word "Photophone" appears five times in one ad.

The Montclair with its patent reproducer is playing sound pictures, but is not playing up the device, since it is so new that the public is unacquainted with it. The theatre already has played "The Home Towners," "Manhattan Cocktail," "The Woman from Moscow," "Show People," and "Naughty Baby," all either dialogue or synchronized pictures, besides regular programs of Vitaphone acts.

House Manager Finter of the Montclair is an oldtimer in the show business. He remembers the days when a 500 foot film was an event in itself. "The public is not interested in the device," says Finter. "The public is only interested in good pictures and good quality of sound and dialogue."

But back to the main subject. How long will it be before the public is allowed to forget the mechanics of sound devices, before there is standardization of quality?

In the meantime new devices will be brought out. All sorts of claims will be made.

The smart exhibitor, the smart producer of sound pictures and the smart manufacturer of sound devices will remember the old days and perhaps profit by the mistakes that were made then. That's the reason for history.

First-Run Rights Won By Marks In Suit Settlement with B & K

Chicago Circuit Gets First National Product for First Time and Is Assured 52 “Suitable” Pictures a Year by the Terms of Antitrust Case Agreement

Terms of the settlement of the antitrust suit of Marks Brothers, Chicago circuit, against Paramount and others but directly aimed at the powerful position in Chicago of Balaban & Katz, Publix subsidiary, contain concessions in the distribution of product regarded as extremely important to the smaller chains. For the first time, Marks Brothers’ two deluxe neighborhood houses will be able to play the picture of First National, it was learned this week, and is assured 52 pictures a year “suitable” for its two theatres.

The settlement provided for in a voluminous legal work written out of court by opposing counsel and signed last week, is regarded by Marks Brothers as having direct bearing on their plans for the erection of two more large houses, one of which would extend still further the circuit’s competition with B & K neighborhood houses, while the other would be a huge theatre in the Loop, territory now dominated by B & K. Marks Brothers, it is said, has held up these expansion plans pending assurance that enough suitable pictures for them could be obtained.

B & K Controls Bulk of Films

The Publix subsidiary will continue its control of the bulk of the product made by the old-line companies, by virtue of long-time contracts not disturbed by the settlement, although they had been attacked by Marks Brothers in court on the ground that they constituted material evidence in control and was being forced out of business by conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Marks Brothers, according to the terms of the settlement, are to have the privilege of booking for first-runs, one-third of the product of Warner Brothers and of First National, and any of the pictures for the first-run in the Loop, thus providing that it is willing to pay at least the arbitration price per picture. Fox pictures not bought by Marks Brothers would be eligible to purchase by B & K.

Advertising Restricted

This arrangement gives B & K first-run rights to any pictures it selects from the product of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists and Universal, in addition to the same rights in two-thirds of the product of Warner Brothers and First National. It is also provided in the settlement that any pictures which B & K play in the Loop, thus far not Marks Brothers territory, and which are booked by the smaller circuit for first-runs in its two territories, are not to be attacked in court. These include theatres until the close of the B & K Loop run. B & K has two weeks’ protection in the Loop, where in two of its houses, important pictures play for extended runs.

While the arrangement concedes to Marks Brothers the 52 “suitable” pictures a year necessary for the operation of its two houses, if it does not provide, it is pointed out, for the pictures necessary for theatres added according to this circuit’s plans for expansion, and it is further stated that in case Marks Brothers go ahead with these plans, new terms will have to be drawn up.

Consolidated to Handle All Printing for Eastern Units of Large Company

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Consolidated Film Industries, of which Herbert J. Yates is president, will shortly announce the formal consummation of one of the largest contracts for film printing negotiated in many years. One of the leading producing and distributing companies in the country has agreed to turn over to Consolidated all the film printing of its Eastern units.

Renewed activity in the East on the part of this producer, particularly in connection with the making of sound pictures, will make this a deal that involves millions of feet of film printing.

In addition to its two plants in Hollywood, Consolidated has three plants here in the East, each a completely equipped laboratory geared to meet all demands for quality, speed and service.

U. S. Trade Commission Dismisses Case Against Pathe Based on Block Booking

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The Federal Trade Commission has dismissed an application for a complaint against Pathe, on the ground of violation of the law against block booking. In dismissing the application the statement is made that “the facts developed did not call for the exercise of the remedial powers granted by law to this commission.”

In the brief filed, written by Lewis Innerarity, secretary and attorney for Pathe, and written in “Trade Commission, its powers, duties and jurisdiction,” it was pointed out that “block booking” is but a trade term for the selling of pictures in quantities, in other words selling pictures at wholesale—a practice no more coercive or illegal than the sale at wholesale of any other merchandise. “No one can reasonably contend,” it says, “that a single apple should be sold at the barrel rate, or that the sale of apples by the barrel is an offense against good business practices.”

"Godless Girl" Was Held Back from Release to Add Dialogue and Sound
"Strange Cargo" Pathe's First All-Audience

(Special to the Herald-World)

New York, Jan. 29.—Simultaneous release on March 31 for Pathe's two most important pictures of the current season, Cecil B. DeMille's "The Godless Girl" and "Strange Cargo," the company's first all-audience, is Pathe's answer to the demand for special
"The Godless Girl," personally directed from a new reservoir of talent: Henry King.

N

Based on a Reformatory Life
DeMille, it will be recalled, personally directed "The Ten Commandments," "Manslaughter," "The King of Kings," "The Woman God Forgot," "Male and Female," "The Affairs of Anatol," "The Volga Boatman," "The Cheat," "The Sign of the Yesterday," to mention a few of the fifty-odd features to his credit. It is interesting to note that no one has directed DeMille picture has ever been a financial or artistic failure, Pathe announces.

"The Godless Girl" features Marie Prevost, Lister, Quigley, George Duryea, Noah Berry and Kate Price. Some of the scenes are said to be sensational in the extreme, those which show the destruction of a reformatory by fire and other technical elements which reveal punitive methods practiced by various reformatories. While Jeanie Macpherson, as the heroine, and Clyde Truck, as the hero, such practices, interwoven with their reveal-a is an appealing story of the love which sparked between the "godless girl," as played by Linda Basquin, and the hero, George Duryea. Berry is the warden and Kate Price the matron, while Marie Prevost as a girl inmate has a fine sympathetic role.
With "The Godless Girl" DeMille leaves the spectacle with which his name has been so often associated and invades the field of rousing melodrama. Many technical innovations are presented.

"Strange Cargo" All-Audience
"Strange Cargo" was adapted from the story "The Missing Man," written by Benjamin Glazer and Melchor Lengyl.
"The Missing Man" was selected because the dialogue was crisp and forceful, tied in with action peculiarly adapted for transference to the screen, and also because the mystery element was particularly strong. All the action takes place on a rich man's yacht, a thousand miles from land.

George Barraud, Lee Patrick, June Nash,
Otto Matieson, Warner Richmond, Russell
Gleason,unic, H. N. Reed, Spottiswoode, Rob-
St. Angelo, Frank Reicher and Claude King are in the cast, all experienced on the speaking stage. Benjamin Glazer, co-author of The Road to Yesterday, has written the play and in charge of sound production at the
The all-dialogue version was completed about six weeks ago, and the silent version within the last fortnight.

Court Puts Ban on Sunday
Picture Shows in Peekskill

(Special to the Herald-World)

Peekskill, N. Y., Jan. 29.—The motion picture theatres in Peekskill lost out last week when the ban on Sunday movies was upheld by a decision rendered by Justice Morschauer.

The legal controversy has been watched with much interest by the attorneys throughout the state. Last April the village board of trustees revoked a permit allowing two theatres in Peekskill to operate on Sunday. This action on the part of the Peekskill Board of Trustees, which is the supreme body of the Peekskill Ministerial Association, the theatre owners and the public at large, were all pleased with the decision.

Three Big Premieres in One Week on Broadway
Offers Splendid Specials

Warm Welcome Given to "Bellamy Trial," "Weary River" and "Redskin"

(Special to the Herald-World)

New York, Jan. 29.—Three new pictures came to Broadway this week and enjoyed spectacular success. The pictures were enthusiastically received and competent opinion felt that they represented as fine as any special production for some time for theatres. Three different companies were represented in the showings.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was first on the list with "The Bellamy Trial," showing the small Embassy theatre. First National brought "Weary River" to the Central theatre and Paramount had a gala opening at the Criterion for "Redskin."

Comment extended on these pictures appears this week in the Broadway column.

"The Bellamy Trial" handled a gripping mystery thriller in highly dramatic fashion.
Here again dialogue and silence were combinied, very skillfully. One critic has already handled that there was no apparent difficulty in passing from one to the other.
The trial scene of the film was well handled, were wonderfully effective and thoroughly exciting, though the photography was not anywhere near as good as it was for the silent part of the picture.

"Weary River" was given a swanky inroduction to New York, which is not surprising, in view of First National's generally fine presentation of its product. The Central theatre was jammed, so much so that the audience had to be turned out of the aisles—no simple procedure, in view of strict fire laws.

Dialogue Well Done

The picture was liked immensely by its first-night audience, though some of the newspaper critics found it a little tedious in spots. The feeling seemed general that dialogue was far better handled in this picture than usual. Even Richard Barthelness, however, seemed to be none too happy about the turning of the pictures in the scene of the picture—through a little cussian speech he quoted a Gish as saying "It's only a motion picture."

Stories Told by the Camera

Gwyn Stratford, appearing in the stage production, "And So to Bed," in New York, who has been signed by MGM for audien roles.

A familiar grimace of the familiar Al St. John, who began his career in Keystone comedies and is now completing his fifth year with Educational.

New personalities for a new art, making Norman Foster a film personage. Foster is importantly cast in Paramount's audien, "Gentlemen of the Press."

Another endowed with screen prominence by the audien—Katherine Francis, who also has a prominent role in Paramount's "Gentlemen of the press."

RKO production executives. Henry Hobart (above) and Luther Reed (below), appointed associate producers by William Le Baron, vice president in charge of production.

Poet arriving to join the ranks of title writers. Dorothy Parker, well known author of verse and wit, alighting from the train in Los Angeles. She has been signed by MGM to compose captions for audien productions.

A thrilling sport and a beautiful exponent thereof. Billie Dove, First National star, is pictured aquaplaning in the Pacific while at Catalina Island, where sequences are being made for her next production, "The Man and the Moment."
Frank N. Murphy, electrical genius at Warner Brothers' studio, and his assistant, "Slatts" Coombs, go into a huddle to oblige the Herald-World photographer, who finally caught up with these busy, busy fellows.

Framed by the window of her sedan is Marian Nixon, popular featured player, who has been chosen for the feminine lead in the first SonorArt production, "Broadway Bound," which stars Eddie Dowling.

Delineator of many types in her latest role. Myrna Loy, Warner Brothers' featured player, as she appears in that company's operetta, "The Desert Song."

Above: Inside looking out. Three ingredients of "Hot Stuff." First National starring production for Alice White. Shown are Doris Dawson, who has a prominent role; Mervyn Le Roy, the director, and Miss White.

Right: What was probably meant by the fellow who invented "It Won't Be Long Now." Leatrice Joy is shown about to be sacrificed in RKO Productions' "Tropical Madness." Director Robert Vignola is stationed just beneath.

Above: A study in capacities, though we are not so lawless as to suggest that Thelma Todd is drinking anything but water. The astounded fellow is Creighton Hale, who plays with her in First National's "Seven Footprints to Satan."
Margaret de la Motte, who first won fame when the photoplay was a brand new art, is cast opposite Douglas Fairbanks in the United Artists star's next picture, "The Iron Mask."

Overdoing it, we'd say. For if J. H. McCloskey, assistant director to Eddie Cline, and Sally O'Neill were not so painfully sober-faced, Cline, would not be so suspicious. The set is for Tiffany-Stahl's "Broadway Fever," in which Miss O'Neill is starred, with Cline directing.

As the crimson orb sank in the West, two horsemen rose above the horizon—Still, that sounds more like a Western! And, of course, these horsemen (with apologies to the lady) are Buster Keaton and Dorothy Sebastian, M G M players, who are shown taking to the bridle path of a Hollywood afternoon.
Sound Films Add $709 Each Week to Overhead, Figures Show

Chicago Exhibitors Present Calculations at Meeting Called to Discuss New Situation: Extra Film Cost Is Put at $250

A new weekly expense of $709 was charged to sound pictures in the smaller theatres, at least those in Chicago, according to figures compiled by the Chicago Exhibitors' Association and submitted at a meeting January 25 at the Hotel Stevens.

"How are those theatres going to run them?" asked Jack Miller, president of the association, in submitting the figures to the gathering called to present and discuss the situation of the average exhibitor as a result of the advent of sound.

Film Costs Doubled

The calculations are based on present operation costs, among which are items peculiar to metropolitan areas where union labor and living expenses have brought about wage scales higher than those in small communities. The figures include all costs attributable to sound, however, except the initial investment in equipment and any necessary remodeling.

Film costs, according to these figures, become $250 a week greater with the buying of sound pictures in theatres which had been paying $200 a week and making five changes weekly. The items included in this extra film cost are screen acts, shorts, features, records and synchronization fee. If there are two acts for each change of bill, this incurs an extra expense of $175, it was stated.

The extra cost for projectionists is put at $114, which includes the wage raise for the operator to be employed and the wage for an additional operator, according to the terms of the union.

More Ad Space Needed

The writer estimates the equipment is put at $130 a week, while $40 a week is named as the weekly maintenance charge.

The exhibitors also agreed that the advertising appropriation for sound pictures would have to be double that necessary for silent programs, it being held that the three or four limit of copy sufficient for the latter is not enough in which to attract the larger number of patrons necessary to make sound pictures pay.

"It seems to me that there are charges which the exhibitor should not be expected to meet," declared Miller. "For example, he has to pay $5 a week as record charge for each day he shows the picture. Why for each day? The records are destroyed anyway. There will have to be some adjustments if the average exhibitor is going to be able to play sound product."

New Redwood Theatre to Be Finished in 4 Months

BOGALUSA, La., Jan. 26—B. H. Tesser, president of the Pine Tree Amusement Company, Inc., announced that his company has signed a contract with G. van Favoit, general contractor of New Orleans, to erect the new Redwood theatre within four months. Favoit and Livaadis, New Orleans architects, designed the building and will supervise its construction.

4,283 New Accounts Showing Silent Films Signed, Morris States

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Warner Brothers have signed contracts with 4,283 new accounts for 1928-29 product in houses with a silent quota.

F. E. Morris, vice-president, announced last week.

"It is an error to say that the popularity of Vitaphone explains the tremendous expansion of Warner Brothers this season," Morris said. "The Warner product without Vitaphone is receiving equally as extensive recognition. Last fall we inaugurated a sales drive for new accounts in towns of less than 10,000 population where the theatres were continuing policies of silent films. We set our quota at 3,000, but reached 3,162 within the prescribed time.

"In the last two months since the drive entered we have added over 1,100 more houses to these and new sales are consistently maintaining this average. We are mighty proud of the 4,283 new customers who have never played our product before, but have now contracted for it in their silent houses. I know of no better way of demonstrating the available position of Warner Brothers today."

Town with 2,000 People Installs Sound Machine

SHERIDAN, IND., Jan. 29—A sound and talking machine was installed in the Hippodrome theatre here and will be ready for operation about February 7. The population of this town of 2,000, G. D. Palmer, owner of the Hippodrome, says in his letter to the Exhibitors' Herald-World:

"I will report to you in a few weeks on how my first few talking pictures go over, and I hope that this report will help other exhibitors."

Explosion Destroying Theatre at Loss of $150,000 Follows Safe Cracking Job

ANACONDA, Mont., Jan. 29—An explosion of mysterious origin, followed by fire, totally destroyed the Sundial Theatre here early Thursday, sending flaming timbers and stage equipment flying 300 feet in the air. Loss was estimated by Albert Nadeau, proprietor, at $150,000. Most of the loss was covered by insurance and Nadeau announced his intention of rebuilding early this spring. The Sundial was the scene of a $2,000 safe-cracking just ten days ago.

Detectors Search for Stench Bomb Throwers

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 29—Detectives are searching for persons who hurled "stocks" bombs into the popular Ritz theatre the other night, causing the audience to flee in panic. The house has been placed on the "unfair" list by unions because it employs non-union operators.
Films Helping Goodwill, Zukor Declares in Business Magazine

Educating Capital and Labor to Mutual Functions, Trade World Is Told—Says Talking Pictures "Will Vastly Accelerate Raising of Consumers' Demands"

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Motion pictures are speeding up the increasing goodwill between capital and labor by showing the true basic relation between the two and educating workmen to the fact that "their functions are mutual and inseparable," says Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount Famous Lasky, in the leading article of the January issue of "The Magazine of Business," in an interview with Peter F. O'Shea.

Under the heading, "Looking Ahead a Decade or Two," Zukor describes a score of trends in business which are enumerated elsewhere on this page.

"It is inconceivable that standards of demand should not continue to rise for the next 10 or 20 years," he declares, drawing from his vast experience in the motion picture industry which "propagates and will propagate good taste."

"Motion picture producers who do not possess good taste will be forced out by acquirers of motion pictures, who of their own homes," he holds. "They become critics of manufacturers' products and of goods on display in their retail stores. . . . Motion pictures are a criticism of American life, its surroundings and its possessions."

"Individual picture producers who do not possess good taste will be forced into acquiring it by repercussion from audiences constantly more sophisticated. Or else they will be forced out of the industry by managers' reports of goods, litters, and other criticisms, including the very effective criticism of lower box-office receipts."

Zukor declares also that "pictures are soon going to teach color to millions of consumers."

"Talking pictures," he says, "will vastly accelerate the raising of consumers' standards. For when the new technique of talking pictures is brought to real perfection by more experience, we will most certainly produce such termed 'unit' shows on films. . . . With nationwide distribution waiting for one film, we can afford to produce a Ziegfeld show at our central studio. . . . Tremendous overhead can be invested in the original film."

"It is no wonder," the business world is told, "that motion pictures speed up the progress of all our citizens to equality. And this equality is not merely political, but an economic equality in the market as purchasers."

Roseland Pictures Are Distributing 26 "Bonzos"

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The Roseland Pictures Corporation are distributing a series of 26 one-reel "Bono" Cartoon featurettes. "Bono" is the creation of G. H. Studdy and has been a supplement of Saturday and Sunday pages in Hearst's publications. The first three of the series that are ready are entitled "Bonzola," "Detective Bonzo" and "Spooks Bonzo."

Schramm Appointed U F A Sales, Contract Manager

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—P. Schramm, who has been connected with the industry for about a year, has been appointed manager of the sales and contract department of UFA. Schramm has held similar positions with Fox and Tiffany.

Bill Cody to Make Picture

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Bill Cody of William ("Bill") Cody Productions, has just arrived in New York from Toronto and Montreal after making preparations to produce "The Trail of Destiny," in which he will star.

Serene Art Blushes as Kahn's Directors Oust Michael Mindlin from "Little Cinema"

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The clear, limpid waters of "art," as reflected on the screen, is muddied by litigation, as well as by the "commercial" ponders of the motion picture industry, it seems, for Michael Mindlin, pioneer promoter of "little cinemas," has been ousted from the directorial chair of the Little Carnegie theatre, the newest of his gestures to higher cinematic drama, and he asserts he has a three-year contract. Suit may result.

Mr. Edward Sullivan was appointed in his place at a meeting of the board of directors. The theatre is backed by Otto H. Kahn, financier and opera enthusiast. Sullivan has been associated with Mindlin for a number of years in "little theatres," and Mindlin is regarded in the East as the most prominent of promoters of such ventures. No reason is given for his dismissal, John Brown, manager of Carnegie Hall, vouching it, "Mindlin is longer connected with the corporation."

The Little Carnegie, it is said, has been playing to good crowds and is showing a profit. It has been referred to as one of the few Kahn "art pets" which have made money. It is also said that Kahn has been encouraged by the success of this venture to project a chain of these theatres.

How Zukor Sees Business Trend Next 20 Years

1. The United States will increase as a national market. National wealth has grown steadily and rapidly, it will continue to grow. Somebody will own the additional wealth. Somebody will buy additional goods.
2. More people than now will possess any stated level of purchasing power.
3. Practically every citizen will buy more than he buys now.
4. Buying will be faster.
5. National distribution will be faster.
6. Retail selling will be faster.
7. No increase in the number of manufacturers or retailers will be tolerated. No additional millions will be allowed to get their living off other citizens.
8. Each must learn to serve more people at lower cost, as each factory worker produces more goods at lower cost.
9. There will be more industrial goodwill between the consumer and the producer, between capital and labor.
10. Manufacturers and dealers will have not only bigger but better domestic markets than are now dreamed of.
11. Rich and poor will buy pretty much the same kind of goods, giving a universal flavor not a division of market.
12. We will be a leisure people.
13. We will have more time to consume and pay more attention to consuming.
14. The accent will shift from production, this country's forte in the past, to consumption. But production will be greater in volume than ever, more skillful and more economical.
15. People will buy experience and entertainment, as distinct from physical possessions.
16. We will have an aesthetic market. People will buy physical possessions with much better taste for form and color.
17. Color and form, harmony and line design, will be indispensable aids to selling. The day of the artist in industry is at hand.
18. The market will be more sophisticated and more educated.
19. American manufacturers will have vastly increased export markets.
20. The same improvements, to a lesser extent, will characterize foreign markets. Manufacturers and dealers must catch up with these trends and keep with them, or better, anticipate them by just enough to retain leadership.

Miles Fox Sells Apollo Theatre to Carl Pearson

(Special to the Herald-World)

PRINCETON, ILL., Jan. 29.—Miles S. Fox, who has operated the Apollo theatre here for about three years, closed a deal whereby his business was sold to Carl Pearson, of Rushville, Ill. Fox will remain in the theatre until March 1 and then will give possession to the new owner.
“Talkie,” or One of These?

And still the suggestions for a name for talking pictures arrive, in the Herald-World campaign for a dignified yet completely descriptive word to supplant such a distortion as “talkie.”

THE SHORT FEATURE

Short Feature Gets Bigger Play Than Long Film in This Theatre

This is a study in pictures. Little more than the two illustrations below is necessary to tell that story. This department often has called attention to the fact that the importance of the short feature to the complete program is becoming better and better realized. And that conviction has been verified by the booking actions of the largest circuits in the country as well as the smallest independent houses.

One of the illustrations below is particularly interesting. It is that of the Uptown theatre in Wichita, Kansas. The reproduced newspaper advertisement actually places the emphasis far more pronouncedly upon the short feature than upon the long production.

The other illustration is for the Paradise, Uptown and Tivoli theatres of the Balaban & Katz circuit in Chicago. Here again the Educational-Mack Sennett production, "The Lion's Roar," is given considerable prominence by the ad writer.

The advent of sound in motion pictures did not create any mistaken idea in the mind of the wideawake exhibitor that the short feature was destined to lose a place in the theatre program.

Where synchronism was to give new life to the long production, it was to play at least an equally vital role in the shorter product. Indeed, there are those who contend that sound, and dialogue, provides an even greater opportunity for the one to three-reel picture than for the many-reel subject. Those individuals hold that in comedies, for example, there are opportunities for effective sound usage that the long picture would not have.

Take the case of the villain. In the melodrama he scarcely would go over with any concussion whatever, unless only a thud, were he to have a squeaky voice. But in comedy, what better for a laugh than to have the bully menace produce the fatal "Hand over them poignets" with a vocal volume comparable to that of a feeble-hearted mouse calling to her mate!

SOUND PICTURES

Tenth of Theatres
Set for Vitaphone,
Says G. E. Quigley
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—One-tenth of all motion pictures in the United States have been equipped for Vitaphone pictures, George E. Quigley, vice-president of the Vitaphone Corporation, declared Wednesday before sailing with Mrs. Quigley for a two-weeks' vacation in Bermuda.

"The growth of Vitaphone talking pictures throughout the country," said Quigley, "has been truly amazing, particularly when you realize that it has all been within a space of a short time. In 1928 over 1,000 first class theatres were equipped for the showing of Vitaphone talking pictures. Through Warner Brothers it is and has been for some time possible to present talking acts and talking pictures making up an entire evening's entertainment beginning with an overture, containing intermission selections, and ending with the exit march. Vitaphone exhibitors, in making up their programs, have hundreds of short numbers as well as many feature pictures, from which to make their program selections.

"Talking pictures are in great demand throughout the country. No one realizes this better than the exhibitors. The public reaction toward talking pictures is such that everyone in the film industry has had it brought home to him."

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Four Vitaphone pictures on the marquises along Broadway is the record set twice by Warner Brothers this month. The pictures are "The Singing Fool" at the Winter Garden, "My Man" at the Warner Brothers theatre, "Weary River" at the Central and "On Trial" at the Strand.

A new Vitaphone innovation is intermission music for overtures or exit marches. For "My Man" there are two orchestrations, one vocal and the other instrumental.

Dialogue Should Not Be Used for Plot, Declares Clarence Brown
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Clarence Brown, who has directed a number of big box office successes for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has some very definite ideas concerning the dialogue picture, which he related to EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD in an interview last week. Dialogue, said Brown, should not be used for plot development. Its greatest use, he declared, is in dramatic scenes to heighten the dramatic interest.

"When dialogue is used to develop the plot," Brown explained, "it often produces strain on the audience, and sometimes part of the plot is lost or even not understood by the audience. Several pictures have already been produced, and especially one, where if just a few words of the dialogue are missed, the understanding of the story is lost or partly lost to the audience.

Develop Plot with Pictures

"In my next picture, which will contain dialogue, I will develop my plot solely with pictures; dialogue will be used in the dramatic scenes just to heighten the interest."

"At present the director is the victim of the sound engineers. There are so many things the director would like to do with dialogue and sounds, but which the engineers say cannot be done. The engineers, of course, are right. In the meantime we have to accept the mechanical limitations of the sound recording devices.

Says Sound Hurts Beauty

"Talking pictures have robbed the screen of a great deal of beauty. Many stars need a great deal of photographic treatment to bring out their beauty and to eliminate certain characteristics which mar their beauty. The necessity for enclosing the cameras in soundproof glass cages is one reason for this. It prohibits the mobility of the cameras which is obtainable in silent photography, and keeps the director from making the best use of lighting so that all the beauty of the actors and settings can be brought out. However, technical improvements will eventually eliminate these faults."

Brown is now in New York seeking ideas and material for his next picture, "Wonders of Women," which has been adapted from the Sudderian story, "Stephen Trumbell's Wife."

"This picture will be unique," said Brown. "The leading male character will be a man of 45; the leading female role will be that of a woman at least 35 years old with three children. It will not be a story of adolescence but a story of men and women."

Airplane Marker
On Theatre Roof
Is Splendid Tieup

Use of the roof of a theatre as a marker for airplane travel is an excellent form of exploitation. Stephen Spear, manager of Loew's Main Street theatre in New Rochelle, N. Y., sends this department a newspaper clipping of the story, with the paragraph that "the sign will enable air travelers to recognize at once the Queen City of Sound."

"As a point of information," Spear writes, "this theatre is a motion picture house and the first Loew house to install sound equipment."

The newspaper account reads, in part: "Tomorrow morning, painters will begin the work of painting the name of New Rochelle on the roof of Loew's Main Street Theatre. This site has been suggested by a number of organizations. Manager Stephen Spear readily consented to the Civic League's plans, having suggested the site himself previously."

An arrow is painted on the roof, pointing to the nearest landing field.

Scoring Company Closes for South And New England
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Harry Siegel, president of the Royal Film Exchange, has been appointed exclusive representative of the New England States for Motion Pictures Synchronization Service, Inc.

Jack Adams, president of the Home State Film Company, independent film exchange of Dallas, has closed to market the service in Texas, Georgia, Florida, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Alabama, North Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina.

Original scoring for the silent as well as the sound versions, prepared for non-synchronous machines, for all Richard Tamadge productions distributed by Oscar Price, is to be done by Motion Pictures Synchronization Service. A special sheet will be prepared. The first picture to be scored under this plan will be "The Bachelors' Club."

Olive Borden Signs With RKO to Make Two Talking Films

Schofield Plans Audien
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—Paul Schofield is back from the East, where he made plans for an audience which will star Paul Whiteeman. Schofield wrote the show and Universal will produce it.
Wilcox "Sold" on Sound, Predicts Perfection in Five to Ten Years

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Despite his belief that "it will be at least five years before the talking picture nears perfection, and ten years before they are anywhere near lifelike," Herbert Wilcox is thoroughly "sold" on audians.

As proof of that fact, the director in charge of production of British and Dominion Films, Inc., took an American sound technician with him when he returned to London last week. Furthermore, he announced from the offices of World Wide Pictures, which is importing the productions of his company, that he is to start work at once in England on an all audian.

Plans All-Audian in Ireland

"It is in my mind to also go to the County Cork in Ireland," said Wilcox, who has spent two months in Hollywood studying methods of sound production, "and make an all outdoor talkie, which will be the first complete motion picture of any kind made in the Irish Free State. Just whether I can do that at this time, depends upon several things, but I am going to do it soon if not immediately. It is my intention to show to America and the World, Ireland and its people, as they are, and not as they have been caricatured." He said he later probably would ask two or three stars to go abroad and appear in his productions.

"Talking pictures are an inevitable move in the evolution of the motion picture," said Wilcox. "England, being conservative, has not accepted them, but when it does, the stampede will be as great as it has been in the United States. My observations have led me to believe that it will be five years, at least, before talking pictures are anywhere near perfected and ten years before they approach lifelike results.

Great Thing for Britain

"However, they are a great thing for British pictures, which will no longer be confined to the English market but will reach out to the entire English speaking countries. English artists because of their diction and delivery have always been acceptable in America and so have the English dramatics, and the artists and authors will be the real raw material of the talkies. "I believe the talking picture is a great thing for the entire industry. It rescues the cinema from vaudeville tie-ups to which it was taking second place. The picture now, more than at any other time, is the thing. Bad talkies will fail at their premieres just the same as bad plays, and that is a good thing for the industry. Sound will also mean fewer productions, and that is another good thing for the industry."

Wilcox said that the sound pictures presented in England up to the time he left there in November were not of a caliber to impress the English public.

Soundproof Stages At RKO Studios in $250,000 Program

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—A new soundproof stage and the soundproofing of all standing stages are part of a $250,000 construction program announced by William LeBaron for RKO Studios, Inc. Three new projection rooms also are to be erected. Soundproofing apparatus was shipped from the RCA Photophone headquarters in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Clark Silvernail, Broadway actor, producer, director and playwright, will write and direct Movietone features for Fox. He last appeared as a Chinese in "The Silent House."
Big Chance for Humor in Sound, Says MacArthur, RKO Writer

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—It was to have been an interview with Charles MacArthur, famous playwright who co-authored the famous play, "Lulu Belle," and the growing more famous "Front Page," about his ideas of dialogue pictures and more especially, the story which he is now doing for RKO Productions.

But the interview turned out to be just a pleasant chat about unpleasant things, such as Chicago gunmen and other "unscrupulous" individuals whom MacArthur came in contact with as a reporter on a Chicago paper.

Story on Society Climbers

MacArthur's apartment at 25 East End avenue looks right down on the East river. Boats of every description pass in a continuous procession before the large windows. Their whistles and chug-chugs punctured his tales of gunmen and hijackers, the killer who killed for pleasure, a battle between two truck loads of gunmen on a Chicago river bridge and corrupt politicians. He's seen a lot, this already famous young playwright, young in years, but old in experience.

MacArthur's story for RKO productions is to be about climbers—not porch climbers—but those who seek to climb in the world of society. Its setting can be in any town, because you'll find climbers in New York, Chicago or Podunk.

Sound and Dialogue

It will be a sound and dialogue picture, and MacArthur has some very definite ideas about the dialogue picture and sound.

"It seems to me that sound offers an amazing opportunity for the director in put-

Experienced Sound Actors in First All-Audien of Columbia

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Columbia's first all-audien, "The Donovan Affair," will have in its special cast William Collier, Jr., who already has been in eight dialogue films, Fred Kelsey, who has appeared in five, Ethel Wales, who just has completed, "The Doctor's Secret," and John B. L. Howard, who was in "Diamond Handcuffs." Frank R. Capra, the director, made "Submarine."
U.S. Case Against Theatres for Unfair Competition Delayed
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—The case against the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and other of the chain campanions will be heard in the latter part of April, it was learned following a continuance held by the United States District Court here this week. The case is being brought up by the government to become "Ambassador to Turkey," and the West Coast Theatres, Inc., who lay their claims upon the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Government charges include a count of conspiracy and one of unfair competition against theatres charging less than ten cents admission and theatres showing double features.

Roy J. Pomeroy Irked by Limit to Authority Over Paramount Sound, Report
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Although Roy J. Pomeroy, director of sound effects for Paramount on the West Coast, has not resigned his position, it is known that he is not at present working.

Pomeroy came East late last year and was here for about two months. When he returned to the Coast he found that Albert Desart and several others had been placed under him and that these men had been given a certain amount of authority. It is said.

It is the talk in the East that Pomeroy resented this and that is why he has not gone back to work. Pomeroy's great success with Paramount is the cause, one Paramount man said. It is understood that his position still remains for him, and that he can go back to work when he accepts its limitations.

Mayer's Offer as "Turkish Ambassador" Fooled Them
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—A number of screen readers fell for the talk about Louis B. Mayer and his foreign entanglements this week. They printed stories they had heard that Mayer is considering the offer to become "Ambassador to Turkey."

Mayer, who has a keen sense of humor, permitted them to think what they pleased. He refused to deny the rumors they brought to him.

Neilan Says He'll Prove Tully's Charges Untrue
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—Marshall Neilan issued statements today that he will prove Jim Tully's charges against him are untrue. Neilan was named in a suit for divorce brought by Tully, the author of "Jarnegan."

He stated that when the case comes to court some interesting facts will be disclosed and that Blanche Sweet (Mrs. Neilan) knows the charges are absurd.

9 Fox Companies Shooting as Borzage Starts Gaynor Opus

Olive Borden Signs with RKO; O'Brien Company Returns from Monterey to Complete Picture; No Delay When Carewe Breaks Foot on Location
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—Frank Borzage's Gaynor-Farrell combination went into operation again today with a "best yet" production objective. Borzage's company brought the Fox total to nine units. The remaining eight are in various stages of completion.

Two that have gone into production since the first of the year are "Through Different Eyes" in which Mary Duncan and Warner Baxter appear; and "Joy Street" in which Lois Moran and Rex Bell appear.

The "Hearts in Dixie" picture that boasts all colored actors is in the final scenes with Charles Gilpin the head man of the negro show.

Carewe Falls

There was little or no delay in shooting when Carewe was taken a bone in his foot last week on location. He is shooting "Evangelie" for United Artists at Monterey, Cal. He returned to the scene of the accident after the accident and continued his direction in a wheel chair.

Olive Borden Joins RKO

Olive Borden, yesterday signed a long term contract for leading roles in RKO productions. Her first picture, as yet unassigned, will probably go into production in March when RKO inaugurates its great new RCA photophone program. Miss Borden takes her place with Sally Blane, Wampas Baby star and RKO starlet and Betty Compson who has also been signed by RKO for four starring pictures on the 1929-30 program.

Two "big names" went into the RKO roster today, as two pictures went into production. William Le Baron announced he had obtained the services of Karl Dane from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and had signed Norman Kerry, popular star. Dane will lend his fame to RKO's "Voice of the Storm," which is being directed by Lynn Bassett.

Hugh Allan in Shores Film

Other players include Martha Sleeper, Theodore Von Eltz, Hugh Allan, Brandon Hurst, Lydia Yeaman Titus and Warner Richmond. Kerry will have the principal male role in the screen version of a prize story which George Melford is directing. Others in the cast are Robert Frazier, Leota Lorraine, Margaret Morris and Bert Moorhouse.

The story was obtained by RKO in a contest conducted through the McPadden publications.

The two pictures are the last to be made by RKO until installation of its Photophone sound recording apparatus. A quarter of a million dollars is being spent immediately to sound-proof the studio in preparation for the new year's program, which will involve the expenditure of more than twice as much money on less than half as many pictures as ever before.

O'Brien Back From Monterey

David Butler and his "Son of Anak" company, headed by George O'Brien, returned to the Fox lot January 21 to continue production of the Ben Ames Williams story which got under way January 10 at Monterey, Cal. Farrell MacDonald and Nora Lane have prominent roles in this production.

Lou Seiler has rounded out his fourth week of camera work on his thirtieth Fox Films production, "Girls Gone Wild," co-starring Nick Stuart and Sally Phipps, supported by Roy D'Arcy, Lumsdeh Hare, William Russell, Hedda Hopper and others.

Wallace Smith's very human story of a middle aged trouper "The Grouch Bag," went into production at the Fox Studios under the skilful guidance of Irving Cummings. It will reach the screen as "Empty Arms." The picture will feature the beloved Louise Dresser. June Collyer and

Hotel Charges Audiences Prevent Their Slumbers
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—A rather unidentified hotel or rooming house broke itself into print here yesterday when its owners Minnie and W. G. Howard brought suit against the Central theatre, a very reputable house on Broadway, charging taking pictures had interfered with its business. The plaintiffs charge that the sounds filtering through the walls of the house disturbed the slumbers of the hotel's guests. The hotel is situated in the adjoining lot to the theatre and it is believed that the theatre company will build their case upon the fact that the hotel construction of California would withstand outside noises if they were secure.
No Wampas Frolic for Baby Stars; Refuse Charity Guarantee

Stroheim Breaks with Swanson; Montague Comes from Gotham with Ominous Reports Regarding Stage Plays

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—Wampas washed out the 1929 Frolic Friday night when they found producers unwavering in their demands that $8,500 be guaranteed for charity purposes. They described the producers' request as extraordinary and unjust.

Instead of a show at the Auditorium, stars there will be a testimonial dinner. Tickets will be sold at $5 apiece.

In order to obtain co-operation of studios and stars, it was necessary to enter into an agreement with newspaper, publishers and producers. The Wampas, it was declared, have received a large amount of free space in papers and have received complete services gratis from stars, and a definite arrangement concerning charity must accompany the gratuities hereafter.

The Wampas preferred to take no risk and guarantee nothing. If they gamble they might lose.

Barrett Kiesling is the president. He made no statement. Kiesling slipped into the job when he replaced Mark Larkin, resigned several months ago.

Money for seats already sold will be refunded. Numerous tickets had gone for the five and ten dollars.

John Boyce-Smith was elected president of Columbia University Alumni of Los Angeles at the alumni's first meeting this week. The "alumni" met in the gentleman's office at Tec Art.

Robert Ellis
Stays Home

Robert Ellis gets the assignment of "Steve Crandall" in "Broadway." It's an audience role. He signs the papers. He cancels passports. He cancels tickets and reservations for Europe. He stays home a while longer.

Von Stroheim Out

Erich Von Stroheim's job has ended. He broke away from the Fox the lot this week suddenly and has remained in seclusion so far as newspaper reports are concerned. Stroheim directed most of the silent sequences for Swanson's film, but couldn't or wouldn't finish the job.

It is no secret that a lot of money went up in smoke, snow and celluloid. Stroheim is a good spendthrift and therefore achieved satisfying results until the bills were due and paid. Miss Swanson has maintained her composure throughout the shelling, but it is reported that financial backers of Gloria Productions, Inc., many times lost composure.

It is the old story, but this time the ending is a much happier one. Edmund Goulding takes the megaphone for the remainder of the picture.

"One picture is worth ten thousand workshops," is the eloquent phrase, paraphrased. And it is the basis of Scott Darling's conclusions that the audiences are here to stay. Darling adds that one spoken line in an audience is worth a whole set of titles written on the film.

Lucien Prival is down to one suit of clothes. The panic for the actor is here.

He has had a run of luck to-day. He says thieves got the rest. It is presumed he is not referring to business agents or press agents, but actual, honest to heaven thieves. It's vague.

It's still a matter of conjecture what will become of Max Reinhardt, now that he is here. The noted impresario was billed as the supervising producer and what not for the United Artists' picture to star Lilian Gish. The story has been thrown out and a new one started. The one thrown out had taken 12 weeks to write—in Salzburg—in a castle there.

Lillian Gish is also out. She isn't to do the role and her successor has not been named.

Reports that Reinhardt is also thrown out are vigorously denied by him. Scheen is silent about the entire matter.

Montague Found Them Cool

Authors and their representatives are busy about marketing their stuff for auditions. They are cagey to such an extent that producers are pursuing a course which is aimed to replace the need for buying stage plays from New York.

According to Eddie Montague, it is impossible to make a reasonable deal with playwrights until they find producers are ordering original from staff writers. "However, now that talking pictures have proven themselves popular," says Montague, "producers are more certain of what the public desires and feel no need of bidding fabulous prices for anything that comes from the stage."

Jimmie Gleason (the of "Is Zat So?" stage and screen) issued the statements regarding the "Actors' Equity Ball of the West. He gave a lot of actors the first job they have had in months when he appointed them committee members of the reception. Those who will greet the guests include John Dillon, Richard Carlyle, Robert Armstrong, Robert Edeson, Russell Gleason (also of "Is Zat So?") Alan Hale, Dell Henderson, william camp, Robert Keith, Paul Nicholson, Jack Price, Jed Prouty and others. The event will be held at the Biltmore Hotel tomorrow.

Tyler to Change Name; Contract Ends and Star Turns to Straight Roles

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 29.—Tom Tyler ended three years at RKO studios today. He not only leaves the company but also leaves the Western end to do straight roles. He will it all his future work but what the name will be is undecided.

Tyler built up a great following throughout the world in the Western pictures he has made during the past 36 months.

Free Casting Bureau Open

Prologues Put Good Films Across

Bandshows Are Reinstated by Two Theatres

 Atlanta and Birmingham Resume Publix Units After Sound Flops

( Special to the Herald-World )

ATLANTA, GA., Jan. 30.—After having tried out the plan of “the whole show on the screen” for some months at the Howard theatre in Atlanta and the Alabama in Birmingham, Publix is reinstating stage bandshows in these houses, the company’s two de luxe theatres in this immediate territory. The bandshow policy goes into effect at the Alabama theatre Monday, January 28. The initial offering will be “Hello, Everybody,” produced by Emmett R. Rogers, who recently was elevated by Publix to the post of district production manager. The feature picture is Paramount’s “The Shopworn Angel,” with Gary Cooper and Nancy Carroll.

The occasion will serve to introduce to Birmingham audiences a very talented stage band leader, Jack Bain, who has won honors in major theaters throughout the country.

The new policy will be inaugurated at the Howard in Atlanta on February 4, presenting the same stage show which will be brought over intact from Birmingham. Lou Lowry, who comes to the Howard as stage bandmaster, has served as master of ceremonies with more than ordinary success and wields a most effective baton. The feature picture on the same bill is “Abie’s Irish Rose.”

There is no denying the interest which attaches to the return of stage bandshows. The first announcement in Atlanta newspapers brought numerous telephone calls at the Howard theatre and a public that had grown distressingly apathetic sat up and took notice. The novelty of dialogue pictures and synchronized subjects served to arouse considerable interest in the “all-sound” policy for a while, but now that the novelty has worn off, the public evidently wants something different—and that something that includes the human element—real flesh and blood musicians, and acts that appear “in person” rather than on the screen.

Public Expresses Desire for Human Element

Many patrons who have expressed themselves on the subject show no lack of appreciation for synchronized and all-talking

Marks Brothers Finds It Pays To Originate

Their Future Pictures Will Be Presented with Stage Prologues

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

Realizing that motion pictures of feature size, silent or with sound, are the most important box office draw at deluxe houses, Marks Brothers, Chicago’s successful independent theatre operators, have inaugurated a new way of bringing out the fine points of special motion picture productions. With the co-operation of their production staff, prologues will be staged that will utilize organ and orchestra in depicting the theme of the photoplay.

The first of a series of prologues was produced by Albert F. Brown, featured organist for Marks Brothers, at their Marbro theatre last week. The prologue, which was also used as an organ solo, accompanied the film called “Mother Machree.” Just Irish songs of a sentimental type were used with a scrim effect. Charles Kelsey, one of the rotating band leaders, also sang the song “Mother Machree” from which the photoplay was adapted.

Both Marks Brothers’ theatres, the Granada on the north side and the Marbro on the west side, ran the film of “Mother Machree” at the same time, in conjunction with the prologue.

This week they are presenting a brief prologue to “The Spieler,” which is being called “Poor Punchinello.” The theme of the prologue carries out the idea of the film only through the slides, but makes an appropriate introduction for the film. Both orchestra and organ take part in the musical concert. Future film productions of a special nature will be supplied with these prologues at these theatres.

Marks Brothers Going Strong for Prologues

Sid Graumann has made it a rule to offer lavish stage prologues to all first-run films in Los Angeles. Roxy has carried out this idea for nearly 20 years and is still continuing it at his theatre in New York. Without the exception of one or two occasions this is about the first time that Chicago has attempted to supply stage prologues to motion pictures. Marks Brothers again have stepped to the foreground in being the first ones to announce such a policy.

When one takes into consideration the wor-derful motion picture productions turned out this year by the various producers you can easily realize the great possibilities offered for stage prologues, and smart showmen should avail themselves of this opportunity. Those who have a stageband can easily utilize each and every member of the group for some vital part of the offering. Those who still continue a policy of orchestral accompaniment will find stage prologues an extra drawing feature with good entertainment value.

Smaller theatres, with only a featured organist, should not feel that they cannot take part in this important event because an organ solo, staged as a prologue, is more attractive than merely an ordinary colorless stunt. Exhibitors are in the motion picture business and should try to reinforce themselves by making them more attractive to fans. Additional attractions are worth while but do not let them crowd out the motion picture. It would pay you to take a visit to Chicago sometime and see for yourself how some of the larger theatres do things.

Two Sound Theatres Resume Stageshows

pictures, but they make it quite clear that they want those pictures and something else. In the final analysis it seems that they want to do more than just tell a story and provide—pictures of the highest entertainment value combined with stage bandshows of getting.

So the stage bandshos are coming back and, not only will the empty orchestras pits be occupied again, but the organs that have been silent for many weeks will come to life—and all in answer to the demands of a public whose mind changes so often that theatre managers must stay awake nights trying to anticipate the direction of the next demand.

MUSIC SCORES

The new Paramount-Technicolor production "Red Skirt," starring Richard Dix, has just been scored by the Sam Fox Music Company, J. S. Zamecnik completing the music under the direction of S. M. Berg. In keeping with the Indian background of the picture melodies have been woven into the score which will produce authentic native music.

The new Paramount film called the "Wolf Song," starring the Vemics, is being synchronized with an original music score and some original songs composed by Richard Whiting. Miss Veiles and Gary Cooper, the leading roles throughout the picture, several sentimental ballads of the type popular in 1844, the period of the film story.

THEME SONGS

Leo Feist, Inc., is publishing "My Mother's Eyes," the theme song to George Jessel's first talking picture, entitled "Lucky Boy." This photoplay is Tiffany-Stahl production. The composition was written by Abel Bare and L. Wolf—Gilbert.

The new Radio-Keith-Orpheum film production called "Synchronization," starring Waring's Pennsylvanians, has a new theme song called "I'll Always Be in Your Heart," sung by Fred and Bert Green, who have written the number and will publish it. Another composition written by the same writers is "Do, Do, Do." it is being sung in the photoplay by Dorothy Lee and Morton Downey.

The Paramount-Christie comedy adapted from Original story written by E. Bret Harte, called "The Melancholy Dame," will have a theme song called "Melancholy Mama," written by Sterling Sherwyn and published by Sherman Clay & Co. The same publishers have also supplied the theme song for the Paramount-Christie comedies starring Billy Dooley and called "Dooley, Dooley Do."

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Mr. Lester Slatny, my good friend, forwarded your letter to me, and believe me what you wrote to him, did your paper no good in so far as getting me to do any advertising in it. I am sorry he asked the favor of you. Where do you get the idea of telling him I neglected to answer all your letters to me? When you ever write to me? I only spoke to you once and that was when I asked you to write up a novelty I was doing at the Warner theatre in Chicago and you roughly told me that if I would advertise in your paper I would get the write-up. Wasn't it a little low? I told you then that when I got a de luxe engagement I would be glad to advertise, but I want to tell you here and now that pal will freeze over a thousand times before you'll ever get a red cent from me on anything, and don't think you're doing me any favor by writing up any shows where I may be working, for me, your write-ups don't mean a thing—Jack Stanley, The Emerson, Baltimore.

Don't Be Fooled

The latest Shubert musical comedy to arrive in Chicago is "Luckee Girl," starring Billy House, a star of the music halls, who has won his right to musical honors. The Shubert's are inclined to miss a great deal in the newspaper advertising for this show by using the word "Whoopee" in largest type than the title. People who have read about the Ziegfield show called "Whoopee," starring Eddie Cantor, may get the wrong impression of the advertisement. It is not the Cantor show but it is undoubtedly a good evening's entertainment.

St. Louis Adopts B & K Chicago Theatre Policy

Prompted by the instant success of the new stage policy inaugurated by Babahan & Katz, at the Chicago theatre last week, Skouras Brothers of St. Louis announce a new form of weekly entertainment, called "Grand Orchestral Productions," which will offer a group of musical selections accompanied by vocal and ballet routines.

This will be more on the nature of light opera overture presentations. Charles Previn is the musical director, assisted by Leonard Leonard. A chorus of thirty voices will be added to the special acts and the Missouri Rockets.

Robbie Publishing Theme Songs for M G M Films

Exhibitors who have looked "Almost Jimmy Valentine," the Goldwyn-Meyer comic special feature starring William Haines will also receive a theme song from the Robbie Music Corporation. Robbie is the music subsidiary of M G M and will publish all theme songs for the film company.

The theme for the Haines feature is called, "Love Dreams." The following songs are also ready for the exhibitors: "One Road" for "Show People"; "Live and Love" for "Masks of the Devil," and theme for the following pictures will soon be ready: "Title of Empire," "Lady of Chance" and "Flying Feet."

Danforth Enlarges Agency

Harry Danforth, well known artist representative and one of the oldest authorized Keith and Orpheum agents, has moved his headquarters from the Loop End Block, to State-Lake Block, Chicago. The agency has been reorganized with Mr. Danforth as the president and Mrs. Catherine G. Danforth as secretary and treasurer. Jack Kechel and Pull Gordon are his associates.

Film and Tab

Another Chicago picture house is trying out a policy of tab musical comedy with pictures. The latest acquisition is the West Englewood, a National playhouse located at 63rd and Ashland. According to newspaper advertising a new show will be offered each week with a cast of thirty specialty artists and a large beauty chorus in conjunction with the photoplay, at popular prices.

Chicago, Chicago
_Week Ending January 24_

Balanb & Katz inaugurated a new stage policy here this week which was heavily exploited in the "dailies" for several weeks in advance. The new policy is vested in the hands of Frank Camibia and Leonard Spitzling. The stage production took form in several scenes which started as follows:

Unit I, Tchakowsky's "1912," a music closer dramatized with an ensemble of 40 vocalists, which also displayed some pretty effects on the burning of Moscow.

Units II and III offered fashions of the day and Fox Movietone news in film form.

Unit IV presented Edward K. House in an organ frolictly called "Morning Mood.'

Unit V was a lavish stage show called "In Old Seville" with colorfully costumed cast Fox all-silhouette and an ensemble that consisted of singing and dancing soloists.

There were about sixty people in the cast and the setting and costumes were colorful and in keeping with the Spanish atmosphere. Most of the action took place in the set which was of a patio type. The scene was Lenora Cari and the tenor was Arch Cannon. Hans Messer first violinist of the Symphony orchestra also took part in the offering as soloist and received a very fine hand for his selection.

De Carlos and Louise, a very graceful team of tango dancers, interpreted a native Spanish routine which added the punch necessary to the set.

The only sour note on this program was Ben Blue who with the aid of other two bufferos tried to fit in the show, but didn't. After considerable simplification and silly prancing, Blue finally went into his one and only big solo. His entertainment came in the form of "Dying Swan," a burlesque on Pavlov's legitimate routine. It seems a shame that a beautiful idea has been exploited by vaudeville Baldwin which is never necessary. Blue is popular in his own sphere but this particular offering could have done well without him. The reception that approved his work was merely out of respect to the management and the following he has in town. The ballet next presented a novel tordore routine, costumed in red with bright orange cape, typical of bull fighters. The entire cast then joined the procession in flamenco style with balloons and chorus singing. This also marked the finale.

Spitalny and his augmented pit orchestra rendered the music throughout the several presentations and was accorded quite an ovation for the splendid interpretation of the appropriate selections. Although quite different from any other type of entertainment presented in Chicago at this time, the innovation was nevertheless not as spectacular as might have been expected.

Not to be neglected is the very picturesque newspaper statement as it did not merit the following title "Dazzling, Colorful and Different than any other stage show in the World."

Emil Velazco Added to Roxy Organ Staff

S. L. Rothafel has added another important member to his theatre staff in the person of Emil Velazco, recognized as one of the most prominent theatre organists in the country. Although under thirty Velazco has established himself as a popular organist by the creation of an organ school.

His first duties as the Roxy theatre organist commenced on January 26, and herculean will be his battle royal with the conflicting, pestering chain where he will feature one of his regular programs. He is a graduate of the Chicago Musical College and was known as the youngest conservatory instructor of that institution. Before devoting most of his time to organ playing he spent considerable time in France, studying organ and theory and was for some time an important part of famous orchestras.

So successful have his theories been that he has established a school for young organists specializing in the playing and handling of themes, also to use the proper pedal rhythms and effects. He has taught such well known organ personages as Don Williams, private organist to William Fox, Henrietta Ridley, playing the largest organ in the world at John Wanamaker's store in Philadelphia, Fred Fehl at the Elsito theatre, New York, Eddie Ford of the Colony, New York, Robert Prado of the Stanley in Newark, Charles Van de Hoven of the Rialto in Newark and Stanley Pianke of Chicago.

In recognition of his outstanding work Velazco was recently elected vice president of the New York society of theatre organists.

The atmospheric stage program, "Eotena Mexicana" was used as a preface to the actual Fox all-silhouette and an ensemble that consisted of singing and dancing soloists. They have really brought Mexico to New York.

Pedro Rubín, Mexico's most popular dancer, offered a number of national dances never before seen in this country. Ofelia Ascencio and Julia Garcia, Mexico's most popular character singers, sang many pleasing national songs as only southerners can sing them. Patricia Bowman, Ethel Louise Wright, Harold Clyde Wright, Lillian LaFore of the Sextettes, Tommy Eagle and Major Johnson had prominent singing and dancing roles.

Russell E. Markert's Thirty-two-Xylophones offered the ballet routines.

"Southern Belles" is the title of the Publix unit opening here next week and it is the best that Paul Gecard has offered since the best Public has done in the past two months.

Opening in one with a serio showing a boat at the river, la la "Show Boat" with quartet singing Southern songs. End of number serio is fit from behind showing a gorgeous scene which got a hand. Band then plays a hot number followed by Eddie Matthews dressed as a Civil War Vet doing gun drill and a corks acrobatic dance. Charles Bruggie did his usual nomenclature and dancing and the hit, a fine quartet, sang two songs, the second being assisted by the Allerton Raich Girls with a production backing.

Ken Whitmer followed with a specialty and then came the Ormande Sisters who dance and sing equally well.

Both had a production flash. Whole show excellent each act stopping the show and making speech or encore.

New York Paramount
_Week Ending, January 25_

"Southern Belles" was played by the Paramount Pit Orchestra with Dave Babishoff, that personality director, conducting. An added feature was Osman and Schepel, a bass duet who planned with their selections. They were all well received.

The stage was set in Spain in a Spanish setting with the stageband playing "Chalita" as the Dorothy Berke girls dance and sing special lyrics introduced by Midgets. The orchestra in a fine arrangement of "Carmen" as the ballet did a routine of the "Dance of the Toreas." This was a swell effort but it was well received.

Joe and Jane McKenna offered a burlesque on "Carmen." Their funny acting and good voice received well. "I'll Get You" was played by the orchestra and Bobby Gilbert. Gilbert then played his violin and sang "Carmen" as the orchestra played the theme at the same time. He almost stopped this show.

"Flamengo," a cantastorn dance by the Berke girls was new and received with delight by the audience, singing and banjo playing. Burke played the secound while the Dorothy Berke girls played concertinas. The J. P. Illustration Agency offered a pleasing tango that got a good reception. Burke McKenna sang "Chalita" as entire ensemble entered as an enormous Spanish chawl descended for finale.

A special added attraction was next introduced by Gene Rodomich. They were the Duncan Sisters and offered bits from their show, "Toppy and Eva." They sang can you ever imagine such a thing as a couple playing for the kids. They almost caused the audience to tear up the seats with laughter.

Nickers and Duncan are, all a good bet for any theatre.

_Week Ending January 18_

There are scandal, vanities, follies and what not of this year and this present show may ask you, "Have you heard the 'Miniatures' of 25?"

That is the title of the revue featuring the world famous "Negro Minstrels" at the Michigan this week. And the tiny little people had everything in the show which might be expected in the full sized editions of scandal, vanity, follies or what not.

The tropes took up the whole stage, and Al Evans and his new creation, Jack North was himself an encore for the week. Music was supplied by the pit orchestra.

The show opened in one with a back drop showing two scenes of a typical country home. Doors were cut in the pros of each of the scenes, and the little people made their appearance through these as though landing from another country.

The hit of the show was a representation of a farm wedding, the ceremony, and the big dinner, done in the futuristic manner. Each of the players in the tableaux moved with the mechanical precision of a clock, but they were supposed to represent. It got a big hand.

To say nothing of the orchestra. Yes, air, like all big league review, the orchestra had their own jazz orchestra. Their big number was selections in the full sized editions of scandal, vanity, follies or what not.

The Gecard and his orchestra were featured this week in a handbump presentation called "The Magic Show." On December the four, this was one of the best examples of a musical comedy ever seen in New York in one of the better houses. The cast featured Nell O'Day and the Tommy Sextette, also Lester Brothers and Vera Van, not forgetting Allam and Cemall.

As the title implies the stage setting represents the upper part of a deck on a U. S. cruiser. The show opened in typical musical style with orchestra in the Chicago, Grandad

Week Ending February 1

In conjunction with "The Stroller" the feature playset this week is a prologue called "Poor Punchinello" which gives the onlooker an even greater chance to play a short musical concert before the picture. Albert F. Brown was the featured organist who conceived and staged the production and directed the music with the conductor.

A Modern Jester was the regular stage presentation with Charles Kaley and his band. The cast included Rome & Gute, Gypsy Lenore, Lillian Massart, William Pruitt and this week's dance was "I Was a Nigger Down and Go Boom" which gave the boys a chance to do some comedy bits. This is an unusually clever comedy song and great for bands who have entertainers.

Lillian Massart started the proceedings with a little bit of everything and not much of anything. Kaley helped to put her across by doing straight for her. Her only redeeming feature was a few high kicks that she executed with true grace.

Inhawka Troupe, consisting of four Japs who did everything from hand spins to head turns. This is standard entertainment in vaudeville and quite a novelty for picture houses. Some of their stunts were breath taking but were off the standard lines.

They were really the feature of the presentation.

Charles Kaley next played a violin selection called "Wandering Home" and the novelty of his playing a violin for the first time was a great hit with them and he was an encore because in the way of a vocal refrain of the number and was compelled to repeat it. He then joined the specialty feature with Gypsy Lenore and William Pruitt.

Julie Stein directed the band during this number. This scene was called "Slave of the Orient" and Pruitt sang a special song called "A Slave" while the ballet, decorated with dazzling costumes, formed the finish to the music while Gypsy Lenore did her slave aerobatic dance. Her interpretation won her a fine hand.

Rome & Gute followed next with Kaley taking the stick as those two men, one extremely tall and thin, and the other small and short, offered a contrast in comedy dancing and other foolish pranks in rapid succession. This effect on the audience. In spite of the fact that Romey only does one or two comedy steps, he nevertheless is smart enough in knowing how to sell them, for he and his partner were the laughing hits of this show. They were given an encore and probably would have been brought back for more had they not told stroller much doing for several minutes. If a regular act is routine, this no, then find considerable offers for their type of entertainment.

This concluded the stage show and for the finale everybody turned on the stage to take the last bow. Even the organ joined in even though it was off key.

Week Ending, January 25

Paul Specht, the new master of ceremonies, and his orchestra opened here this week. They started with a novelty number played by the orchestra and sung by Jehnny Maurice, the drummer.

"Sweetheart of All My Dreams" was next played by Specht on his violin, with the assistance of the orchestra. Evelyn Dean sweetly sang a few songs, then offered a difficult and clever acrobatic dance that was received well. A trio from the band then sang a modern version of "Sleepy-Baby Sleepy." A soprano solo arose in "Maurice's song," and recitation received a good hand.

Estelle Fratus, hit of this bill, stopped the show and received two encore's for her songs and exceptional tap dancing. This young lady has a wonderful personality, works hard, and should make a fine name for herself in the upcoming season. Billy Rose, the human pinwheel, was well received for his acrobatic tap dancing. This show contains too much of Paul Specht's humor and the boys singing and playing "Auld Lang Syne."

Paul Specht and orchestra as well as the acts were good, but the settings lacked color and life which deadened the entire presentation.

San Francisco Granada

Week Ending January 24

This week's stage act at the Granada is a humdinger, with one celebrity following another in rapid succession. Local attractions have been added to the Publix revue and the combination makes up a great show.

Gino Severi directs the opening number, "Musical Miniatures," with orchestra in the pit. Parts of well known numbers are played and finally the curtain rises and on one side of the stage, in a minute, there are two acts going, one acts of strings, the other of dance and lights. The song "Washington" is played by orchestra on the other side of the stage and the audience is instructed to "Be Quiet."

"Blossoms" is the stage act and it begins with Arthur Hall singing "Big Fish" and as the curtain rises, revealing a country scene with plenty of flowers and artificial fences. The 12 Foster Girls, in striped trouses, short black jackets, with artists' ties, and each with a cane go through well trained paces. Bryant Washburn, long screen favorite, is introduced by George and takes his place as master of ceremonies. He starts off by telling the audience how well the act is performed and how welcome everyone makes him feel and how he hopes to return the compliment when San Francisco visits New York. A little girl, Dolores, member of the Doolores group, and Salmoneo, comes on the stage in the song "The Day She is Lost," and asks anyone if anyone is looking for him and when she sees her head he pushes her away and tells her that she didn't lose her stay. She sings "You're My Beau of Tennement Dow" and does a few steps with Bryant, but one of the girls, on the show, and up and runs toward her for some lively acrobatic steps.

Paul Kirkland does an amazing ladder dance and follows this with a novel stunt, balancing a paper cornucopia on his nose and ear and finishing by balancing a letter on the end. George Dewey Washington, San Francisco's own star, sings "Chloe" as only he can sing it, and then offers a jazzy dance to "Ride the Range." He then the Road to Mandalay," as request numbers. The audience takes George to their heart and are most reluctant to let him go.

The Foster Girls dance again and Ball sings another song, surrounded by dainty minxes in fluffy powder blue and yellow. Maurice Gansky, local radio star, offers "Paradise," "Good Night," and "Consolation." Doolores, Eddy and Salmoneo appear again and the diminutive Miss is tossed about the stage until one wonders that there is anything left of her to do a tumbler. She does a beautiful and smiling.

The act comes to an end with a windmill at the rear coming into prominence, with the Foster Girls posed about it.

The Granada seems to have taken on a new lease of life, with all its well selected pictures, elaborate stage revue and local attractions. This week's act serves to demonstrate that it is definitely on its way.

Chicago, Paradise

Week Ending January 25

This week's stage presentation was called "A Rubin Revue" and featured Ted Healy as guest master of ceremonies. The act was under the direction of Arthur Nealy, Warren and Gill, and Sally Tilden, but over-ruled by the great cohesion of Arthur Nealy and Jack Peacock Kelly, a member of the Mark Fisher band, and several of the girls discussed the nature of the show in which they as the performers were to take part.

The next scene is the all stage and at this time Ted Healy made his entrance. We must say that Healy was the whole show inasmuch as the presentation could not have been made without him. In fact it was one of the poorest handshadows ever constructed to be given in Chicago and the need for Healy's clever humor and knack of putting it over.

The only other outstanding act on the bill was Warren and Gill, two colored fellows, who beside wrangling a chorus of "Dream Knees" put some new tricks and turns in an acrobatic tap dance. These fellows know their stuff and are not afraid of holding down any spot in picture houses. The audience was quite well taken with their sincere efforts.

Arthur Nealy followed next in a tenor selection called "I Wish I Knew." This chap has been playing a long run engagement at the Colony in Chicago and has quite a following. He has a pleasing voice that hits the high notes. However, this song did not do justice to his voice, perhaps the newness of the number had a lot to do with it but we know Nealy can handle better numbers. He was given a quite a hand at this show.

After another specialty by Healy, Sally Tilden was introduced, who offered something different in the way of a singing act. Sally had special material for her and her voice set off the effect that audiences are tired of cute girls introduced by the master of ceremonies as such. The idea of it was very novel and with a little more polish, publishing and voice coloring it could be quite a relief from the general run of blues.

"Sally also sang "Movie Love." This, we think, is the best song in the show.

The next to closing specialty was given by Ted Healy and his company of foils consisting of two men and a woman, doing a musical comedy and blackface in "A Night in Spain." It is needless to say that Healy kept them howling all the way through with his smart talk and clever stunts. In fact they forgot all about the show, if they saw one, and enjoyed the comedy antics of Healy.

The finale was another one of those things with beautiful flash box steps and good never be afraid of longtime pinning picture houses. Whoever selected Healy for this show while Mark Fisher was here surely knew his bookings. Stage producers for picture houses will have to do more than to display beautiful costumes and acts to carry through the idea for any sensible artist could easily do that much.

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending January 12

The Pittsburgh Penn and the "Pittsburgh Stunt" was the stage show, and truly a delightful entertainment which won the hearty approval of audiences at every performance.

The act receives a novel start, when upon a dark stage, appears several feet in the air a large white bird figure upon which stands one of the multi-faced girls singing a solo. This is followed by a picturesque line of women, each multi-faced girls singing a solo. The stage is dark, the girls are clothed in black with their arms and legs visible to the audience. This is followed by the "Pitts Twins," two blonde girls bear a remarkable resemblance to one another, render a duet. These girls do a "George Washington" and make a high class appearance.

Ford and "Whitney," an educated dog and master, give an interesting skit. The dog plays drunk and brings many laughs. This animal is just about as clever as any ever seen here.

Ferry Correy, billed as a musical clown, is a comedian who clicks plenty. He plays novel musical instruments, for instance what appears to be a fiddle is really a series of whistles made to resemble pailings in a fiddle. As the being in S.F., the "Pittsburgh Stunt" was seen.

Special attention is called to the rendition of the "I122 Overture," by the Penn Symphony Orchestra. The rendition was masterful, and in the later moments of the grand finale, the great red and crommel cannoning was heard on the stage. Provided a sensational offering.
A very peculiar incident occurred in Lindy's restaurant last week. Possibly, one of the biggest orchestral pieces in the United States, Gay Lombardo, leader of his Royal Canadian orchestra made a statement. He had never been to New York before and, walking with me into Lindy's for lunch we sat in a booth along the wall. He was iced (as usual) with music publishers. There amongst his midst was the above-mentioned pianist. We had almost finished our meal when I called over one of the boys and introduced him to Lombardo. It wasn't but a minute longer than he was swamped and it took him at least an hour to get his way out of the restaurant. This to me was a very funny situation and does not happen very often.

In speaking of Lindy's restaurant, I can very easily remember the good number of the boys used to talk nothing but "horace," intermingled of course with music talk. Today the situation is entirely changed and it is a tremendous conversion the stock market. Evidently the boys are getting to 'better run their money down in Wall street than they did at the race track.

One of the greatest musical comedies showed to over his "ALLEY," is "Follow Thru," by DeSylva, Brown and Henderson. Take out your notebook and mark the title of this show down. For should you ever come across this try it. After all you never know that you may become a bee-line for the Chanin theatre where "Follow Thru" is playing.

Possibly in next week's edition of the HERALD-WORLD, I will have some news of interest which may surprise a good many of my friends throughout the country.

Those of you who have never met Joe Frisco off stage are going to get the opportunity of meeting him and knowing him a little better. Shorty, Frisco is becoming a columnist for a syndicate of newspapers, and in view of his lifelong enthusiasm for the theatre, it's doubtless hand you many a laugh. Watch for it in your local newspaper.

It seems as though I had better change the heading of this article to "Dead and Gone" for "PRAIRIE" instead of "ALLEY." Broadway is becoming barren of song writers. They are migrating to the screen where they get more money. At the same time Lombardo, who has taken such a stronghold on the muscle industry that I wouldn't be better run there, has moved his offices to Hollywood. Milton Azer and Jack Yellen arrived on the coast last week and DeSylva, Brown and Henderson are on their way. The firm of Witmark are sending four writers to the coast and scores of others are already left. The "Alle" is certainly becoming deserted.

Addy Brit (formerly with Waterston, Berlin & Snyder, and recently associated with Vincent Youmans) has a very peculiar situation on his hands. Youmans wrote the music and produced the musical play entitled: "Rainbow." The show was great but for some reason or other it only lasted on Broadway for five weeks. From the musical point of view, Brit has a chance of his own. Brit is the show's "Haystewart" and the other "The One Girl." Both of these tunes are now stepping out on their own. Also, Don & Cathie are quite happy. The show "Rainbow," is the show to the next. Offered a chance to write a Ribon or "Spanish" of his own, what plans are for the future. Kansas City the other night when a harglar entered his apartment and stole jewelry valued at $275.

Organ and Other Touches

P. Hane Fath, organist at the Uptown theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, experienced a far hand to the organ in which was retailed from Kansas City the other night when a harglar entered his apartment and stole jewelry valued at $275.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford (New York Paramount) asked Jesse Cagney a number, with a catchy melody, called "Cradle of Love." Mr. Crawford will play the piano, and Mrs. Crawford at the stage console, then played "First Rhapsody" in blue ballad style. Then they played "Rhapsody in Blue." For the finale Mr. Crawford did "Funeral March" and finished with "Wagging the Tail." They were well received, as usual.

Albert F. Brown (Chicago, Marboro) offered an organ concerto to "Mother Machree," the photoplay adapted from the song of the same name. The presentation was offered in the form with lyrics of Irish tunes flashed on the screen drop. No popular song was need and the entire solo was dedicated to Irish melodies of long ago. Charles Kelsey took part by singing "Mother Machree" as an illusion effect was seen through the screen of an old lady representing the "mother." Brown explained the idea through his organ-phon which was more complete in sound and appearance this week. The introductory film titles were flung right on the screen while Brown was playing the organ accompaniment to Kelsey's singing, as the film title displayed the music sheet "Mother Machree."

Henry R. MurtLaugh (Brooklyn, Paramount) played "A Precious Little Thing Called Love," as his featured song. He also played "All by Yourself in the Moonlight," and "You're the Cream in My Coffee," using these numbers as his story. Of course every one sang and also gave him the big hand he deserved.

Edward K. House (Chicago, Chicago) called his solo "Morning Mood," and presented it with a number of cleverly selected ragtime and blues to suit the various moods of various people. His feature number was "Marie" in which he also joined with a vocal refrain facing the audience while singing and playing on a small console. The orchestra joined in on the finish and added variety and life to the presentation. It was presented as the opening of the new stage policy at this theatre and we must say that House played a valuable part in making the new policy a success.

William H. Meeder (Brooklyn, Albeo) prepared a special anniversary solo presentation that took people back to the day of the theatre opening and on through its four years of entertainment service. The material was specially written by Meeder under the supervision of Frank Kinley who conceived the idea. This was one of the many features that celebrated the fourth anniversary of this theatre.

Jean Anthony (Chicago, Marboro), in conjunction with the pit orchestra, presented a musical spectacle called "Poor Punchinello." The organ and orchestra played the various tunes, which were "Hiawatha," "Dance of the Spleiter." It had novel stage effects. A singer played the role of the clown. The Akron ball run right into the finalse which combined the two novelities.

THE THEATRE

What Do You Think of This Theatre Ad?

To the firing trench, boys, and have at 'em! Sidney Larschan, resident manager of the Meserole theatre in Brooklyn, and a regular showman as well as regular fella, pins the ad in the adjoining two columns up against the wall and asks you to shoot!

Welcome Criticism

Here's what he writes to "The Theatre":

"I am glad to know that you are going to permit your readers to assume the roles of advertising critics. Here's one for them to pass judgment on.

"I am an ad writer of the common garden variety. This ad was prepared from a 4 and 2 column mat.

"I'm not a sentimental sort of a guy, so stiff criticism will produce neither a melted heart nor tears.

"Here's to better ads and more critics."

You will recall that "The Theatre," departing a bit from established procedure, proposed in a recent issue that, when exhibitors or exhibitor-staffs so desired, the department would reproduce newspaper advertisements for criticism by other showmen.

What Do You Think?

Larschan is first to offer his brainchild upon the altar of better showmanship. He wants you folks to comment upon the ad on this page. Remember that true criticism means positive as well as negative comment. If you think this is a good ad, tell us. If you think the ad could have been improved upon, be just as frank in telling us how. Larschan wants to know how the ad could have been bettered, and so do other exhibitors who see it.

And don't forget that in offering your comment you also will be benefited.

You may reply direct, of course, to Larschan, but "The Theatre" earnestly asks that you write to this department also, so that your suggestion may be published. The aim is the familiar one of the Three Musketeers, "All for one, and one for all."

Audien Tabloid Strip Is Issued to Exploit New Chaney Film in Papers
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—An audien tabloid serial has been issued as a newspaper novelty for use in connection with Lon Chaney's "West of Zanzibar." The tabloid strip, in six installments, is furnished in mats or proofs and tells the story of the film in a vivid and dramatic fashion.

Photographs of scene stills were cut out and pasted against drawn backgrounds for this serial strip. Then dialogue was written to fit the various scenes and inserted in the pictures.
Co-op Ad Carries Extra Kick with Hidden Sentence

The Uptown theatre at Parsons, Kansas, fired both barrels of the old exploitation gun when the adjoining ad, sent in to "The Theatre," was placed in the Parsons Daily Sun. In the first place it is a real cooperative ad. In the second, there is the added kick of the clues in each add with parts of sentences, numbered, which placed together read: "Cut out the pieces of the letters found in the ads surrounding the Uptown's and paste together to form the word 'Wings.'"

On the inside of the upper righthand corner of the ad states: "Follow the instructions of this sentence and be one of the first three to submit your solution to any of the advertisers on this page and get a ticket free."

Louise Vaughan, manager, contributed the idea and the clipping, with the following comments:

"We considered this a very good idea and others I know would be glad to have a tip. The newspaper will cooperate 100 per cent anywhere on this. I don't believe that the press sheet shows this idea, although it might be old. Still it has the old punch."

Well done, Vaughan, both the ad and contribution of the idea to other exhibitors.

Saturday Matinee For Youngsters Is Neighborhood Help

The neighborhood theatres in Milwaukee are getting a lot of business for their Saturday afternoon matinees, which is helping a great deal to send up the weekly gross. Not that Saturday afternoon matinees are anything new, but it is something to keep them going every week.

The State, Downer, Riviera, Venetian, Mirth, Fern, National, Garfield and Shorewood theatres are some of the houses that are playing Saturday afternoon matinees for children real heavy. And they are filling their houses! That's the important thing. Contests of various sorts have brightened the lid up at these fronts on these occasions. There has been everything from pirates to tea parties, staged in Milwaukee.

This constant promotion on the part of the neighborhood and outlying houses has resulted in more business than one would ordinarily think. These youngsters go home and tell Mother, Father, Sister and Brother where they were and what they saw, with the result that the picture gets plenty of publicity.

Legal Summons to "On Trial" Scores For Ohio Theatre

(Special to the Herald-World)

LIMA, OHIO, Jan. 29.—A legal-looking summons with a bill of particulars on Warner Brothers' "On Trial" was sent out by Schine's Ohio theatre. The summons-herald was placed in the conventional blue paper jacket of legal papers. On the jacket the theatre was named as the plaintiff and "Yourselves" as defendant, the document being headed, "In the Supreme Court of Talking Pictures—United States of America."

This cooperative ad, with the hidden sentence, went over well, as Manager Louise Vaughan of the Uptown at Parsons, Kan., tells us in the adjoining column.

Birthday Club Tieup Is Way to Get the Children

"Eleven boys and girls will receive tickets to Loew's State on their birthday" and "be guests of the management of Loew's and the Birthday Club." This is the way a three-fourths column news story starts in the Item-Tribune of New Orleans. A real tieup.

The article also includes mention of the week's bill "that will appeal to members of the club."

Gets Fox Ranch to Use Lobby Display On Rin-Tin-Tin Film

It takes Louis Falk, manager of the Wausau theatre, Wausau, Wis., to pull an exploitation idea that will set everyone to talking. Louis has been pulling plenty of them up in his section of Wisconsin and the effect is always sporting a good daily attendance.

Here's that latest one that is absolutely novel and which attracted much attention in Wausau. When Falk was showing the picture, "The Land of the Silver Fox," featuring "Rin-Tin-Tin," he made connections with one of the largest fox ranches in Wisconsin to put a display in his lobby. This ranch won many prizes at shows, etc., and had lots of medals and ribbons, etc., of great interest. A special glass case of these, together with some loving cup prizes, was placed in the lobby.

To back this up a special cabin was built out of logs and also placed in the lobby. Against the cabin there leaned a pair of skins. Skis were on the roof and piled against the sides of the cabin. A light phone steadily from the interior of the cabin.

As Wausau has a great deal of interest in the out-of-doors, this campaign created much attention. Falk also sent a special letter to 50 dog owners and invited them to be his guests at a special showing.

He also made arrangements with a local broadcasting station to announce the picture each night during the week played. It filled the theatre each night, and the theatre is a pretty big one.

Sends Notices of Film On Stock Exchange to 500 Philadelphia Brokers

Jay Emanuel, owner of the Forum theatre in Philadelphia, is the originator of a new publicity move. His theatre was to feature a short reel, "The Nation's Market House," a film showing how the New York Stock Exchange is conducted. A notice was sent by Western Union to each of the 500 brokers in Philadelphia to the effect that "The Nation's Market House" would be shown as a first run in Pennsylvania at the Forum theatre, picturing the advantages of having their clients see the picture and thus gain an idea of the workings of the New York Exchange.

Emanuel issued tickets bearing the names of brokers who paid for them at regular rates and sent them to clients. The response was very encouraging. The showing of the picture also was to be announced on the tickets in Philadelphia.

Meara Publicity Director For Pabst and Davidson

John Meara, exploitation manager of the Alhambra theatre and the Milwaukee theatre circuits, has accepted a position as publicity and advertising director of the Pabst and Davidson theatres, Milwaukee.

Meara has been engaged in theatre exploitation work for four years, having been connected with many of the large theatres in that section of the country. His work has been featured by tieups with leading merchants and industries.
Did Paul Nipps in 1923 Stage First Fiddling Contest? Here’s His Claim

To the ingenuity of a small town theatre owner has been credited the origination of the fiddling contests and fiddling programs which have swept the country in the last five years, as great a single medium of exploitation, perhaps, as ever devised.

In 1923, Paul Nipps, manager of the Opera House of Paris, Missouri, a town of 1,500, feeling the need for some novel feature to boost attendance, hit on the idea of a fiddling contest. Square dances and fiddling music are common in this Missouri section and the idea immediately caught the public fancy. The county contest drew a full house. It failed so well, in fact, that Nipps immediately started publicity for a statewide contest.

The governor of Missouri was invited to attend and act as a judge, on the condition that he see City and St. Louis also were asked to help judge the state affair. A competent publicity man sent out story after story to metropolitan papers, writing up the quaint backwoods characters who were entering the contests. Preliminaries were held in St. Louis at the Missouri theatre for the selection of a St. Louis representative who would go to Paris. The event created interest throughout the Middlewest.

When the contest was held, columns of feature stories, with illustrations, were run by newspapers from California to Maine. It penetrated as far east as Pennsylvania, where the Philadelphia Ledger ran a two-column story regarding it.

Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, reading the colorful accounts of this first state fiddling contest, became interested in oldtime music and oldtime musicians. A letter from him, now on file at Paris, attests to that fact.

Theatre owners and promoters everywhere took up the idea and it was not long before a Radio Contest was held from the Missouri Marketing Bureau radio station at Jefferson City, and other contests were held in other states. Soon hundreds of contests were being held and old fiddling had come into its own.

Three years later, in 1926, Nipps again headed a state fiddling contest at Paris. The Monroe County Fair grounds were rented, as the theatre’s seating capacity was inadequate to hold the crowd. Important politicians from St. Louis and Kansas City were the judges. The contest drew over 1,000 people from rural Monroe county and from other points surrounding. But the venture was a failure financially. Radio fiddling contests had killed the value of it as a money making stunt.

Previously to the last contest, one theatre owner in each Missouri county held a county contest under the supervision of the Paris management. There were 64 fiddlers. [“The Theatre” would like to hear of any other fiddler contests that might dispute the claim that Nipps conducted the first.]

Miscellaneous

Enjoyed Column
POOLESVILLE, MD.—To THE EDITOR: I would also like at this time to address Letters From Readers, I enjoy this column very much, as many letters come from small town exhibitors like myself.

I agree with many of the writers that we all need all of the help possible. However, I want to tell you what I have done in a town of only 250 inhabitants after two other attempts were made by others.

Some three years ago I found myself the owner of a discarded church, so I decided to move into the movie business. After I had remodeled the building I had a very neat little movie house seating three hundred people with a little stage.

I decided that the only way to make the business a success was to get the patrons to feel that the business is a community affair, and that as far as possible I would give them the pictures that they want to see, and this of course, I have done.

I have never figured on the business as a complete business proposition as we never show over twice a week, and this of course, is an extra dive to my regular business.

Over after three years, I find that I am getting patrons from most of the nearby communities in the surrounding country, and notwithstanding the fact that I am only 35 miles from the capitol of the U. S., and many people as far as this distance away to see the pictures, I find that they are a fine advertisement as I can follow with many of the pictures that our people enjoyed in the city, the latter people being the ones that I enjoy.

I have recently installed a Photophone non-synchronous equipment and I feel that the whole growth has been due to the community feeling that they have some say in the matter.

Please pardon such a long epistle, but I want to get this out of my system, and I feel that if more small town exhibitors would get the community idea that they would get more interest, and better attendance.—R. W. Herson, 35, Waverly theatre, Poolesville, Md.

Letters for Readers

PARIS, ARK.—To THE EDITOR: If the time ever comes when you will give as much time, worry and space to the real problems of your small town subscriber, as you have to the large, for something the industry and the public have already named, then your HERALD-WORLD will be in every showman's office.

The newspapers called him "Teddy," and "Teddy" Mr. Roosevelt is today. They called him "Lindy" and "Lindy" it will be after he too has passed on. Writers call a certain drink, one thing. The public calls it "White mule." The names applied to sound pictures may not please artists, yet they enable the public cares. It's little the producer cares if the name is satisfactory. Exhibitors are happy if receipts exceed expenses whether they advertised "sound," "talking," or "silent." How many exhibitors ever had a phone call asking, "What Cinema are you showing tonight?" Rather—"Hello, what's the movie tonight?" or "What have you on tonight?" Soon they'll add one more line "sound or silent" and I'm thinking the exhibitor will wish he could answer "Silent!"

If I wanted to give a name to suit those who don't have "time" to attend picture shows much, I'd call it "Fotophone" or preferably "Movitome." But as film names are named before they can talk plainly, so too has this one been. It's too bad when the naming is left to them, good names are usually the public's affections, but it gives a name that is descriptive—"movies," "sound," or "silent." Also, if a person or thing has to name itself—will it be "The Mite" or "The Five" are think not! Sound photoplays will go!—G. CAYE, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.

Practice "Fair Play"

SUTTONS BAY, MICH.—To THE EDITOR: I am a regular reader of your magazine and will follow up with interest all you have to say in regard to exhibitor's end of the business and the straightforward manner in which you handle the different questions.

Your editorial, "Fair Play," in the issue of January 12, 1929, convinces me more than ever that you not only preach "fair play" but practice it.

I am one of the little exhibitors that do not belong to any organization. As the trade papers have had a rollen-ridden battle by the Detroit Association of Exchanges and a boycott has been declared on me for the past few months, just the kind of any one of the associations would like to see my theatre closed and out of biz. Thanks to the independent exchanges, I am coming along big at the old stand.

You are right this is a free country and Mr. Wooldrill, or anyone else has no right to say to what association any exhibitor may or may not belong. There is a certain viewpoint that may oppose, or have a different viewpoint from his association.

On paper the "little fellows," what do you mean "little fellows?" I am in a town of 200, and my accounts run $7,50. You call yourself a little fellow! What will I be classified? Anyway, brother, I am heart and soul in favor of a department like you mention, and it is time that all of us "little fellows" got together and made ourselves heard. Also, the old saying, "the smaller the pig, the bigger the squeal." If enough of us will be heard, you may realize a new name for our "Ollie." The big fellows have a way of handling their problems, but us "little fellows" at the present time must take what they give us or get nothing from it. I am "little" and have to do anything.—K. G. SMYTH, Colonial theatre, Suttons Bay, Mich.

More Than Satisfied

HOOVERSVILLE, PA.—To THE EDITOR: If all the companies treated me like First National, this would be a grand and glorious life. No trouble about prints. Everything on time. Good pictures that please. What else do you want? It seems that they always hit this Pittsburgh office with real managers. First National is splendid because we are get nothing from them. The big fellows have a way of handling their problems, but us "little fellows" at the present time must take what they give us or get nothing from it. I am "little" and have to do anything.—FRANK ORBAN, SR., Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.

On Vaudeville Roadshows

DURANT, MISS.—To THE EDITOR: I see some readers of your HERALD-WORLD ask you for a show roadshow. We do not know how you feel about granting this request and I do not know whether you think it is a good idea or not. But we are playing the Hamilton Theatre Co. with 12 people Tuesday night of each week. They are on a circuit making 6 towns playing one night each and have been playing this circuit stock with us for the last five months.

There has not been one night that they have failed to fill our theatre to standing capacity, and we always realize from $47.00 to $50.00 for our percentage. But I cannot say whether it is good for the business, for I think it a change but I do not think it's much help to bring the people back to see pictures. Anyway, we are playing and I think they come, for as the Western Electric Co. of New York City has promised us an installation of the Visonphone and Movietone by July 10th, 1929. So I think and they do not advertise the roadshows will pay or be wanted in our theatre or not.—WALTER OOM, Sr., Dixie theatre, Durant, Miss.

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"

DEAR FOLKS:

Who am I to be telling you that "Abie's Irish Rose" isn't a whale of a picture? They told Anne Nichols it was a terrible stage play and now look at Anne! And at her play. No, so far as I'm concerned professionally the picture is a whale, a knockout, a wow and a canary victory for everybody concerned with it. It is art, it is industry, it is drama, comedy, melodrama, satire, and it waves the grand old flag as merrily and with as much reason as most of the pictures that steal applause by that ancient and honorable method.

In it Nancy Carroll and Buddy Rogers are great little actors and Jean Hersholt is a classic. I stop here to reiterate that last crack. The performance of Mr. Hersholt in "Abie's Irish Rose" is a greater and finer thing than all of Miss Nichols' millions of dollars and all of the imitations of Miss Nichols' play that have been done under various titles before this. If I am extravagant in all other statements set down above, I fall short of stating Mr. Hersholt's case. It is tremendous.

In the purely personal sense, I didn't go for "Abie's Irish Rose." And in the personal sense, too, I believe the reason is that I have seen too many diluted take-offs in the years intervening between the Broadway opening of the stage play and the Main Street opening of the picture. It was, by reason of these thefts, worn of edge and clumsy of technique. The greatness has been excelled by Hollywoodmen long since. The central wheeze was old stuff. All this, of course, to me. There is abundant ground for belief that I shall be the only person in these United States who sat unmoved and unsmiling through the exhibition. And, too, no doubt, I shall be the only one to suggest that if the twins in the picture are four months old I am a kindergarten student in rompers. And, believe it or not, I am nothing of the sort.

"THE TERROR"

THIS, my hearties, is a mystery picture what is a mystery picture. This is the one to date your histories from. As they used to use "East Lynne" as a convenient source of reference, so now can you refer, when discussing mystery pictures, to "The Terror" as the granddaddy of them all. For this mystery picture, with the conversation and music and all built into it, sets a new record for all the mystery picture makers to shoot away at.

BY T. O. SERVICE

In the first place, the yarn is a good one. That is, it might happen very much as it does. In the second place, the players are so good that I shall mention only one as outstanding, that one being of course Mr. Edward Everett Horton, for whose uses I suspect the audience was invented in especial particular. This boy's way with an articulated wheeze-crack is nobody's and everybody's business. And of course there are plenty more good players, with plenty more good lines, in the play.

I say that you should see "The Terror." It is not my business, you know, to say that you should play it, for I know nothing at all about such matters. But I advise, as I occasionally do, that you see this picture if you are to continue to represent yourself as an aware and up-to-date member of the industry and an alert showman, actor, or what are you. If you do not like it, I may add, that is your fault—not mine.

"SCARLET SEAS"

I KNOW no one who arranges his pictures so adroitly as Mr. Richard Barthelmess. Every third one is good—and when a Bathelmess picture is good, a holiday is declared in cinema heaven. This picture is one of the good ones.

In "Scarlet Seas" Dick is a hard-hitting sailorman with a yen for the gal who is no hard-hittingly played by Betty Compson. The story is a somewhat bloody and occasionally terrible yarn about mutiny on the high seas and things like that. It is just horrible enough, just tough enough, and just melodramatic enough to be my idea of an eminently satisfying evening in the theatre. I hesitate to suggest "Tolable David" as the Barthelmess picture it is most like, but that is the only comparison at hand, and it isn't so dreadful as that one. It is, however, a much better, more probable and more thrilling entertainment.

"REDSKIN"

"REDSKIN" just misses being a fine picture. It has all the elements; yet I think it is these very elements which keep it from being that sort of picture. It is, perhaps, like a Christmas dinner where there are so many varieties of food that none is really enjoyed.

Its themes are the hatred of the red man for the white; the white man's feeling of superiority over the red man; the refusal of the Indian to accept American civilization; the avarice of the white man and even the inter racial hatred of Indian tribes. It is all too much for one picture to put over; as a result there are a series of anticlimaxes.

But in spite of this the picture is interesting throughout, if at times just a bit ridiculous. Much of it is photographed in Technicolor and this alone makes it decidedly worth seeing. Some of these Technicolor scenes are marvelously beautiful; especially those where the Technicolor brings out all the beauty and color of the picture—que costumes of the Navajo Indians and the outdoor settings of the picture.

The cast is a splendid one. Richard Dix plays the part of the young Navajo Indian with sincerity and skill, and Tully Marshall adds another fine characterization to his long list. The large number of Indians in the cast do much for the good of the picture.

"Redskin," to my way of thinking, is a first rate picture; I'm sorry that it just missed being a truly fine one. But above all, I am thankful that it was not another of those fables where the Indian boy falls in love with a white girl, to the distress of the loving Indian girl. It is not that sort of picture.

EDUCATIONAL

I AM constantly being agreeably surprised with what can be done with sound and dialogue in motion pictures. My latest surprise comes from two Educational sound and talking comedies. One is a Coronet talking comedy with Edward Everett Horton as the chief purveyor of wit. It is called "The Eligible Mr. Bangs," and folks, it's bang-up comedy. It is a gem of a skit, with sparkling dialogue well spoken.

The second is the Mack Sennett comedy, "The Bride's Relations." As a silent comedy it would be funny, but with sound and dialogue it's a panoply. It has all the elements of a good silent comedy with the addition of sound and dialogue. A large portion of it takes place in the open with a background of beautiful scenery. You've often seen and laughed at a man snoring in a comedy. In this one you hear them snore, and if this doesn't make you laugh, then your doctor is going to collect money from you sooner or later. Andy Clyde, who hasn't registered on my memory before, is a scream in the Sennett effusion of fun. I am not going to tell you to see these two comedies, but I hope you do.
In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaign.

Later the ship picks up a wireless that the seaplane is wrecked and is drifting helplessly. Ships are sent out to sea to the ocean, but without success. Tommy pleads with the captain to give him a chance to find the lost place. He succeeds and starts out, but his plane catches fire a short distance from the last crew. The flames attract the attention of the Saratoga, which comes to the rescue. Tommy goes to Anita, who is waiting for him.

LUCKY BOY: Tiffany-Stahl drama, suggested by a story by Vioa Brothers Show, with George Jessel, Rosa Rosanova, William K. Strauss, Margaret Quinby, Owen Lee, Richard Tucher, Gayne Whitman and Myra Doran. Directed by Norman Taurog. Released — Length — Type and Theme: George Jessel in his first Tiffany-Stahl picture, playing the part of a singer that wanted to do big things. Georgia wanted to be an actor, not being satisfied with the job of a song pluggo. He breaks into a theatrical manager’s office, does impersonations, but is thrown out. Georgia’s good mother, who always looked out for him, pawns her precious earrings so Georgia can rent a theatre to run a show. On the opening night of the show, Georgia is without the final payment for the rent, and the manager comes to the theatre, leaving Georgia in disgrace. He leaves town and enters an amateur show in San Francisco, where he makes a big hit. This gets him a chance to sign with a big manager where he meets Mrs. Ellis, her husband and sister, Eleanor, Eleanor and Ellis, with whom he shares, and their courtship finishes despite the disapproval of her family. Georgia comes to Eleanor’s home and breaks into a bridge game. Mrs. Ellis has a ruby ring given her by Tren. She tells her husband it was a cheap imitation, but Georgia insists that it is an expensive ring and bets $100 with Mr. Ellis that it is valuable. Mrs. Ellis, realizing that her husband finds out that it really is expensive, if it means trouble, warns Georgie by sign. He lies and loses the money but wins Eleanor by this act; and he also wins an engagement with a company on Broadway.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: Paramount drama, from an original story by Dara Carroll, with Nancy Carroll, Gary Cooper and Paul Lukas. Directed by Howard Wallace. Released January 12. Length 6,931.

TYPE AND THEME: Life of a chorus girl and such. Daisy Hawley, on her way to theatre where she is a dancer, is in a humorous traffic accident that brings her in contact with Private William Tyler, a soldier. (America has just entered the war.) Tyler pretends to the other soldiers that she is his girl, and when they talk to call his buff, Daisy impulsively assumes the part. This begins a love affair between the two, but Tyler is unaware of her life or relationship with Bailey, wealthy banker, who is in Paris. Bailey convinces Daisy that Tyler is not the kind she should associate with and should not know him. Daisy tells him that the company which Tyler is in, is ordered to France. His love for Daisy is stronger than his duty, and she consents to break up with Bailey and marry Tyler. At the wedding, Daisy faints and the wedding is called off. Tyler is pulled away from the ceremony and prevents his love without seeing any more of her. She continues her job as a chorus girl, waiting for his return.

TYPE AND THEME: Tom Mix—and Tom. In the Rocky Mountain region in 1880, Tom Hard, a blacksmith, recognizes a man he sees in Western so the U. S. Telegraph can be extended. The coach is attacked by bandits led by Slade and Kane. Tom escapes from the bandits, but the coach runs away with Alice Cahan, daughter of the survey chief. Tom rescues Alice just before the coach runs away, and Kane is in Wastash when the two arrive and he makes attempts to kill Alice. Tom rescues Alice from the Spanish influence, is disheartened by the loss of the gold, but later gives Tom a report on the robbery. Kane overhears this and plans to steal it from Tom. In the meantime the U. S. troops are on the way to run out the gang of crooks. Kane video Alice into his stronghold in a case. Tom follows it but is captured by the gang, the entire gang is captured and brought to justice. Alice falls into Tom’s arms.

This Week's Press Sheet

LUCKY BOY (Tiffany-Stahl drama): Arrange to have a treasure hunt that can be tied up with every store in your community. Obtain an old chest or trunk and put a padlock on it for which there is only one key to fit it. The key should be mixed with others and distributed to the stores that are in the game. (Note that the chest will be opened on a certain day.) There are many symbols of luck, and these can be used in various ways. On the board in your lobby you can mount horse-leather cloths, wishbones, and rabbits' feet, with lettering to the effect that none of these lucky signs are needed for good luck when you see George Jessel in "Lucky Boy." Announce that all persons presenting a four-leaf clover at the box office will be admitted to the showing of "Lucky Boy," as guests of the theatre manager. Carry this advertising in the paper several days before the showings. Give a matinee for the kids, and announce that all children presenting a wishbone at the ticket gate will be admitted free.

An amateur night show is one of the amusing and clever sequences of "Lucky Boy." Here is an opportunity to boost local talent and at the same time provide a prologue for the picture that the chest will be opened on a certain day.

Have a large green four-leaf clover printed on white paper, with the announcement of "Lucky Boy" playing at your theatre.

"My Mother's Eyes," the theme song of "Lucky Boy," suggests a tieup with the optical stores. Furnish the optics with stilts from "Lucky Boy" showing George Jessel. Have theRx men and opticalists often need the help of skilled opticians. If Mother's eyes are failing, bring her to see us and then take her to see George Jessel in "Lucky Boy," which is showing at the_____________theatre."

WHAT THE PICTURE DOCTOR SAYS

Verdicts in Films in Language of Exhibitor

Columbia

LADY RAFFLES: Estelle Taylor—25% January 5. A good mystery picture a little above the average program class. First and photography good. Six reels—O. G. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

VIRGIN LIFE: Olive Borden—December 14-15. For some reason this drew a big crowd the first night, and a very few people second night. It just isn't worth the while. Four reels—Clarke Green, Lake theatre, Upper Lake, Cal.—General patronage.

BEWARE OF BLONDES: Matt Moore—January 13. A dandy little picture about crooks, but did not draw at all—just $4.50, and the smallest crowd this winter, but we feel that business is going to pick up soon. Six reels—Clarke Green, Gem theatre, Greenrizer, Utah.—General patronage.

BENGAL BOUND: Milton Sills—January 8-9. Excellent. The best program picture I have played for a long while. Mariclare Day's acting is very good. Best of luck and success to Mrs. Day. I hope the producer will keep all your pictures down and entertain as this one. Columbia pictures are okay. You exhibitors who have not contracted for Columbia pictures are missing a good chance to do business in this photography fair. Seven reels—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

Copyright, 1929

NOMADS OF THE NORTH: Lon Chaney—No go. A terribly sad picture. We re not going to make a second run. Nine reels—F. P. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

First National

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—December 24. About the best picture of the season. However, it is not a good picture for this star. The studio scenes of the ship in storm are crudely done. This is the first picture I have seen for some time where you can easily detect the studio shots. The storm stuff in this picture should be big comedy as burlesquing sea stuff. This picture will get over, but Warners are going to ruin him with another of like caliber.—H. G. Stettmand, J.S., H. & R. theatre, Chandler, Okla.—Small town patronage.

COMPANIONATE MARRIAGE: Special cast—we failed to get the big message on this C. M. stuff of Bert Lindsay. It reads much better. Betty Bronson is too good to be lost in this cheap attempt. Richard Waring is a most acceptable actor—we don't care to hurt his feelings—but to us he is just a second rate juvenile, which is thought a hard spot to fill.—R. J. Speck, Kenwood theatre, Chicago, III.—General patronage.

THE CRASH: Milton Sills—This is Sills’ old neighborhood. We think he'd better get some good stories. If we're going to insist that he lived on the North Side. We just can't see this killing a big star just because of cheap stories.—R. J. Speck, Kenwood theatre, Chicago, III.—General patronage.

THE CRASH: Milton Sills—50%. January 13-14. This is a mighty good picture, clean and entertaining. Both stars and cast fine. The kind of picture we like to run. It is a big attraction to all. Safe to take your wife, mother or daughter too.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenvile, Mich.—General patronage.

A UNIQUE CONTEST

There have been contests to determine who are the favorite players of fans and of exhibitors, but never one like the present, "My Favorite Players" contest, in which not only the exhibitor but the members of his immediate family may name their choices. This is a contest for both fans and exhibitors, for are not the members of the exhibitor's family fans? Yet not ordinary fans. Their close relationship to the theatre places them in a class by themselves, and their opinions are highly interesting as well as valuable.

These are the favorites named by the families of the exhibitors, and the choices of the exhibitors themselves. A tie for second place with Richard Dix and John Gilbert. The standings thus far are as follows:

THE CRASH: Milton Sills—Only a fair picture. Starts out right interesting, but degenerates into a pretty weak sister before the finish. Seven reels—F. P. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE GOOD-BYE KISS: Special cast—When they rave in the press books, etc., and tell you of Mack Sennett's find, Sally Eltern, by this raving you are misled, as Sally is not outstanding in any way. She is another very attractive girl and not unusual in any way, and Sally will not put this show across. If it was not for Johnny Burke this would have been a flop so far as satisfaction entertainment goes, and it does very well, but it is a war picture and will not go over big. Nine reels—W. H. Bennett, Empire theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE NEWS PARADE: Niek Stuart—Here's a pic; if you can get them in. It's the best of all the news reel cameramen pictures, framed with action, thrills for the family reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE GLOIRIOUS TRAIL: Ken Maynard—A good Western for the bygone days when the Indians were on the warpath. Six reels—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

SHOW GIRL: Alice White—First National bill Alice White as the star in one, but as I can see no resemblance between her and a real actress, I cannot give her any rating as a star. On the other hand, it is wonderful find, Sally Eltern, by this raving you are misled, as Sally is not outstanding in any way. She is another very attractive girl and not unusual in any way, and Sally will not put this show across. If it was not for Johnny Burke this would have been a flop so far as satisfaction entertainment goes, and it does very well, but it is a war picture and will not go over big. Nine reels—W. H. Bennett, Emp-
A NAMELESS REPORT

Reports have been received from an exhibit or exhibition "A-NAMELESS," but we cannot publish them because the name of either the theatre or exhibitor was not signed to them. The reports were on "The Wind," "The Way of the Strong," "The Tailors," "The Chevalier," "Man Made Women," "Gang War," and "If You Can't Take the Heat." To certify the group, we add that "The Way of the Strong" was reported to have broken the house record. As soon as the contributor of these stories ends in his name, they will be published.

THE AIR CIRCUS: Special cast—25%. December 18-19. Eleven. Excellent. Though this is not a special, it is one of the best programs bought this season. The young of the characters and the able direction make it a most entertaining picture. Poor business overall.—O. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man., Can.—General patronage.

ME, GANGSTER: Special cast—21%. January 11. Good story spoiled by a weak cast, with the exception of the inside Reservation which is the part of a wastebasket politician in fine shape. Will get good program picture. Seven reels.—Weber & Hass, LaCrosse theatre, LaCrosse, Kan.—General patronage.

DRY MARTIN: Special cast—Billed as a sophisticated comedy, "Dry Martini" was exceedingly dry. Does not hold the audience. The аппарат is minutely in vain. Clever touches in it, to be sure, but the rest of the picture was excessively silly and pointless. Most of the people who saw it—^200 people who stayed at home listening to a chain program, we hope.—R. J. Speck, Kenwood theatre, Chicago, III.—General patronage.

Gotham

UNITED STATES SMITH: Special cast—19%. Here is another picture full of action, and it pleased the large audience. Did not, however, do as well as the picture. The title is not the best, but the picture is the best. The picture is a well-made, well-produced picture. Seven reels.—E. B. Comant, Charlestown-Hall, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

UNITED STATES SMITH: Special cast—Good comedy drama over a well written picture. Do not have a box office.
MATTER OF OPINION

A well-intentioned slap at the estimable T. O. Service in entertaining and reviews in general has come to this department in the form of a few remarks, attached to reports, from Mrs. Grace D. Dinsmore of the Majestic at Wainer, Ark. She writes:

"We admit we have not been playing fair. We are pleased to admit an error, but we read and re-read every report in an effort to discover what has gone wrong about the HERALD-WORLD for any amount of money, as long as we are as in the theatre business.

The reason, we believe, is that we had so many pictures that we would have to pan severely, and the exchanges are such good fellows that we did not have the heart. Besides, we are running rather odd products that had been reported many times before. However, we come to the opinion that the opinion of one is far from being the same as another's, and that there are a few who never judge as our patrons do. Even the honorable T. O. Service. When T. O. gives any picture a hoot, it also hoots big with us as well as our patrons, and vice versa. So our reports may not be worth much, but we will try to do better during 1929."

Now, the only objection of the editor of this department to Mrs. Dinsmore's remarks is that she doesn't hold to her guns. Instead of saying that our able colleague is "all wet," she states that she is afraid her opinion may be wrong. And she isn't, so far as HER is concerned.

T. O. is willing to admit, of course, that these reviews should be considered only as the voicing of his own opinion. Of course, they are! The trouble is, T. O. says that he has too much confidence in his own opinion. Oh, he's gracious enough once in awhile to say that you can have your own opinion if you want to. But if you mean, if one can judge from his magnificient critiques, is he the guy who will write that if you stick to your own opinion, that's YOUR funeral. In short, he's like the more reviewers. They think they've got a certain hold on you. They tell you, and they tell their friends to judge pictures better than anyone else.

And so, Mrs. Dinsmore, the advice of this department is by your own experience. Read T. O. by all means. His words flow off his typewriter like so many a spoon. But be on his opinion, they don't mean so much. He's only a man on crutches after all.

So quite a number of comments on their acting in this picture. A good picture, better than some that are advertised as specials. Ten reels.—F. H. Babb, Stockton theatre, Stockton, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE BUCKET BICYCLE: Cody-Pringle.—January 1. Light comedy that went over big with our patrons. Joseph Conway, Egyptian theatre, Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.—General patronage.

We are in receipt of a letter forwarded to the office which was written by Mr. G. H. Brooks, branch manager for First National Pictures Corporation at Brisbane, Australia, in which he compliments us very highly by saying that he has been following our Colym for all these years without first having seen a picture. Come, as it does, from an unknown friend in far off Australia, it has swollen us all up, until tonight in the cafe we asked the waiters if she realized who we were, and she replied that she wasn’t just sure whether we were the same. Now we climb mountains, we’ll head her for Australia at 4:30 in the morning, if for no other purpose than to meet our good friend in Brisbane. We hope that Mr. Brooks’ letter will be the last we will receive from him and we not only send him our kindest personal regard and good wishes, but the best wishes of the HERALD-WORLD also.

We were down on Film Row today and the expressions on the boys’ faces would indicate that they had just returned from burying an uncle who had left them a legacy of I. O. U. One or two banks accounts and it has about the same effect on us, but the way Mr. Baxter and his eyes came near startling. We felt of his pulse and took his temperature and asked if Ananias was a blood relative of his or just a brother-in-law.

J. Baxter, being well fed, which indicates that he is living in a good neighborhood. Bert Crelc said “dammitbusiness, there has been a murder.” Bob Balentine, branch manager for Pathe, said, “There is just one way to stimulate business, to stimulate the exhibitors honest,” and an exhibitor looked up and said, “What’say?”

For Educational service, “Educational service is the exhibitors only salvation,” and some long hairied guy from the back district broke in and said, “You mean Salvation, don’t you.”

It’s as good as Ringling Brothers’ circus to hear the different ideas advanced as a reason for poor business. Everyone had a different theory, and the only theory that wasn’t offered was that the producers are making the pictures so good and selling them so cheap, that the public has become skeptical and think that the exhibitors are trying to pull one over on them. Our statement to this latter theory, although we doubt if a majority of the exhibitors will agree with us.

We understand that both the Strand and Sun theatres are closed. At one time not very long ago, the Strand was considered one of Omaha’s best playhouses, and just why they should be closed is a subject for consideration when Omaha launches another theatre building program. If Omaha had 5,000 fewer seats and 50,000 more people, we will venture the prediction that both of these theatres would be open and doing business. There is such a thing as having too much of a good thing. This was demonstrated to our full and complete satisfaction once when we went to take our girl to church—we found one guy in the house with her and two more standing out at the front gate. Ever since then we have been convinced that too much of a good thing is a splendid thing.

It’s none of our business how many theatres Omaha builds, but since it has been a lifelong habit of ours to horn in on matters that don’t concern us, we might suggest that a few more factories and a few less theatres would put a different complexion on Omaha’s business life and make safe the business investments that have already been made.

Last night we saw “Craig’s Wife,” a Pathé picture with Irene Rich and Warner Baxter, and since our judgment on pictures will not be taken very seriously, it can’t do much hurt should we mention our reaction to this picture. Any picture with Irene Rich is worth the money, it is doubly so when Warner Baxter is included.

Miss Rich plays the wife who is more in love with her home than she is with her husband. Warner Baxter is the bumptied husband, and Warner Baxter is practically in love with his actions. He tries to play the game on the level and treats his wife with every consideration, but she is wholly out of tune with her surroundings and makes life miserable for the whole household. We have seen just such characters as Miss Rich portrayed, and she played the part so well that she called many of these characters to our mind, and that’s why we list the picture among those few that are human and lifelike.

We never cared much for a picture that was overdrawn (we experience that often enough in our home town), and good effect is magnified when it furnishes a part of a character handled her part in this picture confirms us more than ever—if any further confirmation is necessary—that she has the ability to portray a character just a little bit better than we have reasons to expect, and that’s what makes it a very good picture, as we see pictures. May we wish them right.

A wife is supposed to do one of two things—either make a man’s homelife pleasant or raillish with the whole world, and she generally does one or the other. Miss Rich does the latter. The home life is dead, the only bit that is left is Win. In the course of the picture we see Miss Rich in just that kind of a part, for she has always impressed us as being the type of lady BORDER BLACKBIRDS: Leo Maloney—January 16. A good Western, but has too much night photography. However, it did draw better than the last few Thursday nights. Six reels.—Mrs. Holda J. Green, Gen theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

WHITE PEBBLES: Wally Wales—51%. December 25. Fair Western for Saturday. Five reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

DOCKS OF NEW YORK: George Bancroft—45%. January 7-8. Another good one from the Bancroft-Young Sternberg combination. Betty Compson and Beulah Bondi both support Bancroft excellently. Print and photography good. Eight reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

JUST MARRIED: Special cast—Just fair, which did ordinary business.—R. C. Metzger, Cozy theatre, Wagers, S. D.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

THE WATER HOLE: Jack Holt—A good Zane Grey that pleased. Use it.—R. C. Metzger, Cozy theatre, Wagers, S. D.—General patronage.

THE WATER HOLE: Jack Holt—People here want Jack Holt in Zane Grey's stuff and when he can't, I hear about it. Hot does a good job in this.—Roy Colley, Pastime theatre, Medicine Lodge, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE EMPRESS: Emil Jannings—This star better get out of foreign themes before it's too late. Made for the U. S. This should be shown there equal to the best.—R. C. Metzger, Cozy theatre, Wagers, S. D.—General patronage.

THE EMPRESS: Emil Jannings—Lost money on this one, but it's one of the pictures. This type just doesn't appeal to my people.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

THE EMPRESS: Emil Jannings—32%. January 1-2-3. Wonderful pictures. As far as setting is concerned, but a big flop at the box office. It has no drawing power. The title kills the drawing power of the picture. Print and photography fair. Twelve reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

THE EMPRESS: Emil Jannings—A wonderfully made picture, but it did not draw. The paper was also bad. I believe this picture the most suggestive picture we ever ran, but we ran it wrong. There was no need censorship. The small town exhibitors need clean pictures.—E. P. Mott, Lyric theatre, Wooster, O.—General patronage.

OPEN RANGE: Lane Chandler—January 1. Good Western that pleased. All Westerns are alike, though. A picture with the bold had many thieves, hero and the girl. See one, you see all. Good print and photography. Six reels.—Robert Yancer, Benny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

THE WEDDING MARCH: Special cast—10%. January 14-15. Well, this is one reason that theatres close. Here was a good one, too. If some pictures are lemons, this is a great big grapefruit. Plenty without Print and photography fair. Forty reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

P. S.—The HERALD-WORLD covers the field like an APRIL shower.

J. C. Jenkins—His Colunm

that any man who had the sense of a goat would want to marry, and if she is still single we can't understand what's the matter with Hollywood, but then that's got nothing to do with the picture. About the best advice we can give you is to see the picture and then keep away from Hollywood, if you can.

We note that the current issue of the HERALD-WORLD carries a letter from our good friend, R. T. Tenney, manager of THE PICTURE OF HIS LIFE at Ludlow, Salop, England, in which he says that our Column has made him a personal friend of ours, and that he has been following us hither and yon and that we have made him acquainted with many places and many exhibitors. Glad to know that our friends in good old England find something of interest in what we write. We wish to thank Mr. Temple for his kind expressions of appreciation.

But speaking of England, we note by the morning paper that some English scientist claims that the reason people Ortho were invented because of extreme emotion. That may be true in England, but over here a fincetombe would demonstrate an altogether different reason. That's why we never like to get up too close to these American exhibitors. [Editor's Note: Mr. Jenkins' deduction is, perhaps, due principally to prejudice.]

A dispatch from Hollywood informs us that one of the prominent stars is to marry a wealthy New York banker just as soon as she can recover from the shock occasioned by divorcing her husb. We trust that the poor girl won't let a little thing like that delay the nuptials. There's no damn sense in it. Women have always been too particular that way. We knew a woman once who had her trousseau all ready for her third marriage before she could find a sufficient reason for divorcing her second husband. Quick action in such matters is what we call service.

Did you ever see Mr. HELL SHIP BRONSON? If not, we wouldn't advise you to waive it up, and show druds to see it. Not but what it is a good picture of its kind, but maybe you wouldn't like the kind.

Noah Beery, Mrs. Wallace Reid and Helen Foster carry the burden of the thing, wherein a sailing ship sailing between China and the Golden Gate, with a rough-house on board and a rougher house on shore, furnish the background for the story—you know what kind we mean—and this one gives you an insight to the dance houses along the docks and the rough-houses on shipboard until you are thoroughly and completely satisfied that there are no members of the party, outside of the two feminine leads, that are pulling down any prizes for prompt attendance at the Sunday school. If you like 'em rough, "HELL SHIP BRONSON" ought to meet with your unqualified endorsement. We prefer to see Mrs. Wallace Reid associated with different types of characters than she is in this one. She doesn't fit into the part. It seems to be blood from the same vein, and Helen Foster is a new one to us, and we hope the producers won't kill her off thus early in life but will give her a chance to win her way into the hearts of the people, as we feel sure she will do with half a chance. We have no financial interest in your theatre, so you can play it or not, just as you please—it may nix us to, or words to that effect.

It won't be long until spring will be here and the warm zephyrs from the Southland will gladden the heart of nature, the buds will spring forth on the box elders, the sweet pea will come forth in bloom, the robins will be with us again and the warm sunshine will start, as we look at the skies, to be a blessing on our surroundings.

A paper of lettuce seed in one hand and a pan of onion sets in the other, leads us to the spading fork and points the way to the garden. FIRE, FIRE, HELP, HELP!!

When the glorious sunshine comes to make us happy And the dandelions are blooming on the lawn When the maple trees are beginning to get sappy And these dam-owfrods have melted and are gone Then we'll think this life at last is worth the struggle And we'll throw our hat and joyfully shout HURRAY Then we'll bid farewell to all our toil and trouble And we'll joyfully sing ta-ra-boom-de-aye.

CHORUS

In the shade of the old apple tree That's the place you are apt to find me When the weather gets warm And the bees start to swarm And the blossoms are out on the tree We will feel like a ten year old boy And you'll know that you are full of joy For we'll shout HIP HURRAY And we'll write Joe and Jay In the shade of the old apple tree J. C. JENKINS, The HERALD-WORLD man.
How They Voted

Following is the list of voters in the "My Favorite Players" contest, with their respective choices for male and feminine players (in parentheses) and arranged by theatres. The first voter's name is that of the exhibitor, the next of his wife (except when conditions are otherwise), and the rest of the children. No attempt has been made to arrange the list in any special order, although the position of each theatre is approximately according to the time the ballot was received.

THE FEELNS IN: Clara Bow—25%. January 2-3. Better than the Bow average. Clara really note in this one. Everyone pleased. Percentage low, we believe on account of this being the first Clara Bow picture to run in our house. Eighty per cent. Bebe Wray, H. Bow, LaCrosse theatre, LaCrosse, Kan.—General patronage. .

THE FEELNS IN: Clara Bow—So much good has been said about this picture that it really needs no comment.—M. D. Frazier, Empress theatre, Arma, Kan.—General patronage. .

THE FEELNS IN: Clara Bow—This is a swift moving comedy-drama that grocery both young and old. Frank Nugent and and about the B. O.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Aristo, N. Y.—General patronage. .

AVAILANCE: Just Married—Up, up, up to regular standard, doing fair business.—R. C. Metzer, Cozy theatre, Wagner, S. D.—General patronage. .

FORGOTTEN FACES: Special cast—Seemed to hold interest, and we received quite a few favorable comments on same.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lenmon, S. D.—General patronage. .

DOCKS OF NEW YORK: George Barenfoot—High class picture that pleased the better class.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lenmon, S. D.—General patronage. .

WE'RE ALL GAMBLERS: Thomas Meighan—January 6-7. A fair program picture. This bird has been dead at the box office for several years. There must be some reason for him still playing in pictures. Seven reels.—William E. Traskoff, Trask theatre, Neilsville, Wis.—Small town patronage. .

SEGREGS OF LIFE: Wallace Beery—75%. January 11. This picture was very much enjoyed.—D. E. Jefferson, Temple theatre, Federalsburg, Md.—General patronage. .

THE DRAGNET: George Barenfoot—45%. December 30-31. No drawing card and pleased only about 50 per cent of my patrons. A fair underworld picture. Print good, photograph fair. Seven reels—
"My Favorite Players" Contest

BALLOT: for voting in the HERALD-WORLD’s 1928-29 contest to determine who are the favorite male and feminine screen players of exhibitors and the members of their immediate families. Choices are to be made on any basis the voter chooses.

MAIL to EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD, “My Favorite Players” Contest, 407 So. Dearborn, Chicago, Ill.

P. G. Feld, Strand theatre, Griswold, Is.—General patronage.

VARSITY: Buddy Rogers—49%. December 31–January 1. Inside dope on speakeasy joints and earned life, with a smorning of Princeton Under and Chester Conklin. Drew pretty good, but wasn’t what our patrons expected from Buddy Rogers and Mary Brian. “The Kid in the Glasses” story had plenty of cheese. Eight reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

VARSITY: Buddy Rogers—It’s a big time college picture and very pleasing from start to finish. Charlie (Buddy) Rogers looks only to be a just young grown up kid or boy in this picture, but oh, my, how the girls did rave over his good looks! And Mary Brian—she seems to fit him in this one, is quite a favorite here, but some said she looked just a bit older in this picture than Buddy did. Was the only complaint of an otherwise good picture. Ten reels.—D. E. Jemison, Temple theatre, Tuscumbia, Mo.—General patronage.

UNDERWORLD: Special cast—19%. January 12–14. Our smallest house so far this season. Not entirely the fault of the picture, although people here are emphatically fed up on gang stuff. It was two below zero when we opened our doors and eight below when we closed them, with a mean wind blowing, so could not blame them for not coming out. Interesting picture, with fine performance by Bancroft. We hear the breakers at the beach, the rats and cats, and wild life in the woods. From bad and photography dark. Eight reels.—Wolfe and Williams, Vernon theatre, New Orleans, La.—Small town patronage.

SPORTING GOODS: Richard Dix—December 21. Practically every person present said this was one of his best, if not the best, picture they had seen. We liked the picture as a whole. I think he will have a hard time doing as good as “The Scarface.” However, it isn’t the same class of picture as “Sporting Goods.”—F. H. Babbs, Stockton theatre, Stockton, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE RACKET: Special cast—This picture came to us in Chicago pretty well censored, but nevertheless it is one of the best gang pictures to date, if not by far the best. Everyone just fit in, and the story is treated in a refreshing manner that makes one wish to cheer, especially if they have to look at the rest of Paramount’s.—R. J. Speck, Kenwood theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

HULA: Clara Bow—41%. December 31. This picture has been commended on so often I’ll save my adjectives for some other picture. Of course, our patrons enjoyed it. Seems to me that Miss Bow, Brie, Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—47%. December 24. Universal shuts picture for Christmas Eve night, and evidently a little child thought so too. The picture was well received. It appears on the screen with his face covered with flowing whiskers, she asked, “Mama, is that Santa Claus?”. Although a very sad ending, no doubt our people liked this picture. Really a fine one. One grown young lady said to her father as they were leaving the theatre, “I wish you didn’t leave home.” Nine reels.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

THE PIONEER SOUT: Fred Thomson—41%. January 14. A very good picture, tinged with sadness for those who knew that Fred Thomson had passed to that unknown country which we must all finally visit without the aid of any “Pioneer Scout” to lead us to heaven.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

KIT CARSON: Fred Thomson—As a historical production it is a big joke. As entertainment it isn’t bad. All about the love affair of Kit Carson. Very nicely photographed and well produced. Thomson’s untruthful love affair put it out if played soon. Eight reels.—P. G. Vaseyhan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

SAWSTUDD PARADISE: Roderick Ralphson—100%. Very enjoyable for the first time.—W. E. Dickson, Atrio theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

SALTY’S SHOULDERs: Lionel Wilson—The boys who came to see her shoulders, not her burdens, went away pleased. Played about 85 per cent.—W. E. Dickson, Atrio theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

SINGAPORE MUTINY: Special cast—Title misleading, and action drago. Poor paper. Most folks disappointed in this.—Dwight Grit, Theaterium, Columbus Falls, Mont.—Small town patronage.

TAXI 13: Chester Conklin—59%. January 12. A very good comedy and well made play, with clear comedy. Played about 95 per cent.—W. E. Dickson, Atrio theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

CAPTAIN CARELESS: Bob Steeles—Good Western with some Indian stuff.—J. L. Selter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

RIDING BENGADNE: Bob Steeles—Good Western with some Indian stuff.—J. L. Selter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

SALLY OF THE SCANDALS: Beside Love—19%. December 30. Nothing big, but nice little picture for any night. No kicks, so must have pleased. Seven reels.—Rudd, Royal theatre, Kirbimb, S. D.—General patronage.

TERROR MOUNTAIN: Tom Tyler—32%. January 5. Just fair. A little different from most action pictures. It will please the Saturday night crowd. Five reels.—Weber & Hais, LaCrosse theatre, La Crosse, Wis.—General patronage.

TERROR MOUNTAIN: Tom Tyler—23%. December 24. Wow! Whadda you know about that! Our leading money maker for 1927 and 1928 not making expenses—not only that, but losing money for us. Well, it was a disagreeable, rainy night, so much so in fact that even the manager stayed at home by the radio rather than face the elements. Our operator did a good job, playing all the reels.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

TERROR MOUNTAIN: Tom Tyler—Not a straight Western, but a pleasing picture.—J. L. Selter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

GANG WAR: Special cast—Pleased, and the best one I have had from F.B.O’s 1928-1929 product.—W. E. Dickson, Atrio theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

GANG WAR: Special cast—25%. December 22. This picture did not draw or please here. An under-world picture is a flop at this theatre every time we show one. Our patrons see and read in the papers enough about crime without going to a movie to see more of it. Seven reels.—J. P. Johnson, S. of N. theatre, Ambrose, N. D.—General patronage.

THE PERFECT CRIME: Special cast—15%. January 8. A good program picture. Interesting story well acted, a good direction.—Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE PERFECT CRIME: Special cast—Good mystery, but the ending fooled me. Nearly everyone wondered what it was all about.—Dwight Grit, Theaterium, Columbus Falls, Mont.—Small town patronage.

STOLEN LOVE: Marceline Day—44%. January 3. This was a very good picture that will please old and young. The first part, where the heroine ought—Sally in girl has her first romance, was particularly appealing. Seven reels.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

STOLEN LOVE: Marceline Day—45%. December 31. Just a fair program. Very poor for a gold brick. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duda, Royal theatre, Kirbimb, S. D.—General patronage.

STOCKS AND BLONDES: Special cast—29%. December 1. We had a poor attendance for this picture, but this is not the fault of the picture. There were too many other things going on in our little city at that time. This is a good comedy-drama, a story about pretty blondes and the New York stock exchange. It pleased those who saw it. Eight reels.—J. P. Johnson, S. of N. theatre, Ambrose, N. D.—General patronage.

STOCKS AND BLONDES: Special cast—While we did not make money on this one, I feel it was no fault of the picture.—W. E. Dickson, Atrio theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

TAXI 13: Chester Conklin—Not a special. Spoiled good two-reel comedy when they inflated this one. I don’t seem to get ‘em in on F.B.O’s new product, yet after reading their press and sales talk, one feels he could go right out and sell ice to the Eskimos.—W. E. Dickson, Atrio theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE GAUCOS: Special cast—49%.

Rayart

THE ISLE OF LOST MEN: Tom Santechi—46%. If you are looking for action here it is, all the way through. From the capture of the two men, to the final rescue of the one who was supposed to have been killed. A good story. Five reels.

State Rights

CUSTER’S LAST FIGHT: Special cast—22%. January 18. Just another experience in the education of a fool exhibitor. After the show was all over it would have been a pleasure to pay twice the price of the recipt to wipe all recollection of it from the minds of our patrons. This was once our patron’s story: For a light attend- ance. The picture would have been a fair semi-educational number if the photograph had been decent and the print in good shape. It was awful. Never again! Five reels—William and Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

Tiffany-Stahl

THE TOILETS: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Personally, I thought it a pretty good picture. Some of our patrons did not agree with me. The two drunks in the picture the woman, Yoshie Fairbanks is no chip off the old block. Some one in Hollywood should have him and cut his hair—E. P. Most, Larue theatre, Wooster, O.—General patronage.

Warner Bros.

The SINGING FOOL: Al Jolson—Let me impress this on you who are planning pictures to please your customers and trying to give your cash drawer a chance one time to fill up and run over—sign up with Warner Brothers for this one and fill your lobby full. Every person who sees it will thank you for putting on such a wonderful picture. We are not yet installed with the Vitaphone device, but we have an installation which answered fairly well. But friends it won’t be long now before we will install the “See-and-Hear” Vitaphone and Movietone devices, and then we will take off the hem-peeked appearance of our show house. Then I am going to dress up like a game cock and hit the road for good crit. Lots of people who see this may say, “hit the road for the poor-house.” If we do, it will be on account of the enormous price we have to pay for this device. Walter Odom & Sons, Dixie theatre, Durant, Miss.—General patronage.

The HOME TOWNS: Special cast—if this is a sample of Warner’s “Walking Bill” made into a silent picture, then God deliver us from any more of them! Positively the biggest piece of cheese ever produced. That’s putting it rather strong, but I don’t think it’s any more than it deserves. It’s a shame that we have to force anything like it on to the public nowadays. A cold weather, only a few came out to see it, for which we were very thankful. All that did come were disappointed. You exhibitors who have not yet had good audience, don’t get discouraged. We have more to say about this. Metzger, Fairy theatre, Knox, Ind.—General patronage.

Hoot Gibson, Universal Western star, has held up the prestige of Westerns so far in this contest. Lack of space prevented the publishing of Hoot’s picture last week, though he was tied with Cary Cooper with five votes. They are still tied, this week for third place with six votes each.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

A SALES meeting was called by Ned Depinet, general sales manager of First National Pictures, at the Stevens Hotel last Monday, and 13 managers from the Midwest territories attended. The meeting was called to discuss plans relative to the policy of handling Vitaphone pictures. Through special arrangements the party was shown Richard Barthelmess' latest picture, "Weary River." Depinet, Stanton Hatch and W. E. Callaway were here from the office.

The managers who attended were Tom Burk, Minneapolis; L. J. McCarthy, Milwaukee; Fred North, Detroit; G. L. Sears, Chicago; L. “THE GHOST TALKS

by W. H. Wilkerson

Fox has them all talking—even the ghost.

Looks like the box office will do a little talking also when the ghost talks from the screen of a lot of theatres.

“The Ghost Talks” is the second all-talking from the Fox studio's and one of the best we have seen. It is different in story, different in cast, different in construction and dialogue.

The picture is railroaded into great start and moves right along under the expert engineering of Lew Siler. The steam being furnished by an excellent cast consisting of Helen Twelvtrees, Charles Eaton, Carmel Meyers, Earl Foxe and the coaing being done by that expert fireman, Stephan Fetchit.

This Stephan Fetchit is the hit of the picture. He takes the total cast to a head start of a reel or two, but when this black boy steps in he certainly fetches the laughs. This is the first time we have ever seen a negro character played in a picture that was real. We have seen negro characters played by both whites and blacks, but never once did they deliver. All of them seemed "fakey". But the performance in this picture has the real human actions, mannerisms and speech of the part as written.

If you have not got this one booked, go after it at once.

As soon as you get it, oil up your ticket chopper and your ticket machine, for there is going to be heavy traffic on your

Here's One Show That's Really Epochal

For the First Time on Record Movies Go Outdoors to Do Their Talking

BY WILLIAM F. McDERMOTT.

ORDS like "epoch-making," "historical" and so forth are so commonly misused in describing a theatrical event that it seems fairly ironical that they are not being used this week when there is offered the one opportunity in years to use such words appropriately.

So far as the theatrical business and popular amusement are concerned the first talking picture was certainly reasonably describable as epochal. And so is the first "outdoor" talking picture.

There was a general belief that the talkies would be for a long time, if not forever, a severely cramped dramatic form because of the necessity of confining the action to sound-proof interiors wherein the actors were obliged always to adjust themselves to hampering rules compelled by unavoidable mechanical limitations.

That idea is dismissed at one sweep with the new talkie, "In Old Arizona," having a first showing at the Hippodrome this week.

Witnessing this talk-spectacle aren't made aware of any limitations whatever to the synchronizing of dialog and pictures outside, indoors or all around the town.

The drama moves freely and swiftly from the widest open spaces to the smallest interiors and it keeps moving all the time.

There must have been tremendous technical difficulties to overcome in making this talk-movie. It was filmed, one understands, in remote desert locations in Utah because Hollywood, as is believable, was far too noisy.

The worries of operating "far from base and the tribulations of experimenting in an untired field are undoubtedly very considerable. But in viewing the picture you are not conscious of anything of the sort. It seems to me amazingly successful for a pioneer, experimental enterprise.

Nearer a Stage Play.

One who has been writing for years about the legitimate drama feels at time in speaking of "In Old Arizona" it is not a flash-and-blood story, but neither is it a movie and seems to be nearer the old spoken plays than the movies.

For instance, the acting in the film pictures invariably seems the incomplete to one accustomed to spoken plays. It is not acting at all in the genuine sense, for acting is Shakespeare's time has decayed preponderantly not on gesture or facial contortions but on the conveying of infinitely varying emotion and the making of rhythmic rhythm by means of the human voice.

The actors are seen and they are heard and their characterizations have a richness and complexity of a sort that hitherto has been peculiar to the spoken stage. Except that the human actuality is not there this "In Old Arizona" is a legitimate drama.

It conveys ideas and emotions by means of words and it is interpreted by actors who set these ideas of emotions in movement and make them forceful or weak according to the qualities of their voices and their skill in all the little tricks of intonation and inflection that mark the difference between a good actor and a bad one.

New Kind of Drama.

"In Old Arizona" suggests that the talkies will eventually evolve a new form of theatrical amusement which will not be either pictures or drama as we have known them. Its flexibility is so marvelous, sweeping in a half-second from wind-swept desert to log cabin interior, that some new form will naturally be developed to capitalize fully this mobility and incorporate it effectively with speech.

You hear a lot about motion picture supremacy these days. But claiming leadership is easy; PROVING it is something else again. FOX PROVES IT WITH BOX-OFFICE RESULTS! From coast to coast, Fox pictures are consistently establishing their superiority at the BOX-OFFICE.

The smartest showmen today are playing FOX, because FOX is doing big things and doing them FIRST. The FIRST outdoor Western talker, IN OLD ARIZONA, is shattering records everywhere. Soon a flood of poor imitations from other companies will follow, and when it does, FOX exhibitors will be cleaning up with five more feature talkers, each ORIGINAL in idea, story and treatment: THE GHOST TALKS, HEARTS IN DIXIE, SPEAKEASY, THE VALIANT and THRU DIFFERENT EYES, with more fresh, talk-provoking, profit-making talkers to follow.

PACENT REPRODUCER SYSTEMS

The Pacent Reproducer Corporation takes this opportunity to make formal announcement of its two complete Reproducer Systems for theatres. We believe that this equipment, backed by long experience in the field of sound reproduction, will be of unusual interest to exhibitors throughout the country.

Naturally anyone investing money in sound reproducing apparatus is interested in two things: the product and the company behind it.

Pacent Reproducer Systems are the result of long research and development work by Louis Gerard Pacent, a leading figure in engineering and scientific circles, and a group of engineers working under his direction. For months before being placed on the market, Pacent Reproducer Systems have been put through the most severe tests. They have been tested, re-tested, checked and compared with similar apparatus. The merits of and advantages of Pacent Reproducer Systems are definitely established.

Two systems are now being manufactured, and installations are actually in and working in leading houses in various parts of the country. Exhibitors using Pacent Reproducer Systems send in the most enthusiastic reports of big business done, and favorable comments from patrons.

A Few of the Important Features of Pacent Reproducer Systems

NO BATTERIES: Both Pacent Reproducer Systems operate directly from any 110 volt 60 cycle alternating current outlet without batteries of any kind.

DOUBLE CHANNEL AMPLIFICATION: One reserve amplifier for each amplifier used to run a show. Interruptions and breakdowns in sound program minimized by this feature. Pacent Reproducer Systems are the only systems having complete, double channel amplification throughout.

SPECIAL SPEAKER SYSTEM: Latest and most efficient type of Dynamic Speaker used with special baffle board arrangement. Even sound distribution assured with complete elimination of dead spots in the theatre.

Pacent Reproducer Systems are now manufactured for the disc method of reproduction. The Pacent Film Attachment will soon be available for sound-on-film method of reproduction.

LOW PRICE: Pacent Reproducer Systems are marketed at prices much lower than any similar equipment of equal quality. They are sold outright to the exhibitor. $2,500 buys complete equipment of the synchronous type, for house with seating capacity not over 2,000 seats.

$3,500 for complete system for theatres of from 2,000 to 4,000.

Full Details Will Be Advertised in an early issue of this publication

REEL REVIEWS

By George Gerhard

THREE times in his long career, this reviewer has stood up to a loud and Richard Barthelmess—when he did “Broken Blossoms,” when he did
“The Patent Leather Kid” and last night when he opened in “Weary River” at the Central Theatre. And it is not at all improbable that this last one is the best of the lot, principally for the reason that it is portrayed by a matured Barthelmess.

This time Richard becomes articulate.
He speaks throughout the picture, which is about 75 per cent. Vitaphone dialogue, and he sings several times, revealing a musical artistry heretofore unsuspected. He sorts his warning voice, a voice which has a lot of breeding and all sorts of feeling. And, that’s more, he has a story just filled with ecstasy—the kind of which lumps bring a lump in your throat and a burning emotion in your eyes.

Although they are entirely different types of entertainers, Barthelmess looks and sounds a lot like Jolson in “Weary River,” and it would not be surprising to see this same fall behind a warm-

New Building

CONSIDERABLE interesting and important information is disclosed in the annual survey of theatre building operations, conducted by The Architectural Forum. This authoritative publication, after thorough analysis of building prospects, indicates that theatre construction during the coming year will equal, if not exceed, the developments of the past year.

According to the survey, the huge total of $163,559,000 in theatre building operations is now in contemplation. It may be noted, with much interest, that this figure materially exceeds the scheduled costs of new projects planned in either the automotive or the banking fields.

It is a mark of the industry's sustained progress that, even after the tremendous developments and expansion in the theatre field during the past year, the new year arrives with plans for equal if not increased activity.

When we hear of this vast development the question of over-seating naturally comes to mind. It is a fact that in various particular sections the theatre field is over-seated. While this may at first blush suggest that what we need is less building rather than more building, it may be stated very definitely that such an impression is incorrect. It is altogether too much to expect that theatre building can be so controlled as to place seats only where seats are needed. Too many incidental influences are at work to permit any such ideal conditions to be maintained.

It is only natural on account of conflicting local interests, changes in situations and a multitude of other considerations that particular locations are liable to become over-seated. But, it must be remembered, there are still vast, unopened territories, where facilities for theatre entertainment must be supplied. Increasing populations and changing conditions at many points create the demand for more theatres.

But a great, immediate factor in the building situation in the theatre field has to do with the necessity for rebuilding, reconstruction and the substitution, generally, of theatres of the new and modern type to supplant those built a decade and longer ago, which, under the swift advance that has taken place, are now out of date.

Over-seating is an evil for which the industry is only partly responsible. In the present era of prosperity, the theatre field appears as a rich opportunity for the promoter. To the zealousness of promoters may be credited most of the worst over-seating conditions that exist.

Theatre men cannot be too cautious in the matter of declining to be led into deals which would bring too many seats into any locality. Of course, it is seldom easy to pronounce positively just where adequate facilities leave off and the evil of over-seating comes in. But in all cases this is a question which the theatre man can best decide for himself—and the decision should be made by him after divesting himself of whatever foregone conclusions the promoter may wish him to be acting upon.

This should be remembered: After the theatre is constructed the promoter is usually out or, on his way out. The new proposition, whether it is sound or unsound, is left to the exhibitor to work out as best he can.

The progress of the industry has been so swift, and the rate of increased discrimination on the part of the public has been so rapid, that theatres which in many instances were considered satisfactory only five years ago must now yield to the demand for the newer and the more modern house.

A great part of the existing theatre field will have to be rebuilt within the next decade. Which fact will continue to make the theatre field a great consumer of new buildings and new equipment for many years to come.

"Radio" Pictures

RA dio, once looked upon as a dangerous competitor, if not a deadly enemy, of the picture business, now, in its greatest unit, comes into the business as a partner in its fortunes. And there is little doubt that the fortunes of the business will be very materially enhanced by virtue of this partnership.

It is logical that the magic name, "radio," should be linked with pictures in forming the brand name of the product of the RKO Productions, creating the title, "Radio Pictures." Despite the difficulties which attend the maintenance of the reputation of a brand name in a field where product is necessarily of varying quality, there is little doubt that when the name "Radio Pictures," flashes from the screen, it will arouse an especial interest in the minds of the public.

Great results may be expected from the active entrance into motion picture affairs of the tremendously successful Radio Corporation of America. This vast organization will contribute much to the motion picture industry. In the linking together of the great forces of radio and the principal radio company, with the motion picture, there will be common advantages to both parties, with especial advantages to the public.

Picture Business

IN the midst of the introduction of sound in pictures, it is well to emphasize the fact that it is still the picture business. Sound and dialogue are augmentations and embellishments of the motion picture. After hearing the opinions of various persons in the trade it would seem that something has happened along to supplant the motion picture. Nothing of the kind has happened—or it is likely to happen.

It is still the picture business—a better business because it now has a wider appeal and a better product; but it is still the picture business.

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY
Adverse Film Bills Are Doomed As U.S. Congress Nears Close

Walsh Alone Fights for Action In Quietest Session in Years

Reaction Against "Reform" Agitation Is Evidenced "High Pressure" Methods Lose Effect

By FRANCIS L. BURT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—With only one month of the present Congress left, all chance of adverse film legislation in the near future has passed. The forces of "reform" are still active, however, as indicated by the introduction in the House of Representatives last week by Congressman Cannon of Missouri, "by request," of a bill making illegal and subject to fine and imprisonment, the importation or interstate shipment of films carrying pictures or titles dealing with sex offenses.

The session now drawing to a close has been the quietest, with respect to film legislation for several years. But one move was made to obtain action on any of the pending measures—that of Senator Walsh of Montana who sought to get committee action on his resolution calling upon the Department of Justice to explain what it had done with regard to the prosecution of the motion picture industry for offenses, real or fancied, against the anti-trust statutes.

There are pending in Congress, in addition to the Walsh resolution, the Brookhart and other bills for regulation, legislation closing amusements in the District of Columbia on Sundays, and measures to lift the ban on prizefight films. This being the present session of Representative Blanton of Texas, who has been one of the leaders in the closed-Sunday movement, it is expected that the fiery Southerner would make a valiant fight for last minute action on the District bill, in which the local industry has been practically disappointed.

All this legislation, together with every other bill not passed by Congress will go to the House on March 4, for that will be not only the end of the session but the end of the 70th Congress. The measures not acted upon by the end of the first session of a Congress go over until the succeeding session without prejudice, but when the Senate acts on them by the end of the second session they "die," and if the legislation is ever to be enacted, it must be introduced in a succeeding Congress as a new measure and go through the same mill of committee hearings, report, and so on.

Thus, any advantage gained by these bills during the present Congress will be lost when the session adjourns March 4, and they will have to start from "scratch" when reintroduced.

Returning if Special Session

It is anticipated that a special session of Congress will be called by Herbert Hoover, to meet about April 15, and it is practically certain that the motion picture legislation now pending will be reintroduced. The reform organizations will see to that, but whether their bills will get any further than they have this Congress remains to be seen.

In general it might be said that there is becoming apparent a slight reaction, and that "reform" measures are not now looked upon as favorably as they were a few years ago.

This is due largely to two factors. One is the sentiment expressed by the residents of the various states in ways which are easily understood by politicians and which indicate that the general public is not nearly as interested in all these reforms as the reform organizations would have Congress believe.

The other is the activity of the drys, which goes against the grain of many members of Congress who, while in sympathy with prohibition, do not care to be driven into accepting legislation merely because the drys want it. This has recently been instances in the proposed appropriation of more than $24,000,000 for enforcement of the prohibition act, driven through the Senate by the dry organization, only to become a subject of heated controversy in the House, with not only the opposition of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, but the disapproval of President Coolidge.

"High Pressure" Losing

"High pressure" is putting reform moves over no longer are effective, and this is more than a little responsible for the present inactivity of committees having film legislation in charge. Before the opening of the session, Senator Brookhart of Iowa announced he would dig his control bill out of committee pronto; but he has not been able to make good his boast.

If the reform element is waiting for Herbert Hoover to occupy the White House in the belief that he will prove a valuable ally, they are having their wait for nothing. Hoover is a Quaker; he has not a "reformer." He smokes, swears on occasion—and effectively—fishes and believes the people ought to enjoy life. He has been consistently opposed to censorship of radio broadcasting—that should be an indication of his views. He is a great fellow for leaving the other man alone, to work out his own salvation; he looks with pride upon the progress of the motion picture industry as indicating the increasing extent to which American labor is enjoying recreation and amusement.

Hoover doesn't believe that big business will save the country; on the contrary he believes big business means prosperity. If the film industry needed mopping up, Hoover would try to do it—and very likely succeed—but he won't undertake the job at the behest of any sectarian organization.

V. Y. Hippodrome Is Sold by RKO; Say Price Is Six Million

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The famous Hippodrome has been sold by Radio-Keith-Orpheum to National Broadcasting for a reported sale price of $6,000,000. The Hippodrome is the biggest house in the RKO string. The theatre is equipped for sound and is reported to be doing a good business. It will stay just as it is, according to RKO officials, for at least another year. Then, it is expected, it will give way to an office building.

The Hippodrome has played a significant art in the amusement business of the city, it has been the home of many magnificent entertainments and has had as its guests theables from all parts of the world.

Injunction Granted Claude Neon Against American Neon Firm

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—An injunction has been granted Claude Neon Lights, Inc., by the U. S. district court of New York, retaining the American Neon Light Company from continuing in the manufacture and sale of the gas tube lighting equipment bearing the trade name of Neon.

The injunction sets forth that the Neon company is the owner of the patents covering the device, and that the concern retained has been infringing on these patents.

The injunction covers using, leasing, installing and servicing the Neon equipment, which is used largely for signs.

Spoor and Photophone Agree on Test of Third Dimension Film Talking Picture Using Spoor System Will Be Made in R C A New York Studio and, If Successful, Will Be Shown
Broadway On 52x38 Screen, Says Bucher
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The commercial possibilities of George K. Spoor's third dimension pictures are soon to be given a thorough test through the joint efforts of Spoor and RCA Photophone. A gentleman's agreement has been made between Spoor and Elmer E. Bucher, executive vice-president of RCA Photophone, whereby the device is to be tried out, and furthermore each individual has agreed that neither will make contracts or connections with any other organization until after satisfactory tests have been made.

"We will make a talking picture, using the Spoor system in our New York studios, and if it is satisfactory, we will regard this as a popular stage show, "Blackbirds, now running here. It will be projected on a screen 52 by 38 feet."

Spoor has been developing this system of third dimension pictures for many years in the old Essanay studios in Chicago. According to Bucher, he became interested in its possibilities and sent engineers to Chicago to investigate it. They came back en-thusiastic about its great possibilities. Bucher began negotiations with Spoor and the gentleman's agreement resulted.

"Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky recently stopped in Chicago to see the Spoor pictures," Bucher said. "When they had seen a demonstration, they, too, were highly en-thusiastic, and attempted to get in on it, but Spoor told them of our agreement and would not consider any proposition from them."

"Spoor has developed the system in every respect. He has devised a camera, projector and screen. The film is more than twice the size of standard film. Cameras already have been shipped to us and we will start publishing right away."

In describing the wonderful effects that the Spoor system gives, Bucher said that every detail in an outdoor scene may be made as far as a distance of a mile. A perfect illusion of third dimension is obtained. No eye strain is had in sitting close to the screen and the image appears perfectly naturally at all angles. Close-ups are not needed.

"Just imagine a view 52 by 38 feet,"declared Bucher. "The picture will extend from prosenium to prosenium and from the level of the stage, giving the audience the impression of looking right out of the back of the theatre into all outdoors."

First National Will Produce Audition to Play to the World

[Picture in Pictorial Section]

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—A talking and singing picture will be made by First Na-tional-Vitaphone for international release, and according to present plans will be ready for world-wide release fall. Irene Bordoni, one of the leading stars of the stage in Europe as well as America, has been signed to play in the picture, which will be an attempt to meet the de-mand for dialogue in the languages of the countries in which the film is to be shown.

In Bordoni is a German, French, Italian and Spanish as well as English, and the story for the picture will be selected with the world-wide market in mind. It will avoid situations that may be only local.

Plans for the release of the production call for simultaneous premieres in the leading capitals of European countries as well as in New York and Los Angeles. The picture, which is now in production, is a series of five opera stars and exploitation campaign both here and abroad.

Miss Bordoni, who is appearing here in "Paris," will go in May to start immedi-ately on the making of the picture, which will mark her first appearance on the screen.

Bill Would Permit Film Shows in Non-Taxable Halls; Passes in House
(Kansas City, Kan., Feb. 5.—Exhibitors of this state are considering a new bill which seems headed for adoption in the Kansas legis-lature. The measure would amend the act on military memory day, thus permitting them to be leased for entertainment purposes and it has been passed by the house 110 to 15, and now is before the senate. There are 22 memorial buildings in Kansas not subject to taxation. Virtually all of the halls have a large seating capacity. In the house were 24 members of the American Legion, forming the opposition which the exhibitors representa-tives could not successfully meet.

Stage and Screen Stars Grace Film Bureau Dinner
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Stars of stage and screen attended the Silver Screen Dinner of the Film Bureau Sunday night at the Ritz-Carlton. A new "art theatre" is one of the projects of the Film Bureau. Among those present were Dennis O'Brien, chairman; Fanny Ward, Lucille LaVerne, Blanche Yurka, Gilda Gray, Lee Patrick, Margaret Mann, Robert Bruce and Grant Mitchell.

Four short speeches, pro and con, on the motion picture, audience and drama, were made. The entertainment included four unaugmented motion pictures, "Jupiter," "Killing the King," "Treacherous Waters" and "Secrets of the Sea." The Guignol Studio Players (anomelies) and Snowball, also appeared.

De Forest and RCA Give Showing of Their Device

Two sound devices were given Chicago premiers within the last week. De Forest Phono-film, which is being distributed in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio by Harold Siegel, was given a special showing at 37 N. Michigan Ave. on February 7.

R C A gave a special showing of the R C A Photophone equipment at the Belmont theatre on Tuesday, February 5.

Work on the third dimension-RCA Photophone production will start as soon as the studio in New York is ready, and that will be in ten days, Spoor declared Saturday on his return to Chicago from the East.

"This will present a dynamic new idea in pictures," Spoor said. "There is bound to be a readjustment of the public atti-tude as soon as this appears. The production will be as complete as a motion picture can be. We will have not only pictures, but theatre houses with an entirely new system of photographic projection. The idea is to make a complete new story with every element complete, including sound."

The picture will extend from prosenium to prosenium and from the level of the stage, giving the audience the impression of looking right out of the back of the theatre into all outdoors."

St. Louis Fox Opening Adds New Impetus to Battle of B.O. Receipts
(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 5.—The new 5,200-seat $5,000,000 Fox theatre, thrown open to the public on Thursday night with Governor Henry S. Caufield of Missouri as the deluxe speaker, already has made its presence felt in the St. Louis amusement world. The merry battle for box office receipts is on and the St. Louis newspapers are growing fat on the big advertising contracts the theatre owners are passing out.

Gilbert-Sullivan Operas To Be Filmed in Sound by Robert T. Kane for Pathé
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The famous Gilbert and Sullivan operas are to be made into sound pictures by Pathé, according to an announce-ment made here today. The cast of these musical pictures will include celebrities from Broadway musical shows. The produc-tions will be in charge of Robert T. Kane, with Josiah Zuro as musical director.

It's Bitter Battle He's Staging on Union Labor in Efforts to Economize
(Special to the Herald-World)

PORTLAND, ORE., Feb. 5.—Despite the loss of union musicians, projectionists and stage hands up to this date, the Hippodrome theatre has continued to show a feature and comic, with five acts of vaudeville. Twenty-two union employees have been dispersed with, according to Manager Ely, to save expenses.

The Unions have retaliated by picketing the entrance of the theatre with an "unfair" sign, doing so even in a driving rain. Manager Ely has spread a carpet on the edge of the sidewalk, "so that the pickets may have more comfort." When Ely countered by placing one of his employees in front with a "false" banner, the em-ployee and picket became involved in a heated argument and came to blows. Man-ager Ely, in his haste to separate the combatants, rushed between them and received a black eye. Then all repaired to the police station.
Columbia and Victor Will Make Audiences Together by New Deal

Best Victor Stars Will Appear In Talking Short Film Series

All Recording Facilities, Resources and Technical Experience at Disposal of Producing Company

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Columbia Pictures Corporation took a stride forward here today with the announcement of a contract whereby it will make talking pictures jointly with the Victor Talking Machine Company. Columbia will now have at its disposal all the recording facilities, resources, and technical experience of the Victor studios and laboratories.

The deal was completed as the result of negotiations begun before Victor was taken over by the Radio Corporation of America. Columbia made it plain that the arrangement was made directly with Victor, not with R C A, and that it does not in any sense imply an understanding or a deal with the Radio organization or any of its parts other than Victor.

The arrangement at present calls for the making by Columbia of a series of talking and sound short pictures, production to start at once with leading talking and singing stars of Victor. The regular program of long features released by Columbia will continue, but hereafter to be made at Columbia’s own production studios on the West Coast, where Harry Cohn, vice president, is located.

Gets Pick of Victor Talent

Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, and H. L. Sommer of Victor worked out details of the plan for making sound pictures in the Camden plant.

This arrangement gives Columbia most expert knowledge in talking picture production, and up-to-the-minute methods of sound and voice reproduction.

The alliance places at the disposal of Columbia not only Victor’s own model plant, but the unlimited resources of its technical department, as well as the services of its research force and its staff of experts.

It also gives Columbia the pick of the vast array of Victor’s talking and singing talent in the “legit,” vaudeville and operatic fields.

Plan Musical Short Films

“Music is the only universal medium,” stated Joe Brandt, “and we intend among our short subjects to issue a series of musical features that will be a credit to any program. These will present outstanding musicians, singers, dancers, etc., in elaborate settings. We are going out after the biggest names before the public.

“There is no reason why we cannot record for posterity as well as for the entertainment of the audience, the superlative accomplishments of violin virtuosi such as Fritz Kreisler, Jascha Heifetz, Yehudi Menuhin; singers like Lucia Cerci Bori, Bohlen and others; yes, and even the art of dancers like La Argentina, Goya and the Denisheans.

“Set against the proper atmospheric backgrounds, short subjects made along the lines indicated will lend luster to the picture of the Victor company, with its experience in recording, coupled with our ability to produce and distribute such a program of shorts in conjunction with our regular program of full length features, indicates, I believe, a progressive and forward step.

Synchronize Several Features

Further development of the program will be entirely dependent on the production schedule that Columbia will arrange for the coming year.

Arrangements also have been made for the synchronization of several of Columbia’s features. Two of the company’s specials have already been fitted with the Camden studio. “Submarine” is the first. Dialogue sequences on “The Lone Wolf’s Daughter” have just been completed. Synchronization of “Trial Marriage” is now going into work.

Columbia’s production staff on the coast is being duplicated in assembling the production unit for the eastern plant. A prominent director already has been signed. Columbia also will announce soon its affiliation with a vaudeville agency, which will offer Columbia yet another source of prominent acting talent.

First Bill Against Sunday Shows Killed Almost Unanimously by Oklahoma Solons

(Special to the Herald-World)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 5.—The first bill against Sunday amusements to come before this session of the legislature was killed in the lower house by almost unanimous vote. The measure would have prohibited all amusements on Sundays and holidays, and it provided for severe penalties for violations.

One of the authors of the bill said that it was “a bite of horseplay” designed to obtain passes for the legislators to theatres in Oklahoma City, where one legislator is an exhibitor.

The city of Ada, Okla., however, has voted against Sunday shows.
What to Produce?

The editorial article by Martin J. Quigley in the February 2 issue of the Herald-World on “What to Produce” has aroused keen interest among exhibitors as well as within other branches of the film industry. Johnny Jones, manager of the Majestic theatre at Columbus, Ohio, in the following letter, proposes ten possible subjects for motion pictures and also suggests that a producer invite ten exhibitors to go to Hollywood, suggest a theme for a picture and then supervise production.

By JOHNNY JONES
Manager, Majestic Theatre, Columbus, Ohio

YOUR editorial, “What to Produce,” is the most interesting I have ever noticed in your publication. I have been a press agent here in Columbus and am now manager of the Majestic theatre. Here is the thing I have harped about. Ask somebody about something.

I HAVE always thought it would be a fine publicity stunt for some producer to select some ten exhibitors from various parts of the country and let them come to Hollywood and suggest a picture and supervise it. It would at least show them how hard it is and they would keep their mouths shut henceforth—or they may make one. Who knows? Sometimes I think half of the directors never were in a theatre.

Here is my list of ten for next year with no explanation.

1. George Meredith’s “Victoria” (spectacular).
2. Percy Marks’ “The Last Stand of Youth” (College Humor). “Brown of Harvard” was the only college picture ever made. They need one now around sorority girls and made with real human beings, not sheiks.
4. Theatre organist love story.
5. Story suggested by “David Lawrence and His Victoria,” or “With David Lawrence in Arabia.”
6. “The Life of Alexander Hamilton.” His love affairs, etc.
7. Story centering around girls’ efforts to save Gould, in a similar feat used as a smash scene in some romance.
10. Outstanding Western story with careful handling and serious thought. That’s all, but sometimes they don’t seem to think very hard on product.

My list of subjects for production next year follows:

Extract from an editorial article by Martin J. Quigley:

“While there has always been a pressing need for cooperation between exhibitors and producers to make the question of what to produce, this year the question is more pressing than ever. Unfortunately, very little in the way of practical cooperation has ever existed. Virtually the only immediate contact between the film companies and the theatre is when a representative of a sales department seeks to sell film to the exhibitor. In this circumstance there are the natural points of difference between the buyer and the seller. The exhibitor does not seek to offer guidance on production problems and the salesman has his mind on something else.

The HERALD-WORLD urges exhibitors to consider the problem of what to produce for next season, and in urging this it wishes to make the fact that in the long run the outcome of production problems means just as much to exhibitors as to producers. We urge you, therefore, to express your views on what to produce for next season. Communicate either directly with the producers or send your communications to this publication. If you are of general interest they will be published and, at any rate, they will be laid before the producers’ councils.”

Sam Warshawsky Named To Handle RKO Publicity; Paula Gould Goes to Coast

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Changes in the RKO advertising and publicity department were announced here today by Hy Daal, director of the department. Sam Warshawsky was appointed general press representative in charge of trade and daily publicity. He is a brother of Abel Warshawsky, a veteran in motion picture and legitimate theatre fields. He has been in the publicity department of the company for several days.

Paula Gould, in charge of publicity in the East for several years, resigned to take one of two production offers made her in Hollywood. She will leave for the Coast in a week.

“Divine Lady” to Replace “Weary River” at Central

(New to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—First National’s picture called “The Divine Lady” has been set to follow “Weary River” in the Central theatre. No date, however, has been set as the Barthelmess picture is in for an indeﬁnite run, and present box ofﬁce receipts indicate it will hold forth in the Central for some time. The picture broke the week end house record for the ﬁrst week, even topping the mark set by “Lilac Time.”

Sound Device Formed Declared to Need No Sensitized Diaphragm

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Eugene A. Lauste, pioneer inventor in the field of sound-on-film, will shortly deﬁne a new type of reproducing device, which will transform electrical impulses into sound waves without the aid of a sensitized diaphragm or other mechanical change. He is going to an announcement made at the Bloomﬁeld, N. J., laboratory of the inventor, the new amplifying system is the result of research and experiments begun more than 15 years ago, when he was perfecting his sound-on-film method.

It is stated that the new Lauste reproducing system will furnish the solution of many amplification problems, because of the fact that it does away with the necessity of using a microphone or sensitized diaphragm in sound transmission.

The British patent ofﬁcials have found it necessary to issue a ﬁfth edition of the papers describing Lauste’s invention.

Fire Destroys New Sutter Theatre, $50,000 Damages

(Special to the Herald-World)

SACRAMENTO, CAL., Feb. 5.—Fire of undetermined origin swept the new Sutter theatre, doing damage estimated at $50,000.

Theatre, which had been leased by Max Weiss, and was to have been given over largely to road shows. This is the third time that a moving picture theatre, remodelled for road show purposes, has been destroyed by fire.

Community Chain Seeks Brin Houses, Meeting Fox’s Bid

Ground will be broken this week at West Bend, Wis., for a $150,000 house to be operated by Community Theatres, Inc., of Milwaukee, the theatre circuit of German architecture, designed by A. S. Graven, Inc., of Chicago, with 800 seats and an elaborate mezzanine floor. Louis K. Silberman, president and general manager of the circuit, said in Chicago Saturday. Walter W. Oeflein is the building contractor.

Community Theatres, Inc., owning nine theatres, also submitted a proposal Friday to L. K. Brin of Milwaukee to take over his the second time within two years. The Liberty-Augur Paramount circuit.
End of Censorship
Sought by 2 Bills
In N. Y. Legislature
(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—Two bills calling for the repeal of the present motion picture censorship law in New York were introduced late last week in the legislature. Also last week an item was put into the annual budget calling for an extra $12,800 for the purchase of equipment to enable censorship of talking pictures.

One bill seeks the repeal of censorship of motion pictures on the ground that the censorship of talking pictures restricts the freedom of speech guaranteed by the Constitution, and asks that censorship be repealed on that ground.

The second measure provides that the law creating the censorship division in the department of education be repealed or, before next July, Exhibitors throughout the state will be asked to back the two bills by letters and telegrams to their respective senators and assemblymen.

Faculty of Stanford Against Lankford Bill, Say Foes of Bigotry

Statements of persons advocating passage of the Lankford bill, which would prohibit Sunday shows in the District of Columbia, belittling the opposition to the bill, have brought a vigorous retort from the first 1929 issue of Liberty, quarterly devoted to the cause of religious freedom. In an article entitled "A Famous Petition," it is asserted that nearly all members of the faculty at the Stanford University signed a petition to Congress declaring their opposition to the measure.

"The action of the faculty," declares the article, "is that sentiment that prevails in other universities and colleges throughout the land where a similar test of sentiment has been made.

The action is in the general action of the people of California in overwhelmingly rejecting all Sunday laws in that state, as evidence that tolerance is not only a matter dear to the motion picture industry.

Postpone M P T O Dance;
Mastbaum Theatre to Open
(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—Postponement of two events of importance in local motion picture circles was announced. The annual inner-dance of the local M. P. T. O., scheduled for January 27th, has been postponed until some time in April. The opening date of the Stanley-Warner Company's new Uphown theatre was postponed from February 28th, as originally announced, to February 16th. The Uphown theatre will open on February 28th.

Theatre Block Destroyed
By Fire at Faribault, Minn.
(Special to the Herald-World)

FARIBAULT, MINN., Feb. 5.—The opera house block was destroyed by a fire last week which caused a loss of $20,000 and for a time threatened to wipe out the entire business district. The fire department of Northfield helped to bring the flames under control.

WASHINGTON—"The Heat Treatment of Steel," the latest addition to the library of educational motion picture films, was premiered by the Department of Commerce for the mineral industries of the country.

Radio Pictures Is Trade Name
Selected for RKO Productions
President Schnitzer Announces Changed Designation for Product—Sound Has "Opened Infinitely Wider Field of Dramatic Expression," Declares David Sarnoff
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Radio Pictures is the trade name selected for RKO Productions, President Joseph J. Schnitzer announced last week. This announcement, made by the head of the motion picture producing and distributing unit of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, marks the actual entrance of radio into the film industry. At the same time, David Sarnoff, RKO director as well as executive vice president and general manager of RCA, declared in a statement that "sound has opened an infinitely wider field of dramatic expression for the motion picture."

In commenting on the entrance of radio into the industry, Sarnoff said:

"Radio has traveled far since its establishment as a wireless telegraphic service. It is on the ocean, aboard ship, in the home; it is now entering the theatre through the new development of talking motion pictures. Electrical science has finally synchronized sound and motion on the screen. This has been made possible by the vacuum tube, the photo-electric cell and the loudspeaker.

"Improving Technique"

"Again radio stood before the doors of another great industry. And again its reception was chilly, to say the least. Two years ago, most moving picture producers stood aloof from these significant developments in our electrical laboratories. Sound, they said, was an intrusion on the 'silent drama.' Gradually, they began to peep into the backyards of the electrical industry; and finally they stamped towards the magic word 'sound.'

"Nevertheless there are still those who interpret this development as merely sound added to motion on the screen. What has happened, I believe, is that a new and greater art of picture production has been created, in which neither sound nor motion can go forward without the other's co-operation. Sound has opened an infinitely wider field of dramatic expression for the motion picture.

Further experience in the motion picture art is enabling the electrical industry to improve greatly the technique of sound recording and sound reproduction for the screen. In the new art it is impossible to separate the studio from the sound laboratory.

Now Developing Sound"

"Thus the Radio Corporation of America has been drawn to the entertainment field. Five years ago, the radio art, through broadcasting, led us to develop a service of entertainment, information and education to the home. We are not strangers to such a service. Beyond our function in the field of international and other telegraphic wireless communications, it is our business to develop sound reproduction through the latest of the arts of electric communication. Thus the electrical group has established a great nationwide service of broadcasting in the United States; it has co-operated with the phonograph industry in the creation of new sound reproducing instruments; it has now come to the motion picture industry to co-operate in the development of the new art of sound motion pictures."

I. Blumenthal in New York

NEW YORK—I. Blumenthal, general manager of the Paramount organization for Germany and Central Europe arrived in New York last week for his annual visit.
BROADWAY

Notes

COLUMBIA is in a fever of activity. Six new exchanges in the South. New offices in New York. A snappy deal with Victor. Big smiles on everybody and lunches at the Astor.

Tommy Meighan receives at the Savoy-Plaza. Amazement on his face at the number of young ladies who write about pictures. Or, at any rate, the number of young ladies who come to parties for people who write about pictures.

Symon Gould doesn't believe his own slogans. "Supreme and Silent" he says of his new Film Guild Cinema on Eighth Street. But at the opening performance he shouted so many instructions and in so loud a voice that you couldn't see the picture. Tut, tut, Symon. Quiet, please.

FIRST NATIONAL is sitting very pretty. A few months ago things were considerably upset, to say the least, but concentration on the job and a little hard work has put First National close to the top of the heap. Exhibitors who want sound have something to choose from at First National, all ready and set for delivery.

Bob Sherwood is free-lancing now that "Life" has been eased for him. He still does his column on motion pictures for the Bell Syndicate and it's still at the top of the heap.

The newspapers are falling all over each other to tell the world how Paramount profits are getting bigger and better. And "Redskin" isn't going to harm the treasury any.

The opening Big Bertha of the RKO advertising campaign is something to look at. Spend a moment or two over Hy Daub's idea of what an insert should look like.

The Dinner of the Silver Screen brought out several who are generally content with the Luncheon of the Single Arm.

Harry Reichenbach is understood to be considering an offer to play on a river boat in the Ohio next summer. Or is it a houseboat on the sound?

Donald Henderson Clarke, which is none other than Don Clarke, has written a swell book called "In the Reign of Rothstein." This is something of a thriller, with names and places instead of imagination. Don't miss it.

ACTIVITY in the trade paper field. Red Kanu has finally come out from under the Film Daily Year Book. Art James has done a Penney on the Daily Review and Motion Pictures Today, retaining the best features of each.

Winfield Sheehan has been commuting between New York and Los Angeles.

Phil Reisman has been doing a great job for Pathé on "Strange Cargo," and "The Godless Girl." "Strange Cargo" goes into the Paramount this month.

The Fox deals for New York theatres have not yet been signed, sealed and delivered. Final accountings are still being made. But so far, despite rumors, there hasn't been a serious hitch.

Carl Laemmle just celebrated his twenty-third anniversary in the motion picture industry.

Speaking Briefly of Comedy

Is old-fashioned slapstick to vanish? Are we to lose our taste for custard pies on the screen? Certainly, the advent of sound has brought a new kind of comedy—the sketch and farce heretofore exclusive to the stage. Here are scenes that indicate the new order. They are from the first short sound comedies produced at Paramount's Long Island studio. Their casts are made up of leading stage comedians.

Bruce Gallup New Advertising Head Of United Artists

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5—Reorganization of sweeping importance in the United Artists company was announced yesterday by M. Schenck, president. Bruce Gallup, whose advertising campaigns have won considerable commendation for the company, was appointed executive in charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation. He replaces Victor M. Shapiro, whose position was thought to be quite secure. Others were also displaced, among them Charles Moyer, formerly in charge of foreign exploitation; Paul Lazarus, in charge of getting out the sales organs, "United Action." Resignations were accepted from these and from Frank Beach, assistant secretary.

Schenck's changes followed closely upon an expression of dissatisfaction within the organization with its progress and at the same time closer economy. The official statement reads: "The move was a part of a reorganization planned by which certain offices were dispensed with in the interest of economy. These men have been loyal, efficient and faithful in their work."

Warner Reported In Deal to Get 34 Equity Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5—It is understood from reliable sources that an agreement has been reached between Warner Brothers and Equity Theatres under which the former company will operate the Equity Circuit of 34 theatres located in Philadelphia, Allentown, Reading, Bridgeport, N. J., Amherst, Pa., Willow Grove, Pa., and Baltimore, Md. According to reports, the present Equity officials will continue with Warners in executive capacities for a time at least, as a part of the reorganization planned by which a considerable length of time to consummate.

O'Toole Named Honorary Life Member of AMPA

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5—Michael O'Toole, past president and new executive secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, became life honorary member of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at a meeting last week. Arthur James, first president and honorary member of the AMPA's, presented N. F. Woodruff, also past president. Arthur Lubin and the Gotham boys, Joey Say and Sammy Stept, offered several theme songs from Gotham pictures. Photographer A. E. H. took pictures of all present for publication in the AMPA Hollywood Masque Ball program.

Ohio M P T O Fights Bill For Censorship of Audiences

(Special to the Herald-World)

COLUMBUS, O. Feb. 5—Censorship of talking pictures is provided for in a bill introduced in the Ohio legislature, and already the exhibitors sent letters to the editor to counteract the efforts of the Ohio State League of Better Motion Pictures on behalf of the audience. Such censorship would be under the educational department, present censors of silent films.

N.W. Exhibitors Hear Myers; Pledge Allied States $5,000

Half of $10,000 Quota Raised Few Minutes After Opening of Two-Day Session at Minneapolis—Producers' Sound Sales Methods Attacked

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 5—Northwest Independent theatre owners voted 100 per cent to affiliate with Allied States at a meeting today at the Nicollet hotel. The vote was backed up by pledges of contributions, totalling well over $5,000, a few minutes after the vote was taken; $10,000 is the goal.

About 200 delegates were present. Most of them were from Minnesota, but there were also large delegations from Western Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, the Dakotas, and Winnipeg, Canada. Not a dissenting voice was raised when the standing vote was called for after the speeches.

The two day session opened today with a breakfast at the Nicollet, with informal discussion. In the convention meeting, W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest Theatre Owners Association, president, Steffes first outlined the history of Allied, and the factors and alleged abuses which called the association into existence. He touched upon the favorable action of the directors a few weeks ago at a special meeting in Chicago and asked for ratification by the exhibitors.

Myers Takes Up Problems

Steffes then turned the chair over to Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel for Allied. Myers traced the history of Allied, his own connection with it, and the mooted points in its constitution. These were, in particular, the Brookhart bill and arbitration, and the problem of sound pictures.

Myers emphasized that the Brookhart bill is not an attempt to saddfle the industry with socialistic regulations. He reiterated very strongly that if it were possible to get along without Federal interference and rulings, he certainly was in favor of it. However, as conditions now exist, present forms of arbitration are ineffective, as far as getting results for the exhibitor, particularly the independent one, so that the Brookhart bill is the only present answer to the problem, he declared. He omitted various cases.

On sound pictures there was a still more lengthy discussion, in which frequent mention was made of cases by himself or reported to him. He protested against the unfair advantage which he said producers now have in the making of contracts, in forcing certain pictures upon theatre owners and again in refusing them certain pictures, particularly the sound productions.

All this, he claimed, has come after the exhibitor in the early days of pictures, prior to the war, had been the moving force in selling the public motion pictures. In those years, Myers said, the name of the producer was hardly known. A symbol of some sort of another sufficed to identify him. Now with the producer holding the whiphand, thousands of independent theatre owners are being forced to the wall by unfair monopoly and system of favoritism practiced by producers' associations, he charged.

After Myers finished his address, a call was made for opinions from the audience. Several responded to tell of the particular difficulties which they have encountered in regard to sound pictures. They told of cases where they had gone so far as to install sound equipment, received the approval of the local representative of the firm, and then refused pictures "of flimsy excuses." In other cases, independent owners said, they had been forced to contract for 72 pictures at one shot, more than they could show in a year in many of the small town theatres.

$5,000 Pledged Early

Steffes then took the chair again and appeared to be telling the meeting of the plan of the Allied States. The unanimous vote was cast and Steffes then asked for financial contributions after outlining some of the financial needs of an organization like Allied States. In 15 or 20 minutes about half of the $10,000 needed was subscribed. However, as the session was running late, time and therefore at the end of the afternoon, the meeting was adjourned and the rest of the money will be raised during the remaining sessions.

At the session this afternoon, civic organizations, clergymen and women's clubs were invited to discuss problems with the theatre owners. At the meeting tonight, the local representatives of sound companies will present their case before the civic organizations and the theatre owners.

Milwaukee MPTO Wants State Body To Remain Intact

(Special to the Herald-World)

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 5—Further complications in the exhibitor field in Wisconsin arose this week when the Milwaukee M P T O convened in a special meeting at the Hotel Randolph for the purpose of deciding whether or not the Milwaukee organization would remain intact.

This meeting followed just one week after the national meeting of the stand-up organization at which time Allied States and M P T O factions locked horns without any definite results. The resulting Milwaukee exhibition meeting held January 30 were almost unanimously in favor of retaining the organization intact. According to Fred Meyer, secretary of the Milwaukee organization, "every effort will be made to retain harmony in the local situation."
Sound "Insurance" Given Exhibitor in First National 5-Year Contract

Most Stars of Company Signed for Similar Length Period—Plan Assures Theatre Owner of Steady Flow of Product

(Stated to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5. — First National has devised a plan which amounts to a form of "insurance" for outstanding exhibitors with sound equipment. It has been First National's experience that exhibitors throughout the country with theatres equipped for sound are seeking ways and means of safeguarding their new investments. They are immensely proud of their progressiveness in installing the new sound equipment, uncomplaining about the cost, hopeful of the future.

Theatres equipped with sound are on the threshold of exceptional prosperity, in the opinion of their owners. They are in the vanguard of the motion picture parade, and look forward to the future with the greatest confidence. They can imagine no development for which they are not fully prepared.

Offers Five-Year Contract

The only possibility of danger lies in the matter of product. They have the equipment. They have proved that they can get the audiences. The only thing they need concern themselves with is a steady flow of product, good enough and strong enough to maintain their position as an important sound house.

First National reports such a feeling in many quarters and to rest any possible fears they have evolved a plan they hold to be unusually beneficial to exhibitors.

First National has offered five-year contracts to outstanding exhibitors in many parts of the country. At reasonable figures—based on normal prices—with small increases for the future—First National has signed with certain exhibitors whose showmanship and financial standing have always been highly regarded at First National headquarters.

Most Stars Signed for 5 Years

Inasmuch as most of First National's stars are held on five-year contracts, the new offer amounts to "insurance" that certain soundproof houses throughout the country shall never be without product.

The new plan was not put into effect at First National without certain misgivings. There was a time when First National had 5,000 franchise holders; that they became an annoyance and a drawback to business is not a matter of opinion, but a matter of record. Today there are only about 300 franchises left and First National is in no mood to take on anything of an uncertain nature.

However, the company believes firmly in the future of sound. In order to increase the confidence of the industry in sound, in order to free exhibitors from the fear of not being able to profit from their newly-installed equipment, First National has taken the unusual step outlined.

William James Sells His Last Theatre as Final Step Out of Industry

(Stated to the Herald-World)

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 5.—William M. James, one of the outstanding figures in the motion picture industry, who is serving his seventh term as president of the National Amusement Managers Association, and his fifth term as head of the MPTO, is entirely out of the motion picture business.

The deal by which he disposed of his last house, the Pythian Theatre in Columbus, was closed last week, when Columbus Theatres, Inc., took over that house, as well as two others in Columbus.

James has had a very eventful career in the industry. He started about 25 years ago to stage minstrel shows, and with John A. Conely, an attorney of Columbus, built the Broadway theatre about 19 years ago. Later they built the James theatre here and houses in Toledo and Lexington, Ky. Later a string of neighborhood theaters were built.

When his terms as president of the owners' and managers' associations expire, James announces that he will not accept re-election in either organization. "I always loved a fight and spent the greater part of my life in them," he added. "When the fight was over and we had won, there was not a great deal of interest left."

Glen to Head "Wolf of Wall Street"; Teachers See "Uncle Tom's Cabin"

(Stated to the Herald-World)

DES MOINES, Feb. 5.—Lionel Wasson, manager of the Des Moines theatre, has invited the city's blind to attend a showing of "The Wolf of Wall Street" at 9 a.m. on February 11.

Fifty teachers saw a pre-view of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the same theatre on February 2. The pedagogues expressed their satisfaction with the way the story was depicted.

Resort Theatre Ends Career After 7 Years

(Stated to the Herald-World)

ATLANTIC CITY, Feb. 5.—For 17 years the City Square theatre has been showing motion pictures. And now, its time has run out. The property is owned by a department store, which expects to use the site for an addition. Edward J. O'Keefe, former vaudeville performer, has been operating the house, in association with John McGurk and Harry Schwalbe. The theatre is reported to as many as 30,000 in a single week. O'Keefe claims credit for having been the first to show programs composed entirely of material produced by his own company. Such programs presented on afternoons are said to have almost emptied some of the office buildings, so great was their attractiveness to business people.

At the New York Theatres

"Model" Producing Plant Is Developed in England

By British International

(Stated to the Herald-World)

LONDON, Jan. 26.—[By Mail]—The growth of British Instructional Films as a producing organization is indicated in descriptive material concerning its new studio development at Welwyn Garden City, north of London. The company is reissuing this material, which originally appeared in an article in The Cinema.

Much of the information is devoted to a description of the efforts made to erect a plant which would provide not only excellent locales but a pleasant environment for players. The studio proper is 200 feet long, 100 feet wide, and covers an area of 41,000 square feet. A theatre, a tank for aquatic shots, compactness, and an elaborate ventilating system are featured among the features. Welwyn itself is being carefully planned for an ultimate population of 50,000.

New MPTO Officers

Floyd Hopkins, Walter Steenweg and Morris Wax are the new vice presidents of the MPTO of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, instead of those recently deceased, Harry Green also was named on the board of directors.

George Jackson Resigns

(Stated to the Herald-World)

PORTLAND, Feb. 5.—George Jackson resigned his sales position with Pathé and has begun his career as exhibitor and manager of the Circle theatre.

Tovar Gets First Role

(Stated to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Lupita Tovar, new Mexican beauty of Fox, has been assigned to her first role. She will play a principal part in "Joy Street."
Gus S. Schlesinger, who has been appointed foreign general manager, with headquarters in Berlin, for First National and Warner Brothers.

Abraham Lincoln as impersonated by George Billings in a Pathé short celebrating February 12, in which the Great Emancipator again “delivers” his Gettysburg speech.

Rapidly ascendant is Anita Page, a comparatively new MGM featured player. In her latest role she is opposite Ramon Navarro in “The Flying Fleet.”

Believe in signs? Better believe in this one. Sally Blane, Wampas Baby Star and RKO player, is shown reassuring us that the familiar FBO has yielded to RKO in the everchanging spectacle of the films. Radio-Keith-Orpheum gives its initials to form the new name, RKO Productions.

From these proceedings shall come an international audience. Irene Bordoni, star of many musical shows, is pictured signing a contract with First National to make an audience with songs in five languages. With her are shown A. H. Mittlemann, her attorney (left) and Ned E. Depinet, FN general sales manager.
One may pardon Audrey Ferris for becoming an old-fashioned girl for sake of that dear old-fashioned occasion in honor of St. Valentine. But the occasion over, let Warner Brothers by all means be restored its ultra-modern flapper!

Above: Not only sound has got the picture makers up in the air these days. And here are Director Robert De Lacey and Cameraman Norman Devol about to hop off on shots for RKO's Tom Mix production, "The Drifters."

Left: Lucky numbers are 1-9-2-9 for Betty Boyd, it seems. Named a Wampas Baby Star, this lovely Educational comedienne is also being considered for the feminine lead in Lupino Lane's first all-audien.

A thrilling scene from "The Godless Girl," showing the spectacular burning of the reformatory. This production, personally directed by Cecil B. DeMille, has had showings in silent form, but will be released with sound and dialogue March 31. Lina Basquette has the role of the "godless girl," and other featured players are Marie Prevost, George Duryea, Noah Beery and Kate Price.

"Hollywood's Svenska Don Juan," Nils Asther is called in this film magazine from his home town, Stockholm. And the editor has yet to see him in M G M's "Wild Orchids!"
Above: The ravishing beauty of Venice. Here before the palace of the Doges is set a feast of splendor to whet the palates of theatregoers. It is a scene from the Cineroman production, "The Loves of Casanova," imported from Italy by M G M.

Right: Another son o' Erin to uphold the tradition of the Green in Hollywood. Cornelius Keefe has been cast as the son of Kelly in Universal's "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris"—and a handsome Kelly he is.

Magnolia and Ravenal, principal characters in "Show Boat," as portrayed by Laura La Plante, the star of this Universal adaptation of Edna Ferber's novel, and Joseph Schildkraut.

Seeking a clue in the mystery, "Strange Cargo," Pathe's first all-dialogue feature. The picture is an adaptation of the stage success, "The Missing Man," and the cast includes such stage players as George Barraud, Lee Patrick, June Nash, and Russell Gleason. Benjamin Glazer, the director, is co-author of the production, which will be released with "The Godless Girl" March 31.

A valentine fit for a king—yes, even King Public, capricious monarch so difficult to please! Those fond of coincidences will be happy that Leila Hyams has the feminine lead in M G M's "Alias Jimmy Valentine," starring William Haines.
Independent Must Win Goodwill or "Lose Theatre," Says Royster

LIKEWISE Producers Must Get Out of Rut That Bases 50 Per Cent of Films on Same Story, Declares Theatre Man

I NDEPENDENT exhibitors must awaken to the need of making use of every opportunity to build goodwill and create new patronage, or there will be heavy depletion in their ranks within two years, says N. L. Royster, president and treasurer of the Circle Amusement Company at Charlotte, N. C., in a letter to the HERALD-WORLD. At the same time, Royster charges that production has fallen into a rut and 50 per cent of the pictures being made today are practically identical as far as story is concerned.

M ORE attention to the child patron, both in production and in theatre exploitation, is suggested by Royster, whose letter follows:

"I visit an average of six or eight theatres each week, and have for the past six months, and having been an exhibitor, also secretary of the Theatres Owners Association of this state, I have taken the pains to look into many problems which confront not only the exhibitor, but the industry as a whole, and in treating them I do not mean to handle my hammer as a knocker, but rather to help if possible.

"We hear talk daily about the independent exhibitor being gobbled up and, in most instances, well he might be. It's his ruin if it's true, and unless he does more to forestall matters there will be less and less independent exhibitors during the next two years. I have visited towns where the exhibitor kept a clean theatre, put up the paper, sold and accepted the tickets, and he thought that he was doing all he could to run his theatre. I did not find the exhibitor working to sell the goodwill of various organizations, putting on children's matinees, giving benefits and talking to clubs and societies in his town to create a larger show-going public.

"I've gone into towns to play a picture on a percentage basis with theatres, and found on many occasions that the theatre possibly put out the paper in the lobby, but had not distributed other matter in advance which had been mailed him, neither had they even made a slide to run in advance.

W HAT About New Patronage?

"What are the exhibitors of this country doing to create new patronage for their theatres? They are doing everything, and yet we tell about how bad business is. There are far less people going to shows today than there were in the past five years. There must be a well grounded reason, in fact there are two or three reasons.

"First, we seem to have fallen into a rut where 50 per cent of the pictures are all the same. Just different personalities in them, but so far as story is concerned, they vary little. An underworld film is released and the market is flooded with them, until patrons get sick and disgusted with underworld subjects.

"You exhibitors, you exchange films, you produce, how many pictures do you see today on the screen that appeal to the children, unless a Western subject? How many pictures have you witnessed in the past three months which would you want your children to see each week? We are not catering enough to the children.

"Children draw the older folks, and when you cater to the women and children to get them back, the men.

"There is too much sameness in pictures, and this sameness is so pronounced that it is keeping business away. There are still hundreds of thousands of persons who want to go to a theatre and who really enjoy movies, but the radio, the automobile and various other agencies have lured them away, and the producers and theatre owners do not seem to be doing their best to get them.

"Let Manager Manage!

"Then again, the oft-discussed subject of 'rubber stamp' managers is before us. I have played several towns lately where the theatres were of the chain variety, and should you want to do something to insure more money, or gain any small sum, you would be told that it was not within the charter and that they had no authority to do so. This is one end of the industry where one of the worst mistakes is made. The manager of a theatre in Kalamazoo, or any other town, if he has any personality, should not have that personality submerged and hidden by some department head sitting at his desk in another city. He should at least be given the privilege of doing things in his own way, and have the opportu-

Important Films Open Sound Policies with Movie-Phone Equipment

S taff writers' reports of new films on viewing in Chicago include these:

M ILWAUKEE, Feb. 5.—Many of the theatres throughout Wisconsin are in a terrible fix. The reason is snow—snow and still more snow. For three weeks Wisconsin has been getting one snowfall after another, and one-half feet of snow throughout the state. Everything has been blocked up.

Theatres have not got shipments of films through, in many cases, and those that have, could only get a few people to play them to. The only thing to do was to get any old reel brought and use plenty of the contents, hoping that the next week a little black could be used.

Theatres in such cities as Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Green Bay, Appleton, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Milwaukee, Eau Claire, Madison, Wausau, St. Charles, Wisconsin Rapids, Rhinelander and Chippewa Falls—cities ranging in population from 20,000 to 75,000—played to only handfuls of people last month.

Coming on top of the influenza epidemic and keen competition, the bad weather is offering tough problems. But there doesn't seem to be any change in sight for at least another two weeks.

Newest Art Theatre in New York Is Attractive, But Entrances, Facade and Interior Still Lack Finishing Touches

As Elite Arrive for Dreary Opening

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—New York's newest art theatre for the motion picture opened here Friday night under difficulties. It is the Film Guild Cinema, 52 West Eighth street, in the Greenwich Village section of the city.

The theatre was not completed for the opening. The entrances were incompletely. The facade was unfinished. The interior was not ready.

They were still hammering in the projection room as a very swanky audience, including many of New York's leading artisians, came in in evening dress.

At 8:30, when the performance was supposed to start, the first visitors were taken down the aisles to their seats. They were given another surprise: the heat wasn't on and the theatre was utterly cold. Few ventured to take off their overcoats and one smart patron sat with his derby on.

There was much gazing. The theatre is in the stage-show, and the audience is invited to be sympathetic. It was designed by Frederick Kiesler to conform to a camera. The aperture for the screen was circular, like the holder of a lens.

The sides were dark walls; these are the walls on which (together with the ceiling) accompanying motion pictures may be shown to make the picture in front more realistic. How this will work out one couldn't tell, for it wasn't ready.

It is a pity that the opening could not have been postponed until the theatre was ready to be shown.

As it happened the affair will have to go down in history as a rather uncomfortable evening of cold and clammy, with dull and dreary pictures, and only such excitement as was provided by the manager, Symon Gould who stood in the back of the house and shouted orders at the help, much to the annoyance of his patrons.

Members Turn Out 620 Strong at Fox Club Ball; Stage Show Big Feature

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The third annual dinner and ball of the Fox Film Corporation Athletic Club, at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel Saturday evening, brought out the full membership of 630 and their guests. From 8 o'clock, when dinner was served, until dawn, after the last dance, every face radiated the happiness and pleasure they had derived. Jack Loeb, booking manager for Fox, arranged the usually interesting entertainment.

Leopoldine, the vocalist, and Jesse Kaye, produced a two-hour show that would be hard to surpass anywhere. Talent was enlisted from the Everglades Cafe, the Fox theatres, Jamaica, Ridgewood and Audubon theatres. Joe Herbert was master of ceremonies. Leo Henning led Duke York's orchestra in the stage-show, while Jack Roth's orchestra furnished the dance music.

Music Broadcast from Mouth Of Jolson Cutout Is Good Idea

Were any proof required for our recent statement that there are as many ways of successfully exploiting one's pictures as there are enterprising exhibitors to tackle the job, one need not go any farther than the campaigns sent in by theatre men to show how they have put over "The Singing Fool." This third article on exploitation of the Al Jolson picture is concentrated in a letter from W. C. Kyle, Jr., of the Ritz theatre at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

A highlight was an arrangement of a Jolson head cutout in the mouth and the playing of all the songs of the picture.

Kyle writes:

"I have been a reader of your magazine for a long time, but this is my first letter to you. I want to tell you how we put the 'The Singing Fool' over, here in Tuscaloosa, for a whole week . . . the only picture ever to play here that long. The usual run is three days.

'On a week in advance, we used 'Sonny Boy' as an overture on the non-synchronous apparatus and announced what it was all about through the 'mike' we have. And also ran the Song Slides in one of the other houses. We had several window teips on 'Sonny Boy' with the music device, and the Police always help on any picture. Heralds on the picture were given out two weeks in advance at two houses, and window cards put in the store windows about two weeks in advance.

'The newspaper ad was handled very good advantage by Manager C. B. Grimes in the week and the Manager of the picture (the University of Alabama is located here), and also in some out-of-town papers. This is another reason for so much of that trade.

A New Cutout Idea

"During the run of the picture, we had a cutout of Jolson's head on the top of the marquee, taken from the 24-sheet, and cut the mouth out and put a piece of red cloth behind it. The face was kept from spooling the looks of the cutout. We borrowed a Columbia Kolster from a music dealer and placed the loudspeaker behind the mouth of the cutout. Then padded it to throw all the sound through the hole that had been cut in it. We played all the songs from the picture, and it looked as if Jolson had actually had the huge head was singing. This attracted a large crowd every time we turned the machine on . . . and then we would tell them about the picture through a 'mike' we had connected on the machine.

'The second night of the run, traffic was blocked by the mob trying to get in to see and hear the picture. And I have to say that the talking pictures are no good!

'I have read so many good stunts of how pictures have been put over in your magazine, that I wanted to send this in to you . . . maybe there's something in it that will help some other exhibitor at some time. Anyhow, that's the way we broke all records in Tuscaloosa, and played the picture a whole week, too.

"In closing I would like to say . . . I am for the talkies and hope we can get more like 'The Singing Fool,' 'Interference,' and 'The Home Towners.'"

A practicable idea and well worth adopting!

"Broadway Melody," First All-Audien of M G M, Opens Friday

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—"Broadway Melody," M G M picture which brought new contracts to two of the principals because of their outstanding work in the first all-audien of the company, opens Friday night at the Astor theatre. Bessie Love and Charles King have new contracts. Anita Page also is said to have done particularly meritorious acting in the picture.

The story is written by Edmund Goulding, who laid the scenes in the theatrical world so that the musical numbers, instead of being dragged in by main force, as often is the ease in musical comedy, come about naturally enough as part of the acting lives of the characters. They sing in rehearsal and in their stage appearances shown in the film as part of the story.

Harry Beaumont, who directed "Our Dancing Daughters," was director of "The Broadway Melody," Technicolor also is used.

Sarah Y. Mason wrote the continuity. The music is by Nacio Herb Brown, and the lyrics are by Arthur Freed. Norman Houston and Jack Yellen, author of "Is Zat So?" and "The Shannons of Broadway," wrote the dialogue.

Additional San Francisco Houses Wired for Audien

(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 5.—The installation of audien equipment in suburban houses is going ahead at a rapid rate and several theatres will offer this form of entertainment for the first time during the next two weeks. The Castro theatre will be the first of a group to go over to sound, followed by the Coliseum and Alexandria. Equipment is in place in the Fox theatre and will be placed in use as soon as suitable pictures can be had. At Oakland, across the bay, the Grand Lake theatre has launched an audien program, having installed Vitaphone and Movietone apparatus, and the U. C. theatre, in Berkeley, is also in readiness for sound.

Phonofilm Opens
At Forum and Three Arkansas Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 5.—The Forum theatre largest of the Consolidated Amusements Company chain, opened last week with DeForest Phonofilm talking equipment.

The Thurston at Rochester, N. Y., under the management of Al Root, has installed DeForest Phonofilm projecting equipment and opened last week with an all-sound program. The first showings were attended by a number of upstate exhibitors to hear the device, as this is the first installation which has been made in upper New York state by General Talking Pictures Corporation.

The Majestic at El Dorado, Ark., is showing a complete sound and audience program with DeForest Phonofilm as the projecting apparatus. The Majestic is the first of three houses owned by the States Theatres, Inc., which has contracted with General Talking Pictures Corporation for Phonofilm equipment. The other two are the Ozark at Fayetteville and the Strand at Jonesboro.

Full Synchronized Music Service for Sound Is Provided

A complete service for reproducing synchronized sound effects is now being offered by the Synchronized Music Company, with headquarters at 625 South Michigan boulevard, Chicago. This service not only provides a full cue service for all pictures playing in a theatre over a period of one year, but also includes the following equipment:

Duotone reproducing device, 200 selected records, two dynamic speakers, record cabinet, cueing cabinet and classification record book.

In an adjoining column is a reproduction of a part of the first half of the musical cue sheet for Universal's "The Man Who Laughs.

This shows not only the type of music provided, culled from the classics, but also the number of each record, the exact time it is to be played and the expression of each record.

What to play, when to play it, and how to play it—then the apparatus for playing it and a complete filing system. That is the service.

Radio Announcers To Play in Audions

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Now comes the radio as a source of Vitaphone talent. Gerald King and Bill Ray, former radio announcers at station KFWB in Los Angeles, have been signed by the company to play speaking roles in "The Time, The Place and The Girl," which Howard Bortherton is directing from the stage success by Frank R. Adams and Will Hough.

Another discovery traceable to the radio was made by J. L. Warner, when he heard Carlotta King sing on the air some months ago.

Dorothy Burgess Is Given Long Term Fox Contract

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Dorothy Burgess, Broadway stage player, has just been placed under a long-term contract by the Fox Film Corporation. Her performance in "In Old Arizona" as Raoul Walsh-Irving Cummings outdoor talking film, now at the Roxy, was not only her first acting in dialogue pictures, but her initial appearance before any motion picture camera.

Twelve Pacent Reproducers Placed
In Theatres; Two Devices Are Made
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Twelve complete reproducer systems made by the Pacent Reproducer Corporation, with factories in New Jersey and Connecticut, have been installed in theatres, the company announced this week, including the Paramount, Chicago, seating 1,800; Garden (1,100), Charleston, S. C.; Lincoln
(1,800), Union City, N. J.; Montclair (1,400), Montclair, N. J.; Lexington (1,200), Lexington, N. C.; Concord (1,200), Concord, N. C.; Dixwell (1,400), New Haven, Conn., and Sanders (1,600), Brooklyn.

The Pacent Reproducer Corporation, of which L. G. Pacent is president, is producing two complete outfits for the disc method. It was stated that a film attachment would soon be available also.

The smaller outfit, known as the Model
2 MDA, is designed for theatres having seating capacity of not more than 2,000.
This is double channel equipment throughout, with a spare amplifier in reserve for each amplifier used. No batteries are used in any part of the equipment. The amplifier system works from any 110 volt, 60 cycle alternating current outlet.

All the amplifiers are in a single steel cabinet, with switching apparatus on top.
To swing over from amplifiers in use to reserve amplifiers, it is only necessary to throw three switches and the reserve system operates at once.

The question of uniformity of sound throughout the house is solved, Pacent stated, by the special dynamic speaker arrangement with correct-sized baffle boards.

The other Pacent outfit is known as the Model "4MDA" and is designed for houses having seating capacities of from 2,000 to 4,000 seats. Its essential features are the same as those of the "2MDA" outfit, but there are differences in amplifiers and speakers. Like the other Pacent system, it is all electric and operates with no batteries of any kind. Amplification is double chanel throughout, with a spare amplifier in reserve for everyone in use.

Service stations have been set up at 30 points. The equipment is sold outright, and is shipped F.O.B. New York with the installation charge extra.

The "2MDA" for houses of not more than 2,000 seats sells complete for $3,500, plus installation, F.O.B. New York. The
"4MDA" outfit for houses up to 4,000 seats, sells for $4,500, plus installation, F.O.B.
New York. The Pacent Reproducer Corporation also has under development a line of smaller reproducer outfits and accessory equipment.

The "2MDA" outfit costs between 3c and 5c an hour to operate for the complete installation, while the large outfit costs on the average between 5c and 7c an hour.
An invitation to the blind, "written" in the Braille system, was unusual form of exploitation that brought 450 sightless to a free showing of "In Old Arizona," Fox's first outdoor all-audience at the Criterion in Los Angeles. Bob Duman and Dave Markel handled the campaign, which also included a "talking" Marathon. Part of the Braille letter is reproduced. Note the "raised dots" and the "sunken dots."

Changing of Non-Synchronous Device Is Aim of New Scoredisc

NEW YORK, Feb. 5— A device for transformation of a non-synchronous machine into one which will reproduce a synchronized score with any picture projected in connection with the new Scoredisc is announced by Arthur J. Abrams, president of Scoredisc Service Corporation.

"With a public growing more educated to what might be expected for sound accompaniment it has become increasingly harder to satisfy it with the sound accompaniment possible with the use of the non-synchronous device," Abrams said.

"As far back as 1912 I produced in that and succeeding years a number of pictures released with a disc sound accompaniment of necessity cruder than those now in use but operated on the same principles.

"The nearest approach for the exhibitor to a synchronous score, using a non-synchronous machine and record library, was to provide a German selection of musical numbers for a picture with a German locale, or Spanish for a Spanish production. Then again he had to start from the beginning of his record and most of them generally start with an introduction or play the last few bars of music of the piece as sort of prologue. Likewise there are many mechanical difficulties arising through the fact that the person using a non-synchronous machine and trying to give an approximate synchronized score never had a definite indication on his record as to where to set down or lift up the needle, thus leaving a 'bar' hanging in the air each time a changeover is made.

"After experimenting for some time I believe I have found a solution to those troubles.

Heavy Cardboard Instrument

"My Scoredisc is a heavy cardboard disc with a shaped instrument so devised that the operator of a non-synchronous machine can, with perfect ease and a minimum of effort, produce as near a perfect synchronized score for a picture as is possible with any but the score and picture recorded simultaneously in the studio.

"On this Scoredisc are cutouts numbered consecutively, which, when followed in their numerical order, will produce a synchronous score. This arrangement is achieved through the fact that each production is cued by an expert using the same system in vogue for musical arrangements for silent pictures. The difference lies in the fact that, instead of musical suggestions contained in a silent cue picture cue sheet, this expert works up his score and then delves into his library of records for the exact music to be played.

Check from Scoredisc

"The result is that when an exhibitor receives the library of records which we will supply he will have a repertoire which will suffice for his needs. In cases where the particular record called for on the cue sheet is not in his library it will be supplied by us without extra charge.

"All that is necessary is that the non-synchronous machine operator check his Scoredisc before the run of the picture, picking out those records called for by number on his Scoredisc. Having arranged his records in order the only requirement is that he follow the numerical order called for on the Scoredisc.

"The arrangement of these discs includes cutouts into which is inserted the needle. These cutouts are of a size corresponding to the amount of time the particular portion of the record is to be played. At the start of the picture the operator places the Scoredisc over the regular record, places his needle in cutout No. 1 and follows through in his cutouts numbered consecutively from that point. In addition to the cues supplied by number there also is a description of the scene to which the selections are to be applied.

"The Scorediscs for pictures are supplied as part of the service and can be destroyed after the picture has been played. The question has been asked from several quarters.

16 from Paramount Will Have Only Film System, Says Kent

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Sixteen of Paramount's long and short feature releases from February 1 to April 30 will have only the film system of sound, Sanford Annan announced last week following the return of S. R. Kent, general manager, from a month's survey of the sound situation on the West Coast.

"The film system will prevail," Kent declared, "Surface noises and scratches which now are in records as a result of production and reproduction are eliminated in the film recording method.

Highest Quality Essential

"Not all pictures have been made by the film method of sound recording, and it is possible some of our pictures in the future will be handled with discs. However, such pictures will be released only when their sound reproduction reaches the excellence attained by the film system, and in any event they will be held to a minimum.

"Growth of talking pictures in public favor can come only from the highest standards of quality, and from what I have seen and heard in Hollywood, that can only be obtained by the film-reproducing method."

Jack Ford to Direct “Khyber Rifles” on Stone’s Adaptation
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—John Ford will begin the production of “The King of the Khyber Rifles” next week for Fox. It is a story that has been adapted to the screen by Jack Stone. Although it is a dialogue picture there will be a silent negative as well. There and a half reels of the picture will be devoted to speaking lines.

In the cast are Victor MacLaglen, Myrna Loy, Mitchell Levis, Roy D’Arcy, and Walter Long.

Stone has recently completed work on “Fugitives.”

Trend of Suit Indicates Jetta Goudal Will Win
Large Port of $101,000
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—Jetta Goudal’s suit against the Cecil B. De Mille Corporation today indicated she has good chances of obtaining a big portion of the $101,000 she seeks.

Paul Stein, director, added much to the defense testimony a day or two ago when he showed that Miss Goudal refused to submit to a dictation from the company for which she worked. Stein told of trying to shoot scenes and how the company had instructed him and drawn-out controversies with the star, who wished to exact scenes her own way. “Stubbornness and cussedness” were charges brought against her in the testimony. William Howard, director, said she often held up the company because of tardiness on the set.

What’s a “Heavy” Sans Mustache?
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—Is a mustache the most important characteristic of a “heavy” gentleman? Robert Ellis thinks so. When Ellis played straight leads on the stage and screen he was clean shaven. As soon as he decided to go in for the heavier type roles he grew a mustache.

William Powell is another gentleman “heavy” with a mustache. John Gilbert always wears a mustache in his pictures—his roles usually border on the heavy lead. Adolph Menjou is another actor who always wears a mustache.

Ellis is playing the role of Steve Grandle in “Broadway.”

Fox Bids High for Lead Spot
In Production; 9 Units Busy
Internationally Known Figures Facing Cameras; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Second in Attempt to Turn Out Scheduled Films; Hughes Still on 1927 Opus
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—Fox bids for first place among the most diligent picture factories and printeries with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer fast on its heels. The Sheehan forces are represented in great array with many of the industry’s foremost figures lined up before the batteries of cameras today.

Janet Gaynor, Lois Moran, Charlie Farrell and Bob Armstrong have only in the past day or so gone into new roles. Mary Astor is doubling back and forth between “Lady from Hell” and “New Year’s Eve.” Mary Duncan and Sue Carol; Henry B. Walthall and Louise Dresser are on the job early and late.

Borzage, Cummings and Blystone, aces, are in the canvas chairs with the megaphones working.

Chaney is finishing a difficult job at Culver City. He has been tediously emoting in “East is East” for several days. Estelle Taylor is there. She provides the more scenic portion of an otherwise laborious drama.

Seiter Directing Corinne

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall are again at it as a team at Burbank. Corinne Griffith is again in the harness with William A. Seiter showing her how to conduct herself on the set.

Harold Lloyd has the spectacles out. He is working harder to get a title for his current picture than he is on anything else. Names for pictures are difficult. Good ones.

Jannings and Bow are in the grease paint. They are conscientious workers.

Swanson Next Week

Swanson hopes to complete her picture some day. She is using every known means to get it finished this week. (No, she won’t.)

Tryon (Glenn) and Holt are spending little leisure time. The latter is working under Frank Capra’s direction at Columbia.

Many of these people are doing “double title” work. Hughes says he continues to call the picture “Hell’s Angels.” His capital is entirely his own and he hopes it’s nobody’s business if he spends the next five years making the picture and he believes it will be worth shooting the world when it’s finished.

Alexander Korda is directing a troupe at Burbank that will hold interest for untold thousands because of memoirs his actors will inspire. He calls his story “The Squall” and in the cast are such old timers as Zasu Pitts, Alice Joyce and George Hackathorne. Knute Erickson is also in a prominent role. Loretta Young provides the romance and Carrol Nye is in an opposite part.

Fejos Must Click

Paul Fejos is taking “Broadway” very much at heart. Universal is counting on him for a superior piece of work in this production and it remains for him to do it right or go back to the old country. The company is giving him co-operation seldom realized by any director. It has been equalled in only a few cases in Hollywood’s history, notably the case of “Sunrise” when Fox proffered Murnau the resources of the entire studio.

RKO studios is holding the attention of outside producers, directors, stars and writers. There are very few people of consequence who are not wondering what the next step will be. Two companies are shooting there at present. Norman Kerry is in “The Woman I Love” and Dane, Allan, Hurst and Steeper are co-starring in “Voice of the Storm.”
Two Premieres on Coast; Beaumont Scores with "Broadway Melody"

"The Divine Lady" Is Historical Tale Starring Corinne Griffith Without Dialogue Scenes; Gleeson Promotes Again

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—This community enjoyed two gala premieres this week. It's a question which was the most gala although it is offered the most enjoyable picture. "Broadway Melody" ably directed by contribution was Corinne Griffith in Grand Pre, has cost more than $50,000 and will be burned as a climax of "Evangeline."

Bill Bloch has worked his way up in Warner Brothers studio. I suddenly and recently found him in an executive position. He is publicity director and making a success of it.

He tells me that one of the noticeable changes he has found in studios since talking pictures have arrived is the method of matching music and pictures. Speaking of the incident was simple, according to my friend, Bill. Scenes of a picture are not shot, whether you know it or not, in the sequence in which they appear on the screen. A young man may work in a scene on Friday in the drawing room and it will be the camera that follows him from the drawing room to the dining room. There was no trick about matching the scenes until the audio devices were born.

But actors have found trouble recently in keeping their throats at the same pitch Saturday during, before Huxking develops. Other melodramas, please.

Bloch told me that Howard Brother-Brother has put his casts on strict training diets during their working schedules. Their smoking is regulated at all times and other excesses are cut down to a minimum.

 Follow Manner of Stage Productions

Christie is following the manner of Broadway productions in building his productions. Harry Hayden is creating a half dozen or more special songs numbers for the Eddie Dowling starring production, "Broadway Bound." Songs are built strong through the scenario of the story. Dowling, of course, will sing the Hayden numbers.

Stahl Plans Film Similar to "Zepplin"

A story from John M. Stahl informs this department that Stahl is preparing a scenario that will be an actual companion picture for "Zepplin" and will be called "The Lost Zeppelin." The sales department is well pleased, says Mr. Stahl, with the idea of "Zepplin," and it wants another to follow it. The production department, say we, is also well pleased and wants to make another grandiose production on the order of the air picture it started some time ago.

Talk of Denny Leaving Universal Held Baseless; Next Film Will Be Audien

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—Reginald Denny is not leaving Universal after he finishes two more pictures, nor is he having difficulties with the Laemmie organization because of his desire to get away from "movie momentous Troubles." On the contrary, the comedy star's present relations with his employers are declared to be harmonious.

Reports have been current that Denny's next option is not to be exercised by Universal because of a friction between the former and studio officials over the type of stories he has been given.

Carl Laemmie, it was learned, declares the rumors unjust to both himself and Denny. The latter has been vacating the past two weeks at his mountain retreat and yesterday, upon his return, issued a statement reiterating his pleasant association with Universal.

Denny and Edward J. Montague, scenario editor-in-chief, will sign away the star's next vehicle and the latter is to personally supervise the writing of the scenario in its present form. The production to be made as a talking picture under the direction of William Kraft.

Cecil DeMille Launches "Dynamite," First Audien After 54 Silent Films

(Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Feb. 5.—Cecil B. DeMille has commenced work at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on "Dynamite," his first all-talking production, after making 54 silent pictures. DeMille went on the MGM sound stages during the afternoon after hearing reports that his rehearsals proceeded faster than originally figured and actual recording has started.

The new DeMille film is being written by Jeanie Macpherson. The dialogue is the work of John Howard Lawson, author of "Processional!" Gladys Unger, noted dramatists, and Jeanie Macpherson.

Talking Pictures to Help "Legit" Stage and Stars, Declares Jack L. Warner

(Hollywood, Calif.)—Talking pictures will prove a boon to the "legit" stage, which was about the opinion as to how the prosperous era, says Jack L. Warner, producer of Warner Brothers.

"Dynamite" was written by Jeanie Macpherson. The dialogue is the work of John Howard Lawson, author of "Procencal," Gladys Unger, noted dramatists, and Jeanie Macpherson.

Public Must Pay
For Autographed
Photos of Stars
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—The public hereafter will have to pay for autographed photos of players from the industry. The huge expense is the reason for the decision, as anounced this week by Fred W. Beetson, executive vice president of the A. M. P. P.
"Motion picture players sincerely appreciate the keen and friendly interest in their work shown by the written requests for autographed photographs," Beetson said. "However, the expense involved in sending these photographs without charge has grown to such tremendous proportions that it has been found compulsory to establish a new policy of asking those who wish such photographs to bear part of the expense involved.
"Until the new policy becomes known to the public the players of several of the major studios will reply to requests for photographs with a neatly typed card thanking the admirer for his interest and saying that an autographed photograph will be immediately mailed upon receipt of a small sum of money. Ten cents is asked for a 3 x 7 inch autographed photo, 25 cents for an 8 x 10 and $1 for an 11 x 14 inch enlargement. It is my belief that other players and studios will adopt this same schedule of prices."

5,680 Lines of Newspaper Ads To Put Over Zeppelin Audien

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—An advertising campaign, totaling 5,680 lines in the Hearst newspapers, has been arranged by M.G.M. for "Across the Atlantic via Zeppelin," talking picture, featuring Lady Grace Drummond Hay and Dr. Hugo von Eckener.

This campaign consists of a series of ten advertisements for advance and current advertising. The ads vary in width from two columns to five columns and in language from a total of 480 lines to 640 lines an advertisement. The total lineup of the complete campaign is 5,680 lines, and M.G.M. calls it the largest and most comprehensive campaign ever placed behind any short feature.

The many interesting angles of the picture are forcefully portrayed and described in this series of advertisements with their ten pieces of copy appearing in all Hearst newspapers throughout the country.

Complete mats and proofs of the entire series of ads are available to all exhibitors of the picture in cities other than those in which the Hearst newspapers are published, M.G.M. says.

"Across the Atlantic via Zeppelin" is a talking picture of the thrilling, world-famous flight of the Graf Zeppelin from Germany to America. It features Lady Drummond Hay, the only woman aboard the ship on the western flight and the first of her sex to fly the Atlantic from East to West, and Dr. Hugo von Eckener, commander of the great ship on its epic voyage. The production is scheduled for release Saturday.

Louise Fazenda to Star in Two Short Audiens for Christie

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Louise Fazenda will appear in two Christie Talking Plays for Paramount release. The first will start just as soon as a suitable vehicle has been found.

Miss Fazenda has been one of the busiest of the talking stars since the vocal pictures came into prominence. She has appeared in Warners' "The Terror," followed by "Noah's Ark" and "Stark Mad," and is in a talking role in Warners' special, "The Desert Song," She is also appearing now in First National's "The House of Sorrows," and it is after this production that she will go to Christie for one of the Short Talking Plays.

Before the first of the plays with Miss Fazenda is made, Christie will film "Meet the Missing," with James Gleason, Broadway author and star, and Lucille Webster Gleason, production of which starts this week.

The short play in which Louise Fazenda will be featured will be the second of the Christie series with a woman star. Christie Talking Plays have already been scheduled with such male stars as James Gleason, Raymond Griffith, Raymond Hatton, Sam Hardy, Charlie Crapewin, and one has been made featuring Lois Wilson.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Granada
Week Ending February 8

Marks Brothers presented a new stage vehicle this week called, "Speed Shows," a term that has originated in the press department of this organization. As the title implies Speed Show is a stage entertainment delivered with the velocity of an express train, is the newspaper ad read. The first of the series of these Speed Shows is called, "At Ciro's in Paris" and serves as a prologue to the "Singing Fool." It opens in full stage setting in typical cabaret atmosphere. There are more than sixty people on the stage at all times. Ejected as an end one artist succeeds another in a fast routine of novelty.

Benny Meroff's has supplied the music while Marie Thal directs them and Earl Rickard is the master of ceremonies. Earl is a typical cafe funster cut and is apt to be a little too insulting to the house audience. His talk no doubt will be toned down before this engagement ends and does not in any way discount his ability for this type of work. When Marie Thal finds out he is in a theatre he will probably project more modestly.

There were three specialty artists who really did splendidly and they are Harriet Hutchins, a sort of Humphrey Pollard type, who sang "I Saw Down and Go Boom," and danced in an eccentric way. Pinkey Left, who was the only member allowed an encore through his wonderful acrobatic and eccentric steps, and Lillian Dawson, a charming blonde, whose personality and manner of delivery put over a neat ballad called, "I'll Never Ask For More."

The Granada ballet, headed by Mona Dell, also came in for their share of novelty dancing. Marie Thal and two other boys of the band were also called upon to do some jazz gavoting.

It is a pity the management did not make this entertainment to unfold itself, and during its entire performance, it never lagged a moment. It is quite an idea to replace the long stage shows when there happens to be a long motion picture on the bill. It has everything in it that you would require of a regular Broadway presentation.

The finale was cleverly woven into the opening of the show with the old of Helen Keller singing "Sonny Boy" in a comedy vein, and then stepped behind the screen curtain as the house lights dimmed while he recited in a serious way a recitation from the song, as the introductory titles were flashed on the screen of Al Jolson in the "Singin' Fool."

Benny Meroff, who revolves with Charles Kaiser at this theatre and the Marboro, was given a vacation during the run of the Jolson film. From all indications of this performance it seems that he wasn't missed much. No comment on the merits of his not being in the show and that proves that a change now and then relieves the monotony.

Des Moines Capitol
Week Ending January 25

Paul Spor, master of ceremonies here will leave at the end of the week to take up his duties in a new theatre in Toledo, Ohio. His welcome during the past week has been sufficiently generous to assure him that his leaving is a matter of regret to local theatre-popes. Meanwhile he presents "Wonderful Girls," the tabloid musical comedy, with the usual charm and has a great deal to do with the smooth working out of the show.

A feature of the show going from the deck of a steamer on its way to New York. Ths sketchy little plot carries a thread of continuity throughout the play with Helene Holler, soprano, Willard Hall and George Rilee. Miss Holler.

Foremost Experts Furnish Advice To the Trade

Film Industry Claims Herald-World As the Leading Publication

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

It is gratifying to notice the considerable interest that is being shown this department of the HERALD-WORLD and its supplement in the BETTER THEATRES. It is the chief desire of the writer and the utmost purpose of these publications to render the readers an exclusive service that no other publication in existence can ever hope to approach. That has been the foremost thought in the minds of the creative staff of these two publications when the plan formulated that such a medium was needed.

Since the inception of the Herald-World, its editorial departments have always led the way for originality and helpful suggestions. More ideas have grown into large service departments of which Presentation Acts in this publication and Music in the Theatre, its monthly section in Better Theatres, are two of the most powerful departments ever conceived by the publisher of the combined trade papers. Its contents have been instrumental in influencing thousands of theatres in presenting to their public better ways of conceiving entertainment and better artists to create them.

Reliable information and straight forward articles have placed the Herald-World in a most unique position and as that of a faithful advisor to the entire motion picture industry. Clean cut ethics and independent of any factors, are two of the primary reasons why the Herald-World is the leading motion picture trade journal of today, and also the reason for the equal success of its subsidiaries. Herald-World Has the Confidence of the Entire Motion Picture Business

When a publication has gained the confidence of its subscribers and readers and has the wholehearted support of its advertisers, because of its unrivaled merit and qualifications, it then becomes an institution and serves its field as the official instrument. By that we mean no statement is accepted by the industry at large as being authentic or definite until it is published by the Herald-World. And no statement is published by the Herald-World until its staff and editorial chiefs are assured that it is definite and from reliable sources.
We wish to quote a few instances whereby the publication of ideas have brought forth innumerable replies and queries to its writers from every section of the land. For instance, Harold Daniels, featured artist at the Buckingham theatre, Chicago, made a suggestion in an article by-line in the December 22 issue of Better Theatres, to the effect that organizers should get together and exchange ideas and a reprint of a similar article in the Herald-World of Better Theatres. Francis Farney, featured artist in the Kimo theatre in Albuquerque, New Mexico, offered to send this suggestion by supplementing instructions on how to build a portable console, and states in a recent letter to the writer that he figured on doing so fast it would take forever to answer them.

William J. Cowdrey, a featured organist from Parkersburg, West Virginia, claims that the entire magazine is but a corner of a book of ideas, and through it he has been able to compile a scrap book containing the items and archetypal concept of recipes, Cowdrey, as well as Kenneth T. Wright of Menominee, Michigan, and Roy E. Churchill of Colorado Springs, and many other organists, further state that each and every one of the countries in the country should take advantage of the opportunities offered by Better Theatres in contributing his or her ideas for a special article.

Publication is Open for Exchange of Ideas

This point has been struck upon before by the writer, not only through this department, but also at an organist convention held in Chicago recently, and again the same privilege is extended to every one of you who has an idea that may be of use to other organists.

Beginning with the next issue of Better Theatres we shall carry a continuation of the "Organ Solos" column now running as a regular feature of the magazine, and other features that may be of interest for the progress of music in the theatre.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION AUTS—To the Editor: Since you published my letter and Sam Joe Alexander, the theatre in our town, has been sending letters for instructions wanted, have been pouring in. It seems now and it seems like a good idea to me to have some kind of a letter that was sent to the editor. The extent of mail sent to me is a big surprise. It would take me forever to cover all of it with instructions and drawing, so I have been here at the theatre almost all night writing up the necessary plans to send to you, dear folks. I see you see it. I believe I have made these instructions plain enough for any one to carry out and have put a portable within reach of every one that can be said to be well equipped with this matter. Philadelphia Stanley
Week Ending January 19

Dave Apollon's Russian Revue, with the Goodell Twins, Irene Smith and the Manhattan Orchestra, gave an excellent and entertaining performance at the Stanley this week. Apollon is a versatile artist who, in addition to acting as master of ceremonies, is a wizard at dancing and playing, the piano, banjo and accordion equally well.

Dave Apollon gives a remarkable exhibition of his skill as an instrumentalist by playing a mandolin solo with one hand and a piano accompaniment with the other. This number is accorded a hearty round of applause.

He then introduces the Manhattan orchestra, consisting of eighteen Philadelphia boys in elaborate costumes all playing stringed instruments. They play a "blue" number and the Goodell Twins more striking than ever in red with rhinestone vests, dance a brilliant number accompanied by both the Manhattan and the Goodell Twins. Irene Smith who appears in male costume, creates a sensation with her version of "Mississippi Mud," being recalled repeatedly but she responds only with a brief speech of thanks.

The Manhattan Orchestra gives an interpretation of "Rhapsody in Blue" after which one of the members sings "Indian Love Song" in a very pleasing voice. He is brought back for a little speech by much applause.

The Goodell Twins in black velvet tights with rhinestone ornaments and white hands produce a new dance, leading into a finale in which all in the orchestra participate.

Minneapolis, Minnesota
Week Ending February 1

"Barrel Organ," featuring a barrel organ and his orchestra appeared at the stage show of Barrels, in which a Dorothy Berke Girls danced the "Flamingo," sal small then announced the different performers, the best, and the largest gong player of all (literally speaking). Paul Ash then entered on a barrel organ, to great and enjoyable applause. A "Hot tamale" (Jack North) and his banjo started a round of applause. The barrel organ, and banjo, then started in comedy singing. He earned an encore. The or- chestra, in a pretty Spanish setting, was then led by sal small, and "El Gato," the barrel organ and banjo player was called "El Gato," Paul Small pleased with a vocal solo. A special request number, "I'll Get By," was brought in, but the audience, interrupted by Bobby Gilbert, supposedly a violinist in a band. Bobby wanted to play a duet with the orchestra, as a surprise. He started in with a song that he calls "El Gato," and another one with "El Gato," Joe and Jane McKenna, pleased with their comedy dancing. Rense and Evelyn then danced a fine tango number, "The Barrel Organ." The Ber- ke Girls played cornetina.

The last feature for the night at this house is a hoofer show and usually, has an added attraction. Sal Ash announced the added attraction. Ben Blue had a great hoorah for a buttage when he sang "Sonny Boy," and other comedy situations at are received very well. This act was rather good but it pleased the audience. The entire ensemble entered as Paul Small sang "chiquita" for the closing number.

New Orleans Saenger
Week Ending February 1

Just why the Public unit was named "Babies on the Run" is difficult to determine, but the only variation which can be given is probably the gentleman to the right of the baby. Sleeping ears was called into conference with the producer and gave him a hot one, as the only section of Broadway shown is flaring one.

of Eddie Cantor, Al Jolson and others of lesser name. The entertainers are experts at the arts of the audiences throughout all the week. De Carol, billed as a comedian, does some wonderful balancing with a bottle and a balance stands over the stage, though it wobbles a bit occasionally and the main meal is the magnificent tambourine. He is assisted in his act by a shapely lady who forgot to dress from her waist down. The audience has been seen to be composed of girls as each of the nine girls is an accomplished dancer and dancing in union produced pretty effect, male dress only as bad by lavish dress and the lights. After sitting through this part of the performance, one can tell, they could never do it again with ingoring too-near.

The presentation includes the singing of "Sonny Boy," "Sonny Boy II" and "Sonny Boy III." The girls are growing in popularity daily.

Ben Phillips, conducting the Saenger Grand Or- chestra, assisted by John Hammond at the organ ushered."Among My Souvenirs," which completes a musical program.

Notwithstanding the name of the unit, hour of old enjoyment is given those fortunate enough to end and Ben Black is entitled to the credit.

San Francisco Warfield
Week Ending January 31

The management of the Warfield is continuing its policy of featuring screen stars in its stage shows and this week presents Lina Basquette, who ably demonstrates just why she was at one time selected for the Follies. She offers a couple of dances and ends with a curtain speech that must be extemporaneous.

Horse Holdf's hand offers the "Orphans Over- ture" from the pit and the curtain goes up on a scene with the cold stuff coming down steadily.

Sixteen girls in white roll on roller skates in Panchon and MacGregor "Rolling On," and come through some marvelously effective evolutions, performing drill and dance numbers. Maxine Evelyn, dancing roller skater, offers some fancy steps, and there are tumbuling and acrobatic performances that would be considered splendid, even without the en- tertainments of skate shows.

Horse Holdf, as master of ceremonies, introduces number by number, with a comedy "Sing us a song, boys," in which the boys hastily don odd costumes and offer solos.

The curtain goes up again on a new scene, two Russian costume tumble and balance on skates, while a third turns somersault and does seemingly impossible stunts, while the girls flit about as butterflies, with some of them posing against the curtain at the rear.

At the Warfield the orchestra offer a special song about Lina Basquette and the bronte beauty does a dance number phase of the "singing a couple of numbers in a"... the.

"Wild and Woolly" is the subject of the stage presentation this week of the Fleischbein Brothers' Joy Boys, and how they put it over. There's lots of Whoopoo, western atmosphere, etc., and plenty original, too, folks.

The scene opens up with the Joy Boys, all dressed as Western ranchers and cowboys, sitting in the open alongside an adobe shack. In the background are the Sierras, Rockies, Andes or whatever you want to call them, all lighted up. A real outdoor scene. From time to time the Chinese cook, who later turns out to be Joe Weng, slinger, comes out on the porch of the adobe hut. He's dressed in blue with a white cap and apron.

The Torney Girls do a fancy stepping western trot and they're dressed in appropriate western costumes. Plenty of snap to their work, and then in blow Al Belasco, and oh, boy, what a pair of wooly chaps this lad has on. Then comes Bob, Bob and Bobby on the stage. Two men and a clever dog. They do a lot of acrobatic stuff and throw things around, but it's all clever. And the dog sure contributes his part, too. All get a big hand from the audience. Whoopoo!

Al and the Joy Boys then show us what they can do with "I Travatore" in the jazz version. Pretty hot, and with lots of noise. The crowd likes it o. k.

We then see Sammy Cohen who makes a few smart cracks and promises to back later in the performance. That little Chinese cook then comes out and does a couple of impromptu Chinese numbers. He also gives a good version of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." The audience likes him first rate.

Dan and Gladys Ahearn then do some dancie good dancing while swinging ropes, a la Rogers. The crowd likes this, and the girl is good to look at.

Next we have the orchestra playing, "My Tonio" and Charles Barnes singing it. The Torney Girls come out dressed as seniors and senoritas and show us a few Spanish dances. It is good and doesn't last too long.

Sammy Cohen, movie star, then comes out and does a lot of funny antics. Anytime you can't get a laugh out of Sammy you'd better consult a doctor. Yep, that's bars in them wooly, stranger. So long.

Kansas City Mainstreet
Week Ending January 26

Fast fun with song and dance numbers, no acts being given places more prominent than others on the program, comprised the Mainstreet stage offering.

Dave Seed and Ralph Austin in a skit titled, "Success," mixed a bit of everything, from holocus and humorous dialogue, all good in their act, which included some new jokes. The "Texas Fool," as he could be supposed, is a male quartet in a selection of songs titled, "Banjo Along Goatly Melodies." The rhythm is just enough hamer and jokes intermingled with the act to balance it well.

Harlan Christie was on the job, as usual, as master of ceremonies, doing a vocal number of his own and keeping the program constantly supplied with the life and "zip" which made it go over good.

Davidson's Louisville Loons, playing an extended engagement at the theatre's orchestral attraction, offered popular selections as the overture.

Organ Clubs Continue to Be Novelties

When the novelty of sound motion pictures has worn off and passed away, organ clubs will continue to be a popular form of entertaining theatre crowds. This stunt is being used to a considerable degree by a number of popular orchestras all over the country, and in order to make the specialty more entertaining, some one is always originating a new idea that can be added to its value.

For example, Roy E. Churchill, featured organist at the Burns theatre in Colorado Springs, writes that he broadcasts for one hour every day and on Saturdays invites the children and their parents for a song fest. Mr. Churchill has one of these organ clubs and issues buttons and membership cards to each newcomer. Through the courtesy of some candy or bakery shop, he is able to give them edible novelties.

The daily radio broadcasting and various window and newspaper tieups helps the theatre secure a house full of kiddies and enables Churchill to enroll a real bunch of boosters.

Last Saturday the local Puhe news cameraman took scenes of the song festival which will be shown at that theatre.

Such novelties as this place the exhibitor and the orchestra at the top, and form a prominent position in their community. No matter how large or small a theatre may be, it is always necessary to have attractions on the basis of a large family by giving its patrons something of local interest.

George Burns and Grace Allen, in "Lamb Chops," mixed a bit of everything, from holocus and humorous dialogue, all good in their act, which included some new jokes. The "Texas Fool," as he could be supposed, is a male quartet in a selection of songs titled, "Banjo Along Goatly Melodies." The rhythm is just enough hamer and jokes intermingled with the act to balance it well.

"Parisian Nights" is the attraction at the Omaha Riviera - produced by Famous Vitagraph, Inc. The Parisian nights, both of the bright light kind and the burlesque kind so familiar to A. F. Fers, are presented amid one of the most striking stage settings sent out from the Publix workshops in many months. The stage shows open with the 12 Foot girl dance through curtains representing the Folies Bergere, Moulin Rouge, Le Chat Noir and other colorful phenomena of Paris. The girls look perfectly good, their rhythm being perfect.

On the program, "Who Loves Clive," Miller stage, master are the Novelle Browsers, violinists-acrobats and whistlers; Ginger Rogers, singer of kid songs; David and Andre, Apache dancers, and Henry "Red" Hollywood.

A "phantom opera," with no one at the anade at the music powered forth a full scale of effect for Herbie Keb, organist, during the week.

Paul Goodrich, Shubert's "Southern Belle" featured Miller and Lukas, the famous black-face comedians of "Shuffle Along," as an added attraction. This production proved to be a well received show, with only one place where its speed was lessened.

The Four Dictators, first song "Swanne River" in a Love scene. Following this Gene Rodemich and his orchestra presented a recognition march, played, "A Precious Little Thing Called Love." A vocal chorus was sung by Ross MacLean. An old Confederate soldier (Eddie Mathews) then did a run ill and an acrobatic dance that was received very well.

The Albertina Rasch Girls then danced a Golliwog routine. Miller and Lyles, showed the contrast, and the audience thoroughly enjoyed it.

The Dave Ormande Sisters sang and then did a toy dance to the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," showing this with a tap tap which they earned them enthusiastic applause. They added a tap and the dance, with the assistance of Edwin Mathews, who read real well as many lighted stars lowered from fly gallery and the entire ensemble entered for a encore.

Week Ending January 25

Charles Benington and his Newsboys' Harmonica Ad introduce some unique and unusual features their act and win the hearty approval of the audience at the Fox theatre this week.

The stage setting suggests the Brooklyn bridge in the likeness of New York and flashing electric lights in the background. The boys' costumes are interesting study, for they are geared as typical red sailors, with patches galore, awning of llant hose and clothes the worse for wear. A good portion of these fellows who are interrupted by a cop's whistle, which scatters the rest before the staves are recovered. The boys all return and up a tune almost starting the audience to rhythmic delight, which the boys do andilden while leading them and at times seems interrupted. The dance is

The most interesting feature of their act is the old Stuyvesant Peg Dance. A black drop forms behind the boys, and the boys, after the schottische, are led in with a number of old melodies, "Swanne River," "Yankee Doodle," "Diske" and "John Brown's Body." In all three of these the boys number 10 or 12 and each step, which the peg legs are apparently no drawback, feet in the tap dancing they are quite an asset.

The Capitol presented a stage attraction this week in the person of Marco "Hale Idea," with a real duel of success. This act was unusual to the extent that it featured the personal appearance of variety writer, with patcho galore, awning of llant hose and clothes the worse for wear. The state show is a bit hit this week. "After 've Gone," an old time song, is revived and the tap tap tap taps are taken and the girl Beauties, in song and dance numbers, while himself becomes master of ceremonies, addresses audience and is heard to great applause. Miss Page, sensational acrobatic dancer; Billy joy, personal singer and Maxine Dorea, are featured acts on this bill. Miss Page in one of his character songs is called 'Good-bye." The act was introduced and was much toward the success of the act, as does the audience cheer at the organ.

Kansas City Pantages

Week Ending January 25

The Jean Schwartz Revue was given a prominent feature on the stage program at the Pantages theatre, revue including two girl harmonists and two dancers. The revue presented a well balanced program, in a mixture of dancing and vocal numbers, and was well received by the audience. The Lizard Troupe proved to be a group of unsual interest, as one member of the troupe who holds the other seven members of the company on his shoulders and does it with the utmost ease that the stunts go over well with the audience.

3—Another beautiful scene, in which Stine, Vernon, Lazzle and Morton (one girl and three men) offered one of the best adagio dances ever seen anywhere. The entire cast then entered as the Leonoud Girls did a pleasing routine for the finale. This scene shows an inimitable background, inasmuch as it was vastly different from the usual presentation program. Each act had their own special settings and between each scene Fox Movietone News is found projecting the scene shown at the top of the page. The orchestra supplied all the music from the pit.

Cropper Has Fine Supporting Cast in Chicago Show

Roy Cropper, the well known tenor of the "Student Prince," has been held over by the Chicago theatre to take part in their New Year's presentation this week. Cropper sings "My Mother's Eyes," the theme song of George Jessel's first talking picture called "Lucky Boy," which is published by Leo Feist Inc. The stage offering was produced by Frank Cambah and H. Levey Spitalsky and included the orchestral accompaniment. Among the well known performers are the Lasker Brothers, De Carlos and Louise, and many other soloists.

Here's a Good Way to Prevent "Flu

One of the rules laid down by Dr. John C. Garner, house physician of the Fox theatre, New York, is the daily half-hour walk prescribed to the army of performers at that theatre. Every afternoon, dance, chorus, and newsboys staff can be seen parading down flat street between 6th and 7th avenues, as a preventive means for the enjoyment of the performers. This is a very good idea, and one that should be practiced by other theatres with service staffs as well as the talent.

The emergency hospital and its staff at the Roxy theatre is not only at the disposal of the performers but also is available to the theatre employes with all its facilities free of charge.

Ullman Boosting Morris' Songs

Irving Ullman, Chicago representative for the Joe Morris Music Company, states that the firm has one of the best songs in the field. The song is called "Carolina Moon" and is beginning to spread. Ullman is entering his second year with Morris. He was formerly with Waterson, Berlin & Snyder for seven years.

Joe Morris is expected to visit Chicago soon with the possibility of establishing a permanent office here with Ullman in charge.

Playing for RKO

Resolved to make their two-day theatre an important part of today's entertainment, Radio-News announced the closing of the Palace theatre, Chicago. This week the headline is Charlie Macrae, noteworthy comedian of the screen who has also had considerable stage experience before he was in such great demand for the celluloid. Mr. Morris will present a skit entitled "The Breezy Breath of Hollywood."
Here's a piece of Interest that most likely is news to you: Did you know along the alley there are about ten blind peddlers (more than half of them taking in their heads while they peddle) as musicians, plumbers, etc. Their panhandling time along Broadway is limited and according to schedule. For example, until the 7:30 A.M. Paramount Breaking Bell time, is when the alley is busy. The alley is not between 8 and 10 A.M. and 11 and 1 P.M. and 4 and 6 P.M.

MARY WILHITE has her big show in the East and the middle West in his own combination entitled "When Summer Is Gone" (recently taken over by T. B. Harms from Ted Brown.). WilHITE has been connected with Ted Brown for the last two and a half years as New York representative, during which time he became known to the firm's force big hits, "Yesterday," "Tomorrow" and his latest, "When Summer Is Gone." The fine tunes and being a hustler is rapidly establishing quite a reputation for WilHITE.

There are so many changes taking place in the music business these days its a mighty tough job trying to keep up with the changing with all these music publishers and picture companies merging. It won't be long before the publishers will be making pictures and the picture companies publishing songs. In fact we are thinking of airing one of our piano rolls with this program and be surprised to find Clara Row in there some day, making a singing picture. (By the way, I went to the Roxy last night and saw an advance of the film to all around an advisor to Spier in the manipulation of their firm's marvelous catalogue.

Columbia Pictures Inc. have just pulled a marvelous deal with The Victor Talking Machine Company, whereby they are to make talking shorts of the many artists under the Victor banner. It was. one of the biggest deals that Columbia ever made. There was a small concern and not meaning very much to the public, the successful and wide work and manipulations of Joe Brandt, Jack and Harry Cohn they have today built this concern up to one of the main picture producers of the country. A hook up with the Victor company should prove in a short time the wisdom of these boys. Outside of Brandt, Harry Cohn, Brandt, Jack Cohn's weakness for hum jokers, and Harry Cohn's weakness for phonograph music, all three of the boys are 100 per cent.

Never in the history of the music business have there been so many GOOD songs out on the market at the same time. Almost without exception, every publisher, large and small, has a good song riding. Some of the publishers, with their leading songs, are followed by Ted Brown and Herron, "The Song I Love" (Trent). "I'll Get By!" (Schnirn-Bernstein, "Sweetheart of All My Dreams" and Yellen & Bernstein, "All I Ask Doll," Spier & Coslow Inc., "A Love Tale of Lassar Lorraine," Freer, "Crowning You," Remick, "Dolce the Roscloon," Robbins, "If I Loved You," Villa Morei, "She's Funny That Way," Milton Weil, "Sweetheart of Paramont," Victor, "Me and the Man in the Moon," Feist, "My Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now," and Mills with "I Can't Love You But I Love You," Ballas. With these big songs predominating in the East, and with many more songs in the Midtown and Middle West, it will take a terrific big song to penetrate the above list in order to sweep the nation, as did "Sonny Boy." All the publishers are optimistic, and by the looks of the various catalogue it does look like a big hit. The publishers now have as good a collection of songs as I have ever heard.

It may interest many friends around the country to know that Paramount Pictures have become interested in the firm of Synder & Cadine Inc., LARRY SPIER.

CHANCEY HAINES (Chicago, Northcote) played a community solo called the "Drug Store Cowboy Blues." The song was given "The He's Loving You Then," "Good Bad Little You," "She's Just Too Sweet for Words," "Sweethearts on Parade," and a parody on "Sweet Adeline." A plant in the audience sang "I'll Get By," this being Northwestern night, several college songs were injected and a lot of fun was had by all. The solo ended with a new version of "Old MacDonald Had a Farm."

Jesse Crawford (New York Paramount) presented his usual opera concert. He has the happy faculty of knowing just how much to give this audience. He played only two numbers this week. They were "I'll Get By," and "Me and the Man in the Moon." Slides were used but no one sang at this house, and Fordow does not try to make them. The crowd always give him a fine hand for his good technique.

J. Gibb Spring (Park Rider, Illinois, Pickwick) reports that he used the "Singing Orphans" as a solo last week in the E. Irving Oriental drawings of the former sweethearts. It opens with matches of "Sweethearts on Parade," "Parlott's Dream," "What's Become of Sally," "May," "Roxy," and "Sweet Adeline." In this solo such songs as "Dream Train," and "Last Night I Was Dreaming" were interpolated. It was quite a novelty for a community solo, in which the orchestra also accompanied some of the gag slides.

KENTH T. WRIGHT (Memphisville, Mich., Lloyds) says he used an original novelty called "Hit's of Yesterday." All the following songs were taken off of those old songs which were all together. Some old songs make the crowd lauge a great deal. Next comes "There's A Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder," and it finishes up a nappy program by Les which is enjoyed a whole lot by the crowd.

LES HODGSLEY (Milwaukee, Wisconsin) used a medley of some songs in very good time and form. First he plays the popular song, "Marie," and follows up with a slide depicting what billboard signs look like when they're all together. Some of the old songs make the crowd laugh a great deal. Next comes "There's A Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder, and it finishes up a nappy program by Les which is enjoyed a whole lot by the crowd.

THEME SONGS

Fanny Brice is singing "I'm an Indian" as one of the feature songs in her Warner Bros. Vitaphone picture, called "My Man." This is a Mills Music Inc. number, written by Blanche Merrill and Leo Edwards.

Sono-Art productions have selected James Hanley to write several theme songs for their picture pictures. One of Hanley's themes will be carried through the story of "Broadway Bound," now in production at Sono-Art Studios. Some of the songs in this photoplay are "Sleazy Valley," "Silly Little Pal," "Tambourine Tune," and "Just a Rose Covered Doorway."
It's Thumbs Down On Cold Wave
When House Serves Hot Coffee

The next time a cold wave comes sweeping down upon your town, just consider the plan put into service by Lester M. Flagg and L. H. Weskil, co-managers of the Panada theatre at Sandpoint, Idaho.

When we are old and tottering, and the young folks twist and shiver in the cold—or what they consider cold—we'll just open up and tell them about the Strike of 1828-29 in the Middle West and the young uns just naturally will warm up on the spot.

Blizzard Can't Stop 'Em
Idaho was no exception in January, and when a blizzard cut through Sandpoint—and the uninviting weather too—no one at the Panada theatre expected any folk to come out for the show, but they did. Of course we've heard of refreshments served at little theatres, and such, but this was different, and did it pay? Well, let the co-managers tell us about it.

"This afternoon the weather conditions were totally against us," they write, "and we knew that the size of our matinée crowd would be very small. There was a regular blizzard sweeping the town.

Piping Hot Coffee
"We think that we have originated an idea that might be carried out to good advantage in other theatres. We served coffee (piping hot) with wafers to the few patrons that had nerve enough to weather the storm in order to see our show. The cost was small in comparison to the loss that we were suffering in running the show, but the papers held out the news and the advertising that could not be bought.

"We have no intentions of keeping up the idea of coffee on every matinée when the weather happens to be against us, but it sounded mighty good to hear the personal thanks of the few patrons attending the matinée, and it looked good in the papers afterward. This was a total surprise to the audience, as we did not advertise it."

A community service, folks.

Novelty Ads Help
"Dancing Daughters"
In Walla Walla House

Novelty advertising and many unique exploitation ideas were utilized by Manager Frank Hill of the Liberty theatre at Walla Walla, Wash., in putting over M.G.M.'s "Our Dancing Daughters." He was assisted by Hal Elias, M.G.M. expeditor.

Prior to playdate the regular theatre ads carried underlines extracted from "Diana's Diary" which described some of the highlights of "Our Dancing Daughters."

The Walla Walla Union used four feature stories, each of which was headed, "A Glimpse of the Studio Starr with Joan Crawford," and supposedly written by the latter.

The Walla Walla Bulletin gave space to a slogan contest which netted four stories and one-column cuts of principals. Contestants were asked to name the stars and submit one or more slogans for the Bulletin want ad columns. Tickets were offered as awards.

Cooperative pages featuring "Christmas Gifts for Our Dancing Daughters," were put over for both the Union and Bulletin.

A mezzanine display featured "The Jazz Dictionary," and patrons were advised to turn its pages. Closer inspection revealed that "A stand for 'Amia,' one of the reveling flappers of 'Our Dancing Daughters,' that jazz-made Jubilee." Other letters of the alphabet were used similarly.

Call for Novel Form in Puzzle Replies Goes Over

The newspaper cooperative ad and the keyed word puzzle brought some interesting results at the State theatre in Altoona, Pa., for Universal's "The Man Who Laughs."

The instructions called for presenting the keyed sentence at the theatre in a novel form. One reply was a rebus in a walnut shell: another was a blueprint in an apple.

The boy's card, printed in black on a red stock, is very similar to the above, with the exception of the use of a cupid figure on the left and these words in the three lines to the right: "FIND THE GIRL who has a Valentine Date Card That Corresponds With the Serial Number on This Card, Then Make a Date for This."

School Flappers, Hammitt Finds

The Valentine Date Night idea is presented to HERALD-WORLD readers here-with through the cooperation of Guy D. Hammitt ("Mexican Joe") of the Majestic theatre at Seymour, Ind.

Unfortunately it is perhaps a bit late for use for this February 14, but, as Hammitt suggests, the idea is just as good for a "Surprise Night." So help yourselves, folks, with Hammitt's compliments.

"I pass this little idea exclusively to HERALD-WORLD readers," Hammitt writes to this department. "I have used it before on date nights and it proved very successful."

"This stunt works better in colleges than in high schools. But in this day and age of the fair flapper, they like it. This stunt can also be used on a 'Surprise Program.'"

NEW ORLEANS, Feb 5—Superintendent of Police, Ray and his staff were guests of the Tudor theatre recently where they witnessed a special screening of "Me, Gangster." Many officers not on their beats attended.

Here is an example of a real shadow box. W. M. Beadell, resident manager of the Illini theatre at Sterling, Ill., sends it in to "The Theatre" with the comment: "The cabin is made of real timber and cutouts from a one-sheet poster. Causes much attention." We'll go Beadell a step further and say that it's one splendid piece of exploitation.

Welcome This New House Organ
And Four Members to Exchange

Add These to Your Exchange List:

Call out the H. O. E. Band and sound a fanfare for the four above! We’re happy to add them all to the House Organ Exchange, and hope not only that they will find the Exchange a practicable benefit to them but that they also will contribute a number of ideas for the use of the other members.

We reproduce herewith the cover of the first issue of Film-Play, and a sprightly little monthly publication it is. We like the makeup, the editorial on “The Secret of Health,” with the final paragraph: “Has it ever occurred to you that all this is supplied by the screen through the medium of an intellectual, carefully chosen and evenly balanced program of drama and comedy such as is regularly presented by the Leeds theatre.”

Notice is given of the discontinuance of the Movie Calendar of the theatre born-spelled word contest is continued in Film-Play.

Our one suggestion is that on the first page it would have been better to run the two-column story on the right side, leaving the cut in the middle column.

An Idea on Introducing H. O.

P. M. Peterson, assistant manager of the World theatre at Kearney, Neb., of the World Realty Company Theatre Circuit, in sending in the World theatre’s application to join the Exchange, enclosed a clipping from the theatre’s weekly program which reads, “Out Soon. New World News-Play. Next edition of gossip—movies—humor. It’s free. Fill out this coupon and leave it at door—copy will be mailed to you each week.”

Peterson writes, “We wish to call your attention to our house organ, the World Circuit News, that we are going to have in circulation very shortly. We are enclosing a coupon cut from your magazine and also a clipping from our weekly program showing that we have begun to introduce the paper. Would we be very grateful if you would put us on your exchange list.”

So, members, send copies of your publications at once to the World theatre.

And from Howard K. Allen of the Hall Industries, Beeville, Texas, we have just received the following:

“We have received several copies of his exceptionally interesting ‘weekly’ and I believe I’ll be able to incorporate several of his ideas in the program which I am planning on issuing.”

“We now have seven theatres and I hope to be able to put out a house organ for each one but I’m not asleep to the fact that it’s going to be a job. We are not using a monthly calendar, but I believe it is long enough to deaden its effectiveness and I don’t like it near as well as the house organ.”

“Conquest” Contest

N. Y. Evening World
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Warner Brothers has tied up with the Evening World in connection with the day-by-day engagements of Monte Blue in “Conquest” at the New York and Brooklyn Strands where the picture soon opens.

Radio communication plays an important part in the development of this all-talking picture’s story and the receiving set used in the production is a Federal Radio. Two $600 Federal machines are being offered as the first prizes in a fifty word essay contest on the subject “My Favorite Radio Station and Why.”

Other prizes are $100 in cash and 100 pair of seats to the Vitaphone picture.

The Evening World is playing up the feature under the title of “The Conquest Radio Contest.”

Blonde Mattine Attracts Crowds To LaPlante Film

Abundant space was won in the Syracuse, N. Y. Herald when a “blonde mattinee” was given in connection with the showing of Laura LaPlante’s “Under the Lemon Tree.” The idea was to select the blonde who most closely resembled Miss LaPlante. And did they come out for the show? Hundreds of them.

A WORD ABOUT ME

MUCH as I dislike to do so (don't laugh) I find myself forced to talk about me. This is, of course, no new emergency. It seems to recur at two-month intervals. About that often the mail brings letters from people who don't think much of my stuff and who cite substantial reasons for their opinion. On these occasions I attempt to re-explain the difference between a "Service Talk" and a "box office review" and the explanation suffices for about eight weeks. This is one of those occasions.

Mrs. Grace D. Dinsmore of Weiner, Ark., whose subscription to the HERALD-WORLD dates back beyond my connection with the magazine, had a pleasant letter about my inaccuracies in the "What the Picture Did For Me" department last week. The editor of that excellent department added words less kind than Mrs. Dinsmore's. Together they state that I don't know which pictures the patrons of a given theatre will like and I heartily join with them in their opinion.

Mr. Howard K. Allen, of the theatre department of Hall Industries, writes that from now on he will not place confidence in my writings. His reason seems to be that I liked "The Wedding March," whereas he is willing to wager that 90% of the exhibitors in the United States will agree with him that it is a "misérable, costly flop." On the other hand, he agrees with my good words for "The Flying Fleet," but says the middles are trained at Annapolis and not, as I implied, West Point. I guess there is no doubt about this last.

To proceed with the bimonthly explanation mentioned in the first of these paragraphs, it is quite true that I don't know anything about the money-making or patron-pleasing capacity of the pictures mentioned. It is equally true that if I did know I would not tell; for I would long since have bought a theatre—instead of selling the one I had—and exhibited therein the picture that I knew would make the most money, and today I'd have so much money that I wouldn't write pieces for anybody.

You see, the crux of the explanation is this: I know—and I speak for the management of the magazine as well—that no individual can look at a motion picture in Chicago and tell how it will draw or please in Keokuk. Substitute any other towns and the same is true. Also, substitute a dozen or a hundred individuals for the one. It simply isn't being done, for the good reason that it can't be done, and this brings us to the final chapter of the explanation and a bow.

whereas there are in these United States, and in the trade paper publishing business, certain individuals who accept subscription monies in exchange for what they present as dependable box-office reviews, there is none such in the employ of the Quigley Publishing Company. If we cannot give an exhibitor an honest paper for the price of the subscription, we have no intention of giving him a dishonest one. We are, it seems, honest. For this reason I have no hesitancy in admitting that I don't know any more about pictures than you do, or as much if you are in the actual business of exhibiting. My assignment is merely to see motion pictures and write what I think of them.

It is a pleasant assignment and I like it. I should quit tomorrow if I had to write "box-office reviews" which I know, as well as those who write them know, are just plain gyp.

Incidentally, I note as I read back over those paragraphs that I have become a bit emphatic in my remarks. Well, why not? If I can't go gracefully along my pleasant and delightfully honest path without being misjudged as belonging to the gyp school of "box-office reviewers," I may as well take up plumbing now as later. And, frankly, I know absolutely nothing about plumbing.

"NAUGHTY BABY"

NOW that we have the heavy work done, listen to good news about "Naughty Baby" and Alice White and Jack Mulhall. (And I don't know whether it will make you a dime or not.) It is a great little picture.

Alice White, as you know, packs a lot of stuff. She has a good many of the assets Miss Bow utilizes so effectively. She has a few that Miss Bow lacks. (And I'm not speaking of box-office in this paragraph either.) In this she's a hat-girl in a hotel and falls in love with a young millionaire and manages to meet him in queer places and odd circumstances. A great many things happen, including the evaporation of the lady's bathing suit and sundry exciting consequences.

The young millionaire is Jack Mulhall and the news about him is of course the usual thing. He's the best of the young men in his division, has been for two or three years, and I'm pleased to see him paired with a girl who can do things too. Miss White is such an one (as the English instructors would have you say) and these two can continue indefinitely in their present juxtaposition so far as I'm concerned.

"INTERFERENCE"

I COME late with this news, I know, but "Interference" is too good to omit mention of it for no better reason than tardiness. It is the best audion of its kind that I have seen, although I know there are several in the same general manner which have not yet come within range of these eyes. It is, too, the first audion I have seen in which there is no incidental music, and I vote loudly for more like it. The thing is practically a stage play and, the original being good, excellent.

The acting of William Powell in "Interference" is something to witness. I've seen this actor stumble through more druk roles than I have time to count. This is another. But this time he talks, and vocalitis adds some four or five hundred per cent to his effectiveness. Although Clive Brook is the male lead, and a knockout as the same, Mr. Powell's performance is to me the big one of the picture.

Staging, direction and performance of "Interference" are excellent. The story is a polished, adult account of adult doings. It is told smoothly, dramatically, deftly. It may or may not contain what the ladies of the Wednesday Afternoon Cinema Society refer to as a moral, and yet it may. I'm a little dull about catching those things. It did keep me pleasantly awake on the evening I saw it, however, being the second picture sat through on that evening, and I need no one to tell me that a picture capable of doing that is a picture I have admired.

ORCHESTRATION

I HAVE been meaning to write a paragraph about the music score of "Shopworn Angel." This is as good a time as any. The score of this picture is played by what seems to be a five or six piece orchestra. It is a very capable, swiftly functioning, well directed orchestra. It does more for the picture than any forty-piece orchestra I have ever heard, directly or via record. I submit that this is a pretty good idea for other producers to adopt. The score, of course, is the essential thing, but the manner of its playing makes or breaks it. A small organization, more facile than a large one seems to me to be ideal for the whole.

LETTERS From Readers

A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity and pertinence are necessary to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

Referred to Trags

AKRON, OHIO.—To the Editor: I have written several letters to this department, but as yet have never seen one in print. Must be I too hard boiled in my writing. This time I take pick on this Wisconsin man who wrote up his New York trip your January 20th issue. He let out the interesting news that he had played pictures dealing with the South Seas that cost him only $7.30 that one picture. Having seen every South Seas picture that has been produced, at least in the last six years, and certainly must say that this man is the poorest critic I have heard of in the present century. I really think it was the change he didn't come back from the dollar bill that bothered him more than anything else—by J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, La.

A Call for Jenkins

GOLDEN CITY, MO.—To the Editor: In my first letter to you I want to voice a complaint in that J. C. Jenkins did not not on his trip through this part called upon me. I have never seen him in the part, I have been seeing him for a white yet on my subscription would have renewed again. I like him and his kind and certainly do enjoy his letters—especially the last two and am wondering how many of the 5,000 exhibitors have quit to date? The number I surmise from reports I have seen would surprise many and prove that J. C. knew his stuff.

What is the cause and what is the remedy? I would like to talk to the producers, they had better call in J. C. and get the low down on the conditions as he has seen them, forget talks and the key cities and find out on this fact that they would give me a Vitaphone or a Movietone I wouldn't have it for know they would also give one to my neighbor exhibitors and I could not hope to earn any money on my own territory by their installation after the novelty wore off.

Silent pictures have packed the house. What more can anything do? I do not know what the selling price of a talkie is above that of a silent but I think it is a plenty-enough so that together with the increase in rental, the upkeep and additional overhead makes them out of the question even as a GIFT, then there are in addition wiring, new equipment, and a projected material to pay for. Are our Peerless Shop. Every Job Guaranteed. Relief Equipment Loaned FREE. Established Over 25 years. Monarch Theatre Supply Co., 395 South Second Street, Memphis, Tenn.

BEST SHOP for repairing projection machines. Prompt service, reasonable prices. Address Movie Supply Co., 395 South Second Street, Memphis, Tenn.

Miscellaneous

I am now running “Tarzan the Mighty” with the result that it is bringing in and increasing every week. I had any number of people tell me that they started to town two weeks ago to run it back but never did. They never said anything about being sorry they missed getting their week's supply of groceries, but they did say “They sure hated to miss Tarzan.” I had that Saturday 127 patrons. How they got there is a mys-tery to me. I stuck on Main street. The Theatre is out in the country, how isn't there food for thought in this experience? If I had had “Wings” or any other special, I am as confident as I ever have been upon any subject, that it would not have brought out 127 that blizzard day. Tarzan did because they had seen three chapters and were going to see the rest or bust. “Wings” would have lost me a plenty. I made a little on “Tarzan.”

What we need is good serials. But we don't want any other kind. The kind I had been getting up to date up which no ac-cident could hurt the participants, no gun could shoot, a horse could outrun an auto-mobile, and nothing could happen which would cause the wonder serials to fail and many exhibitors will not run them. Let the producer make a serial like “Tarzan” and “Million Dollar Mystery” and they will find the exhibitors' houses packed. Anybody know of any-other good one? I'm in the market. Would rather have another “Tarzan” than all the talkie equipment made and any feature so far put out to run with them.

Crazy? Perhaps so, but I would rather buy a cinch than gamble on a proposition of which I have no knowledge of what we used to see on the legitimate stage and the Movies. Put them out of business. Per-fect them to the utmost and then what have you? Nothing that has packed them in like the silent picture did in the past at 10 cents admission. Because the legitimate was asking 10 cents and the public could not afford often enough. Many do want to go often, every night almost, and would if they could afford it. Will they ever be able to show talkies in the small town at 10 cents? Perhaps years from now. Where will the exhibitor of today be then—beere.

The Herald-World, boys, is willing to be our mouthpiece. There may be crazy like the rest of us or J. C. and I, but let's hear from YOU.—J. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.

Key to abbreviations used in denoting type of sound

- AF—All Talking
- F—Feature
- T—Talking Sequences
- M—Musical Sound
- E—Exhibiting Word

If the picture contains both Talking Sequences and Musical Score, or other combinations, it is so denoted by a combination of abbreviations such as TM, ME, etc.

Comedy-drama, Romantic comedy, etc., are denoted by a combination of abbreviations.

- Dates printed in the column, "Comment," are those on which Service Tests" were published on pictures. Dates in the column, "New Pictures," are those on which casts and synopses were published in the "New Pictures" department.

Columbia

THE LONE WOLF'S DAUGHTER: Special cast—another very excellent picture from Columbia, and it is pretty good for first-run theatres. It is well acted, well acted, well written and done. One of the main reasons for its success is due to the excellent scenery. The floors are covered in this this in too many. A real special, and sold so that the boys "out where the worst beats" can really sit back and enjoy the picture. This is the best one that's come out of Hollywood in a long time. It is a real special. Mon. 6.25. Special patronage.

STOOL PIGEON: Special cast—April 15. A very good world picture. Columbia pictures are okay. I have played six of the 1923-24, and they were all good. Seven reels—W. H. Brenner, Civic theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.—General patronage.

THE DESERT BRIDE: Betty Compson—December 24. Very disappointing. About the poorest we have had from Columbia. An episode of Tarzan sure helped the program. Six reels—Frank Johnson, born House, Louisville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

RAIDER EMDEN: Special cast—April 5. December 31. January 1-2. Not exactly what we expected. Looks a lot of newreels. Would say it is strictly a novelty, but it gets them in. Don't believe anyone will go wild over it. Poor photography and very jumpy in spots. Book it if you like to play novelty, and it should make some money. Seven reels—John E. Wallan, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

RESTLESS YOUTH: Special cast—A dandy one that will please them all. A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

THE SPORTING AGE: Belle Bennett—January 17-18. An extra good title wanted on a dull, drab lot of pictures. We have had good in "Dallas, Texas," but in everything I have had her in since she did not make much of an impression. Seven reels—William E. Trrades, Trages theatre, Nellisville, Wash.—Small town patronage.

GOLF WIDOWS: Special cast—75% January 3-1. This is a dandy little comedy-drama. Lots of good gags and funny all the way through. Too bad we can't have more like this one. Columbia gives us a lot of good ones. Their pictures, as a rule, have humorous notes, but as some wisecracks once remarked, "What's in a name?" If your audience likes good, clean comedy, they'll eat this one up. Six reels—J. M. A. Ellan, Palace theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

First National

ADORATION: Billie Dove—40%. January 1. Billie Dove does splendid work and draws well. This is not her best picture, but it pleased. She's the heroine. Seven reels—J. G. Crouch, Princess theatre, Troy, Ala.—General patronage.

THE PHANTOM CITY: Ken Maynard—This is the best one. Play it on—A. S. Alexander, Palace theatre, Bradford, Tenn.—General patronage.

HEART TO HEART: Hughes-Astor—One of the best little comedies I have run in a long time. Pleased everyone. Seven reels—A. S. Alexander, Palace theatre, Bradford, Tenn.—General patronage.

LADIES' NIGHT IN A TURKISH BATH: Jack Mulhall—25%. January 9. This was one dandy riotous and entertaining through the seven reels—Rudolf Dubs, Royal theatre, Kimber, S. D.—General patronage.

CODE OF THE SCARLET: Ken Maynard—A good picture, but then, when did Ken ever make a poor one?—Ernest H. Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

CODE OF THE SCARLET: Ken Maynard—December 1. This was good. All of Maynard’s are. How- ever, we thought it not quite up to most of his pictures.
DAR HEAD-WORLD:

About the least respected citizen in any community is the pessimist. The world turned its shoulder on pessimism at the time Adam went into the fruit business, and we realize that to assume a pessimistic attitude requires a whole lot of courage and but little sense. We stand in life as an optimist, and we might have lived, though truly had it not been that we took our girl home from spelling school once and tried to kiss her on her front porch—that is, we mean we were on her front porch when we tried to kiss her—and the attitude that girl assumed made a pessimist out of us, and we have been leery of front porches ever since. But this is only laying a foundation for what we wish to say.

As regards the theatre business, we presume we should say that business is fine and everything is lovely, but the man who does not have the courage of his convictions should be congratulated on the fact that he is a true optimist. Homer once said, "There's a freeman's right," and the best thinking people have credited Homer with being some philosophical guy. We are glad Homer said this, for that lets us in without having to furnish credentials. All we need to say to gain admittance is, "We're with Homer." Having thus paved the way for what we desire to say, it will not be necessary to prolong the prelude farther.

There were more quack doctors practicing in the theatre business than there are divorce lawyers in Hollywood. Within the past six months, we have heard these quacks diagnose the theatre ailment and two of them agreed. We have been asked on a number of occasions to diagnose the case and prescribe a remedy, but our diploma was issued from the "School of Experience," and we were not permitted to practice without further evidence of our medical knowledge. [Editor's Note: Mr. Jenkins, however, failed to make the football team.]

It is commonly accepted theory that competition is the life of trade, for it's by competition that better goods are made and more markets provided. The course of events today in the production and distribution of pictures is toward centralization and monopoly. Within Recent months production unites have been considered and the trend of events indicate that within a very short time the controlling power of all production will be centralized in a few hands and production curtailed to meet the requirements of the syndicated houses, without regard to the thousands of small theatres throughout the country.

In the months production of good pictures has been coordinated to sound and sound devices, with the result that the little fellow who is unable to equip his theatre with sound will be left high and dry with nothing of merit to offer his patrons.

And kill the golden eggs, one to cut her head off and the other to starve her to death, either of which will be effetue, and our guess is that same Wall Monte street will order eggs for breakfast and will be served with sorrowfully instead.

The small theatres throughout the country have the "velvet" and have been the first to assume that there is a lot of money to be made by pictures, and anything that is done to hamstring this source of revenue will work disaster to the entire business.

The deluxe houses in the cities are maintained very largely by transients, and only for this transient support, money to build million dollar theatre palaces would be an unknown quantity. Entertainment is fashioned to meet the desire of this class of trade, while the small theatres play to the home folks, who look upon their entertainment from a different viewpoint.

When Samuel Goldwyn made "THE OLD NEST," New York said it was a lemon and it was shelved; but a lot of you who are familiar with past picture history know what this picture did for Mr. Goldwyn when it was circulated among the small theatres. "THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" stood them out for extended runs at advanced admission. "MADAME X" was a cleanup wherever it was shown. "WHAT PRICE GLORY?" is still a top draw, and colored pictures are discussed. "BEN HUR" stands as a milestone in picture history, and we could go on and name dozens of others that have been the means of advancing the industry to the position it maintains today, and yet in spite of these examples, we have little time to make big-house scenes, unintended, by doing nothing to make the entertainment "sexy" and "sleazy" and with a "kick," and all in face of a vigorous protest by thousands of theatremen who are the life and mainstay of the industry and who know that such entertainment is driving the industry on the rocks.

Yes, we are a pessimist—there is no use in introducing any evidence, we will admit it. Our 61,000 miles of travel over 14 states, and mingling with thousands of theatremen, noting conditions, has driven us to it, and the only diagnosis of the ailment we are able to make is that producers have lost sight of the small theatre requirements and are making pictures with an eye single to the transient trade of the city houses.

We have always had epidemics, we have always had elections, we have always had Christmas, and many times we have had short crop conditions, so we must look elsewhere for a solution of present day conditions, and the only reason we can assign is that producers have permitted old General Apathy to horn into the business by furnishing these theatres with film instead of entertainment.

If we know anything about pictures, which we probably don't, having seen not more than 30 or 40 thousand of them, we would express the opinion that the need is for pictures with more realism, pictures with human interest pictures that depict every day life, and less of those that appeal only to the weakness of humanity.

LIKE AN APRIL SHOWERS

J. C. Jenkins—His Colym

Personally, we would sooner see Gary Cooper washing dishes in his bachelor home and Florence Vidor phoning to him to bring her another sack of potatoes, than to see all the roadhouse brawls, because that’s "serious" stuff to us. Maybe our education has been neglected. If so, there are several million more of us who played hookey when we should have been drinking drinks for demi-mondes and rapping on bedroom doors, and if this type of entertainment is to become popular in this country, we might as well go back to the Free Love movement and be done with it. In fact, a lot of ‘em are back there now. Maybe we are too pointed in our remarks. Sometimes people are susceptible to argument, and again you have to hit ‘em right on the nose with a sledgehammer. We never use soft soap. Well, I guess we never tried it and maybe we should. We have been fighting for clean pictures and for the interest of you small town theatremen for a long time, and right now, even though we have been out of form physically for some time, and even though there is a blizzard outside, we are willing to take off our coat and settle the lawn and stage another fight in your behalf. But we’d like you to show enough interest in the sacrifice we might make to stick around to the finish. We don’t know whether you appreciate our fighting for you or not, but whether you do or whether you don’t, doesn’t matter much to us, as we are pretty well grounded in our convictions anyway. But the HERALD-WORLD would like your views on the matter.

Maybe we haven’t been specific enough. Maybe we have left too much to inference. Anyhow, you will agree that we are pessimistic and possibly crazy as well, but we trust we have given you something to think about. If exhibitors will only voice their opinions on this all-important matter of what to produce, maybe they’ll accomplish something—at least, more than silence can.

We wonder if a man grows more fickle-minded as he grows older. We are inclined to think he does. We knew an old guy once that went crazy trying to make up his mind whether to marry the widow Hennessy or the widow Maloney. The other evening we saw "THE SHOPWORN ANGEL," with Gary Cooper and Nancy Carroll, and right away we resolved our limousine, and from this on she will travel under the pet name of "Nancy."

When we saw the billing outside, we thought to ourselves, "Well, here’s another one of those things," but when we went inside and saw Nancy, right away there was "a rainbow round our shoulder," and we didn’t care whether the sky was blue above or there was a blizzard raging outside. All we had in mind was to watch Nancy, and the way we watched her is nobody’s business.

We can’t understand why Gary doesn’t warm up to girls better than he does. Must be he has tried that front porch sultons of ours at some time. If you are near-sighted and you go in to see this picture, get a seat right down on the front row and pay no attention to Gary—except his face, anyway. If you don’t pay attention to Gary, if you don’t think about Gary, we think you’ll be real glad to see "A WHALE OF A TALE" again. If you don’t want to think about Gary, if you don’t think about the boys in "A WHALE OF A TALE," you’ll make out just as well as we did.

"THE SHOPWORN ANGEL" is not a Gary Cooper picture. It’s a Coop and a Nancy Carroll picture, and if you don’t want to see Gary, maybe you’ll like to see Nancy. Nancy is a very nice girl, and Gary is a very nice boy. It’s a small world, and Gary has Nancy, and Nancy has Gary.

There, no sooner had Chicago gotten half of her population in jail for bootlegging when there comes a cry for help from Eagle Eye Joe. Joe writes, "Dear Grandpa: My life lives far away and the only way I can reach her is to get a car. How can I convince my mother to get me one? Sincerely, Joe."

Joe is in a deplorable condition, and we can sympathize with him. We know of nothing that reaches down and gets hold of a boy’s heartstrings—and bootstraps—like being separated from his father. All your experience or mine that we left behind. Our father moved out of Kansas, it was a small world was entirely up. Besides, there wasn’t a ray of sunshine anywhere, and we would have welcomed an earthquake, a tornado, anything that would have changed conditions. After we learned afterwards, to our surprise, that Kansas didn’t have a monopoly on all the girls.

The only consolation we can offer Joe is that if he can hold out until spring, and we get back to Chicago, we will gladly place "Nancy" at his disposal. But he must understand that it requires both hands to drive her. There are lots of one-handed cars, but "Nancy" don’t belong in that class.

We know exactly how Joe feels. When his girl is far away, he is not appetizing for meals and he grieves the livelong day. The road that once seemed smooth and fine has all at once got rough; there is no hope for�unntime, and it’s tough, by gosh, it’s tough. We hope that Joe won’t take to gin like many a mind a rest. For this we’d like to say him—Dill pickles are the best.

SHOW PEOPLE

Special cast—January 21-29.

A picture with Marion Davies in a sort of a priz role, and William Haines not too fresh. They’re like it.—Joseph Conway, Egyptian theatre, Los Angeles.

SHOW PEOPLE

Special cast—49%, Metro makes this a special, but it is only a picture. It makes this a picture and a year for the exhibitors. The film is a series of scenes without something for them to do. They don’t care so much about the director, as they are not interested in anything.—L. H. Petz, Pearl theatre, Youngwood, Pa.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE

Special cast—This is of show style and there is not much chance of appeal. Everything in the film is done well, but it does not appeal to foreigners. Miss Davies did some very clever acting scenes; otherwise the film is just a paste job. It is good and has such places in it. Nine reels.—eralde theatre, Riverview, Ala.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE

EXCESS BAGGAGE: William Haines—45%. An- other good one for Haines. He is a wonderful performer. W. C. Fields in a small theatre, Bunker Hill, III.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE

SHADOWS OF THE NIGHT: Flash—50%. This is not the best dog picture I ever played. The dog is almost human.—W. Fahrenkroen, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, III.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE

Shadow of the Night: Lawrence Gray—January 11. Very good. Ran it on our poor night, but that was the reason for our poor business. The picture is good as an underworld story, though it is more a police and newspaper reporter picture. Eleven reels.—H. H. Petz, Pearl theatre, Youngwood, Pa.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE

SHOW PEOPLE

Laugh Clown Laugh: Lon Chaney—August 1-11. We have had a number of Chaney efforts here. Play it right after the big cities.—arias Cholino, New Lincoln theatre, Pleasanton, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE

Laugh Clown Laugh: Lon Chaney—Very, very good. Not only that, but we did about average business in spite of a severe snowstorm that continued throughout the whole second day. We consider this a very good effort.—Frank Johnson, Show, Loveluse, Neb.—Small town patronage.

William Haines—49%. Very good picture. Haines is fine in this one.—W. Fahrenkroen, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

The Actress: Norma Shearer—50%. Just fair. Not nearly as good as some of her other pictures.—W. Fahrenkroen, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

The Fair Co-Ed: Marion Davies—February 4-10. A fair program picture which pleased almost 100% of the business. A good picture and a good performance after each scene. Ran this one pretty late, but we are glad we did not miss it out. Seven reels.—seven theatres, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

Brotherly Love: Dan—Arthur—29%. Boring. Nothing to this one.—W. Fahrenkroen, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

Circus Rookies: Dan—Arthur—For those who like slapstick, this is a good picture. The boys will set a mark for all comedians to shot at.—Riverdale theatre, Riverview, Ala.—General patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

West Point: William Haines—59%. January 2. Did a good business on this picture in spite of sub-zero weather. Please as near 100 per cent as any picture of its type we have played the past year. Eight reels.—Hardy Carlson, Opera House, Vellin, S. D.—Small town patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

Broadway: Crod—Pringle—43%. January 20. A fair house, and believe it gave general satisfaction. Didn’t see the picture myself but have heard good reports.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyoak, Kan.—Small town patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

TELLING THE WORLD

The Latest From Paris: Norma Shearer—45%. December 31-January 1. One good picture, but it failed to draw. A clever comedy, but little or no interest for the small town patronage. Eight reels.—Hardy Carlson, Opera House, Vellin, S. D.—Small town patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD

Buttons: Jackie Coogan—Very, very good.—George B. Baker, Strand theatre, Britton, S. D.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

Someone To Love: Special cast—90%. January 18. Had more comments on this than any picture of this type in years. It’s a pleasing little picture, with Buddy doing his stuff. Seven reels.—J. C. Crouch, Princess theatre, Troy, Ala.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

Someone To Love: Special cast—December 6-7. This is certainly one of the best little programs we could find. They would please the whole family. Here’s hoping this standard will be carried out in this youth team’s feature pictures. Seven reels.—H. E. Timmerlake, Isabelle theatre, Stevenson, Ala.—General patronage.

Someone To Love: Special cast—December 6-7. This is certainly one of the best little programs we could find. They would please the whole family. Here’s hoping this standard will be carried out in this youth team’s feature pictures. Seven reels.—H. E. Timmerlake, Isabelle theatre, Stevenson, Ala.—General patronage.

WINGS

Special cast—December 16-27. Better than any picture ever played here in eight years, but Paramount got half the money. Did better second and third nights than the first.—Charles Chicas, New Lincoln theatre, Pleasanton, Cal.—Small town patronage.

WINGS

Special cast—90%. Fine. In fact, the best for me in 1929. Had to pay a high price, but Not only those prominent today can lay claim to the affections of the exhibitor and the members of his family. Of the three feminine players representing interesting features of the vote this week, two have yielded to the demand for new screen personalities. And yet the votes those that Louise Lovely (center) and Shirley Mason (right) are by no means forgotten. Mary Brian, Paramount player prominent in pictures these days, goes forward in the standing this week in a way to indicate that not only stars may win tributes in the theatre and exhibitor's home.

LOVE OVER NIGHT: Jeannette Loff—45%—Beaver.
A splendid little program picture will many conical situations. Please all Jeannette Loff, of course, is not very well known, but she is a good little actress—Guy B. Aims, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

KING OF KINGS: Special cast—This is a good picture, but we located news on it too much. Ten reels—A. S. Alexander, Palace theatre, Bradford, Tenn.—General patronage.

KING OF KINGS: Special cast—40%. January 7-8. Truly a remarkable picture did they do business in account of flu epidemic. It is good enough for a return engagement. Amazing comments from the few who saw it. Twelve reels—J. L. Long, Opera house, Fort Payne, Ala.—General patronage.

KING OF KINGS: Special cast—45%. November 21-24. To my mind it is the supreme achievement in motion picture art. The best lighted picture ever seen, with the sons in beautiful colors. It outdid any picture shown here. Ran four days in a one-night town. The title and theme will draw people who never at tended a theatre, and the picture will add prestige to any theatre. Good photo-ops.—Guy B. Aims, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

ANNAPOLIS: John Mark Brown—From a director standpoint almost perfect, and of course by being an Alabamas boy, I stepped on it and didn’t realize it. Just as John Mark, that’s your cue picture. Will please the young folks.

—Winton W. Lowery, Strand theatre, Atmore, Ala.—Small town patronage.

HOLD EM YALE: Rod L Rocco—50%. January 14. Fair. Sold to us as special, but only fair picture. Not for the reels. Rotten pictures. This bird who played a part of a detective killed the picture. Eight reels—J. L. Long, Opera House, Fort Payne, Ala.—General patronage.

FORBIDDEN LOVE: Special cast—January 22. My audience did not know the stars in the picture and they didn’t like them. Their names are too hard to pronounce for we Americans. But we like it. Excellent four reel good picture. It’s the most dramatic love picture ever played. It is massive and beautiful in every scene. Everyone likes it. Walter Odom and Sons, Dixie theatre, Durant, Miss.—Small town patronage.

SIN TOWN: Special cast—45%—January 18-19. A good Western. But the people in the picture are not actors. This subject might help you some pictures. Five reels—P. Donaldson, Bijou theatre, greenhouse, SC.—General patronage.

BLIND BEAUTY: Rex—January 16. Patrons say it’s the best horse picture we have had. Everyone gave it a boost—Frank E. Sahin, Majestic theatre, Espan, Mont.—Small town patronage.

SADDLE MATES: Wally Wales—January 9. Good little Western for Saturday night. Fire reals—William E. Tragedal, Trags theatre, Neilville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CELEBRITY: Special cast—Rotten. Should have never been released. That kind of a picture here two guys showing how just how tough things could be. We have a good picture, it’s fops. But this kind pans over. Six reels—Rudolph Duda, Royal theatre, Kinhall, S. D.—General patronage.

Rayarr

GIPSY OF THE NORTH: Huntsley Gordon—15%—January 15. Here is a picture anyone should not. It is sold right and it is a knockout from the point of entertainment—a good real story. It has a good, clean, simple story packed off the map and doesn’t cost you any fortune, either. We have no lease on this one, we think we have a good picture, it fops. But this kind pans over. Six reels—Rudolph Duda, Royal theatre, Kinhall, S. D.—General patronage.

RKO (FBO)

CAFE MARR: Orel Borden—25%—January 11. We either expected too much or just thought we’d see a real picture, but failed to see anything much that couldn’t, be No special, hardly a program picture and a poor one at that. Watch out, boys, before you buy the six specialties. They’ll well be flown, the way we

DECLAR: Buddy Rogers—42%—January 19. This picture was well liked by everyone but the operators. The film was all messed up and should never have been sent out without having been fixed. Eight reels—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, High ridg, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE WATER HOUSE: Jack Holt—January 13. This one fooled me, as it not only drew well but pleased. I did not think it was up to the standard of the old and the new of Hul’s other pictures, but they liked it, so I must be mistaken. Five reels—Leslie Hales, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Calif.—Small town patronage.

THE RACKET: Thomas Meighan—January 12-13. A very good crook melodrama. Meighan does some fine work, but he doesn’t seem to draw for us. Seven reels—Rex Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Robesonia, Pa.—Small town patronage.

APACHES OF PARIS: Special cast—22%—January 16. Plenty of action to make it live up to the title. Photography very good. Seven reels—Rex Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Robesonia, Pa.—Small town patronage.

THE TELL-TALE HEART: Jack Holt—January 13. This is an excellent production and was well received. In admisions, but ought to give general satisfaction. It is American story and should be run everywhere. Eight reels—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Hollyroid, Kan.—Small town patronage.

KIT CARSON: Fred Thomson—December 18-19. My with the good stars that make up this fast story is not until death is a great loss to an industry that needed many more of his kinds. "The Western"—Seven reels—E. M. Riddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—General patronage.

SPORTING GOODS: Richard Dix—Good picture for small town. W. Pahrekhin, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ind.—General patronage.

ALL THE MAD: Special cast—December 26-27. This and “Peaks of Destiny” are two pieces of limburger imported from Germany by Paramount. A clothes pin for the probeols, Adolph. Six reels—E. M. Riddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—General patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Beery-Hatton—40%. Not much to this one. Punny in spots. This pair have made better ones.—W. Pahrekhin, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ind.—General patronage.

GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES: Special cast—December 28. A dandy program picture depicting the workings of a blonde gold digger shy assisted by a snappy brunette (Alice White), turned into a brunette for this picture by E. M. Riddle—William J. Tragedal, Trags theatre, Neilville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE COVERED WAGON: Special cast—January 4-5. This was a return showing on this picture, and while it did not do as much as we expected, it held up with other pictures shown on same night of the week, and in this spite of sickness and icy roads.—Ernest H. Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THEY SAW NO GOOD FOR ME: Print and photography good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Gris wold, la.—General patronage.

WARMING UP: Richard Dix—Nothing out of the ordinary. A personal picture, watch this little lady, Jean Arthur. I think she is exceptionally good and if given a chance, will stack up with the best of them.—Winton W. Lowery, Strand theatre, Al more, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE LAST COMMAND: Emil Jannings—17%. Good picture, well acted but too heavy for small town.—W. Pahrekhin, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ind.—General patronage.

EASY COME, EASY GO: Richard Dix—26%. Picture just fair. Business rotten due to lids.—W. Pahrekhin, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ind.—General patronage.

OLD IRONSIDES: Special cast—January 16-17. This is an excellent production and was well received. In admisions, but ought to give general satisfaction. It is American history and should be run everywhere. Eight reels—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Hollyroid, Kan.—Small town patronage.

KING OF KINGS: Special cast—January 8. A good Western. But the people in the picture are not actors. This subject might help you some pictures. Five reels—P. Donaldson, Bijou theatre, greenhouse, SC.—General patronage.

GIPSY: Rex—January 16. Patrons say it’s the best horse picture we have had. Everyone gave it a boost—Frank E. Sahin, Majestic theatre, Espan, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Past and Present United in Vote

William Haines (left) and Charles Rogers, with William Farnum between them. Thus the Past is brought into the Present typographically, as has been done in the voting this week. Farnum, hero of many a picture and fight, (remember "The Spoilers") in days gone by, was nominated several weeks ago, and this week goes into a tie for second place, only a few votes behind the leader. Haines, enjoying increasing popularity in MGM productions, takes a long stride forward in this week's standing, as does "Buddy" Rogers, the rising Paramount player, who is the "baby" of this trio.

LITTLE SNOB.” The plot was very poor, with several things left to the imagination. One of the poorest Rhin-Tin-Tin picture I ever played.—Ernest H. Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

DON JUAN: J. Barrymore—December 4-27. This pleased better than most costume pictures. For the most part the picture pleased in a way to look at, and Barrymore is always good and brought out a very good Colleen Moore—Fox theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

THE SKY RANGE: Reed Howes—Don’t overlook this bunch of two reeles. Educational has hit the mark with these few shorts.—Leslie Hales, Reid theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

PAGING MR. FARNUM

New times, new stars. But are the old ones forgotten? The “My Favorite Player’s” contest is proving that they are not, and among the giants of the screen whose followers still gracefully remember them with their votes, is William Farnum. In sending in his vote and those of the 11 others, giving Farnum a boost of ten votes, James P. Comfort, whose theatre is the Lyric in Norristown, Pa., adds, with hope that his follower will return to the screen. Writes Brother Comfort: “My brother exhibitor, John L. Comfort, who is very fond of Mr. Farnum, sent in their ballots when this contest first started, and my family of movie fans also. We did not vote in the first vote, but in William Farnum was in his glory, his name in front of a theatre meant to hang out the old S. R. O. sign, out. Within a radius of 100 miles or more, Farnum is still remembered and often spoken of.”

Mr. Farnum is at present performing in Chicago with much success in George C. Foster’s production of the Shakespearean tragedy, “Macbeth,” taking the role of Macduff.

FOX

GOW’S HUSBAND: The rotundest title and stirriest comic I’ve run for many a moon. Boys, if you like to laugh—get this one in the week basket and don’t play it. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimmibli, S. D.—General patronage.

ELEPHANTS ELBOWS: This is a dandy comedy and will bring plenty of laughs.—A. S. Alexander, Fairview theatre, Recee.—General patronage.

LONG NECKER: Very good. The horse in this is fine. Two reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswol, Ia.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

AGING YOUTH: Charlie Chase—Several laughs this one. Two reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Patol, Ind.—General patronage.

ALL PARTS: Charlie Chase—Only fair. Chase isn’t so hot anymore.—J. R. L. Reid opera house, Fort Payne, Ala.—General patronage.

BARNUM AND RINGLING, INC.: Our Gang—Simple gags. Our Gang is always good for extra business here. Like Cartoons, they make the kids continually yell for more. Two reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—General patronage.

BARNUM AND RINGLING, INC.: Our Gang—Fair, Below Gang average. Two reels.—Frank Johnson, Opera house, Louisville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG WALLOP: Our Gang—Seemed to please the older folks as well as the kiddies. Two reels. Hardy Garrison, Opera house, Velin, S. D.—Small town patronage.

BLOW BY BLOW: Max Davidson—Had them rolling on the floor with laughter. A riot! Two reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—General patronage.

FEED ‘EM AND WEEP: Max Davidson—Max Davidson puts this over with a bang. Two reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Troy, Ala.—General patronage.

FINISHING TOUCH: Laurel-Hardy—Another scream from these boys. If only we could show commercials every one of these pictures. Many good comments, and a few folks asked us when we were going to show another of this pair.—Frank Johnson, Opera house, Louisville, Neb.—Small town patronage.

IMAGINE MY EMBARRASSMENT: Charles Chase—One of the best comedies of the month. Three reels.—Joey Conway, Egyptian theatre, Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.—General patronage.

MG NEWSREEL: I thought the salesman exaggerated a little when he sold it to me, but it is definitely the best newsreel I have seen this year. It’s hard to vote for a picture that has never been shown here before. A real hit.—F. M. Biddle, Reid theatre, Kimmibli, Cal.—Small town patronage.

MG NEWSREEL: Very good.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Patol, Ind.—General patronage.

PASS THE GRAYV: Max Davidson—Fine twenty, worth the time to watch it and then some. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimmibli, S. D.—General patronage.

RUBY LIPS: Charlie Chase—Very good. Two reels.—J. R. L. Reid, Opera house, Fort Payne, Ala.—General patronage.

SHOULD MARRIED MEN GO HOME? Laurel-Hardy—One of the funniest to date. This pair is always good, great laughs on every Laurel-Hardy so far. Two reels.—J. R. L. Reid, Opera house, Fort Payne, Ala.—General patronage.

SHOULD MARRIED MEN GO HOME? Laurel-Hardy—This pair have the world theatrical in making the big laugh hits. Two reels.—Leslie Hales, Reid theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SOUP TO NUTS: Hardy-Laurel—Here are the best two roughhouse comedy artists in pictures today. If they don’t laugh at this one, throw ‘em to the lions! Two reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—General patronage.

THE SPANKING AGE: Our Gang—Without a doubt the best “Our Gang” to date. Metro comedies are the best on the market. Two reels.—Stanley Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Robesonia, Pa.—Small town patronage.

THE SPANKING AGE: Our Gang—Judging from audience reaction as well as our own opinion, this is one of the best “Our Gang” pictures yet seen. Not so far out of average age. And the photography was mostly good. Dare this newfangled out-of-focus effect anyway! We want clean, good pictures.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Robesonia, Pa.—General patronage.

THE SPANKING AGE: Our Gang—This is the real stuff. We haven’t seen better laughs from any picture in the last six months. Two reels.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

TWO ACE SPECimens: Laurel-Hardy—Fair comedy. Two reels.—Theodore Stillings, Imperial theatre, Warrenton, N. C.—General patronage.

THAT NIGHT: Max Davidson—This is a winner. I think this boy makes them better each time, and this one was the best yet.—Leslie Hales, Reid theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THAT NIGHT: Max Davidson—One of the best mystery comedies to date. Lots of good comments. Two reels.—J. R. L. Reid, Opera house, Fort Payne, Ala.—General patronage.

TWO TARS: Laurel-Hardy—The best comedy we’ve run in years. Two reels.—J. R. L. Reid, Opera house, Fort Payne, Ala.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL PANTS: Charlie Chase—A funny comedy. Two reels.—Theodore Stillings, Imperial theatre, Patol, Ind.—General patronage.

WE FAW DOWN: Laurel-Hardy—It’s a knock-out, with Laurel and Hardy doing their stuff. Two reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Troy, Ala.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

BELIEVE IT OR NOT: Frances Lee—More fun than the chorus girls series. They all have snap as well as comedy. Two reels.—H. K. Timmerle, Isabelle theatre, Stevenson, Ala.—General patronage.

HAROLD L. SIEGEL

HAROLD L. SIEGEL, distributor of the De Forest Phonofilm for Illinois, Indiana and Iowa, gave a luncheon and special demonstration of the device February 1. Approximately 72 attended the luncheon at the Stevens, and 56 went out to the Symphony theatre to see and hear RKO's "The Circus Kid" over Phonofilm. Exhibitors from 50 miles away came in to hear the machine. Joe Lyons and Robert Churchill of the local De Forest office, assisted in conducting the affair. According to Siegel, seven sales resulted from the demonstration. Following is a list of those who attended:

Among those from surrounding towns were: Jack Miller, Woodstock; M. Lerman, South Bend; George Krueger, Hinsdale; A. Kernbach, Wheaton; Jeffries Brothers, Ottawa; Catlow Brothers, Barrington; and Mrs. M. Gracey and daughter of Crystal Lake.

The circuits that had men present were Balaban & Katz, Marks Brothers, Coston, Cooney Brothers, Saperstein and Retchin, and the Howard Circuit.

A testimonial dinner was given for Earl Silverman and Carl Harthill at the Stevens hotel last week. The dinner, according to Bill Brumberg, was a big success and well attended. Those present were Earl Silverman, Carl Harthill, Clyde Eckhart, Felix Mendelssohn, Grad Sears, Bill Brumberg, Irving Mandell, Joe and Louise Abramson, Abe Fisher, Jerry Mandel, Ben Judell, Mr. Morey, Henri Elman, Dave Dubin and Harry Lorch, Harvey Day of Educational's home office also was present.

Max Freedman is now assistant booker at Columbia.

The Columbia office secretarial staff now consists of Lucile Castle, Sally Gore and Norma Silak.

During the luncheon of the DeForest at the Stevens Hotel last week smoking darkened the room to such an extent that some one admonished in stentorian tones, "You're Not Allowed to Smoke!" and that brought an indignant reply from one guest, who declared that he had received permission to smoke from his mother and so he could if he wanted to.

He was also over 21, apparently—and smoke he did.

Dan Roche achieved the honor of being a guest at his own son's birthday party last Saturday.

The new Ada theatre, located at 51st and Ada Streets, had its opening February 2. The house seats 360.

The Lindy theatre on West Madison Street has closed its doors.

The Windsor theatre, 433 Lormeill has changed hands. George F. Rider is the new manager of the house. Louis Lamm was formerly the owner.

Joe Pastor was seen flashing a new overcoat last week. Frank Ishmael said he'd like to know what street Joe takes going home. (We didn't tell him, Joe so no come-backs if anything happens.)

The M-G-M office was treated to a little act given by Max Schwartz and Frank Ishmael last week. With the help of a derby, they did a Chaplin, and it is unrelievably stated that several circuits would sign 'em up.

N. Provencher, formerly with Tiffany-Stahl, is now connected with Columbia as a special representative in the Midwest territory. Provencher, who enjoys something like fame under the title of "Bull Montana," asks exhibitors to be on the lookout for him.

Miss Louise Linden has returned to the Columbia office and will resume her former position as secretary to Cecil Maberry. She has been away a year.

Ernie Grohe of Fox, was confined by a cold to his home for the last two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Miller and son, left last week for a ten-day vacation in the Rio Grande Valley.

Arnold Sesak of the Kinoton theatre, returned to Chicago last week after visiting California for five weeks.

Three more theatres will open with sound very shortly. They are the North Center, DeLuxe and Linden.

Joe Koble formerly manager of two Universal theatres, resigned his position last week.

Nathan Wolf of the Biltmore, Vision and Newberry theatres, has gone to Hot Springs for a short vacation.

The M-G-M office celebrated the birthday of Frank Ishmael February 5. And of course everyone is aware that George Washington and Abraham Lincoln have birthdays this month.

Jack Baker put over a new publicity stunt at White City ballroom last week. Over 1,000 "Oswald, the Lucky Rabbit," pins were passed out to those at the dance.

Great States is planning a new theatre in Aurora, to be situated a few blocks west of the Rialto, now under construction. The new house will be called the Fox, the name of the theatre razed to make room for the Rialto. The Fox will have 1,000 seats. The Rialto will seat 2,500, and these two with two smaller houses operated in Aurora by Great States will give this suburb 5,000 seats. It is said, however, that these latter two may be discontinued upon completion of the Fox.

The Bijou in Decatur, which was recently taken over by Great States, is to be closed for remodeling.

A higher premium than ever before

Today — in this new era of sound pictures — there is a higher premium than ever before on film uniformity. For sound quality is even more sensitive than screen quality to any variation in the film.

If your “talkie” prints are on Eastman film — famous for uniformity — your patrons are seeing and hearing the very best that this newest development in motion pictures has to offer.

OPINIONS
By W. R. WILKERSON

SHORT REELS

Paramount has three short subjects now running at the Criterion that far surpass any other sound shorts yet made. They are "Two Little Chinese Maids", "Highlow-brow" and "The False Alarm Fire Company." These subjects run the gamut of subject matter for pictures of the short reel variety in sound. "Two Little Chinese Maids" presents music, song and a bit of a dance, done in a set and with lighting that stamps it as unusual. "Highlow-brow" is a short for the better type audiences in cities and towns where the crow of a chicken is an unusual noise. "The False Alarm Fire Company" is sound comedy in its "nth" and will be a riot wherever shown. The three of them will relieve any exhibitor of a lot of worry, for after seeing them he will be in a position to say to himself—"if a company can make them so good in such a variety as I have seen, I need not have any worry where I am going to get the short reels I want in sound."

You're absolutely right Mr. Wilkerson and it's the opinion of every thinking exhibitor:

In SOUND SHORT FEATURES too, there's only one REAL LEADER —
Just as Paramount's great talking feature pictures, like "Interference", "The Wolf of Wall Street" and "The Doctor's Secret", are the talk of the screen world—so Paramount Sound Short Features are being hailed as the class of market! The only singing, talking, dancing shorts of the ONE AND ONLY PARAMOUNT QUALITY! Starring the most famous artists of stage and films. Breezy, of dazzling variety, entertainment gems! Produced with the same lavish care and talent as Paramount features. And perfectly recorded! Broadway is raving about them. Your people will too.

FACTS: ABOUT PACENT REPRODUCER SYSTEMS

And the organization behind them

It's not good business to buy sound equipment with your eyes shut, without the full facts before you. Pacent Reproducer Corporation wants every exhibitor throughout the country to know the facts about Pacent Reproducer Systems. That is why we publish this advertisement, a plain statement of their merits and advantages in your theatre.

Every Exhibitor Wants These Facts About Pacent Reproducer Systems Before Buying Sound Equipment

1. All Electric Operation: Batteries have no place in any Pacent Reproducer System. Our equipment operates direct from any 110 volt 60 cycle alternating current commercial outlet. No batteries of any kind used.

2. Highest Quality Reproduction: We want exhibitors to hear our systems in operation and judge the quality of reproduction for themselves. You will agree with us that Pacent Reproducer Systems set a new standard of quality performance.

3. Compact and Efficient: All amplifying equipment housed in a single steel cabinet, conveniently small in size, that fits in almost anywhere. Pacent Amplifiers combine compactness with special design features which make them, weight for weight, 25% more efficient than other amplifiers for theatre use.

4. Low Price: Pacent Reproducer Systems stand in a price class by themselves. Never before have synchronous full double channel reproducer systems been available at such low prices. $2,500 buys the Model 2MDA Pacent System, for houses with seating capacity not over 2,900 seats. $3,500 for Model 4MDA Pacent System for theatres from 2,000 to 4,000 seats.

5. Film Attachment Soon Ready: Pacent Reproducer Systems are now built for the disc method of reproduction. The Pacent Film attachment will soon be available for sound-on-film method of reproduction.

6. Installation and Service: Complete service department now functioning at top efficiency. Trained engineers in charge of every installation. Dozens of telegrams from exhibitors tell of wonderful job done by our men.

30 service depots now being established throughout the country to supervise installation and upkeep of Pacent Reproducer Systems.

A Trade Paper Truly Representative of the Character and Scope of the Motion Picture Industry—

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

NOT on the insecure basis of Broadway chatter, but on the sound basis of facts. EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD stands supreme and preeminent among the trade publications in the motion picture field.

FIRST, in circulation—genuine paid circulation, evidencing the willingness of the reader to pay for value received, and not throw-away distribution in which the advertising salesman magically "thinks of a number" when he is called upon for a circulation statement.

FIRST, in character, honesty and reliability—without cheap compromises with petty manipulators in the trade—without blackmail or bravado—without fear of the biggest or disrespect for the smallest.

FIRST, in news of the business and box office information—without the unholy puff and blurb and without cheap adulation dictated by advertising appropriations.

FIRST, in service departments which lighten the complex burden of managing a theatre.

FIRST, in the estimation of 12,865 subscribers who pay for the HERALD-WORLD and consider it a better bargain than getting the other papers gratis.

—Martin J. Quigley
The success of Vitaphone subjects, both features and shorts, their proven box office value and the general enthusiastic approval with which they have been and are being received, has been due to two major factors:

1. The unremitting care exercised in their production—the constant effort, without regard to production cost, to improve the product in all its aspects,—technically, artistically and as entertainment.

2. The excellence of the studio recording equipment and theatre reproducing equipment manufactured by Western Electric and its subsidiary company, Electrical Research Products, Inc.,—of which The Vitaphone Corporation is the original licensee—backed up by exhaustive and continuous research of the engineering staffs of those companies and of Bell Telephone Laboratories.

It would not be in the interest of the public, the exhibitors or The Vitaphone Corporation to lower the standards of quality which have created the present widespread demand for Vitaphone product and for equipment by means of which it may be reproduced.

Inadequate reproduction of Vitaphone product, by means of inferior equipment, while it might yield temporary gain to exhibitors and to The Vitaphone Corporation, would in the long run be damaging to the individual exhibitors, to The Vitaphone Corporation and to the industry.

The Vitaphone Corporation, therefore, will require reproduction of its product by means of equipment which operates properly, reliably and efficiently to reproduce the same with adequate volume and quality equal to that obtained by the use of equipment supplied by Electrical Research Products, Inc.

Where such satisfactory equipment is installed, The Vitaphone Corporation will, subject to its regular sales policies and then existing commitments, enter into negotiations with the exhibitor for its product.

Unfair Advertising

A particularly objectionable type of advertising, which is now plaging exhibitors at many points throughout the country, has been brought to our attention by Mr. A. Hayman of the Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Nebraska.

The advertisement referred to is concerned with the promotion of a patent medicine known as "Grove's Bromo Quinine." It features the figure of a person wearing a gas mask and reading a theatre program. The display line in the advertisement reads, "dressed for the theatre."

The advertisement is obviously a cheap and sensational bid for attention. In the mind of the mis-guided patent medicine advertiser there was obviously the notion that by lurid reference to the danger to health in crowds that the public could be aroused, resulting in larger sales for the medicine. The advertisement is plainly in bad taste and is unethical, if not illegal.

It may be pointed out that advertising of this character—even aside from the damage that it does to the theatre business—has been specifically frowned on by the United States Post Office Department as well as various other agencies interested in truth and fair play in advertising. The Post Office Department has pointed out, with reference to the spread of influenza during the past few months, that any publicity effort which tends to excite the public mind is decidedly against public policy. In some instances advertisers have been requested to change the wording and illustrations of advertisements so as to avoid the possibility of creating a panic in the minds of the public.

It is unfortunate that the Grove's Bromo Quinine advertising has not been stopped before it was permitted to do the damage to the theatre business which it has done.

Exhibitors are urged to communicate with their local newspapers with a view to ascertaining whether this particularly objectionable piece of advertising is scheduled to be run in their towns. Publishers should have their attention directed to this advertisement and it should be made plain to them that such advertising, in addition to being unfair to the theatre business, amounts to a case of bad public policy. The nearest branch of the Better Business Bureau, which seeks to have maintained the best standards of truth and fair play in advertising, should be communicated with. The cooperation of local druggists toward prevailing upon the medicine company to cease and desist from this policy of advertising also should be sought.

Censoring Speech

THE Hearst newspapers, which should know better, are again breaking out in editorial approval of federal censorship of motion pictures. These and earlier outbursts are due to one of those extraordinary notions that occasionally overtake the owner of these newspapers, Mr. William Randolph Hearst.

Mr. Hearst, because of his unusual intelligence, together with his familiarity with the basic considerations of censorship in any form, would never be expected to be found on the side of censorship, regardless of the kind. But he seems to have a habit of being found occasionally where he should not be. One of these instances is in the matter of federal censorship of motion pictures.

The whole subject of motion picture censorship has received one of its periodic awakenings as the result of a recent and extraordinary decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Although the original censorship in Pennsylvania obviously had only to do with motion pictures, we are now accorded an opportunity to contemplate the conclusion of the learned court which says that the law authorizes the censoring of film—not motion pictures—and that film, whether sound or silent, is still film.

In other words, the court decides that sound pictures as well as silent pictures must pass in review before the censors.

While we make no legal pretensions, still it does seem to us that the court must either misunderstand the case entirely—which would be nothing new in legal history—or else it has been subjected to some rather severe pressure from the elements of intolerance which are seeking very hard to run their neighbor's business.

How, by any stretch of reason, or even imagination, could the Pennsylvania motion picture censorship law, passed before the birth in practicable form of sound pictures, be construed to have contemplated the censoring of sound pictures as well as silent pictures?

Almost every argument against the censorship of motion pictures generally applies with added force against the censorship of sound and talking pictures.

Protection

WHILE Mr. Abram F. Myers, president of the Allied States exhibitors association, is engaging himself in an effort to get the Department of Justice to enjoin producers and manufacturers of sound equipment from performing certain existing agreements, it again seems timely to ask the question as to just what good this effort, even if successful, will accomplish?

He desires to force distributors to serve independent sound devices. . . . What distributors are refusing to serve independent sound devices and who are the exhibitors with sound equipment of any reasonable efficiency who are unable to get product?

However important this question of service to independent equipment may become in the future, right now there are various other issues which seem, to us at least, to be very much more pressing. Among these is the outrageous protection periods being insisted upon by various of the large circuits.

—MARTIN J. QUIGLEY
Advertiser Should Require Audited Circulation of All Film Papers, Says Thomson

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The value and importance of certified circulation in the trade papers of the motion picture industry was brought home in no uncertain terms to the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers at its meeting here last Tuesday by P. L. Thomson, director of advertising for the vast Western Electric organization and president of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

A hundred members of the A. M. P. A., including many of the industry’s advertising leaders, crowded a private dining room of the Paramount hotel to hear Thomson speak. They were rewarded with an address that interspersed wit and humor with tightly packed sound thinking.

Thomson’s address was clear and simple, as pointed and as understandable as the system of certified circulation and knowing buying that he advocated. He urged the industry to require audited circulation figures from all publications in the industry, not because he suspected deceit or chicanery, but because it was good business.

Thomson expressed his surprise that only one paper in the field is a member of the A. B. C. That paper is the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD, whose circulation is not only audited and classified; it is as well the biggest circulation in the field, indicating clearly that it is good business for the publisher as well as the advertiser to open his circulation books.

Thomson’s address, of interest alike to all who buy advertising and all who read advertising, is condensed as follows:

"The principle back of audited circulation is simple. The difficult thing to understand is why it isn’t universally accepted by advertisers and publishers in this great industry.

"As heads of families you gentlemen buy your steaks or your candy by the pound, your coal by the ton—units of measure set up by the government. You buy land by the foot or acre. You buy your hooch by the quart or gallon, and then you have it tested by a chemist to find what proof it is—if there’s any adulterant in it. That is to say, you make sure that it’s up to accepted standard. That doesn’t mean that all steak or all land is worth the same price per pound or per foot, and it’s the same with circulation. There’s where the quality argument enters and salesmanship begins. You can be your own judge whether you want to buy porterhouse steak or round. You just want to be sure that when you’re paying for porterhouse the seller hasn’t included a lot of rump.”

"Now that’s how you buy as heads of families. Then as representatives of your companies you turn around and buy advertising on hunches. For don’t forget it isn’t pages of white space you buy—it’s circulation—" it's readers buying power; and in this great industry you've got no standard of measuring circulation.

"You are still satisfied to spend thousands of your companies' dollars on your guess as to the value of the influence of the publication unsupported by verified figures. And, gentlemen, in this respect you are about 15 years behind the procession, when you ought to be in the forefront.

"For this idea of setting up standards was accepted by the leading advertisers and publishers in America away back in 1913 when they got together and organized the A. B. C. and since then it has grown so that its membership is a veritable 'Who's Who in Advertising and Publishing.' Nine hundred and fifty newspapers, 200 magazines, 250 business papers, 200 agencies and 200 advertisers, and no industry a quarter the size of yours but has put its publishing house in order.

Not All Circulation Is of Equal Value

"Right here let me emphasize that this doesn't mean that all circulation is of equal value to you. Because magazine A has 10,000 and magazine B 8,000 and the page rate is the same, you may still want to use the latter at a somewhat higher page rate because of other considerations. But if, for instance 3,000 of those 8,000 are subscribers over six months in arrears then on an A. B. C. statement they can't be carried as net paid and with that deduction and a net of only 5,000 you might conclude that a unit cost per page for magazine B twice as large as magazine A is too great a premium to pay. As it stands now you are undoubtedly paying for a lot of such circulation in arrears, only you don't know it except in the case of one of your trade journals which is an A. B. C. member.

"The same is true of sample copies, of copies bought in bulk and circulated indiscriminately without any payment whatever by the recipient. Can there be any doubt that there is less reader, less buying power in circulation of that sort than in paid-in-advance circulation. Yet your non-A. B. C. paper throws that all into the hopper and you pay the same for it all.

"Under a recent rule of the Bureau, trade papers are compelled to make an occupational classification of their readers, the basis being a matter of agreement between the publishers in each industry.

Occupational Grouping Shows Buying Power

"The policy of the A. B. C. in approaching a new field is to consult with advertisers and trade paper publishers alike and draw up occupational classifications that will help the advertiser better to judge the buying power of any trade paper's circulation with respect to his particular product, be it films, raw stock, organs, theatre equipment, or what not.

"If the motion picture industry desires to avail itself of the services of the A. B. C. that sort of a classification would be worked out, and reports of totals under each listing would, I think show buyers of the industry for the first time in its history, how much and what kind of circulation the publishers are offering.

"For purposes of discussion I suggest the classification of trade paper circulation in this industry should be made in two parts, Film Users and Non-Film Users, subdivided as follows:

FILM USERS
- Officials of theatre chains
- Independent theatre operators
- Theatre managers who do not do film buying for their houses

NON-USERS
- Producers, distributors and exchanges
- Newsstands

"Newstand sales are of course separated from mail subscriptions, as they should be, for certainly they represent less buying power for most of you gentlemen than subscribing theatre managers for instance. But now you buy it all in a lump, with no opportunity to check the rate per thousand of circulation on one magazine, with the rate for like circulation on another.

This, my friends, is waste and it is an inexcusable waste because you can easily stop it. It is just a matter of educating the publishers in this industry to meet the standards which have so greatly improved both publishing and advertising results in other lines of business.

"You may have noticed in Printers Ink last week that Australia is going to have an audit bureau. This is the result of the visit which a distinguished Australian advertiser recently made to the United States to study our advertising practice. It is a safe bet he didn't learn anything about audited circulation in this industry.

Buying Circulation ByAccurate Measure

"Gentlemen, I urge these considerations upon you not with the idea of disciplining any publishers, but solely because they are economically sound and in line with the present day trend to apply engineering standards to business, substitute facts for guesswork and eliminate waste. I am confident that if you go to the executives of your companies with this proposal they will support you. They can buy circulation by just as accurate measure as they buy raw stock and as my company buys steel and copper.

"I think the practical result of your insisting upon audited publishers' statements will be as it has been in other industries—the strong papers will grow stronger and only the weak ones which can't stand up under an audit will pass out. That's just letting nature take its course.

"This industry needs publications strong, both financially and editorially. 'No publication is too small to afford membership. A. B. C. statement is a certificate of good character. No buyer of advertising can afford to place a contract with a publisher without studying his A. B. C. statement.

"I want to make it clear that what I have said is in no respect intended as a reflection upon the honesty of trade papers in this industry that do not have an A. B. C. audit.

Matter of Sound Business Principles

"To me the A. B. C. audit is not so much a matter of morals as of sound business principles. Personally, from what I know of your trade paper publishers, I might be willing to accept their sworn statements of circulation without question.

After Thomson's address was concluded, he passed a few questions to be asked. One, from an oldtimer in the industry, whose experiences were gained during the dark days when showmanship meant kidding the public and kidding yourself, attempted to warn Thomson that A. B. C. wouldn't go in the motion picture industry, because the industry was packed with crooks. This ridiculous attitude was promptly resented by many of those present, some of whom—for instance, Harold Flavin of Paramount—went to Thomson after his talk and protested at any such libel of the men doing advertising in the industry.
"Broadway Melody" Held Finest Picture Yet Produced in Sound

Director Harry Beaumont Does Something New with All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Film—Bessie Love Proves Herself Real Actress—Dialogue Written by Experts

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—By all odds, the finest picture yet made in sound came to the Astor theatre Saturday night in "The Broadway Melody." This all-talking-singing-dancing film, directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Harry Beaumont, is recognized by critics as the first truly great example of the newest of entertainment mediums, sound and screen combined.

When a picture like "The Broadway Melody" comes along, critics may well regret the reckless use of superlatives for lesser pictures of the past. This one drew prolonged applause from a crowded house of keen-witted observers. It will draw columns of praise and reams of comment. It was grand entertainment from start to finish.

"The Broadway Melody" is an audien musical comedy. It was written by Edmund Goulding, an experienced author, and had the advantage of dialogue by such recognized experts as Norman Houston and the incomparable Jimmy Gleason. It had music and lyrics that might actually be heard in a Broadway musical comedy, in place of sappy theme songs. It was at the theatre!

"The Melody" Beaumont made a real actress out of Bessie Love. This competent little performer, one now known, has been poorly well wasted in the past. Beaumont found depths in her ability that the finest of actresses might be proud of. He saw to it that she had good support through the film. Lesser parts were beautifully played by Kenneth Thomson, Edward Dillon, Jef Frouty, and others.

It is a matter of record and not of enthusiasm that this is something new in pictures. Heretofore, there has been just one story for a sound picture, one story in various forms. Wonder sound pictures bored many patrons of the theatre! Here Beaumont has taken a story suited to any medium. He has played it with wit, speed, and imagination. He has taken a sure-fire locale, Broadway, and made it the scene of a moving conflict between two sisters for the same man. Never once did he allow his story to become dulled or banal; never once did he allow the speed of his entertainment to slacken.

This is a picture of which a great deal will still be written. So far it marks the high-water mark in sound entertainment.

It should break all existing records and win new honors for both Harry Beaumont and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—P.V.

Myers Asks Public To Support Policy of Allied States

(Special to the Herald-World)

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 12.—Public support of the principles for which Allied States stands was urged by Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel of the exhibitors' national organization, at an address of a large gathering of social and civic workers and 200 exhibitors in the grand ballroom of the Nicollet hotel on the second day of the Allied convention last week. Results of the business session the first day were detailed in last week's Herald-World.

James Shea, sales manager for Talkie-Phone, entertained the visiting delegates with a special showing of "The Trail of the White Logan the old west.

The morning of February 6 was given over to speeches by representatives of various sound devices, including D. W. Knowles, engineer for the Silver-Marshall company; W. E. Haupt, general engineer for Talkie-Phone; Ted Ertz, Oraphone and Bristolophone; Mickey Cohen, Photophone; James Shea, Talkie-Phone; and Charles Howard, Photophone. Special screenings were given in the afternoon.

Universal Movietone News Makes Bow Next Fall; Sam Jacobson Is in Charge

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Universal Movietone News will be the title of Universal's sound newreel, which will launch next fall with the subsidiary title of "The Talk of the World." Sam Jacobson, former publicity head on the Coast, will be in charge. The executive staff includes Harry Mack, assistant; Harold Lewis and Howard Dillinger on sound, and Herman Olbath, chief cameraman.

Universal Movietone News will be made under the Western Electric license, and first recording apparatus will be obtained next week.

No deal has been made as yet for distribution of International Newsreel at the conclusion of the Hearst contract.
What of the Press Book?

More press books meeting the publicity problem of the modern theatre are urged in the following article by J. J. Hess, director of publicity and advertising of Marks Brothers Theatres, Inc., Chicago. The writer tells of press books with inaccurate cast of character, or none, press books with synopsis that does not fit the story of the picture, press books not stating the length of the production, mats or cuts of stars who are not identified by name.

By J. J. HESS

THE trade paper advertising, true to its mission, had created a demand. The negotiations for the purchase of that mighty super-production, "Scarlet Pants Buttons," had been consummated with the usual altruism and good nature.

The booker pushed back fourteen or fifteen dates, and nothing was left but to gather the enormous profits that would accrue from exhibiting a production based upon the famous novel by Soando, directed by the director of "Whoози" and starring John Who and Stella Which. Resounding voices called heartily for the department of publicity and advertising. Things must be done!

In accordance with the well-founded traditions of the press agent, a polite request was made for a press book. The splendid and glowing fellow in the advertising department of the exchange, imbued with the spirit of service, extolled the virtues of postcard, doily, hanger, paper novelties with strings tied to them, and string novelties with paper tied to them. He then delivered a sales talk worthy of Yale students who sell magazine subscriptions. Interrupted and subjected to gentle pressure, he revealed that the press books had not yet arrived, but one could be secured from the exchange in Catalpa, Mexico, in four or five days. The press agent immediately phoned the nearest exchange, and secured one by special delivery the next morning.

Here then was the meaning of the string in on "Scarlet Pants Buttons!" The sheet was opened, and the first thing to meet the eager eye was:

"WRONG NUMBER"

"Did anyone ever make a proposal to you, Auntie?"

"Yes, once, over the telephone, but it was the wrong number."

Realizing the advertising department of a great producing company had picked this choice witicism for his especial amusement (for it had nothing whatsoever to do with "Scarlet Pants Buttons"), the press agent laughed.

Tells How Good Picture Is!

The front page of the press book proclaimed in no uncertain terms that the picture was "A Tremendous Box Office Smash." Furthermore, the exhibitor was urged to "Cash In On It," to "Get Behind It," and to "Explain It." No stone, it was exorted, should be left unturned to make the production bring in its full financial reward. It became all too apparent that the front page had been devoted to explaining to the exhibitor, who had already purchased the picture, that the picture was well worth promoting. But wait a minute!

Down in the left hand corner of the page, was a box. This surely must contain valuable information. It did. It proclaimed boldly and blackly that "White Suspenders," the sequel to "Scarlet Pants Buttons," was in the course of production, and would be released shortly. Moreover, the exhibitor was urged to contract early for this production, for it would bring him more money than "Scarlet Pants Buttons."

A Three-Color Brochure

A careful scrutiny of the press book proved that it was sent to a majority of other press books in that it told nothing about the picture, showed no feasible way of exploiting it, and was merely a three-color brochure provided for the salesman.

If anyone believes the above incidents have been distorted, let him make inquiry of those who have been publicizing motion picture pictures in any of the larger cities. Circuits with de luxe theatres find the material provided by those unfortunate who compile press books to be more than useless.

The stories optimistically labelled "Advance," "Current," and "Review" are in the main a synopsis of the picture rehearsed in the most ingenious manner. The first paragraph may have a few lines that differ, but the synopsis immediately becomes a showy sentiment. This is notwithstanding the fact that a complete synopsis, if read by the public, could not be the least bit helpful to the public. It is rarely that a picture with an object, a moral or with some enlightening view on society is treated from the angle that makes it interesting to the public.

The ad layouts prove that the compilers have no estimate of the value of the star or the cast in the picture. They are usually subordinated, while the title of the production itself is displayed prominently. It is certainly true that designers of these ads recognize the fact that motion picture theatres now have stage productions that must be mentioned with the picture. No space is provided for them at present. These ads can rarely be used for small town, community or foreign language newspapers; in fact their inadequacy created a demand which is well filled by an independent mat service.

Captions Should Name Stars

It is here suggested that this service now employ writers with some knowledge of the publicity problems of modern theatres so that this deficiency may be filled. Created press books should know that casts and mat should be reproduced should each caption state the names of the stars and not merely "A scene from 'Scarlet Pants Buttons'" or "Wear winning 'Scarlet Pants Buttons.'"-"A group of stars are acceptable to newspapers, while scenes in mat form, two columns by four inches showing ten of the characters in a violent struggle, print badly and do not attract the eye.

Catch lines that praise without explaining, and laud without provoking curiosity are dump firecrackers. There are press books that provide no cast of characters or an inaccurate one. Others have a synopsis that does not fit the story of the picture itself, perhaps because the picture has not been; but these deficiencies cause complaints from screen reviewers and critics, and oftentimes bring a poor review. Press books are as a rule do not contain the length of the picture, which is valuable information to theatres that wish to time the feature with their stage shows. The "ballyhoo" is by its invariably extravagant, impractical, and are in accordance with the general plan of the press book: to fill up space and puff the whole matter over.

Trucks that roam the streets with constructions upon them representing "The Old House," prizing arenas and groups of other calculations, are "boob busters" of a decayed age.

There have been many excellent press books. One producing company is providing good press books. The writer cherishes in his collection seven fair press books, but the greater majority are useless bilge.
Censorship and Seat Tax Bills
Pile Up In State Legislatures

Complete Repeal of All Ohio Censorship Laws Asked in New Measure—Proposal Filed in Massachusetts—
Kansas-Missouri Exhibitors Map Defense
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The legislatures have their eyes on the motion picture industry. Not only are they up to the old tricks of censorship in various forms, but they are after admissions.

The situation is one that every exhibitor should be familiar with, and the Herald-World herewith presents it in a nutshell:

Theatre admission taxes have been proposed in the following states:

- Colorado ........................................ 10%
- Connecticut ................................. 2% on gross
- Idaho ........................................ 10%
- Iowa ............................................ $ per reel
- Kansas ......................................... 3%
- Michigan ...................................... 5% on gross
- Missouri ........................................ 10%
- North Carolina .............................. 10% and 5% admission
- Ohio ............................................ $ 4 per reel
- Oregon .......................................... 2% on gross
- Tennessee ...................................... 10%
- Vermont ....................................... 10%
- West Virginia ................................. 10%
- South Dakota ................................. 10%

In addition to the above, bills have been drawn for presentation in Indiana, Mississippi, Nebraska and Utah, and tax bills are expected later in Oklahoma, Montana, Minnesota and South Carolina.

Censorship laws have been introduced in Connecticut, Nebraska and Ohio, and will be introduced in Pennsylvania to include sound censorship. A censorship repeal bill also has been introduced.

Bills to regulate attendance of children in theatres have been introduced as far in Colorado, Maryland, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York and Oregon, and we may expect them to be introduced in Texas, North Carolina and Iowa.

Other laws, such as daylight saving, Sunday closing, tax on foreign corporations aimed at chain theatres and chain stores, and labor measures, in 55 in number, can be added to the above which brings the total to 158 bills pending.

As an example of the seriousness of these bills Speaker Ming of the House in Michigan has made the amusement tax bill an "administrative matter" and he estimates the revenue to be derived in Michigan to be between six and seven million dollars a year.

The most serious admission tax situations are in Michigan, Ohio, Colorado, North Carolina, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas.

Gives Exhibitors Ammunition

"It is no more fair to tax a person to enter a theatre and spend a couple of hours enjoying a show than it is to tax that same person for sitting in his home while he is entertained by whatever comes over the radio," says I. H. Harris of the Harris Voeller Theatres at Butte, Idaho, in a column article in the Burleigh Herald in protest against the admission tax proposal in that state.

Harris has sent copies of the paper to exhibitors in their community newspapers.

Censor Bill in Oregon
(Special to the Herald-World)

SALEM, ORE., Feb. 12.—Again appears the biennial bill to provide for local censorship of motion pictures. It was introduced in the house of representatives by Senator Robinson of Clatsop county.

K-M Defense Growing
(Special to the Herald-World)

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 12.—The wheels of defense machinery are beginning to roll in the minds of Kansas exhibitors. District meetings of exhibitors and exchange representatives are being held throughout Kansas, while similar meetings are contemplated in Western Missouri soon.

Censor Repeal Asked
(Special to the Herald-World)

CLEVELAND, Feb. 12.—Complete repeal of all state censorship laws was proposed to the state legislature in a bill introduced by Senator George H. Bender of Cleveland.

A bill to provide for local option in Ohio municipalities relative to Sunday motion picture exhibitions has been prepared under the direction of officers and the board of trustees of the M. F. T. O. and will be introduced in the Ohio Legislature soon.

Censor Revision Sought
(Special to the Herald-World)

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Revision of the state censorship laws is probable as the result of action taken by theatre managers and the Massachusetts Library Club. A bill has been introduced providing for such revision and a hearing will be held later. The Library club declares that out of 60 books banned by the censors last year, only two were justifiable.

RKO Signs Raphaelson
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Sampson Raphaelson, author of "The Jazz Singer," has signed a contract with RKO for "My Boy."

Working Association of Distributors Forming in Berlin Includes Americans
(Special to the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The principal German distributors, among them Ufa, National Sudfilm, Bayerische, D. L. S., Parafilmet, and several American companies, are reported to be forming a working association, which will be registered as a trading concern, with a view to reduce distributing expenses, to promote co-operation in the different branches of the industry, according to the Department of Commerce.

Germany will be divided into three distributing districts only, with centres in Berlin, Frankfurt and Dusseldorf. Trade Con will be conducted by Mr. Cantiy. The present German Film Renters Association will be dissolved.

industry That Defames
Another Trade Declared
Narrow Between Eyes

"It seems to me that the Bromo Quinine people should be called down for such advertising," writes S. A. Hayman, manager of the Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb., to the Herald-World in sending in the clipping of the Grove's Bromo Quinine advertisement reproduced above. The ad subjects the advertising copy to blistering criticism by Mark J. Quigley on Page 20.

"Why pick on the theatre?" Hayman asks. It seems to me that as big a crowd congregates in ten-cent stores, dance halls, burlesque, lodges and department stores that not half as well ventilated as the theatres.

"You know hundreds of people will see and claim that every disease in the cold is found in the theatre. And what do you think of one industry trying to sell its goods by defaming another in a narrow between the eyes?"

Fred Caldwell Producing
Staff at Miami to Make Film on Everglades Story
(Special to the Herald-World)

MIAMI, FLA., Feb. 12.—Ponce De Leon is the new headquarters of the Fred Caldwell productions, according to Peyton E. Williams, supervisor, who announced that big feature will be produced immediately with the Everglades and the Seminole Indians the background.

The cast is being assembled in New York and Los Angeles and will shortly be brought to the southern city.
A Woman of These New Times

FROM England comes an adaptation of a daring novel by the Baroness Orczy, telling a tale of the changes wrought in society by modern feminism. “A Woman of the Night,” which is being imported by World Wide Pictures, returns to the American screen the distinguished star of “The Private Life of Helen of Troy,” Maria Corda. Carmine Calone directed the production.

BROADWAY

Radio Pictures

WHEN Bill Le Baron took the train from Broadway to the Coast last week he had something in his baggage quite intangible, something separate and apart from suits and socks and unread manuscripts. You might say he had a titan with him, a newborn titan, but it would be simpler to say he had something of the new spirit that has taken hold of the RKO organization.

Radio Pictures ought to make a name for themselves. If they don’t, then sane and sensible picture-making with a healthy pinch of experience is all wrong.

Le Baron is going to introduce something new into picture-making on the coast. He will incorporate into the reorganized RKO plant together with three sound stages and two silent—a complete music department. Long-haired boys with fiddles and drummers with a mess of traps are to be part of the RKO layout.

The result has this significance: when a Radio picture comes as, it will be complete in every detail, ready to be shown on the screen, not half-baked for the laboratory for the addition of dialogue and music.

Mr. Emil Jannings

THE eminent Mr. Emil Jannings has another magnificent characterization in “Sins of the Fathers.” He is supreme in his profession, in some ways the greatest of all film actors.

Someone with a true inventive genious ought to sit down in a corner and concentrate on Mr. Jannings. Someone ought to find him an entirely new type of characterization. Someone ought to do him and Paramount the service of taking him off the single track on which he is now running.

The recent pictures in which Jannings have appeared have two qualities in common: greatness and sameness. It would be a pity to have so wonderful an actor spoiled for the public by an inability to provide him with characterizations that are fresh and new. Jannings could do almost anything. Why not try him out?

A. M. P. A.

A oldtimer got up to address the A. M. P. A. recently and say that circulation audits would never go in the film industry because no one in the industry is to be trusted. The Audit Bureau of Circulations would be fooled by quick-witted and crooked subscription salesmen just as sure as you’re born.

Such an attitude ought to be quickly re-sented by anyone in the industry. The remarks made by this relic of bygone days were not merely in bad taste and out of place, they were downright wrong. It is an insult to the industry to permit such a statement to go unchallenged.

Educational’s Shorts

THE energy with which Educational is working to supply the industry with clever and hilarious short comedies in sound is reassuring to every foresighted exhibitor whose theatre is equipped for sound reproduction.

Three new ones were brought forth last week for trade showing: “The Old Barn,” “Ask Dad,” and “Whirls and Girls.” No exhibitor looking for bright and amusing comedies would make a mistake in booking any of these.

250 Suggest Name for Talking Pictures

More than 250 suggested names for talking pictures have been submitted in the HERALD-WORLD's campaign to take out of the lexicon of the public that opprobrious concoction the "talkie" and place in its stead a word worthy of the dignity and decency that the new wonder of the screen already has merited.

The remarkable response to the HERALD-WORLD's proposal has come from every branch of the industry and from outside the industry and what is more important is this: each of these 250 suggested names represent an earnest and careful effort toward solution of this problem of the motion picture business, to express itself from a word that has been a deadweight as heavy as the term "movie."

The HERALD-WORLD's suggestion, "audien," has had an enthusiastic reception from some, has experienced objections from other quarters on the score of smacking of "coinage," though of course the word ultimately chosen and adopted must of necessity be a coined word. Or must it?

In one respect the comment has been unanimous: from the highest executives in the industry down to the rank and file of theatre-owners, the HERALD-WORLD has won universal approval for its constructive effort.

American Film Exports Take Drop Of Ten Million Feet in 1928
Decrease Attributed to Large Number of Quota Restrictions as Well as Higher Production Standards Abroad

[By Washington Correspondent of the Herald-World]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The great number of quota systems in other countries and their other legislative measures to stimulate native production of motion pictures, coupled with the improvement of product in some of the producing countries, have contributed to a decline of more than ten million feet in the 1928 exports of American films, says N. D. Golden, assistant chief of the motion pictures section of the Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

During 1928, there was 222,122,586 linear feet of positive and negative motion pictures exported to foreign countries as compared with 232,104,883 linear feet in 1927. Exports of negative film in 1928 amounted to 7,711,801 linear feet with a declared value of $1,230,896 as against 8,227,672 linear feet with a declared value of $1,455,519 in 1927. This shows a drop of about 1,700,000 from 1927.

Positive Decline Even Greater

Positive exports show a still greater decline than the negative film. During 1928, 214,410,785 linear feet valued at $5,233,093 were shipped abroad as compared with 222,767,902 linear feet with a value of $5,775,730 in 1927, a decrease of over 8,000,000 feet of positive film.

A geographical analysis shows that each region of the world has reduced to some extent its importation of American pictures.

Latin America remains as the biggest consumer of motion pictures from a quantity standpoint. During 1928, 78,900,444 feet of American motion pictures were exported to the region as compared with 82,931,241 linear feet in 1927, a falling off of nearly 4,000,000 feet of film. Next with a very slight increase comes Europe, which in 1928 imported from the United States 69,841,295 feet as against 69,579,175 feet in 1927. Europe is still far by our best revenue producing market.

Third comes the Far East, which showed a drop of nearly 4,500,000 feet of American films. For the year 1928 there was shipped to the region 14,385,408 feet of film as compared with 8,827,593 during 1927.

Canada Shows Big Drop

Canada is next with 8,814,462 linear feet in 1928 compared with 10,920,724 in 1927, a decline of over 2,000,000. A great number of the news reels and some features for use in Canada are produced in the United States. There will also be a large up in the year, taking during 1928 with 3,772,094 feet of American films as against 3,882,280 in 1927. Other scattered countries account for the remaining 6,357,672 feet exported in 1928 as against the 6,028,680 in 1927.

The first four leading markets for 1928, in order of preference, are: First, as usual is Australia, which has held this position (with the exception of 1924 and 1925). as our greatest user of American made pictures since 1922. During 1928 there was exported to Australia 25,400,502 feet compared with 27,017,356 in 1927.

Second is Argentina importing from the United States 20,161,142 feet as against 21,370,723 in 1927.

Brazil, our third leading individual market, has increased her imports from 1927 to 1928 by 8,000,000 feet. There was shipped to this market 16,644,410 compared with the 13,521,365 in 1927.

Fourth comes the United Kingdom, which imported from the United States 12,699,349 linear feet during 1928 as against 13,608,498 in 1927.

American exports of sensitized not exposed motion pictures show a large increase, 1928 having 1,051,258 linear feet with a value of $1,726,911 were exported as against 9,511,901 at $1,354,236 in 1927.

Imports of sensitized not exposed motion pictures have decreased by some 17,000,000 feet: 20,754,948 feet being imported valued at $3,517,985 in 1928 as against 27,013,054 feet valued at $3,709,346 in 1927.

Negative imports into the United States show a slight increase; 2,576,065 feet valued at $384,157 in 1928 as against 2,283,473 in 1927.

Positive film imports also have increased in 1928; 5,233,437 feet valued at $2,137,771 having been imported as compared with 3,883,443 feet valued at $167,193 in 1927.

Sennett and Coronet All-Talking Comedies Welcomed at Preview

Efforts in New Field Highly Successful, Photophone Studio Screening Shows

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A preview of two Mack Sennett and one Coronet all-talking comedies, released through Educational, was held at the RCA Photophone Studio, 411 Fifth avenue, Friday morning. They were more than well received by a representative audience.

Mack Sennett’s bathing beauties have amply proved their popularity in the “Red Headed Girls,” one of the comedies shown, they retained the old snap and pulchritude with the addition of comedy lines. Sennett and Coronet took a chance in jumping into a new and untried field but obviously their efforts have been highly successful and exhibitors all over the country have been trying to book their stuff.

“The Old Barn,” the other Sennett picture, was held and amusing and should be successful as it is a good story. And the first of the Coronet comedies, “Ashes of Youth,” offers opportunity for the “crying” department. It is developed right in the theatre and the audience can feel for the characters in the story.

Dialogue is in Yiddish

In New Universal Film

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Dialogue entirely in Yiddish is the feature of a series of productions to be made by Cine-America in languages other than the English. “The Green Millionaire” is the title of this first picture, taken from the play of the same name by Abraham S. Schomer. Schomer will direct the picture from an adaptation by Sherman Lowe. The picture will also be a version with the dialogue in English.

Cities Producers’ Cooperation

Wilcox’s visit to the United States was an event of some importance to the powers of both countries. In an interest statement before sailing for home last week he expressed appreciation of the cooperation given him, adding:

“And I shall tell all European producers that the American market is definitely open for worthy imported pictures. I think the American market has presented the obstacles, distribution, exhibition, and American public. I can definitely say that the distribution obstacle has been removed and it is up to the European producers to overcome the second two obstacles by producing meritorious films acceptable to American exhibitors and the public.”

Vied for Distribution

“Not only did the big American companies cooperate wholeheartedly during production of “Black Waters”—they cooperated with each other for its distribution. It has been difficult for us to decline flattering contracts offered with import circuit bookings assured, but we feel that the quality of the picture will and must have its way and that, after all, World Wide Pictures, Inc., is the logical connection for our company.”

The picture is from “The Fog,” starts success, and features an Anglo-American cast with Mary Brian and John Lodge directed by Marshall Neilan.

World Wide Gets “Black Waters,” New Audien of Wilco

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The bond between British and American films is drawn closer with the announcement, made in New York by J. D. Williams, that “Black Waters” is to be released in the United States and Canada by World Wide Pictures. In physical distribution these Educational exchanges have been completed by Herbert Wilcox, production head of British Dominion Films, Ltd., of London. All-talking and Williams did not conceal satisfaction and elation at landing the picture for his World Wide organization.

Opposite Lon Chaney, Estelle Taylor contributes her rich emotional gifts to the MGM star's new production, "When East Is East."

Officers of the Universal Club. Employees of the home office of Universal have formed a welfare organization similar to those of some of the other companies, and those above have been chosen to head the society. Matt J. Etchingham is president; Ethel Black, secretary; Joseph Burke, treasurer; and Julius Singer, vice president.

Bruce Gallup, who has been appointed director of advertising and publicity for United Artists by President Nicholas M. Schenck.

Back from a clime more considerate, George E. Quigley, vice-president of the Vitaphone Corporation, and Mrs. Quigley are shown aboard ship on their return from Bermuda, where they enjoyed a brief vacation.

Just married, Morton Downey, noted tenor recently signed for Pathe audiences, and his bride, the former Joan Bennett. With them are Margaret McCarthy, who was bridesmaid, and Richard Callahan, best man.
"To the success of World Wide pictures!"—English and American stars at Elstree, England, where productions to be imported by World Wide are being made. You may recognize Lillian Rich, Estelle Brody, Anna May Wong, Heather Thatcher, Alexander D'Arcy, Marguerite Allen, Jameson Thomas, Eugene Ami and Monty Banks.

Arriving for the premiere of his latest production, Richard Barthelmess, star of First National's "Weary River," in front of the Central theatre in New York with Mrs. Barthelmess and his mother. The picture, in which the star sings and speaks, is having a stand-"em-out run.

Now for the life of a fireman! Harold Lloyd, Paramount comedian (for don't take this battalion chief's badge seriously), and his friend, Fire Chief Scott of Los Angeles.

A wedding photograph of the former Rosabelle Laemmle; her father, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal; and her husband, Stanley Berghman, taken at the Laemmle home in Beverly Hills, Cal, following the marriage service, which was attended by many of the industry's celebrities.
Fox is to “show” the blind “In Old Arizona” with programs in the Braille system. Dorothy Burgess of the cast, is shown with G. A. Atkinson, owner of the process.

Sam Jacobson, vice president of the Wampas visiting New York, is invited to the Ampas’ ball March 2. Pictured are Art Mix, Western star; Don Hancock, chairman of the ball committee; Marie Breen, ball official; Jacobson, Nina Olivette and Margaret Irving, stage actresses; Charles Le Maire, designer; and Omar Champion, artists’ representative.

Visiting Mr. Pathe, the trade mark rooster, at his booth in the New York Poultry Show. Louis Simon and George Le Maire, makers of Pathe sound shorts; and three girls of Earl Carroll’s “Vanities,” Gertrude Sissell, Jerry Dryden and Marion Sayers, are Mr. Pathe’s admiring guests.

Don’t be afraid, Big Boy—Charles Lamont is right behind you. A mere microphone is nothing to daunt the courage of a director. Still, in an age when youth seems so reckless, it is reassuring to note that the young Educational comedian is maturely precautious.
Signing of Irene Bordoni Is Only First Move in FN Expansion Program

Stage and Vaudeville Talent Tested Under New Policy of Talking Picture Production—Dialogue Writers Added

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—First National has entered upon an expansion program in which the acquisition of Irene Bordoni to make an international talking picture is only the first of a number of important moves to be announced soon.

Several tests were made at the First National studio at Culver City last week in accordance with a plan to obtain new talent particularly qualified for sound-film production. The synchronization and most of the productions will be dialogue either in entirety or in part. It has just been decided to make "The Squall" a 100 per cent dialogue picture.

In order to meet the need for theme songs, music writers are being placed at the studio so that they may keep in close touch with productions as they are in progress. This plan worked out so well in the case of the popular "Wearly River" song that it will be followed in other pictures. Experts in every line are being added to the studio staff.

Production has been carried through at such a rapid pace during the past few months that 70 per cent of the pictures to be released during the current season are already completed and many others are well under way.

Practically all these new productions have dialogue with stars who already have proved their ability in talking pictures. Richard Barthelmess in "Wearly River" and Milton Sills and Eric Macklin in the "Beverly" examples. Corinne Griffith's biggest special, "The Divine Lady," is now playing at the Carthay Circle, Los Angeles.

Paula Gould Leaves for Hollywood Post in Week

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Paula Gould, for several years general manager of the F. B. O., who resigned last week to accept one of two production offers made her in Hollywood, leaves next week for the Coast.

Miss Gould came to F. B. O. in 1922 directly from school as secretary to Nat G. Rothstein, then director of advertising and publicity for F. B. O. Two months later, Rothstein placed her in charge of fan magazine publicity. A year later, the New York newspapers and national newspapers were given her to handle in addition to fan magazines. A few months later, she was given the trade paper publicity as well. Three years after she joined F. B. O. she was in charge of all publicity for the organization in the East.

Hy Daab Launches Big "Synchronization" Campaign With Victor and Radio

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A twofold exploitation campaign of nationwide proportions has been launched for "Synchronization," first of the Radio Pictures, by Hy Daab, director of advertising, exploitation, and publicity of R. K. O. Productions.

Song hits in "Synchronization" are being brought to the attention of millions over the air by the National Broadcasting Company. A complete tieup has been effected with the Victor Talking Machine Company which involves promotional letters from the company to its 8,500 agents, 10,000 one sheers and 300,000 car cards.

Harms Music Publishing Company and Stupt and Green, music publishers, are cooperating in a dealer and songplug trip.

Paramount Votes Regular 75¢ Quarterly Dividend

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Paramount's board of directors yesterday declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the new common stock payable March 13 to stockholders of record at the close of business March 8. The book will not close.

The board also fixed March 8 as the day for taking a record of stockholders entitled to vote at the annual meeting April 16.

Morton Van Pragg Makes Changes in "U" Sales Force

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Morton Van Pragg, general sales manager for Universal, has announced several important changes in the Universal sales force.

Earl Kramer, who was manager of the New York exchange, has been appointed Eastern division manager with supervision of the Buffalo, Albany, Pittsburgh, Washington and New Haven exchanges. Kramer's former position will be filled by Dave Miller, Universal manager in Buffalo. Miller's place will be taken by Al Herman.

C. P. Lester, for several years manager in Jacksonville, was appointed to management of the Atlanta exchange. He succeeded Ben Y. Cammack, who resigned. Lester's position in Jacksonville will be filled by Cowan Bain, salesman.

Myles Connolly Named Supervisor for R K O; "Hit the Deck" Acquired

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Myles Connolly, one of the livest young wares on the coast, has been appointed, by William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of productions, as supervisor of R. K. O. productions.

"Hit the Deck," the Vincent Youman's Broadway musical comedy success, has recently been acquired by Joseph S. Schenck, president of R. K. O. With "Synchronization," featuring Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, and "Rio Rita," Florenz Ziegfeld's musical success, this makes three musical film productions to be definitely released under the Radio Pictures banner. "Hit the Deck" will mean bigger attractions on the stage and played in many big cities at top price of $5.30.

THE SHORT FEATURE

Novel Type and Border Displays Help in Putting Over Short Films

Exhibitors who find themselves unexpectedly up against it without mats for their advertising layouts in an emergency are apt to overlook the possibilities of making up attractive ads with only type. With the aid of your printer, simple type can be laid out in attention-drawing arrangements of words that will put over the picture with real results.

The story of type is told in the layouts below as well as could be done with lengthy descriptions. These layouts were devised for Fox Movietone short subjects, and the principle can be applied to other programs as well.

SOUND PICTURES

Cooperative Ads Put Over Openings

Hidden Letters in Contest Add to Pull In 60-Mile Radius

COOPERATIVE advertising is playing an important role in the opening of sound at theatres of all varieties. One primary benefit of the cooperative ad is the psychological effect of size. The theatre gets the benefit of the entire page or double-page if it has the best position in the advertisement. A second factor is the close tieup with the merchants that is made possible.

The cooperative ad has been a feature of the nationwide newspaper campaign of Vitaphone, but in the ad reproduced herewith, for the Berger Amusement Company of Grand Forks, N. D., in announcing the premiere of sound at the circuit's Grand theatre in Bemidji, Minn., additional angles are inclined to give even further value to the campaign.

Hidden Letters Add to Interest

One feature was the hidden letter contest. Such a contest is not, of course, new to exploitation. But adding it to the cooperative angle of the ad, with the additional attention it drew to each advertisement in the layout, gave it a special flavor. And ads elsewhere in the paper carried the congratulations of other merchants to the theatre.

The hidden letters were in groups of three, either complete words in themselves or consecutive letters as part of a word. The words, in sentence form, call attention to the joy brought by attending Vitaphone and Movietone performances. Of course the phrasing of the sentences would depend upon the number of ads in the layout.

Crowded in Subzero Weather

Did the premiere go over? Benjamin Ashe, local manager in Bemidji, writes this department that despite subzero weather the Vitaphone opening drew the largest crowd in months. Here's what Ashe says:

"Enclosed herewith you will find a little example of what we are proud to call splendid newspaper cooperation. It is a double-page spread of advertising, announcing the important event, and congratulating our company on its enterprise.

"We would further respectfully call your attention to the front page story on the same subject, and to the explanation of the nature of the Vitaphone on the double spread.

"You will notice that in order to make this advertising announcement of double value, a story, or hidden letter contest was made part of the spread. This made the readers go over the matter more carefully than they might otherwise have done, and impressed more thoroughly on their minds the fact that both Vitaphone and Movietone were here.

"This spread was not only run in the daily Bemidji Pioneer, but also in the Bemidji Sentinel, weekly, which reaches the entire rural population for at least 60 miles around Bemidji. As a result of this wonderful cooperation and teamwork, we opened to the largest crowds in months, and that in below zero weather.

"We hope that you will find some space in which you might make mention of this trip, and which may prove of value to the other exhibitors who read your pages."

Six Minutes Limit Is Set by Mack for Talking Character (Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Feb. 12.—Six minutes is the maximum for characters to be on the same set in a talking scene, says Willard Mack, directing for M.G.M.

"Talk itself does not entertain an audience," he says, "and if the actors remain inanimate, or don't move to new settings, they begin to bore the audience. Perhaps in a couple of years when we have perfected the mechanism we'll be able to rely on smart lines and ignore action. But I don't think so.

"The smart lines are great for the four dollar audience on the stage—but because we've made pictures talk, that doesn't mean that our audiences have become four dollar audiences. They're the same audiences and they come to be entertained, not elevated. They don't want epigrams but action."

Winchester Paper Gives Capitol Sound a Sendoff
The Capitol theatre at Winchester, Va., went into action with Vitaphone and Movietone equipment last month with a splendid introduction in the Evening Star.

The Capitol management sent this department a clipped page from the newspaper which showed the introductory advertisement running about two-thirds of the page, and the remainder of the page devoted to news of the event. A special angle to the opening was the half-hour preliminary concert by Ernest L. Houde, organist, playing Jolson songs.

Meeting Demand for Wiring Is Big Issue,
Says G. E. Quigley
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The question of comparative methods of synchronization is not so important right now as the problem of meeting the rapidly growing demand for talking pictures with Vitaphone installations, George E. Quigley, vice-president of the Vitaphone Corporation, declared on his return last week from Bermuda after a ten days vacation.

"Just now," said Quigley, "the demand for talking pictures is growing by leaps and bounds. We are not so much interested in methods as we are in meeting this demand with Vitaphone installations. The outlook for motion pictures is wonderfully bright and the present year promises to be the greatest one in point of development and popularity that the film industry has ever known."

[They taste just like they did 20 years ago]
When the Babcock theatre, Billings, Montana, opened with sound pictures, a 16-page newspaper supplement was published by E. C. O'Keefe of the theatre, and it is one of the best supplements we have seen of its kind. Particularly effective was the front page reproduced in colors and made up from mats cut in odd sizes and shapes to represent the scope of sound pictures of yesterday and the last page, which represents a typical cooperative merchandising problem, are shown above. Congratulations, O'Keefe on your fine work!

Newspaper Tango Dancing Class Is Hookup for “In Old Arizona”

(Special to the Herald-World)

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 12.—A highly successful exploitation program on the picture, “In Old Arizona,” which played at the Merrill, was staged by Clifford Gill and his boys in the publicity and advertising department of Midwesto Theatres, Inc. Thoroughly marked the entire campaign, which no doubt can be utilized to good advantage by many other theatres.

The campaign began six weeks in advance of the showing. Trailers were run in every Midwesto house in Milwaukee. Organizers also used the theme song, “My Tonia,” for their weekly organ presentations. Troups were made up of two hotel orchestras to get the swing going by the fact that the picture would play at the Merrill on a certain date.

20 Music Stores in Tieup

Troups with 20 music stores in the city on the theme song idea were also affected which resulted in much publicity. The publicity department put in special windows in about 15 leading stores on the picture. Because of the unusual interest of the picture the merchants permitted this excellent stunt. Want ad contests were run in many local newspapers and passes offered to successful participants.

Considerable advertising was done in Polish, Jewish and German newspapers, in addition to plenty of advertising in the regular daily newspapers. Radio tieups with WHN, Wisconsin’s station were made. A dandy stunt was pulled in getting a local newspaper to start a dancing class and teaching entrants to learn how to dance the “Arizona Tango.” The fact also was mentioned that the picture, “In Old Arizona,” was playing at the Merrill. The amount of publicity received by the Merrill on this Arizona Tango tieup exceeded by far any previous tieup in the matter of newspaper “column inches.”

Photophone at Orpheum In Twin Cities Announced

(Special to the Herald-World)

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 12.—Joseph Plunkett, general manager of RKO, on a visit to the Twin Cities announced that RCA Photophone will be installed in both the Henrypin Orpheum, Minneapolis, and the Palace Orpheum, St. Paul, within the next few weeks. A report previously had been current that RKO houses were to receive Movietone and Photophone.

Vitaphone and Movietone At Bagdad, Ballard, Wash.

Two New Types of Actors for Audien Seen by Director

(Hollywood, Feb. 12.—Talking pictures are developing two new types of actors, the foreign type who can act foreign but speak perfect English, and the actor who must forget his old stage experience and learn new ways. Two foreign characters, says Lionel Barrymore, who is direct-}

French Only in Character

“So we have characters that must be French, but speak our language, and the mind of the audience is forced to see that those people cannot be French. Thus we have to make them so French to the eye that the fact that they are English is forgotten. It is done by choosing types that to the eye suggest the national—and training them in pantomime and deportment that suggests a foreign accent that the spoken words are not noticed.”

Ruth Chatterton who plays the title role, does not look distinctly foreign any more than does Lewis Stone, who plays the husband. By studying French psychology, and from the Frenchman’s quick manner of thinking, learning the gestures and impulsive reactions, both convey the idea that they are Paris-born in the picture.”

The second important development in acting brought about by the talking screen is in the matter of looking to the future, Barrymore added.

Weeping Maid Pass

“Take the character of the maid, Rose, in ‘Madame X’,” said Barrymore. “She used to be played on the stage as always crying on the floor. You wouldn’t stand for that nowadays. Hence the actor of a few years ago has to discard most of his experience and start all over again.”

Sound Openings Spur Interest
In Theatres for Australians

(Special to the Herald-World)

SYDNEY, Australia, January 15 (By Mail)—Interest in the motion picture theatre has been spurred as by nothing else in years by the arrival of sound at the Lyceum, controlled by Union Theatres, Ltd., and at the Regent, one of the Hoyt circuit.

For weeks the press representatives of both the Union theatres and Hoyt's theatres had been telling the public of the arrival of the latest wonder of the silver sheet. Prior to the actual showing, Hoyt's Regent received a letter look, even on Saturdays and holidays. The Regent, with its weekly change of double feature programs and stageband presentations, had been doing consistently good business.

The public was eager to see and hear the magic. When it came, the Hoyt's Circle was building up all the menageries, circuses, acroats and clowns in the world and the parade them through one of the smallest country towns, the population would not get half the kick that Sydney got with the arrival of the "Sec-em-and-hear-em" picture.

The Lyceum had announced in the dailies that Boxing Day, December 26, would be its opening date, but Hoyt's raised an object of which based it's support on the West End Electric, which provided that installation should be completed at both houses simulaneously. Although actual tests were made on the Sunday previous at the Regent thetre, Hoyt's maintained its installation was not complete, and this caused Western Electric to postpone the Lyceum premiere until December 26.

Simultaneous Openings

If it had not been for the holiday season, the remaining city theatres would have been hard hit, but their businesses held up well with the exception of the legitimate houses.
For them it was the worst Christmas they ever had experienced.

The talking pictures put a new kick into the business. Both houses announced the opening performances for 10:30 a.m., but long before then the mad rush for ticket was on. All day long the same was witnessed, crowds waiting to see and hear these new heralded pictures.

These amazing performances were made in the hottest weather conditions, for we are now in the middle of the summer season with the humidity making it hot and steaming. The records made during the week exceeded the expectations of the executives of both circuits.

Suburban exhibitors who have heard the talking pictures are loath to speak their mind at present; they prefer to wait until they have seen several of the new pictures before passing any comment.

Hoyt makes two Films

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 12.—A speed record in production of a two-reel color film was made. "Tango in Vague but also songs and dance specialties, is claimed by Ben Holmes, Universal director of the three Rooneys.

The second Rooney comedy, just

The first one, "Sweethearts," was featured in "Tango in Vague," and already has been previewed and found highly satisfactory. Now he is starting the third, "The Love Tree."

Music Appreciation Aided

Stuart Doyle, managing director of Union theatres, said after the opening; "No story ever written for the screen is as dramatic as the story of the screen itself.

Now we write another chapter in that story.
Far, indeed, has motion picture art advanced from that few seconds of shadow of a serpentine dancer thirty years ago when monochrome pictures were born—to this demonstration of synchronizing the reproduction of sound with the reproduction of the action.

The future of motion pictures is as far ahead as all the tomorrows, rendering greater and still greater service as the chief amusement of the people. It has been said that the art of the moviethe and the instrumental or epitheral—that he creates but for a moment. Now, neither the artist will ever die. To my mind, the reproduction of sound and scene, perfectly synchronized, is not only an achievement of high scientific importance—it is an event of far reaching significance in human affairs."

Third Dimension, Sound and Color
Is Goal, Says Shirley

(Special to the Herald-World)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The third dimension production, coupled with perfected sound and color photography, will be the ultimate achievement of the motion picture, said William M. Shirley, president of the Farash theatres, in the conclusion of a series of two articles on sound pictures in the Union-Star. The two articles won almost three columns of space in the paper.

After tracing the history of synchronized apparatus, and giving due praise to Dr. Lee DeForest, Harry M. Warner and William Farnsworth pioneers, Shirley said in his first article:

"I am still firm in my opinion that it was the advent of sound pictures that rescued that great American institution—the Motion Picture Theatre—from a rundown state bordering on complete chaos. . . . And who can say what would have happened to the greatest popular institution of entertainment and enlightenment the human race has ever known, if independently-minded theatre operators, scattered all over the country, had not contracted at the right time to exhibit in their theatres the sound productions that Warner Brothers and Fox Film Corporation had the courage to produce!"
Hollywood to Remain Production Center Despite Reports

Hiram Brown Arrives to Launch Audien Production by R K O; Colleen Can Cook; Phyllis Haver 42?

BY DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 12.—This town will go on as the center of production despite reports that New York will be the site of anudien production activity. That indication was borne out by statements from two executives representing vastly different companies this week.

John Considine, Jr., returned from a survey of stage productions in New York and a survey of audien production facts. There are still theindications that Artistas will begin at once on production here of "Song of Broadway" and other dialogue pictures.

Hiram Brown arrived stating that RKO will have its audien program well under way here within the month.

They are finding out that visitors can witness the shooting of talking pictures on sound stages without interfering with art and business. A dozen studios in town have cautiously opened the doors and two or three dozens of us have just as cautiously crept into the inviting but sinister apertures to see how the new affair is faring.

I'll sneeze some day while Lois Moran is being wooed by George O'Brien and then I'll get kicked out and the doors will become forbidding.

Colleen Moore told me I could make a thorough inspection of her new Bel-Air home as soon as it is finished and the rugs are down. I checked it out with John McCormick and found out he okayed the invitation and found out that not only can I spend three minutes in each of the rooms but I can swim in the swimming tank and have dinner with them. And the dinner part is really what I was interested in because Heaven's above—how that girl, Colleen, can cook!

In this town there is a street that has lost its name. It is no more known as "Hollywood Boulevard" as the sign streets would lead you to believe. Everyone knows it as "The Boulevard," Sunset Boulevard is still "Sunset," Santa Monica Boulevard is still "Santa Monica Boulevard." But "The Boulevard" means only one street. The fact is that many, many streets in Hollywood. Those three. If you are looking for an address on Whitley Avenue you are up against it until you read all the street signs.

It's a country town where everybody in it works in the watch factory.

There isn't much temperament demonstrated by stars. There was an exhibition of something or other yesterday on one lot and the director called it temperament. I watched it and thought it was common sense. A well known star asked the director if he thought he would use her the rest of the day. He replied he was sorry but would not use her.

She had arrived promptly at nine in the morning on call and had waited until four in the afternoon to learn she was wasting time.

She courageously told the incompetent director he need not have called her when there was nothing for her to do but swat flies and that his joke had been damn contemptible. The director albied that the studio manager was to blame. She slammed the studio manager and hoped he would go to the devil.

A studio press agent left town the other day and his vacancy was soon filled by another man who is known from Coast to Coast. The successor has done two startling things since he came on the job. First he decided the publicity department needed cleaning up. Alterations and decorations began. That was the first week.

The second week found him entirely a-w.o.l.—entirely no corpus delicti. A search was made and he was found and diagnosed as over stimulated with drug store giggle soup. (Boom-boom.)

Clara Bow says she had 'awful time with her finances for a while. She declares she went flat broke last summer and then hired a man to count her money and spend it for her. He limits her to $500 a week spending money.

Clara is a great girl. None more likable. There's one man she is extremely fond of and he owns a lunch counter on Beverly Boulevard. His name is Robert Bow and he is the proudest man in California. "My daughter Clara" is the finest girl I know, says this little man with the long black lashes.

I had fried chicken at Robert Bow's place last week and it was so delicious that I'm going to celebrate my birthday by taking the entire Herald-World staff there for chicken dinner next week.

One of the ten heavyweight stars who has lifted himself by the bootstraps to $300,000 per year looks back dejectedly upon the time, eight years ago, when he was an automobile salesman and sultan for the hand of a leading motion picture actress. Automob-
Production Is Slow; 16 of 32 Films Boast Audien Sequences

Milestone to Start Work on "Take It Easy" with Boyd at United Artists; Clarence Brown Returns "Empty-Handed"; Howard Higgin to Cascade Mountains

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 12.—Sixteen pieces of the 32 that are in production are either all audion or have talking sequences. Cecil B. DeMille’s picture, "Dynamite," is under way and boasts talking sequences throughout.

Production is at a low ebb as usual at this period of the year. There is less talk among the producers, however, about the "schedule under way" than is noticed at this time in other years.

Numerous announcements emanate from United Artists and from RKO studios, but other than from those little is heard.

Adolf Tandler, one of the important musical figures in Los Angeles for many years, has been engaged at Universal-Riesenfeld as assistant director of his recording orchestra at United Artists Studios.

Tandler was for many years director of the old Los Angeles Symphony, conductor of the International Mozart Festival in Salzburg, and for the past five years has been director of the University Symphony.

He is one of the leading symphony conductors that the film world has offered an opportunity to display their talent for the benefit of better music in the motion picture industry.

Among the important announcements made by United Artists was the Lewis Milestone, noted director, will start next month on "Take It Easy," an all-talking soldier-adventure comedy. Louis Wolheim, Lope Velez and William Boyd are to be featured.

Herbert Brenon is expected back in Hollywood within two weeks and he will immediately commence initial preparations for the production of "Lumox" which will also be listed in the all-talk classification.

The United Artists lot is taking on an air of increased activity and within a few weeks, it is expected all stages, both silent and sound, will be filled with sets and productions in the making.

Brown Returns

Clarence Brown, the noted director, has returned to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio on the Coast from a hurried trip to New York. He left three weeks ago for the purpose of finding a leading man on the Broadway stage for his forthcoming production of "Wonder of Woman," and to select the following picture from among several suggestions of New York stage hits.

The three or four leading men in Hollywood he considered able for the difficult role are busy at work in other productions.

Brown returned to California empty handed. Of all the men he saw and made tests of none measured up to the requirements of the part. He is Alfred Lunt, of the Theatre Guild company, and he could not work in the picture. The plays he witnessed were not the motion picture material they were touted to be.

Irene Bordoni, famous stage star, was signed yesterday by Mr. Mayer for the role in "Headlines," which will be produced by the United Artists.

Clarence Brown will be seen in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," directed by Mr. Tandler, and "The Hottentot," with Edward Everett Horton and Patsy Ruth Miller is nearing the end of its shooting schedule. Roy Del Ruth is directing.

Curtiz Directs "Gamblers"

Michael Curtiz is directing "The Gamblers" with an all-star cast including H. B. Warner, Lois Wilson, Jason Robards, George Paton and others in "The Time, the Place and the Girl," past the hallmark mark in filming under the direction of Howard Bretherton, Grant Withers, Betty Compson, John Darrow, Gertrude Olmstead and Bert Roach are included in its cast.

A little slice of New York theatrical life, played by the Gleasones, who have been among Broadway’s most prominent figures the last few years, will be presented in "Mystery of the Hidden Land," which has John Nicholson, which went into production this week as one of the Paramount-Christie Talks.

Al Christie has secured "Divorce Made Easy," a farce comedy by Wilson Collison for the next Douglas MacLean feature production for Paramount, to be an all-dialogue picture.

MacLean and Miss Prevost will probably start production in "Divorce Made Easy" in the middle of February.

Seven at Universal

Production of talking pictures has reached a high mark at Universal, with seven films having dialogue now shooting. The pictures include "Broadway," with Glenn Torrison, Evelyn Brent, and Merna Kennedy in the cast.

Dialogue scenes are now being made for "Shanghai," starring Lura La Plante; "The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City," and "The Shakedown.

"High & Low Life of History" under direction of Jack Fisk, the Mooney series, featuring Pat Rooney, Marian Bent Rooney and Pat Rooney, 3rd, under direction of B. H. Holmes, are being shot on the sound stages. Production of these pictures is moving at a long time and no silent versions will be made.

The fourth series of "The Collegians" directed by Nat Ross and starring George Lewis, are in production. These subjects also are being made with dialogue.

Production on "High Voltage" which will take Director Howard Higgin into the Cascade mountains, will be started within ten days.
PRESENTATION ACTS

Get Your Holiday Shows Ready

Chicago Chicago
Week Ending February 7

This week Balaban & Katz offered their new stage policy, which is to present their regular novelty every week. This week, they called it "Mother's Surprise Party." The party consisted of six different episodes, each one unfolding in the same settings under the following titles: First, "The Surprise" with the singing ensemble; Second, "My Mother's Eyes" sung by Roy Cropper; Third, the "Bean Man" by Billy Cummy; Fourth, "A Potted Flower" by the Chicago theatre ballet; Fifth, "Ball Room Dance" by De Carlos & Louise; Sixth, "Dance Eccentric" by the LaSasser Brothers.

This party was in the form of a regular house party with some thirty or forty couples on the house lawn, given by Roy Cropper in honor of his mother, for which the song "My Mother's Eyes" was especially used as the theme of the entire staging. Billy Cummy, as the "Bean Man" in black face, offered clever dance steps and comedy songs. The ballet, trained under the direction of Anatol Bearman, executed some clever dance novelties in some very effective costumes. De Carlos & Louise, held over from the opening of this policy, again scored in one of their graceful dance creations. "The LaSasser Brothers made whoopee in an eccentric yet entertaining way with their callisthenic dancing, and proved one of the chief novelty-makers of this party.

The entire staging took form in typical musical comedy order and though it was somewhat shorter than its previous stagings it was nevertheless good entertainment that pleased both the eye and the ear. Roy Cropper of course was the feature of the bill and he was well compensated with applause for his excellent song selections.

H. Leopold Spitalny presented one of his fine orchestral productions called "Pazzi secular," featuring Arch Cannon and Leonora Corri with Benjamin Landsman. They were also assisted by a singing ensemble which was received with the orchestra, as Cannon in the role of the Patriarch, Don Carlos, sang "Vota La Guilia" in front of a cycle of colors. As usual, both Spitalny and his group of musicians and soloists received a very enthusiastic applause.

Boston Metropolitan
Week Ending February 8

Sir James M. Barrie's short play, "Half an Hour," was set to the screen under title of "The Doctor's Secret" and as an all-talking picture.

On the stage, new features were added also. Hans Hentsch, noted pianist, played the "Inkblot" overture, accompanied by Gelsior's Metropolitan Grand Orchestra, the first feature, occurring between the vaudeville numbers.

The "Porcelain Clock," a novelty act staged in a beautiful setting with a big clock as the background, came next. A fair-haired girl, dressed in a costume pleated with a toe dance, climbing down from the clock where she reposed, and reposing the clock by climbing back to repose in a picturesquely posture once more.

The "Filibin" production of "The Pique," with Johnny Perkins, Caninicham and Clements, Sherrie and Louise and the Dave Gould Girls provided plenty of enjoyable fun. Ted Cramer, enjoying his second week as master of ceremonies, favored with many eccentric dance steps, as well as by play with the audience.

Johnny Perkins was the hit of the show with his monologue and choice songs. The Gould Girls were clever with sunshine dancing and simultaneous dance steps. Sherrie and Louise put in a short act of whirlwind dancing and acrobatic stunts. Canning-

DeLuxe Theatres
Should Observe
Famous Events

Exhibitors Must Be Alert to Meet Present Strong Competition

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

Are you taking advantage of the coming holidays by offering stage shows in keeping with the events? Wise showmen never wait until the last minute to do things. They always prepare their stage and screen program a good deal in advance in order to meet any possible competition in rival theatres. Holiday stage presentations can be put on at such reasonable cost to you that it really is a shame if you do not avail yourself of these opportunities.

For instance, last week most of the downtown theatres all over the country celebrated Lincoln's birthday by offering some sort of memorable staging, either in the form of tableau or a patriotic organ. Hundreds of motion picture theatres secured the Lincoln short subject with talking and some effects, starring George Billings, in the re-creation of the famous Gettysburg address. Many theatres could not avail themselves of booking this motion picture subject and were compelled to produce their own stage version of some sort of a scene reminiscent of the Civil War days.

George Washington's birthday is only a few days off, and although a great many of you have probably prepared to observe the occasion, there are a great many people who have probably forgotten to commemorate the day. Excellent possibilities and stage opportunities are offered in presenting patriotic reproductions of the Father of our country. Many famous scenes during the battles of 1776 could be easily staged without going to considerable amount of expense. Proclaim one of the most popular and yet inexpensive scenings is the Crossing of the Delaware an the scene of Betsy Ross making the Old Glory.

Every Theatre Can Afford Something

No motion picture theatre is too small to consider an offering of this sort. Even the little 300 seat theatre operating only a few nights a week with an organ furnish the entire music, can well afford to original some worthwhile entertainment that will serve to depict some small semblance of the holiday. I am sure that music publishers always have some sort of organ novelty on hand suitable for these events. They will be glad to favor you with these sets upon request.

This Chap Has Done Things

Although only twenty-one years of age, Joe Mc-Ha, now touring Public circuit as a feature and star in the "Barcelona" unit, has had more experience than the average person twice his age. Joe has had considerable experience in motion pictures, having played the role of "Chip" in the Chip Joe at the age of seven. He was also featured in Jack's Bad Boy," comedy pictures. In addition to motion picture work he has played in legitimate presentations like "Peter Dibelson" with John Barrymore. Joe was also featured in Keith theatres for four and is now doing a routine in vaudeville house with his sister, Jane.

Only Two Years Old—But!

On February 15, DePuy, Brown & Hanson, celebrated its second anniversary. In the two years the firm has been in business they have one of the most powerful music publishing organizations in the business.

The firm bears the names of three of the most revered writers in America, and the activities directed by Robert Crawford, president, Dan Adler, general sales manager, and Sam Lerner, better of publicity. The firm is publisher of "Sonny's," "Angela Mia," and numerous other song hits.

Brooke Johns Leaving

Daily newspaper announcements and theatre advertising state that Brooke Johns leaves the Oriental in Chicago on February 22. News items further state that John will act as a jazz doctor for several big theatres that need box office stimulus.

The first theatre at which Johns will act as the B. D. is the newly renovated Paramount in Los Angeles. No announcement has as yet been made to who will replace Johns but there are considerable rumors that Jack Osterman will take his place.

Feist Theme Songs

Leo Feist, Inc., has nine theme songs that are joying popular sale all over the country. They are a "Ramona." From the film of the same name, "Jeanine" from "Lilac Time," "My In" from Fanny Brice's photoplay of the same name, "The Two Lovers," "Synthetic Sin," "My Surprised Desire" from "The Happy Hooligan." There are also features another song called "Comin' Up to Night, Huh?" and "When the Night Comes Along" for "Marriage by Contract," "Mountain Eyes," and "The Theme of Hope Jones' first talking picture, "Lucky Boy."

On the Same Bill

Another screen star makes his personal appearance in "Juno." He is none other than William "Red" Howard, the western drama. Bill appears at the State-Lake in a melodramatic playbill.

In the same program, in a featured position, are amberlin & Himes, late featured comedy dancers the "Polka," and Edison & Gregory, a musical revue, recently of picture house.

MUSIC SCORES

William Frederick Peters of the Sam Fox Publishing Company, sound department, is preparing orchestrations for the "Papagallo," Paramount's new picture starring Richard Arlen and Lily Wey. The music for this photoplay will portray the theme of "Straw Hat." Peters has prepared such musical scores as "Way Down East," "Orphans of the Storm," "Yolanda," and many other super productions.

R.K.O productions have secured the services of Jimmy McHugh and Dorothy Field to write scores and songs for their super productions. Both writers are famous for their score of "Blackbirds" in 1923, and "Hello Daddy," two of the most successful musical comedies ever produced. McHugh has written some of the most popular songs hit ever published such as "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," "Hinin', Dinkey Palet's Yow," and many others.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I am really ashamed of myself for not dropping in to see you when I am in Chicago, for you must have given me some nice breaks. That is I have been mentioned a number of times in the Presentation section and have never spent a cent for an ad, haven't written you before. So, anyone that ever says to you that one has run an ad to get a break with you, just dig up this letter. I want to meet you though and hope to soon.

Every week regardless of where I am I make the managers kick in with the Herald World. They are just as regular as I have heard they are, Roy Benjamin, Bill Bennett, Milton Charles, and others. I have written two pages—are you too busy for so much?

My letter is sincere and I wish you continued success and many thanks—Alvin Evans, organist, Great States Theatres, Inc.

Two anniversaries, one of the house itself, which has just completed its eighth successful year, and the other of the birth of Victor Herbert, were celebrated at the Stanley theatre this week and in honor of the occasion a special presentation called "Herbertiana" was dedicated to the memory of the composer who during his lifetime always conducted the Stanley Orchestra on these occasions. This included such arias as Jacques Cartier, whose Dagoer Dance from "Natoma" was the outstanding feature of the entire bill: Emma Nee, soprano, and Catherine Littlefield, premiere danceuse.

The Stanley Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Gabriel Hines, opened the program by playing nine selections from Victor Herbert's with Sascha Jacobson contributing a violin solo from "Secret of My Life," which served as the lead in the opening dance, in which the Stanley Ballet attired as nymphs danced a light and airy gypsy dance in a woodland setting.

Avo Bomberger, tenor, sang the well-known "Gypsy Love Song" in a pleading voice which, however, did not possess a great deal of volume. Catherine Littlefield, who took the part of the gypsy, assisted by the Stanley Ballet, gave a graceful and colorful Spanish dance. Helen Yorks, coloratura soprano, sang two Herbert numbers, "Kiss Me Again" and the "Italian Street Song" from "Naughty Marietta," the second of which proved to be much better adapted to the range of her voice.

Catherine Littlefield and the Stanley Ballet recurred in Indian costumes, with feather headdresses, and sang and danced an inconclusive Indian dance to the strains of Herbert's opera "Natoma." At the close of this dance the ballet grouped themselves at the sides of the stage while Emma Nee, soprano, also in Indian costume, sang the invocation from "Naughty Marietta," which was heard too briefly in this short selection.

As her song ended Jacques Cartier appeared in the star act of the evening "Dagoer Dance" from "Natoma." Clad an an Indian chieftain in gleaming white with swaying feather headdress, he gave a magnificent interpretation of the Dagoer Dance which has seldom been equaled. Of slender physique, he possesses more grace than many feminine dancers, which combined with his pantier like legs proved a vivid and articulate portrayal of a primitive Indian chief. His Interpretation was so virile and realistic, heightened by the splendid accompaniment of the Stanley Orchestra, that it evoked a storm of applause. There was a brief finale in which all of the entertainers appeared.

Detroit Capitol
Week Ending February 1
Del Delmar took a needed vacation this week and went up to Montreal to inspect the winter sports and the funny looking labels on the bottles in the bars. Meanwhile Al Evans dropped over to the Capitol as master of ceremonies.

Maybe Del will tell us all about those bottles when he comes back. Well, anyhow, the show was titled "Night Club," and the audiences were advised by the management to check their troubles with their hats.

Haline Lehman and Kaiser, those popular fat boys who made such an impression last week with their tons of melody, were held over for another encore. Kaiser was in his element. A musical eclecticism, the show.

Right behind them in the popularity contest were Geraldine and Joe, charming youngsters, billed as the pint sized comedians. Their biggest number was a Gay 90s that trained men who enjoy playing and entertaining is at least sixty per cent of their success with any audience," declares Helft.

"The orchestra, individually and collectively, subscribed to the theory that versatility is the most desired quality of a theatre stage orchestra. We have prepared for music as a doctor or a dentist prepares for his profession. Each member of the band has taken a four-year course in harmony and music at the University of California," declared Helft.

"As a result, the men are not only capable 'readers,' but also have developed a thorough knowledge of four or five instruments plus the ability of being able to entertain."
STAGE SHOWS

Jokes, which, although not being entirely new, hit many marks. Dan Cummins is a larrikin actor who looks to be of the drug store cowboy variety until he has trooped a few minutes. Then it becomes quite apparent why the title, "World's best champion larrikin spinner," follows his name on the program. He tells jokes of the Will Rogers variety as he walks, Davidson's Louisville Loons, the theater's stage orchestra playing an extended engagement, offers popular selections as the overture and is featured throughout the program. Harlan Christie, master of ceremonies, was absent because of illness in his family, but "Pop" Davidson, director of the Loonie, substituted for him in a capable manner.

San Francisco Granada Week Ending February 7

This week's stage show is in the nature of a double bill, Frank Cammish's Publix production, "Beaux Arts Frollo" being supplemented by a "Birthday Banquet," conceived by Paul Oerald in celebration of Publix third birthday. Anyone who cannot get their money's worth out of these offerings, with the addition of a splendid picture, must be hard to please.

The "Beaux Arts Frollo" begins with the orchestra on the stage, with Don George directing. The first number is "A Picture in Paste," and as the curtain at the rear of the orchestra parts the famous Gamby-Hale Girls are seen in a beautiful pose. Later they troop down the stage and do a grand dance.

The orchestra paints a sound picture by playing "She's Funny That Way," and then the scene changes and the "Blue Leb Rose" commands attention. Two "blue lawyers" with large books are posed beside the pianolino and after a round of patter come down the steps to join the girls, who are now attired in green tunics, blue coats, high hats and decorated with fake noses.

An old flier next appears in Eddie Magill who sings "Avalon Town" and "If I Had You," through his illuminated megaphone. He receives the usual ovation. The sensational dance trio, Bryant, Rain, and Young, twirl in a bewildering fashion and are followed by the Gamby-Hale Girls attired in fashions of days that are gone.

This program, a real show in itself, is followed at once by the "Birthday Banquet," with the orchestra in the pit and Gino Severini conducting. Two girls step out and draw the curtains, revealing a banquet table on which a group of girls form a center piece in the form of a balance, while on either side other girls stimulate candle sticks, holding soft large candles.

Ten Darling California Rockets in costumes of variegated colors do a dance to the accompaniment of tambourines. Don Thralls sings "Caches, My Own" and a maiden steps out of the center piece and sings a Spanish ditty.

George Baft, introduced as the world's fastest dancer, convinces the audience of the truth of the statement, and is followed by the Three Bajajlanders. Elizira Lane, late of the Ziegfeld Follies, offers a vocal number and Arnela, the Spanish dancer, returns to do a two dance. Hanley and Millis do a patter and dance act, and sing a new song, "Two Little Worms were Digging in Ernet. Poor Ernet." George Dewey Washington sings "The Spell of the Blues," in fine dramatic fashion, following with "Throwing Risoms at Me" and "I'm a Lonely Yagga-bond." Measured by applause his offering is the best of the show.

The Ten San Francisco Beauties appear in gorgeous attire, one as a bride with two train bearers. She mounts the stairs to the picture frame and forms the central figure in a charming picture. The California Rockets do a peppy dance number, ending by spelling out "Granada" as they spread the drapes of their costumes.

Salt Lake City Pantages Week Ending February 2

The Pantages vaudeville bill this week is headlined by "Time Stylish Stoppers," a group of entertainers who make an important part in the children's weekly show, given every Saturday morning at this theatre.

The Good Ship Song and Dance presents a most entertaining twenty minutes of fast and snappy numbers. The Delorio and Moreno revive, a company of European dancers, offers a unique dance presentation, assisted by a group of musicians.

Reedy and Hyram, a couple of "X cope" do a line of clever character work and a series of comedy songs. Leo Kral and Bobbi round out the bill with a complete new arrangement of comedy songs and dances.

The feature picture, "Four Walls," with Craig Peterson as director of the musical program and Seldon Heaps at the organ, complete the program here, and capacity houses have been had throughout the week.

Jersey City Stanley Week Ending February 8

Charlie Nelson and his gang offer a unique and pleasing stage show called "Midget Follies." This was a Harry W. Crull production and it featured twenty midget stars. The orchestra, in Little Lord Fauntleroy suits and led by a midget master of ceremonies, start with a hot tune as five girls and six midget girls and dance in a grand manner. Prince Lucky, called the smallest xylophone player in the world, offered two pleasing selections which are well received. Senator Moss, David and a dozen midget acrobats, pleased with their comedy stunts.

They were followed by Hill's Baby Elephants, who do many tricks, to the delight of all the youngsters in the audience.

Charlie Nelson finally makes his appearance singing the comedy song, "If I Lay Down an' Go Boon," and nude to the stage. Each of the boys in the orchestra then do a singing and instrumental solo. The most outstanding hit of this show was the Appeal of the Stills, a group of six men in suits. Little Anna Rice followed with a Grecian wafts that was well done. Near the finish of their dance, Hy came on the stage again and danced with Little Anna. She reached just about up to Hy's knee cap. This stopped the laughter.

Two midgets then box-fight and close with a bowery dance as the entire ensemble are on for the finish.

Detroit Michigan

Week Ending February 8

Everything was turned upside-down at the Michigan this week when Paul Oacean's "Topsy Turvy Town" moved in for a week's stay. The show is a cute one, too.

For the opening, the stage was pitch dark. Then chorus arms and legs appeared against the black velvet drop. They were faintly luminous and marched and danced about in unison. Eventually the lights went up and disclosed the Gamy-Hale Girls. Their arms and legs, of course, were covered with luminous filament. The set for the show is a glimpse of a town. The buildings are painted in the futuristic manner, and they are strange and incredible structures but the effect is striking and colorful.

After the opening chorus, George and Jimmie Travers' orchestra are very popular and accurate dance line. Then the orchestra played a speciality, "Sail Balsa Floor," Al Evans singing one of the choruses in that very nice voice of his.

Then the Gamy-Hale Girls came back in "Moonbeam Ballet." This was a beautiful dance number in which clouds were projected on a series of screen behind which the girls, in fluffy white dresses, danced. It was lighted with a rainbow of colored lights being thrown on their costumes.

Then there was Ferry Corvey, the master clown, and what a master Corvey is a wizard of pantomime and had some admirable footing in his act. He opened with Swiss bell ringing—"you remember that old favorite musical act of the vaudeville days"—and for another number had a new musical instrument, "the lines of a xylophone which is operated by pressing on a number of miniature air pumps. And throughout the act, Corvey kept his audience in sales or laughter by his antics without tracking a joke or saying a word. The boys're good.

And next there were the Photos Twins, dimwitted little men who never made a move without another one on their left.

The Gamy-Hale Girls had one other number just before closing. One of them danced out and asked Al Evans to join the band. He consented, and then the 11 other girls came out and all of them went to work leading the band, keeping up that clockwork and precise dancing for which they are famous all the time they were doing it.

For the final, a curtain on which jumping jacks were suspended, their heads hanging downward, was lowered to the roof tops of "Topsy Turvy Town."

Paul Ash Helps Brooklyn Zoo Get Its Elephant

A recent editorial in the Brooklyn Evening Journal read as follows: "What Is a Zoo Without an Elephant...Brooklyn must have an elephant. And here comes our Zoo...The Evening Journal announces the Paul Ash Elephant. This elephant is a midnight performance at the Brooklyn Paramount contributed the entire proceeds to this fund.

Lucy Leclaire, publicity director for the above theatre, secured some valuable exploitations when he acquired the elephant in. It also gave Paul Ash, the peer of all statehood leaders, considerable amount of publicity. Fifty thousand boxes, displaying the face of Ash with the following inscription "Paul Ash Zoological Foundation" are to be sold for ten cents a box.

Such tips as are making the Brooklyn Paramount a popular amusement place and Paul Ash as well liked as he was in the Chicago Oriental.

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending February 2

The Public's attention is "The Perfect Girl," and features Helen Macfadden, famous physical culturist and magazine publisher. The young lady is billed as "the perfect girl," and her routine includes several health-giving exercises set to music. She is assisted by the Foster Girls in a dance wherein each girl is punching a punching bag.

The Cheer Leaders, a male quartette, brought the house down with some wonderful harmonic singing. These boys are without a doubt one of the best singing offerings of its kind ever brought here.

Luella Lee went over big with some clever tap dancing. Her offering included the raccoon dance. Joseph H. Theobold, a very well-known comedian, is also with the show. Better than ever. With his funny comedy, his tap and his ability to stand still, he keeps the audiences in a constant uproar.

Teddy Joyce, master of ceremonies, whose popular- ity is growing amazingly, scored heavily with a violin solo. The Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Elias Breiskin, offered "Russian Fantasy," and got a big hand.

New York Paramount

Week Ending February 15

The "Coining Off" and this week featured a new master of ceremonies. Ted Claire, formerly at the Boston Metropolitan theatre. This show was Chester Hale's first production and we say it is a good one.

This opera in a beautiful scenic set in which some explorers broadcast from the South Pole. The orchestra in a large icebound boat play a hot tune as the demen of the show's scenes led the Gamy-Hale Girls in a well done routine. The girls make a pleasing picture in their art decorative costumes and are well received.

The Wallace Sisters, a couple of little turnover then offer a high-kicking and acrobatic routine that was received well.

Ted Claire, then led the boys in a hot Number "Tiger Rag," to warm them up. Ted makes one with his fine scenic dancing. Ben Blue then takes one of the best sliding-dances ever witnessed in the presentation house. He was very well received.

The Wall sisters, looking like little snowbunnies, their white costumes, then sing a cute tune as Gym-Hale Girls, dressed as pigeons, do a rap tune routine. This musical number is a finest bar in the show. The girls then do another "Turnover" routine that was received well.

Pielard and Pete (Pete being a solo) follow with Pete doing unique tricks, dances, songs in the style of "America" on some horse. They a good hand.

Ted Claire next sang "That's My Mammy" in pleasing way and received a big hand. The Gym-Hale Girls, representing ladies that come to life, do a routine while a young lady in a special song. This was enacted in one of the many beautiful scenes ever constructed, that of an savannah.

The closing scene, the boat starting back to U. S. with the Gym-Hale Girls forming a beautiful picture in background as lights are played on them is one of the most flashy looking scenes ever staged.

Birmingham Alabama

Week Ending February 9

When the Alabama theatre reinstated its handbills policy with the presentation of "Everybody," produced by Emmett Rogers, newly appointed district production manager for Paramount, U. S. Public, received the show with high terms—and the box office figures rose considerably.

Now in its second week of the new policy, Alabama offers even a more elaborate stage show and features the nation's newest all-dialogue picture "The Doctor's Secret."

Emmett Rogers comes back with "Jassow," at the same time furthering his plan to turn his stagehands to create the latest stagehands to that click. Against a scenic backdrop of his own construction and execution, Rogers presents Marie White, the dole of his imagination, Frank Bernard, the exceedingly clever comedian who sings his mighty hit, a Gift of Love, and the really excellent baritone voice of a Nolan, playing tune against a constant stage presence combine to make a hit.

Keller Hollen's band provide the musical background, playing tuneful, popular numbers that fit quietly every applause.

Small wonder that the show moves along swiftly and happily for the handbills is the inimitable Eddie Guest, whose delightful personality the unproblematic cash customer could not resist. This Eddie's first week at the Alabama, and from all indications he will have another.

Lillian Truss, solar organist, contributes a new similar to those which Joyce Crawford offers at Paramount theatre, New York.

Salt Lake City Capitol

Week Ending February 9

Happy New Year, the West Coast's famous master ceremonies and known throughout the west as " chief of Muzik," is featured this week in Fitch and Martin's "Nite Club Ideas."

Lillia Smith, a former Salt Lake girl, is also featured on this bill in her specialty dance. A co of other artists provide an actual reproduction New York night club entertainment. A piano number, provided by the orchestra, is being worked down among the audience. Cafe also plays a large part in this presentation.

George Alberts, manager of Salt Lake, and Alex Schreiner at the organ and Phil Kalar, character singer, presented special musical numbers. The 7 turn proceeds then go to a combination of "Blindfold," starring Loris Moran, and capacity how the rules.

COSTUMES FOR STAGE PRESENTATIONS

BROOKS 1437 E's N. Y. C. Stue 5918
Emil Velazco, Edgar Ford and George Epstein (New York, Chicago) among the many exhibitors of organs at this house, offered a solo of popular and classical numbers that are sure to interest many of their voracious fans for their wonderful teamwork and fine technique. Emil Velazco is well known, first for his fine playing, second for his organ solo recitals, and third for his radio programs. He is now chief organist here. Edgar Ford was formerly chief organist at the Colony, New York, George Epstein and Velazco have been in the Roxy for some time. Velazco first offered a musical memory test. He proved that the public who is in love with him, and "Waters of the Minnesotka." The other two consoles then rose, disclosing Edgar Ford and George Epstein. Ford has just made his first album. He also plays "Bewitched, You're a Woman," and "You're the Cream in My Coffee." They were very well received. The Roxy is the only theatre in the city to give these organists such a hearing. Seeing and hearing these three organs played simultaneously was an impressive sight.

McNeil Smith (Chicago Marquette) "McNeil Smith on Talking Pianos" was seen in the Marquette and you'll find an answer McNeil. But this doesn't happen to be the case, because the Marquette has a wide variety of other organists. McNeil is his own one. He's well known for many of the music that he plays in his shows. Well tell him. Well tell him. McNeil has a wide variety. The Marquette has a wide variety. McNeil is the man who has a wide variety. Well tell him. Well tell him. McNeil has a wide variety of other organists. McNeil is the man who has a wide variety. McNeil is the man who has a wide variety of other organists. McNeil is the man who has a wide variety. McNeil is the man who has a wide variety of other organists.

J. Virgil Huffman (Bennahraa New American) used as his solo an orchestral entitled "Echoes of the Auto Show." Besides comedy lyrics referring to the recent incident at the local show, Huffman included several parodies on current songs, making humorous references to certain well known makers of autos. The show was well received. The idea was given up, but Huffman hails from Chicago where he won many laurels as a versatile organist.

Doe Webb (Chicago, Marshall Square) offered for his solo "The Happy Humming Bird." The following songs were used with slides, "My Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now," "Wait and See" and "The Happy Bird." For an encore Webb played "Mia Bella Rowa" and was compelled to play another number called "The Song I Love." Doe is now entering his third year at this house and his solos are greatly responsible for a large amount of the attendance. He only to witness one of his performances to realize how popular this organist is.

Viola Klais (Philadelphia, Connover) presents two organ novelties a week. The first half is mostly devoted to classics, it is then followed by the last half to original novelties. Recently she presented a new number called "I'm Sorry, Honey" in unison with the organ, and as usual it was given a wonderful hand for her efforts.

Walter Wild (New York Hiigpode) played "Romance and Melody" in which he featured a beautiful number called "The Song I Love." "The Song of Love" and "The Song of Romance" were next played and he finished with "I'm Sorry, Honey." He was well received. The wholehearted reception of the audience.

By C. Geis (Jersey City Stanley). Geis is just back from his honeymoon and is to appear in his first solo of this kind, "Matrimonial Sea," he called this one "Marriage." He played a few slides and parodies for all the song. He played "Honeymoon," "Laugh, Laugh, Laugh," "A Precious Little Thing Called Love," and "Call Me Wana." He even said "the Rainbow, You Must Have the Rain." His popularity was proven by the tremendous response of the audience. He is a hit for the organists are married and your troubles are over, at least those about solos and material of late.

Eddie Dunstede (Minneapolis, Minnesota) offers "The Broadway Melody" for his solo. Tom Bennett of Dunstede's is a theatre party and a mighty fine one. Dunstede drops in first to see "Three Cheer" and picks up "Bluebirds of Happiness." The last song of the night was "So Long." Dunstede played at the Dunstede Theatre where "Show Boat" is scoring. "Oh! Man River" and "I Can't Give You Any Thing but Love" are the other two played. The last stop is "Whoopee." An attempt at getting the audience to make whoopee with "You're My Necessity" calls forth a few feeble squeals from a certain few with ambition. Perhaps the reason lie in the wholehearted attention given to Dunstede's playing.

Emil Velazco is now the premier organist at the New York. Chicago is a thoroughbred school of organ blosnooded into such a success that he is forced to give up his position at the theatre, he will undoubtedly prove a big drawing card the Roxy. Just by way of mention, Emil also conducts a prosperous organ school.

LARRY SPIER.
Two real showmen step forward this week with suggestions which, they believe, will improve the newspaper ad which was offered by Sidney Larschan, resident manager of the Meserole theatre in Brooklyn, for criticism by readers of "The Theatre." These revised ads are shown below, while on the opposite page, for comparison and contrast, is printed the original Larschan ad, just as was reproduced in this department in the February 2 issue.

Before going into details, "The Theatre" and Larschan want to thank Fred Larkin of the Sherman theatre (Northwest Theatre Circuit), St. Cloud, Minn., and H. Shulgold of Imperial Chain Theatres, Kew, for their interest and constructive suggestions. Both took time and thought in recasting the ad, as every reader will see, and that's the supreme test of cooperation. "The Theatre" will welcome additional suggestions on the ad in question, and also invites other exhibitors to send in ad copy to be reproduced in this department for comment by others.

Now to the cases in hand. Below at the left is the ad as rearranged by Shulgold. Beside it is the suggestion of Larkin. Note this, please: these are simply pasteups of the parts of the original ad, and cannot of course be as perfect as an ad set up in type in a newspaper form. Also, in all comparisons, refer to the original copy on the adjoining page.

First we'll take up Shulgold's suggestions. And by the way, members of the House Organ Exchange who answered Shulgold's request for copies of their publications while he was planning for his own, will see now what a splendid new member he really is, with this contribution.

Here is what Shulgold writes:

"Sydney Larschan's ad in the Herald-World displays a clever use of stock mats. I am certainly in accord with his idea of using mats in combination form to make a unit. The art work turned out by the staffs of producing companies is usually far superior to that of a local or even special theatre staff artist. Aside from the economy of building ads through this method, the results are usually superior.

"I would like to venture a few criticisms on Larschan's layout. Unfortunately I cut his ad up and rearranged it before listing my criticisms, so that I will have to rely or memory for making them.

"Sees Danger in Slanted Names

"As I remember it, the ad was lacking in symmetrical arrangement. No matter how cleverly we strive for unusual layout, it is bound to create a bad impression. True, the peculiar slant of Norma Talmadge's name and the name of the theatre, might, through its slant catch the eye, but the reader would, I believe, pass on to something else without reading. The lack of symmetrical arrangement gave the ad a disjointed appearance. We are all accustomed to reading thoughts in a logical sequence, both in ads and all other printed matter. In other words, it is the old idea of an opening and closing sentence to each paragraph. Larschan's ad does not real..."

Fox Arranges Tieup for Exhibitors and Stores
Fox Film Corporation has just arranged a tieup with the Belding Heminway Company, silk manufacturers, for the placing of cutouts in 3,000 department and dry goods stores throughout the United States. There are two sets of cutouts with easels attached, one set being 11 inches high and the other measuring five feet. The players are Janet Gaynor, Mary Astor and Lois Moran. Stores in practically all towns with a population of more than 5,000 will have these cutouts, it is said.

Exhibitors will benefit by tying up their local showings of productions featuring these players, with the stores displaying the cutout, Fox points out. The first picture which offers this opportunity is "New Year's Eve," released February 17 and featuring Mary Astor. The press book for that production describes the angles of the tieup in detail. If exhibitors have any difficulty in finding stores which have the cutouts, they may write to William J. O'Sullivan at Belding Heminway, 180 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Call to Sourdoughs
In Special Issue Is "Trail of '98" Tieup
Assurance of the Alaska Weekly at Seattle of 'The Trail of '98, Fifth Avenue, Now Change red letters super-printed on the front page was a high mark in the exploitation of the opening of Clarence Brown production of Fifth Avenue theatre.

Of equal importance was the large amount of editorial space in the issue devoted to the production. A part of that editorial is reprinted here.

The thrilling story of 'The Trail of '98' is the facile and well-informed pen of the favorite poet of the Northland, Mr. B. H. Service, appearing in motion picture form, will be presented at Seattle's magnificent theatre, the Fifth Avenue, beginning today (Friday). It will be on for one week. Out of connection to the scenes of Seattle, the story, the story of the city, are urged to attend this at motion picture performance—easily the most northern motion picture, produced by one of the great motion picture producers at a cost exceeding two million dollars. The Sourdoughs—all of them may meet on the mezzanine floor of the commodious theatre and meet old-time sourdough friends whom they may not have seen for many years. Indeed, may not have seen since the famous times which 'The Trail of 98' so truly depicts, both in the story and in the film version. "Sourdoughs of Seattle, let us show our appreciation of the courtesy shown us by the Fifth Avenue theatre management in setting apart Sourdough Night," and turn out in full force. You will have an enjoyable evening. The big picture is worthwhile.

Certainly there cannot be very many residents of Seattle who failed to know the picture was playing at the Fifth Avenue.

Mary Philbin's Name Used In Radio Greeting Contest
The best greeting using a letter from Mary Philbin's name to start each line was the objective of a campaign waged over station WADC in connection with the showing of Universal's "The Man Who Laughs" at the Allen theatre in Cleveland. The Times Press carried a sample greeting.

dan, doesn't read across, but jumps from one corner to another.
The rearrangement of material used, which I have enclosed, although it probably not as effective for attention getting purposes, at least requires no unusual effort to read.
The theatre name, star name, star picture, pture title, all can be taken in with one step of the eye.

Chances are, Larchan's layout is better in mine. I would like to see them side-byside and compare them. We have only one copy of the HERALD-WORLD here. Will you kindly return my layout with a copy of Larchan's? I am very curious to see how you compare.

We're going you one better, Shugold, and introducing both of them herewith.

Straightline Star Name
Now let's move over and make room for Philbin. The A, B and C in his copy is expanded and in the caption below the cut. I feel the comment of Larkin, and bear in mind that from Shugold's copy, whereas Larkin is in a comparatively small on in Minnesota:

We straightened up the 'Norma Talmadge' ad that should hit them in the eye. A tipped ad is okay after you have something to catch their interest. Tipping the theatre's name is very good if there are other houses known, as they will want to know what the ad is at. If no other theatre is in the city town the theatre's name should not be tipped.

The coming attraction should be well sarated from the major ad. In fact, a heavy border would be still better. The border on ad should be light, plenty of black for the side. The above is a small town version, as it is where we are. Some mighty fine suggestions, folks, don't you think? And that also calls to mind the fact that you may not agree on all of them—of example, this department is not generally favor of heavy black ads—and you even may consider that Larchan's ad is better than one of the suggested revisions. Well, here they are, all three together. An expression of opinion from each one of your readers will be welcomed by the three showmen as well as by The Theatre.
Simplest Campaign Draws Best; Good Grades Win Free Tickets

If there ever was an exploitation idea with more commonsense as well as practicability than this one, we'd like to hear of it. Ballyhoo is entirely missing; and the thing is so simple that one wonders why it is not used by every exhibitor. But that's often the way of the world; the most obvious is the last seen.

"Thought I would mail you the attached clipping from our local weekly newspaper, which may grace your Theatre Section of the Herald-World and incidentally give some other 'exhibit' an opportunity to cash in on the 'story," writes F. W. Zimmerman, owner of the Palace and Grand theatres at San Marcos, Texas.

"Wishing you continued success with the Haslam Plan, which, I'm sure, has a future on every theatre section, which I appreciate very much.

Worthy Pupils Given Tickets

We'll take the clipping—from the San Marcos Record—and let it tell the story of the campaign, which consists of giving free tickets to all worthy pupils in the first eleven grades of the public schools. In fact, we'll use the entire clipping, because it tells so much that will help other exhibitors in putting over the campaign.

"F. W. Zimmerman, owner and manager of the Palace theatre, challenges any city in the United States to show a higher percentage of satisfactory grades in all school work than has been demonstrated here.

"The management believes grades and reward honest effort, but primarily for the reason of encouraging better deportment in the schools and public places, the management conceived the idea of giving all worthy students up to and including 11 grades, free tickets to Saturday matinees upon present-
